Under the revisions for the off-campus court system, sororities and scholarship houses will be divided into eight precintcts, and any houses added in the future will form a ninth precinct. The House manager or the House President will automatically become the Off-Campus representative.

Revisions of House Council include several provisions. No person who holds an elective office as defined in the constitution is eligible to be president of a dormitory. The president must remain in residence for her complete term of office, September through April. The vice president's term expires when the freshman officers take office.

system has advantages and vantages, but as members of community which is a part of a changing and awakening state, we must have the faith in ourselves and in each other to realize that whatever the conditions, we've got what it takes to help Florida and the South realize its destiny of leadership," declared van Assenderp.

Van Assenderp maintained that the Student Government will continue to be significant regardless of the system, because it deals daily with the "real personal interests" of every student.

The basic groundwork was laid last year for the Student Government change in operation, so that in this aspect, they were ready before the trimester hit.

Some controversies, such as the class officer question, were purposely left to be considered by the government this year, when more of the necessities of the trimester had become apparent.

One such anticipated change is the decision to continue Student Government throughout the summer.

Student Government has suffered no loss of efficiency, van Assenderp has stated. The trimester has demanded that the Student Government "clean house," with the result of a probable gain in efficiency in most areas.

Personally, the President does feel a great pressure, but the duties of his office are affecting him as much as the trimester system. For this reason, he does not feel qualified to make a judgement of his own problems concerning the trimester.

However, observations have led him to take note of three things. "The press of the trimester has been an incentive to study to those few students who could be pushed to work in no other way," he stated.

On the other hand, "a real, serious dedicated student who recognizes the values of books is being hindered in his quest for the quality of education which he is seeking," according to the president.

Finally, a professor "who is truly a professor in that he is interested in spending time with his students and is dedicated to his own discipline and to the University, in that he enters into research," is being "cut down on both sides." For this type of professor, the time shortage is hindering him severely.

The president emphasized that no final judgment can be made of the trimester system at this time though criticisms which are valid are always in order.

Yet, van Assenderp urged that those who are analyzing the trimester system remember that destructive as well as constructive criticism exists, and that it is the attitude with which students approach the problems of the change that will determine the success or failure of FSU.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Vote On Offices

Much criticism has been voiced in recent years about the Class Officers Program at FSU. Nothing has come of this criticism primarily because it was never presented in a fair and logical manner. This year, the criticism has taken the form of the Kramer Report, which was compiled at the request of Student Body President Ken van Assenderp.

In this report, Kramer presents the student body with the history and all the facts relating to Class Officers. He reviews and evaluates their place in the University community. In his conclusion he lists all the possibilities of modifying, abolishing and continuing the COP program. As a result of his investigations he recommends that the Class Officer Program be abolished and their functions be assimilated by other facets of Student Government.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Kramer's recommendation carries only the force of logic and common sense with it. Obviously something much more than unbiased, honestly presented facts are needed to force Student Government to move on this issue.

For this reason there is a good possibility that the question of the continuance of Class Officers at FSU may be taken to the students themselves in the form of a referendum. Such a referendum may appear on the ballot of the upcoming election.

A referendum at this time will give the advantage to Class Officers in that they will be able to simultaneously campaign for the continuation of their offices as well as for their own immediate cause.

However, a referendum will give some indication of the will of the Student Body as a whole -- not just that of Student Government.

The forty or fifty people running for class offices represent the core of those who would like to see class officers continued. The Student Body has a unique opportunity during the upcoming campaigning to question these candidates as to their motives in running for class office and just what they would do if elected.

But, no matter what they say, class officers as class officers have no place at FSU. They fail to realize that this has been the fact of their existence for several years and that no amount of zeal and hard work on their part can return the past or hold back the future.

It will remain for the individual voters to determine what is appropriate and functional in our student government.

Reasons For Socialist League

In this issue of the Flambeau I would like to take time to explain the reasons why a Young People's Socialist League chapter has formed on the Florida State campus. The disabilities of a Socialist League on a university campus in the conservative South are numerous and varied. Socialists are looked upon with suspection and distrust because of the popular association of the terms "communism" and "socialism," and because so much of current socialist thought is colored with neo-Marxism. In spite of these handicaps, and many more, certain members at large of the Young People's Socialist League began, about two years ago, to lay the foundations for an active chapter in the Tallahassee area.

As a result of their work Tallahassee now has a nationally chartered Socialist League which actively encourages students and young people in the University Area to join the League and contribute their time and energy to the growing Socialist revival in America. Why has this been done? What is the purpose of

An error in Tuesday's Flambeau produced a mistake in Thomas Riggins' article on the "Socialist State." The summary sentence on the "state" should have read: --Historically the "state" has lately been under fire from many political and social factions. Here, with brief arguments, I will attempt primarily a defense of the Supreme Court.

Supreme Court Defended

concerning the Court, that it is com-

seem that this is not borne out by fact. No president has the power to dismiss any Supreme Court justice. In view of the fact that each succeeding president may have the opportunity to appoint one or more justices, the court is not likely to be composed of members who will yield only those decisions desired by the President. The justices do not as a rule, represent a particular geographic section of the country. In the present Court, for instance the justices are from the northern, southern, eastern, and western portions of the United States.

Furthermore, one can never really say that the Court is "liberal" or "conservative" without specifying the particular field of discussion. At the same period, the Court may be "liberal" concerning civil right, and yet "conservative" concerning social welfare, etc.

If the Supreme Court has increased its authority since its founding, it is certainly not alone in this activity. For, as the nation grows, especially population-wise, more centralization is needed on all levels of government, local and state, as well as national. The Supreme Court has not been usurping the power of any institution; it is, however, realizing a de-segregation decision concerning public schools. In the case of Plessy v. Ferguson (1896), the Supreme Court established (without legal precedent) the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities for the white and the colored. This decision pertained to railway cars, not schools. The Court upheld a Louisiana statute that required separate railway carriages for white and colored passengers. After lauding this "rule-of-thumb" decision by the Court, the "conservative" faction made a lot of commotion when in 1954 the Court, in Brown v. the Board of Education, concluded that the doctrine of "separate but equal" facilities had no place in public education. Let us remember that the Court defends individuals, not parties. Also, that any decision the Court makes must aggravate some faction, because it is dealing with a dispute at the beginning.

This may be said to be the purpose of the Court, as delivered to Congress on December 8, 1908, by Theodore Roosevelt: "The chief lawmakers in our country may be, and often are, the judges, because they are the final seat of authority. Every time they interpret contract, property, vested rights, due process of law, liberty, they necessarily enact into law parts of a system of social philosophy; and as such interpretation is fundamental, they give direction to all lawmaking. Limelighters Appear In FSU Artist Series

The Limeliters, folk-singing trio, will present two shows at Florida State University Monday night, March 25, as the next student Artist Series attraction.

Performances will be at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Tickets will be priced at $3 for the public and $2 for FSU and high school students.

Since their formation in May 1959, the Limeliters have become known as much for their comedy routines as for their vocal and instrumental folk music.

Before forming the trio, Lou Gottlieb, Alex Hassilev and Glenn Yarbrough had each worked [illegible] supper club acts. Gottlieb, singing comedian and musical director of the Limeliters, is probably the only stand-up comic and leader of a vocal trio who has been awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. He received the Ph. D. from the University of California in 1958.

He is proficient on any number of instruments such as piano and vibra-harp, but sticks to the stringbass while on stage with the Limeliters because, "I am spared the menial work of tuning which burdens my guitar and banjo playing colleagues since the bass comes from the factory pre-tuned."

Alex Hassilev, banjo playing baritone, combines the talents of musician, actor and linguist. Born in France of Russian parents, 27-year old Alex speaks fluent French, Portuguese, Spanish and Russian [illegible] and dialects. He attended Harvard for a year.

When Glenn Yarbrough joined the Limeliters, he had already established himself as an outstanding single night club act at the Gate of Horn in Chicago, Cosmo Alley in Los Angeles and the Limelite in Aspen, Colo.

Center Gives New Service

As an additional public service, the FSU counseling center has accepted a contract with the Veterans Administration to act as its official counseling center for North Florida.

Under this program, student war orphans or veterans from North Florida who are seeking counseling through the Veterans Administration will no longer have to journey to St. Petersburg the regional office, or Miami, the only other counseling center in Florida.

FSU was chosen because of its location and professional accreditation. In addition to the regular counseling staff headed by Dr. Harold Massey, John Massey, John Flanders, John Weatherby and Augustine Garcia will work with the veterans.

"This program will in no way detract from the regular counseling service offered students. Since it is strictly for VA-sponsored counseling, it is a separate program, and the contract merely contributes to the overall strength of the counseling service," said Dr. Massey.

Fire Uses Subject Of FSU Conference

The place of fire in the natural economy of the field and forest and its place in forest, range and game management will be discussed in the second annual Tall Timbers Fire Ecology Conference at FSU this Thursday and Friday.

Among the speakers, according to E.V. Komarek Jr. of the Tall Timbers Research Station, the principal sponsor, will be Dr. H.H. Bisswell, professor of forestry at the University of California; Dr. Omer C. Stewart, director of the Institute of Behavorial Science at the University of Colorado; and Dr. Clifford E. A dozen other participants round out the speaking panel for the two-day conference, the first day of which will be devoted to the application of fire in management and the second to the ecology of fire in the environment.

Co-sponsoring the conference is the FSU Research Council. Sessions will be held in the School of Education Building beginning with the first at 8:30 a.m., Thursday.

Changes In Satellite Plans Recommended By Workshop

A possible change in plans for the camera coverage of cloud formations to be provided by future weather satellites emerged from a workship on the use of satellite data in tropical meteorology at FSU.

At a panel discussion closing the four-day workshop, attended by specialists in the weather from across the country, a California meteorologist led an attack on plans to use only wide angle lens cameras in future satellites.

After Prof. Joanne Malkus of the University of California at Los Angeles made the suggestion that continued use be made of smaller angle lens cameras which provide more precise pictures, William Stroud, chief of the Aeronomy and Meteorology Division of the Goddard Space Flight Center of National Aeronautics and Space Administration, suggested researchers who want such cameras should "write a letter to NASA before the launching of Tiros VIII late this year.

Tiros VIII will be launched during the third or fourth quarters of 1963 and present plans call for it to carry only wide angle lens cameras covering a broad area of the earth but with less precise resolution than in cameras of standard angle lens.

Stroud said, however, the resolution and quality of pictures will be better than in comparable cameras carried by earlier Tiros weather satellites. He suggested researchers should make their research needs known if more precise data is needed.

Prof. Noel LaSeur of FSU's Dept. of Meteorology suggested satellite pictures [illegible] compared with [illegible] from [illegible] devices.

[illegible] Wexler, assistant director for systems at the National Weather Satellite Center, said it is planned to send the first of a new [illegible] of weather satellites, the Nimbus, aloft by the end of this year. It will weigh 700 pounds (compared with 300 for Tiros) and will have a polar orbit enabling it to cover a wide area of the earth as the earth rotates.

One difference from Tiros will be that it will be earth oriented rather than space oriented, meaning that its cameras will constantly be directed toward the earth. It will operate on a direct readout system enabling its pictures to be relayed to any receiving station on earth.

Vaeth also described another member of the weather satellite series still in the concept stage, called Drews. Plans are to have one to three satellites constantly in a three hour orbit over the equator at 2000 miles above the earth. Drews will have a direct readout system and will cover the earth from 30 degrees north to 30 degrees south.

Sigmund Fritz, chief scientist of the National Weather Satellite Center asked meteorologists to say just how wide a coverage and how frequent a report they needed from [illegible] satellites [illegible] meteorology studies.

'SEATO' Grants Available For Study

Competition for grants to scholars of advanced standing wishing to do research in foreign countries has been announced by the United States Government and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

SEATO is offering several Research Fellowship Grants to candidates whose scholastic reputation has been established and who are past the stage of working for an advanced degree. To encourage insight into the cultures of Southeast Asia and the Southwest Pacific countries, it is required that the candidate plan to undertake his research in SEATO member countries in these areas. The grant provides a monthly allowance of $400 and economy class travel to and from the country or countries of research for a period of four to ten months.

Applications should be submitted by April 1, to the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils, Committe on International Exchange of Persons, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D.C. Final selection of candidates will be announced by the Bangkok Committee in August, 1963.

Under the Fulbright-Hays Act, the United States Government is granting aid to lecturers and advanced researchers who will study in Australia, New Zealand, and Latin America.

Applications must be submitted no later than April 15.

Wilson Fellowships Awarded

Four FSU students have been awarded fellowships of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation for graduate study.

They are Letitia I. Thomas, a sociology major who received her bachelor's degree cum laude in December, 1962; Grant Jones, a graduate student in anthropology; Margaret [illegible] Weatherly, an English major; and Bruce E. Ryan, a philosophy major.

Each fellowship covers tuition and fees for the first year at the graduate school of the fellow's choice, plus a stipend of $1500 and dependency allowances. Awards went to 1,475 top-ranking college students, while 1,154 others were selected for honorable mention. They are Patrick T. DeMarco, who is majoring in Latin American Studies; Lee G. Gray, who received a bachelor of arts degree with a major in Spanish in June, 1962; and Robert T. Self, an English major.

Grant Jones, 21, plans to use his fellowship at the University of Chicago, where he will continue his studies in anthropology. He completed high school in Clearwater in 1959 and received the bachelor of arts degree, cum laude, from FSU in 1962. He attended the University of Michigan last summer. He has assisted with opera productions and is a student of piano with Carlisle Floyd. This summer he has a part-time instructorship at FSU in the Department of Anthropology. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bullen, 1209 Prospect Ave., Clearwater.

Ryan, 20, is a graduate of North Miami Senior High School.

Dean John Carey Awarded Danforth Grant For Study

John J. Carey, acting associate dean of students at FSU has been awarded a Danforth Campus Military Grant for 1963-64, it was announced today.

Carey came to FSU as university chaplain in July, 1960, and served in that capacity until he took over his present duties in January 1962. He is one of 22 campus ministers throughout the country to be selected for the Danforth award.

The award provides for an academic year of graduate study in a university [illegible] cation. Carey will study at Duke [illegible].

Math Camp Plans Laid

Faced with the prospect of having several hundred to several thousand applicants to attend Summer Math Camp, FSU is planning to ask its IBM 709 computer who should come.

Application blanks went out over the weekend, according to Dr. Robert Kalin, Math Camp director, and hundreds of them probably will come back within a few weeks from high school students telling about grades in math and other subjects, IQ [illegible] and much other data.

This information will be fed on punch cards to the computer, which will narrow the list down to 60. From this list the 30 successful Math Campers will be chosen. Past camps have had students here from as many as 20 states.

The Math Camp will be held from June 24 to Aug. 2, Kalin said. This year's will be the sixth Math Camp at FSU, which was a pioneer in holding these summer sessions for brilliant high school students of math. The camp again will be supported by National Science Foundation, which has provided a grant of $11,705.

Scabbard And Blade Celebrates Founding

Starting this morning at 7:30, the local chapter of Scabbard and Blade will celebrate its annual Founding Day by formal flag raising ceremonies in front of Westcott Bldg.

Scabbard and Blade is a national military honor society with chapters in 171 leading colleges. The society was founded at the University of Wisconsin in 1905 and currently has 92,000 members. It is composed of qualified juniors and seniors of advanced army ROTC programs.

Membership, the goal of the cadets in by invitation. A cadet officer must have the traits of leadership, loyalty, efficiency, obedience and honor, and must possess a 2.2 average or better.

The purpose of Scabbard and Blade is to raise the standard of military education in American colleges and universities; to encourage and foster the essential qualities of good and efficient officers; and primarily to disseminate knowledge of military education among the students and people of the country in general, acquainting them with national defense needs.

There are 15 regiments all over the country, each with 12 companies. The chapter on campus, under Captain Terrence McDonald, is Compnay E of the 12 Regiment.

These cadets have participated in outstanding service activities such as: providing an award for each Cadet of the Month; participating in Pow-Wow activities; coordinating the Homecoming parade; sponsoring a "Know Your Enemy" speaker program with emphasis on Russia; holding the annual Scabbard and Blade Banquet prior to the Military Ball; and presently, collecting insignia from other ROTC companies for a distinctive display when finished.

As the cadets lower the flag at 5 p.m., Scabbard and Blade Founding Day will close as a salute to these college men who undertake the responsibilities military service place on them.

Three Dropped From Election

Three candidates for the Spring Class, Senate and Courts elections have been disqualified for either an insufficient number of hours or failing to achieve the required overall grade average.

Those who were disqualified were Bill Ward SP, and Bobby Dunlap I, both candidates for Junior Class Men's Senate; and Andy Haggard UP, a candidate for Senior Men's Judiciary.

This leaves 114 candidates of the original 118 who declared candidacy There are now 50 candidates sponsored by the Student Party, 51 candidates sponosred by the University Party and 13 unaffiliated candidates.

Last year for these same elections there were 139 candidates who had filed; 52 for the University Party; 55 for the Student Party and 31 independents.

Secretary of Elections Ron Jones suggested that the possible reason for fewer candidates this year was that the Traffic Court positions were no longer filled by election.

Last night at the required meeting of all candidates, Jones said that all candidates will be required to submit itemized expense statements including their bills and receipts. In particular, those candidates who win must turn them in by April 2 in order to be installed.

Active campaigning will begin Tuesday at 5 p.m. There is to be no campaigning of any kind before that time.

Candidates will be permitted to withdraw their declarations of candidacy at any time prior to noon next Thursday.

BASEBALL SEASON WILL OPEN

... tomorrow for the Florida State Seminoles, when Auburn University and the Tribe square off at 1:30 p.m. on the FSU diamond. A second game is set for Monday.

Tracksters To Face Paladins In Start Of Dual Competition

Furman's purple and white thinclads will face Florida State at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in Tallahassee, as the Seminoles play in their second dual meet of the year.

Coach Jimmy Carnes will present his Bring 14 man squad to Tall has see for the meet-a squad that includes two individual champions in the Southern Conference Indoor Championships. Dave Sem, 60 yard dash king, and Bill Keel, who set both outdoor and indoor pole vault records two seasons ago, are the champs.

In addition, Don Armstrong, senior distance star from Miami and winner of the conference 440 two season ago, will present Furman's top entry in the 500 yard event, while another Floridian, Dave Fuller of Lake Wales, a former winner in the 880 outdoor conference competition, will also present Furman runners in the distance.

Bill Keel is Furman's outstanding pole vaulter and he holds both indoor and outdoor crowns in this event. He set a new record at VMI last year with a leap of 14-4. A senior from Illinois, he is considered one of the best indoor collegiate vaulters in the South.

Other Paladin cindermen and their prospective events:

Fleetwood Lowe, shot, Lee Thompson in the 70 yard low hurdles; Ed Anderson in the 300 run; Noel Culbreth in the two-mile; Ed Moore for shot put; Del Lawrence and Keel in the broad jump; and Armstrong, Anderson, Loustalot and Segal in the mile relay team.

Furman has had only one dual meet this year, defeating Tennessee. The team has competed in the VMI Winter Relays, the Chesterfield Invitational Richmond, the Mason-Dixon games at Louisville, and the ACC Indoor Meet at Chapel Hill, N.C.

Coach Mike Long's Seminoles have placed well in three indoor meets this year--winning the independent-division title of the Montgomery (Ala.) Coliseum Relays. They met Miami last Saturday at Miami in a meet which was still being discussed early this week. At first, FSU was announced as the victor, but a decision was given to the Hurricanes when errors in takes were discovered.

The Seminoles lost 13 of men from last year--inc school record holder [illegible] at least 20 [illegible] were at Miami.

Alabama Baseballers Visit Grid Practice

Used to, the trek to Florida for Spring baseball training was more or less reserved for the pros -- but a crack high school team from Birmingham, Ala., has taken matters into its own hands and broken tradition.

Bringing 42 players, coaches, parents and friends in a dozen automobiles, the Ensley High School Yellow Jackets have embarked on a 1500 mile round trip which will carry them into the guts of Florida's major league training area.

The trip will last one week, with workouts for the team scheduled somewhere for each morning. Ensley started it at Florida State Monday afternoon with an inter-squad game against the Seminoles. Other stops include Clearwater on Tuesday (1960 Ensley grad Sammy Ellis will pitch that day for Cincinnati), Sarasota on Wednesday for a game with Sarasota High, Ft. Myers on Thursday to watch the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati game. Friday night they'll play Ft. Myers High, then head home.

Coach Phil Englis says the tour is a realization of "faith in us on the part of the folks back home, plus a lot of hard work on the part of the boys."

The trip will take about $1000, says English. The players sold doughnuts to earn $150, with the rest coming from friends and parents.

Actually, only 16 in the caravan are players. Rounding out the group are two managers, Coach English and 23 parents and friends. ("Why, there's one lady on the trip I never even met," cracked English. "She's just a big baseball fan, I guess").

Ensley had a 26-3 record last year, and lost only one player. Their baseball program has become so strong in English's three years that several major league scouts were camped in Tallahassee Monday waiting for them to practice. One--Johnny Harris of Houston -- even volunteered to drive one of the cars on the trip.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to most of the boys," says English, who's in his 20's and shorter than most of his players. "They got to see the Florida State circus Sunday night and met Danny Litwhiler (FSU baseball coach) Monday. That had 'em talking enough as is was. No telling how big their eyes will be by Saturday."

Team Is Tired, Bruised--Pete

Charlie McClendon, head football coach at Louisiana State, dropped in to view a couple of spring football practices at Florida State University, and FSU Coach Bill Peterson said he viewed a "tired" team.

The wear and tear of spring drills are beginning to show on the Tribesmen, Peterson said, for they seem "tired" and suffer from "little bruises."

The Seminoles, who ran through fundamentals and the passing game Tuesday afternoon, did not put in a satisfactory performance for McClendon, but Peterson said he was not worried about the Tribe's progress, for even the injured ones were "coming along nicely" with their bruises.

Tackle Dick Hesselbart, a 6-4, 241-pounder from Ohio, and end Terry Garvin, a 195-pound sophomore from Pensacola, were returning from minor injuries and practice Saturday's game-like scrimmage.

He said Hesselbart, the second heaviest man on the roster, might return to action Thursday or Saturday, while Garvin probably would not don pads again until next week.

McClendon's reaction to FSU drills were summed up thusly, "The boys showed a lot of spirit, but I haven't been here long enough to judge them." A close friend of Peterson, who is a former LSU assistant under Paul Dietzel, McClendon arrived Monday and was slated to leave after Tuesday's practice.

Another visitor, Northwestern's Ara Parseghian, is scheduled to visit the FSU practice field later next week.

Tribesmen Choose All-Opponent Squad

Four centers and a guard were named to Florida State's 1962-63 All-Opponent basketball squad.

With 13 Seminoles voting for their ten choices in order of preference, Kentucky center Cotton Nash led the team by polling seven first-place votes and a total of 118 points. Ten points were awarded each first-place vote, nine for each second, etc.

Rounding out the first team were centers Layton Johns of Auburn, Lyle Hamer of [illegible], Mickey [illegible] of Miami, [illegible] of [illegible], and [illegible] of [illegible].

Fall Begins New Three Year Master's Program

The Ford Foundation is granting FSU aid to begin a Three Year Master's Degree Program next fall.

An integrated course of study for the last two undergraduate years and the first graduate year is being arranged for juniors who are interested in becoming college teachers.

The study units under which a select 25 to 30 juniors will work is directed toward either preparation for M.A. comprehensives or Ph.D. qualifying examinations. along with the commencement of research for the master's thesis, Dr. Thomas R. Lewis, Dean of the Graduate School, has announced.

The reading and seminar programs will be administered by departments chosen from the following: economics, mathematics, psychology, physics, biological sciences, philosophy, modern languages, history, English, government, music and education.

Student who have an average of 3.2, some previous foreign languages training, and the approval of the department under which they want to work will be interviewed as soon as the departments have been chosen.

Financial incentive awards will be made to all the participating students, with support guaranteed for the fifth year, either through fellowships or assistantships.

The junior year of 34-36 hours will include work in the major field, directed individual study, a language, and electives. The senior year, 30-32 hours, adds teaching observation and assistance and opens graduate courses to the undergraduate student. The 30 hour graduate year encompasses continued emphasis in the major field and supporting areas, electives, a thesis, and supervised teaching, plus a teaching seminar.

Legislative Council

Blackwell Favors Board Of Regents

By BEN SHARP
Flambeau Editor

President Gordow W. Blackwell reacted favorably to a proposal advanced by the Legislative Council's Higher Education Committee to establish a Board of Regents to control the Florida university system.

The proposal, if instituted, would change the administration of state universities drastically by allowing members of the Board to serve for longer terms and have more authority in spending and administration than the present Board of Control.

"Immediately, there should be an increase in length of term," President Blackwell commented.

"I favor the other more basic goal of making the Board constitutional. But I agree with the Space Era Education Study committee which recommended a legislative committee to investigate the proposal and make recommendations to the next legislature."

Blackwell pointed out two basic reasons for needing an immediate change in the length of terms of Board members -- continuity and stability.

But he didn't favor rushing into drastic changes without lengthy study.

"Any change as basic as this should be studied in advance." Blackwell continued.

The committee's proposal, which was adopted Saturday by a 4-2 vote, would set up a Board giving each member a nine year term.

The governor would appoint members to this Board, subject to the approval of the legislature. Terms of office would be staggered so that appointees of two or three governors would be serving on the Board at any one time.

The system has worked successfully in several states, including California, Wisconsin and Michigan. In California, Board members serve for fifteen years.

This was the second proposal in a week apparently aimed at removing the political aspects out of control of the state university system.

Blackwell, however, was not exactly sure what "getting politics out of the universities" meant.

"Any state university must be subject to the will of the people in the final analysis," he stated.

"It is not really politics as much as administrative control that has hampered the Board and the universities.

"I feel the universities are different in certain basic ways than other state agencies and that certain administrative officials need to recognize this," Blackwell concluded.

Establishment of this Board would remove university control from the State Board of Education, made up by the cabinet. Presently, the cabinet controls the universities through the Board of Control.

The proposed Board of Regents would have the authority to appoint a chancellor as its chief administrator and would be authorized to approve all university spending, subject only to legislative review.

The Board of Education must now approve spendings authorized by the Board of Control.

To become reality, the constitutional proposal would require approval of both houses of the legislature and the people of Florida at a statewide referendum.

However, the legislature by statute could revamp the present Board of Control by adding members or increasing the length of terms of the members of the present Board.

New Councilor Procedures Set

Sophomore Council announced the procedure for selecting freshman women to serve on the council next year during the freshman woman's convocation Thursday night.

Requirements for membership are a 2.0 average and full time second semester freshman. Selection will be made by grades, service, cooperation and participation in dorm and campus activities.

Voting by freshmen will take place in the dorm after closing hours tomorrow night. A list of the girls who have made their grade average has been placed on the main bulletin board in each of the freshman women dorms. The Day students may vote anytime Tuesday afternoon in the Day Student Lounge. Freshman women living in sorority houses must go back to the dorm they lived in first semester and cast their ballot before closing hour Tuesday.

If any freshman woman's name does not appear on the list who has made her average she should write it on the bottom of the posted IBM list.

The Residence Counselors and Junior Counselors will vote also. Twelve per cent of the class is the maximum number that will be tapped before the end of the semester.

Correction

The notice in Friday's Flambeau regarding the Young Democrats Club was incorrect. the YD's will meet on March 26 at 7:30 in the Longmire Clubroom.

At this meeting officers will be elected, plans for the coming year discussed, and plans for the state convention formulated. The meeting will be followed by refreshments.

Politics And Universities

(Reprinted from "St. Petersburg Times")

"The chief obstacle to the achievement of quality and economy in the State universities is the present system of control and administration at the level of State Government."

It was only last Monday that these blunt words of the Space Era Education Study were made public.

And on Friday the Legislative Council's Higher Education Committee voted 4-2 to ask the 1963 Legislature to make a radical change in the present system of control of the university system.

This committee, which is one of the interim study groups of legislators which function between sessions of the Legislature, is headed by influential Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville.

Its recommendation is for a constitutional amendment which would vest control of the university system in a nine-member Board of Regents, named by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, for nine-year terms.

This latter provision would meet another of the principal criticisms of the Space Era Education Study--that in four years a Board of Control member barely learns about the complex university system to start being an intelligently useful member.

In his press conference last Thursday, Gov. Farris Bryant said Florida "is not ready" to grant the Board of Control the "complete autonomy" recommended in the Space Era report.

It remains to be seen what his attitude will be toward the plan proposed by Senator Mathews' committee.

However, for one reason along we think the Governor might decide to support the Board of Regents plan. This is his ambition to launch a $200 million expansion program for the State university system.

The Mathews committee also approved a recommendation that the Legislature enact a planned program for higher education by the issuance of bonds. At least inferentially, the committee's support of this program would depend upon adoption of the Board of Regents amendment.

Carrying this thought further, removal of the university system from politics, to the extent that the Board of Regents plan contemplates, almost certainly would increase the confidence of bond buyers--and result in lower interest rates on the $200 million.

The Mathews committee proposal would still leave the Legislature as the final authority on the size of the budget granted the Board of Regents. It also would require legislative approval for capital outlay bond issues by the university system.

This should be sufficient to preserve the "certain democratic values" that Governor Bryant thought would be lost by the autonomy recommended by the Space Era Study. At the same time it should go far toward ending the "susceptibility to political personalities and political pressures" which the Study said were worse in Florida that in any other state in the union.

Communism Will Not Co-Exist

When Norman Cousins spoke in Westcott Auditorium in January, his thesis was that Communism has been "mellowing" since Stalin's time and that there was, therefore, a strong hope that the USSR would abandon its program of world domination and that the threat of Communism would subside. We were told, indeed, that the threat no longer comes as much from the USSR as from Communist China. Not only does Cousins' viewpoint show an abysmal lack of knowledge of the nature of the Communist ideology (see e.g., Budenz, "The Techniques of Communism"), but now he is also clearly contradicted by another expert in the field of Communism, Khrushchev himself.

Cousins used as one of two examples of the "mellowing" of Russian Communism the advent of modern art on the Soviet scene. He went to great lengths to describe an exhibit of such art in Moscow, and pointed out that this event is an indication of ideological liberalization which is taking place under Khrushchev.

From the Communist ideology itself one would predict that abstract art, since it is esoteric, would be unacceptable to Communism, because it conflicts with the Soviet idea of the Common man, or proletariat. Khrushchev, in his blast at modern art, (and incidentally, at those who find no good in Stalinism) does not disappoint us. He tells Soviet writers and artists that there is no place in the USSR for Western abstract art. Socialist realism, i.e., that which can be understood by the proletariat, cannot peacefully coexist with artistic "bourgeois perversions." He continues, "we stand on class positions in art, and are emphatically against the peaceful coexistence of Socialist and bourgeois ideologies.

"Art belongs to the sphere of ideology. And those who think that Socialist realism and formalist abstractionist trends can get peacefully together in Soviet art evitably backslide into alien positions of peaceful coexistence in ology."

Perhaps Mr. Cousins, and others like him who, fearing the rise Communism in the world and instead of realistically facing challenge would rather bury their heads in the sand and deny that threat exists, should heed the words of the Communist leaders. Until Mr. Cousins and his ideologists realize that the theory of Communism demands world conquest shall be in grave danger.

Mr. Cousins, you may be willing to "peacefully coexist" with Communism, but, unfortunately, Communism is unwilling to "peaceful coexist" with you.

Flambeau Forum

To the Editor:

Mr. Khrushchev devotes a great deal of his time on trying to convince the world that the words "capitalism" and "rotten" are synonymous. I know where he could learn how to do it much better than he has--on the campus of FSU. I refer to that esoteric "you're a nasty liberal" and "you're a nasty conservative" class of people. And I wonder which is more dangerous to America, Mr. Khrushchev's attempt or the groups referred to above.

I have noticed this extremism on posters, in the Flambeau, on newscasts, and recently, I see it put forth by fellow-students in the classroom--and the arguments are heatedly defended by them.

I think I have seen a consensus in reaction among fellow observers. Sometimes it is one of confusion and bewilderment, sometimes disgust, and sometimes a suspicious fear.

As I glance to my left I see many different types of men. I see men of progress and innovation, liberals, socialists, radicals. All talk loudly, all want action, some drastic, some not so drastic. Some have their fists raised towards the right.

As I glance to my right I see many different types of men. I see men of high ideals they claim as past, conservatives, laissez faire defenders, reactionaries. All talk loudly, all want action, some drastic, some not so drastic. Some have their fists raised towards the left.

As I glance down that shaky pole of history I see many different experiences. I see great men live and die. I see great empires rise and fall, I see long bloody wars fought and won, or lost. I see innumerable countries and men wet their lips with thoughts of conquest, swell with victory, die in agony.

Young writers to the Flambeau, young men in the classrooms, young Americans, our country is only 174 years old. Look back, you to the right, you to the left, for the sake of all, look back. "You, off there, to my left, does tomorrow look bleak? You, far off to my right, is today so unbearable? Both of you won't tomorrow be bleak indeed if you both don't join us here, a little closer to the middle. Both of you now, before this seesaw gets too far out of balance, and all of us end up on that pole of history, as a natural the past, as a lesson painfully learned."

Segregation At Circus?

To the Editor:

Let us commend ourselves on the excellent work we at FSU are doing to further the cause of segregation. I am referring specifically to the fact that Tuesday night at FSU Circus some eight negro spectators were conspicuously segregated from the rest of the audience. Scanning the bleachers, I noticed that approximately one half of the seats were filled, being concentrated in the center sections. The negro spectators were all seated, as best I could observe, in section E which is in the far south-east corner of the tent, well away from the center ring. Considering that section B, where I was sitting, had a vacancy of a minimum of thirty seats, and that there were similar vacancies in the other center sections, I could not but help feel that this careful seating arrangement had been planned. The question I would like to put forth is this, Were the negro spectators sitting in their seats by choice, coincidence or design?

Considering similar seating arrangements in other university activities, such as football games, I am persuaded to conclude that the segregation was planned. Such a practice is hardly that of a "great university"-- a term we here at FSU find quite easy to print and speak, but most difficult even to begin to realize. The worst part of such practices is that they have the official sanction of the administration, and directly or indirectly and are regarded with apathy by the majority of the student body. If these conditions continue to prevail at FSU, then we have a long way to go before we can even call ourselves a university.

Riggins Presentation Lauded

To the Editor:

I would like to take the opportunity to laud Thomas Riggins on what I consider to be a fine representation of his point of view. (I refer to his article appearing in the March 12 issue of the Flambeau.) I am perhaps quite biased by the fact that I subscribe in large part to the socialist school of thought. Nonetheless it is my opinion that in "Socialist State -- Agent of People," Riggins has attained a clarity that none but the most narrow-minded of us can read without "appreciating." What he agrees to be his "a bit too all encompassing... generalizations" can be excused on the grounds that they seem to set the Capitalism vs. Socialism conflict in what I consider the "proper context."

There is a point Riggins makes here that I would wish to comment upon. (i.e. "Two sets of norms by which decisions will be made"). While I would agree that the acceptance of the existence of "Individual preference norms" and "State preference norms" are all one needs to follow the argument, I suggest that herein lie the difficulties encountered by many who try conscientiously to follow the argument of anyone who is in disagreement over "fundamentals." Riggins has explicitly stated his "fundamentals," and the rest of his argument tumbles out beautifully.

Although many writers do not so explicitly state the "fundamentals" they feel are involved in an argument, I think that we, as readers, should try to detect whether the author is arguing from a point of view, for example, that "those basically agree with me are ABSOLUTELY right and everyone else wrong... and since RIGHT and WRONG are relative only to each other, everyone else is ABSOLUTELY wrong by definition." Detecting "fundamentals" in an argument often requires that the conscientious reader search his own. For example, if the writer is supposing that morals (including so-called "Christian ethics" particular in this country) are RELATIVE or that the so-called "American way of life" is the ONLY good way to live, I suggest that from the acknowledgement of this sort of thing, one can more clearly see what an author is trying to get across.

MIAMI -- In Miami, Florida, an associate of negotiator James Donovan says Donovan returns from Havana with some American prisoners freed by the Castro government. John Nolan says a limited number will accompany Donovan, who has been in Havana several days. Some 20 Americans had been reported in Cuban prisons, most of them charged with counter-revolutionary activities.

NEW YORK -- Striking printers have voted to reject a contract agreement that could have ended the 100-day New York City newspaper shutdown. Typographical Union leaders had recommended acceptance. But the members, at a meeting, voted rejection by a 64-vote margin out of more than 3,000 ballots cast. The count was 1,557 in favor of accepting the settlement proposed by New York's Mayor Robert Wagner, 1,624 against.

WASHINGTON -- Secretary of State Rusk flew to Palm Beach, Florida, yesterday afternoon and conferred for half an hour with president Kennedy. Both leave for Costa Rica today for important talks with six Latin American presidents. The President cut short a cruise on his yacht for the meeting with Rusk. The White House says Kennedy wanted to clean up some financial details on the Costa Rica trip.

NEW YORK -- Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica, chairman of the Council of the Organization of American States, predicts Kennedy and Central American governments will forge a combined policy to topple Communist rule in Cuba. He pictures Cuba as ripe for revolt and sabotage. Facio says sanctions probably will be recommended, but he says he does not think there will be any plans for use of force against Cuba at this time.

MOSCOW -- A Soviet radio newsman, says Russia has intercontinental bombers fitted with air-to-ground missiles capable of striking any point in the world. The Moscow radio broadcaster was reporting on a trip he took aboard one of the bombers.

In Washington, Defense Department sources say the US has known for some time that Russia has some sort of air-launched missile. The US has one operational air-to-surface missile with nuclear capabilities... the Hound Dog...with a range of around 600 miles.

Donna Haswell Selected FSU's Best Dressed Coed

The selection of Donna Haswell as the best dressed coed on the FSU campus has been announced.

Donna is a freshman at FSU and is majoring in Fashion Merchandising. Her hometown is Ellwood City, Pa., and she is now living in Reynolds Hall.

A member of Kappa Delta sorority, Miss Haswell is 18 years old, 5'8" tall, and has ash blond hair and greenish-blue eyes.

Photographs of FSU's entry in three different outfits will be sent to New York to "Glamour Magazine," the sponsor of the "Ten Best Dressed College Girls of America Contest."

Miss Haswell was selected by a faculty-student committee from entrants from the sororities and dorms on this campus. All were judged on their figure, posture, grooming, make-up, individuality and photogenic qualities.

Revenge Is Sweet

Diamond Men Win By 2-1

An unearned run in the eighth inning gave Florida State a 2-1 baseball victory over Auburn's Tigers in the 1963 opener for both teams before 1800 fans at Seminole Field.

An unearned run in the eighth inning gave Florida State a 2-1 baseball victory over Auburn's Tigers in the 1963 opener for both teams before 1800 fans at Seminole field.

The game was highlighted by a pitching duel between FSU's Al Beccaccio and Auburn's Joe Overton, who gave up nine hits and only two earned runs between them, retiring 14 consecutive batters at one stretch

The win settled an old Seminole score with Auburn, who managed to whip them four straight times even though the tribesmen finished 23-14 and gained a third place berth in the College World Series.

The two combatants will clash again this afternoon at 3:30 EST. Senior Right hander Allen Thomas of Cairo, Georgia, will start for FSU; as yet, Auburn has not tabbed its starter.

Auburn struck first in the second inning when catcher Vic Svetlay and center fielder Jim Backus singled and Overton brougnt Svetlay home with another single.

In the bottom of the same inning, FSU got back in the game on the heels of first team All-America catcher Buddy Teagle 440 foot homer to dead center with the bases empty.

Second baseman Jim Reed gathered the other run batted in when he pumped a double down the leftfield line to score Beccaccio, who had got to first base on a throwing error by Auburn second baseman Jimmy Martin.

Beccaccio, regular second baseman for FSU last year, gave up five hits, struck out 10 and walked two. Overton, a quarterback on the Auburn football team, yielded but four hits, striking out nine and walking none.

Sports See Busy Spring

In the Spring, a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love. Soon as the baseball game's over, or the track meet, or the golf or tennis match.

That busy Spring sports season is cranking up again at Florida State this week, opening the gates for that greatest of pastimes: sportsviewing, out in the sunshine. A total of 12 events are scheduled for FSU's Spring teams, and nine of them are slated for the FSU campus.

Baseball action will the liveliest. Coach Danny Lithwiler's Seminoles, who opened their '63 season here Saturday against Auburn, will again host the Tigers Monday afternoon. Clemson will come in for baseball games on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The FSU golfers, 1-2 on the year, will get back in action Monday by entertaining Georgia Tech. Springfield College and Georgia. The Seminoles host Springfield Tuesday, then go to Ocala for the Florida Intercollegiate on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Their last match was on March 1.

Coach Eddie Cubbon's tennis team has three scheduled matches, all of them at home. Monday, the Seminole netters play Georgia Tech. On Saturday, they'll host Navy in the morning and Northwestern in the afternoon. FSU has won both of its matches this year.

Coach Mike Long's track team is the only FSU team idle this week. They were originally scheduled to enter the Memphis (Tenn.) Relays, but have decided to stay home..

This week's Seminole sports log:

MONDAY--Baseball, Auburn here, 3:30; Tennis, Ga. Tech, 2; Golf, Ga. Tech - Springfield - Georgia - FSU here, 1.

TUESDAY--Golf, Springfield here, 1.

WEDNESDAY thru SATURDAY--Golf, Florida Intercollegiate in Ocala.

THURSDAY--Baseball, Clemson here, 3:30.

FRIDAY--Baseball, Clemson here, 3:30.

SATURDAY--Baseball, Clemson here, 12:30; Tennis, Navy (9:30) and Northwestern (2:30) here.

Coach Clinic Here In June

The 10th Annual Florida State Coaching Clinic, which will be held June 13-15, will feature some of the most prominent coaches in the country, announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

Among the coaches to be present for the football sessions are Tom Nugent of Maryland and Frank Broyles of Arkansas. Nugent, the former FSU coach who is generally credited with putting the Seminoles on the road to big-time football, became the Maryland mentor after the 1958 season.

Broyles, a former Georgia Tech assistant coach, had the Arkansas gridders battling the University of Alabama after two years in his head coaching position.

All members of Florida State's football staff will participate in the gridiron clinic, which will last from Thursday to Friday.

The basketball sessions will be headed by John (Whack) Hyder of Georgia Tech. Hyder, who was chosen the Southeastern Conference Coach-of-the-Year by the United Press, would have seen the Yellow Jackets play in the NCAA tournament had Mississippi State refused its bid.

The cage sessions will be held on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning.

In addition, trainer Don Fauls of Florida State will conduct a one-hour long course in "Isometric Contraction."

The clinic, which is "one of the most successful long-time summer clinics in the country," will charge $20 for participants. The cost includes lectures, a clinic party and a banquet.

CRAIG JOHNSON PASSES OFF

Pro Scouts Eye Sumner

Representative (scouts) of all National Football League teams have already been here to watch the Seminoles in Spring grid drills, and most are impressed with the pro potential of Junior Tackle Avery Sumner of Adel, Ga., and Junior End Bill (Red) Dawson of Valdosta, Ga. Quarterback Steve Tensi has his admirers, too... Coach Bill Peterson says Sumner, Dawson, Senior Lefthalf Dave Snyder of Jacksonville and Junior End Don Floyd of Madison have been the most outstanding in Spring drills... Carrying Spring superlatives farther Most Promising Freshmen have been Tackle Dick Hesselbart (6-4, 241), Genoa, O.; Guard Jerry Wooten (6-1, 201), Geneva, Ala.; and End Max Wettstein (6-3, 190), Leesburg.

Tops among up-coming "redshirts" have been Tackles Bob Mangan (6-1, 246), Atlanta, Ga., and Frank Pennie (6-4, 229), Hollywood, Fla.; End Terry Garvin (5-11, 195) of Pensacola, and Guard Jack Shinholser (6-1, 204) of Tampa... Peterson says Florida State is "behind in our work compared to this time last year," because of the new emphasis having to be placed on developing two-way players. He says progress along that line is "as well as could be expected"... Three recent noteworthy switches: Senior Larry Brinkley (Willoughby, O.) from halfback to No. 1 fullback, Junior Steve Slay (Atlanta) from center to guard, Soph Jay Mac Matthews from guard to center. Brinkley has turned into one of the team's best all-around runners after two years as a defensive specialist, has moved out '62 starter Marion Roberts (Ocilla, Ga.).

Peterson says beigrest problem now, strangely, is receiving--one of the strong points last year. "And our defense is "way ahead of the offense"... Top men in the search for strong running back are Brinkley, Snyder, Junior Phil Spooner of Fort Myers. Held out of Spring drills, but certain to be top runners, are Senior Fullback Gene Roberts of High Springs and Junior Halfback Jim Loftin. (Loftin, incidentally, is the baseball team's No. 3 pitcher. Coach Danny Litwhiler says the Pensacola flash has plenty of speed and a good arm. Throwing nothing but fastballs, he fanned six of nine batters in his first intra-squad test.)

115 Candidates Eligible

Race For Offices Begins Today At 5

Active campaigning begins this afternoon at 5 p.m. for 115 candidates who are running for the 53 posts open in the March 26 Senate, Court and Class Elections. The Elections Bureau will meet today at 4:30 p.m. to ensure that campaign regulations are enforced.

All campaign materials should be turned in to the Bureau before being used in the campaign.

Four proposed Constitutional amendments passed by the Student Body Senate will be voted on in the March 26 Elections, also.

Student Senate Bill Number 25 to amend the Student Body Constitution Article IV states:

Be it enacted by the FSU Student Senate: That Article IV, Section 2, Part A be amended by the words "on this campus."

Be it further enacted that: Section 2, Part B be amended by deleting the words "who shall have had over one full semester's experience on either the Honor Court or the University Court."

Be it further enacted that: Section 7, be amended by changing Part C to Part D, and Part D to Part E. Part C shall then read, "The Honor Court shall select one of its members to assume the duties of the Chief Justice in his absence."

Be it further enacted that: Section 3, Part A be amended by deleting the words: "on the Honor Court, the University Court, or the Traffic Court." And adding the words: "the judicial system of any college or university."

Be it further enacted that: Section 4, Part A be amended be deleting: "on the Honor Court, the University Court, or the Traffic Court." And adding the words: "the judicial system of any college or university."

Student Senate Bill Number 26 to amend Article X of the Student Body Constitution states:

Be it enacted by the FSU Student Senate that: Article X, Section 1, Parts A and B be amended to read as follows: A. Student Body Elections: Primary, Last Tuesday in February; Final, the Friday following the Primary. B. Senate, Court and Class Elections: Primary, last Tuesday in March; Final, the Friday following the Primary.

Be it further enacted that: Part D and the following paragraph be deleted. Be it further enacted that: A new Article X, Section 2 be added to read as follows: Section 2 Elections

Smith Revises Branch Of Student Government

Complete revamping of the executive branch of Student Government is being planned for the coming administrative year, Student Body President - Elect Johnny Smith announced today.

One of the main features of the change will be the establishment of a system of directorates, bureaus and staffs to replace the present committee system. The Student Body President's Cabinet will be reduced in number from 10 to six.

In announcing the change, Smith explained that the committee system is designed primarily for legislative operation and is most effective there. He said he believes the reduction in the number of Cabinet members will allow unity, rapid operation and expedient handling of administrative duties.

A system of directorates will be responsible for major individual Student Government projects, such as Homecoming and Family Weekend, while Cabinet undersecretaries will handle the other various executive duties as prescribed by statutes.

Elections, Smith noted, will be placed under a commissioner, apart from the Cabinet, because of a need to separate the elections system from any form of political activity. Statutorial changes will be ready to be taken before the Student Senate within the next few days, he added.

The six cabinet positions to be included in the proposed system will be an Attorney General, Secretary of State, Secretary of Finance, Secretary of Internal Affairs, Secretary of the University Union and Secretary of Intercollegiate and Public Affairs. Directorates and undersecretaryships will be established under the cabinet offices to provide for Student Government projects.

Most complex of the Cabinet offices will be that of Secretary of Internal Affairs, which will have jurisdiction over the director of student welfare, with its undersecretary of insurance, undersecretary of International Students, and undersecretary

Garnet And Gold Interviewed On Trimester

By LINDA SAVIDGE
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Oh, for the semester," Joe Rodgers declared.

In his opinion, the trimester is "for those who have no outside activities and wish to pursue only the academics. Everyone else is out of luck."

Many other members of Garnet Key and Gold Key, campus leadership honoraries for women and men, respectively, responded with similar opinions when asked their reactions to the trimester.

"More work in less time," is the net result of the system according to a junior.

Students are so rushed under the trimester system that the college experience of developing a "wide variety of interests" is denied them. "It is impossible for the professors to give their subjects proper depth," Alice Marshall has stated. The pressure has "completely destroyed any pleasure in learning."

An anonymous member contributed the opinions that the time is inadequate for "quality research papers," and that the reserve books in the library are so much in demand that it is impossible to get to them.

A further comment against the system was expressed by one who feels that sudents do not learn as much under the trimester and that it is physically hard on both professors and students.

According to Chuck Cutajar, only the above average can benefit from the trimester system. Also, if the system is adopted below the college level, students will eventually finish college long before they reach maturity. He questioned the validity of this method of alleviating the overcrowded conditions, asking why the state does not "start building more classrooms and universities, rather than trying to make a mass production line out of college. College life is more than a rat cap, an IBM card and a diploma."

Ron Boersma stated that the retention of knowledge by students is being decreased in proportion to the amount of time cut off by the new system. The system is not efficient at this time.

He felt, however, that the system does have possibilities and can lead to eventual savings. Ron declared that although "it is sad to cut out students who cannot withstand the pressure, the eventual improvement in the high school systems will produce students who are prepared to cope with such pressure."

Clyda Stokes said that while it "has cut short a valuable extra period of time which is necessary for genuine absorption of material and intellectual growth, it also has resulted in reduction of time spent in COSTA RICA--President Kennedy has opened his three-day meeting in Costa Rica with the presidents of six middle-America nations by promising fierce, unyeilding resistance to the spread of foreign tyranny in the Western hemisphere. Kennedy said: "We will build a wall around Cuba--not a wall of mortar or brick or barbed wire but a wall of dedicated men determined to protect their own freedom and sovereignty.

WASHINGTON--The Defense Department says four Soviet planes made a total of nine individual passes over the U.S. aircraft carrier "Constellation" in the Western Pacific two days ago. U.S. Navy reconnaissance and fighter planes intercepted the Russian planes about 100 miles from the ship and escorted them during the passes. The Constellation was about 600 miles Southwest of Midway Island. The Soviet planes were of a type normally classed as bombers but used also for reconnaissance.

The Pentagon had disclosed more than two weeks ago flights of Soviet reconnaissance planes over U.S. carriers in the Atlantic and the Pacific. And the Pentagon says that the latest incident, like the others occured over international waters and Soviet aircraft had a legal right to be in the air over these waters.

NEW DELHI--Prime Minister Nehru of India said the Chinese Communist invasion of India last fall isolated here and lost her the good will of most of the non-aligned countries and of many of her Communist allies. Nehru said the Chinese actions also led to a wealth of good feeling between India and the United States. His remarks are made in an article in a U.S. publication, "Foreign Affairs."

IFPC Initiates 'Project Books'

Any paperback or hardback book which is suitable for reading is wanted by the FSU Inter-Fraternity Pledge Council for its "Project Books," IFPC President Joel DeVolentine announced today.

The first project of the IFPC, the books collected and donated will go to the W.T. Edwards Tuberculosis [illegible] Hospital [illegible] replace its [illegible] scholarship houses and the library.

The IFPC was formed during the trimester of '62 and is composed of the president and one delegate from the [illegible] fraternity. It meets weekly at alternating fraternity houses and is an independent organization which sets up its own rules and collects its own dues from pledge classes.

The officers are president, DeVolentine; vice president, [illegible] Ouver; secretary, Guy Sanderson; treasurer, David Leever and service chairman, Charlton Hines.

The primary purpose of the IFPC is to promote good inter-fraternity relationships, encourage scholarship and training for campus leaders and to provide service to the University and the community. "Project books" is a result of the latter purpose.

Paris Brought Here

Paris theater will be brought to Tallahassee for the second year on April 11 when the traveling company, Le Treteau de Paris, presents two one-act plays in the French language in Westcott Auditorium.

The plays are "L'Appolon de Bellac" by Jean Giraudoux and "Orphee" by Jean Cocteau. The productions will be at 8:30 p.m. and tickets, available at the Modern Languages Dept. are $1 for students faculty and staff and $1.50 for the public. The department is joined by the Interdepartmental program in Humanities in sponsoring the plays.

Last year when the same expert company presented two other plays, one observer said the productions were the best professional theater ever seen in Tallahassee, according to Dr. Jean Charron, who is making arrangements.

"L'Apollon de Bellac" first produced in 1947, is a spoof on French bureaucracy. The part of Agnes, a pretty, naive girl, is played by Nicole Desurmont, who had an equally successful role in Moliere's "L' Ecole des Femmes" on a 1961 tour.

The other play on the twin bill, "Orphee," one of the Cocteau series of updated Greek tragedies, stars the upcoming young French star, Bernard Verley as Orpheus and Colette Teissedre as Eurydice.

The touring company, with Jean de Rigault as director, is making 70 performances in a three-month tour of 50 American college campuses. In Florida the group will present the plays at University of Miami and Jacksonville University just before the FSU production.

Charron said copies of the plays in French are available at Bill's Bookstore for 45 cents each.

Boynton Talks On Resources

Fresh water and pure air may [illegible] resources in the future who the dangers inherent in pollution and waste are recognized, according to John Boynton of the Florida Development Commission, who will be the American Studies Lecture Series speaker at FSU Wednesday.

The lecture will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. It is open to the public. Dr. William Randel of the English Department at FSU is program director. American Myths is the general topic of the American Studies Lecture Series for this year. Boynton will speak on "The Myth of Inexhaustible Resources."

Dr. Boynton said that the unfortunate thing about a myth when it is "grounded in error, is that it persists long after knowledge of this fallacy has been demonstrated. Indian Dancers To Perform Here

Tickets are now on sale in the Westcott Ticket Office for the Kathak Dancers and Musicians of North India, which will perform at 8:30 p.m. on March 28.

This is the first American tour of the Kathak Dancers and only once before have they left India. In 1961 a group toured Moscow and a few other cities of the USSR.

The organization started in 1952 arranging public festivals of music and dance, but very soon the directorate turned its attention to reviving the Kathak arts. Since then the Indian government has awarded official scholarships to recognized dancers and musicians in order that they may study in the advanced institute of the Bharatiya Kala Kendra.

For the American tour, short episodes have been excerpted from some of the longer works to be included in the repertory. In programs, these will be balanced with Kathak as it was seen in the courts of the Mughal emperors and with purely rhythmical solos and group numbers characteristic of this dance theatre.

Kathak dance had its birth in the temple, where it was used as pantomime to accompany the recitation of the Kathakas, the professional story-tellers, who recounted and interpreted tales from Hindu mythology. It soon involved dance and song and therefore music.

Kathak was then introduced as a form of entertainment in the court of the Hindu Rajas, or kings, and became a secular art. It is during this period that its development as a distinct and individualistic style.

As court entertainment, Kathak dance took on the prevalent court dress of the Mughal period -- its characteristic being the extended skirt, sometimes transparent, which revealed the movement of the feet. Ankle-bells are also used and are an indispensable part of the ancient Indian classical tradition. Proof of the virtuosity of a Kathak dancer is control of the hundreds of bells in each anklet -- down to the sound of a single bell, or silence.

Ugorski On Display

An exhibition of Walter Ugorski's paintings in the FSU Art Gallery will conclude this Thursday night at 9:30.

Ugorski, a Chicago-born painter, was a graduate student at FSU and studied at the School of the Art Institute in Chicago, where he was awarded the coveted Anna Louis Raynond Foreign Traveling Fellowship. He has had showings in Chicago, New York, and New Orleans.

The works which will be shown are concerned with the "human situation" and represent Ugorski's thesis problem, which is to externalize the qualities that he feels are evident and significant in our present situation. He writes, "I feel that individual isolation and loneliness is an accompanying factor of modern existence. My thesis is composed of paintings depicting this pitted against his actual physical closeness to his fellow-beings.

"For me there is a deeply-rooted relationship between the creative process and an awareness of the surrounding physical world. I have found it necessary in my own work that some contact with nature is absolutedly essential from which to draw my subject matter and external impressions; but not with the idea of producing the optical illusion.

Senate Takes FSU Food Poll

Student opinion on the quality of FSU's food services will be polled on Wednesday John Merting, chairman of the Senate Food Services Committee announced yesterday.

The committee will attempt to analyze returned questionnaires to determine what recommendations need to be made to Morrison's food service to improve the quality of food and services offered.

Tables will be set up Wednesday and Thursday at each food service to poll opinion.

endeavors that did not deserve the quantity of time contributed to them in the past."

An anonymous opinion was that teachers who are expecting the same amount of work under this system as they did under the semester need to change their ways, but that if improvements can be made, the system has possibilities for the future.

Barbara Boerema added that "there is still time to study, participate in extracurricular activities, and relax a little if we don't waste time." However, "students tend to do a minimum amount of work rather than striving for further knowledge."

"A shot-in-the-arm, making the students pep up their college days with more concentrated study and more choice activities" was the description of one student.

Another felt that the trimester system is progressive, putting pressure on the student and faculty to "surge this University far ahead of others."

The shortened time demands people realize the importance of keeping up daily, and the stress on academics is greater.

It has been, "a good excuse for poor grades, but not a valid one."

Ross McVoy wrote that "its results will add tremendously to FSU's academic reputation in the future."

Monetarily, there is an advantage to those who must work during the summer. "The longer summer working period enables us to earn more money."

The university facilities are utilized more fully and more students are accommodated per year.

Chuck Kemman contributed the opinion that "In spite of the many objections that have been raised against the trimester system, I doubt that many students would honestly be in favor of going back to a semester system."

MSC Action To Affect FSU

The state officials of Mississippi recently struck down a segregation "unwritten law" in a move to let Mississippi State participate in the 1963 National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament.

An 8-3 vote of the State College Board permitted the Southeastern Conference champions to go to the meet, even though the opposition might be integrated. Gov. Barnett, it is reported, opposed the measure.

But there are certain signs of what is to come and immediate significance in the board's actions.

First of all, it should be pointed out that the state would deserve no praise in letting MSC play against Negro athletes. Rather, it was a selfish move. Since Mississippi State has won the right to play in the NCAA tournament for the last four years, the state and the school have lost much publicity and distinction because of the unwritten law.

The board, by approving sending the MSC squad to the tourney despite the possible presence of Negroes, was thinking of the school.... not the Southern society.

Secondly, this reluctance to keep athletes from competing in national tournaments helps to destroy the two-headed beast that has been nipping for years at the universities of the South--a beast that bites when segregation is violated and a beast that bites when a possible national championship slips by.

Furthermore, the move even has significance with Florida State's future, because (1) this state has had a similar unwritten law for its state-supported universities, (2) FSU has been unable to invite a neighboring institution to any athletic event, and (3) the administration has seen some talented athletes of the other race go to other schools.

Apparently, the progressive state of Florida is accepting token mixed competition, judging from the high school basketball tournament played in Gainesville's gymnasium. For the first time, a high school team was integrated.

And another, perhaps unconsidered, effect of Mississippi's action on the university might be this:

Florida State, which has long sought entry into the Southeastern Conference, admits it might have a better chance of getting in if the race issue divied the conference. However, a willingness on the part of SEC-member Mississippi State to play against mixed teams would indicate that other members would not spurn the financial advantages of the SEC for Southern ideals.

Racquettes Down Valdosta, 16-

Headed toward an undefeated season after a surprise win over Seabreeze High School, the Racquettes dumped Valdosta High School on home courts Saturday 16-2.

Kathy Spence of FSU defeated Nancy Simon 6-2, 6-2; Judi Dunn of FSU stopped Maxine Wilson 6-1, 6-0; FSU's Chris Padgett blanked Judy Lawson 6-0, 6-0, while teammate Gail Greene defeated Valdosta's Joy Smith 6-3, 6-1; and Irene Washington of FSU outlasted Linda McLaurin 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Betty Allen of FSU, playing two singles matches, had wins over Katherine Dennis and Mary Pate with identical scores of 6-2, 6-0. Seminole netter Carol Hale won over Toni DiMascio 6-1, 6-3, and Kit Logan lost to Valdosta's Helen Lawson 5-7, 2-6.

Priscilla McKnight of FSU defeated Claudette Pierce 6-3, 6-3; Linda Baxter (FSU) defeated Mardi Barnes 6-2, 6-1; and FSU's Barbara Steel shut out Sandra Overby 6-0, 6-0.

In the doubles competition Spence and Dunn [de]mon 6-4, Washington defeat[ed] Laurin and [Smith] and Allen of FSU lost [to] and Carol Kellerman 1-6, 6-[4]

Hale and Logan had a victory over Susan LaMont[a] Linda Blaze; McKnight and defeated DiMascio and Pier[ce] 6-2; Lankford and Steel twins Cornelia and Cecel well 6-0, 6-0.

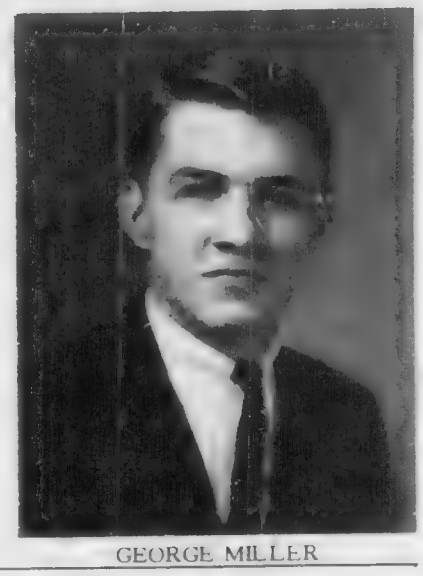
Two Cabinet Posts Given By President-Elect Smith

By SUSIE RHOADES
Assistant News Editor



ARNIE GIBBS

President-elect Johnny Smith has announced two members of his cabinet for the 1963-1964 school year.

Arnie Gibbs will be attorney general. He is a junior from Tallahassee and is majoring in business. Gibbs has been active in student government as a senator, treasurer of the University Party and chairman of the Senate International Students Committee. He has served his fraternity as social chairman and pledgemaster.

George Miller has been appointed as secretary for university union. Miller is a junior history major from DeFuniak Springs. He has been a senator, chairman of the Student Party and vice chairman of Region IV University Union Association.

"OF MEN AND MORTAL POTS"

Marshall LaCombe and JoAnn Gresham star in the WFSU-TV comedy written by FSU student Jerry Lyell.

WFSU Airs New Comedy

"Of Men and Mortal Pots," a one act comedy by Jerry Lyell, FSU drama student, will be presented on WFSU-TV's Montage today at 8:30 p.m.

The program was produced and directed by D. Keith Carlson of the Channel 11 staff. Carlson has also staged "The King's Own Christmas," which he wrote, and "The Theatre of the Absurd" in recent months.

The story centers around Hubert Singleterry, recently deceased husband of Laura, who has returned home for an army souvenir he once hid in an old earthenware pot. With Hubert as his guardian angel, to whom he talks throughout the play.

Since Hubert is a ghost, he cannot be seen by mortals. He tries to let his wife know he is there by blowing in her ear, but to no avail. The action hits high gear when Hubert tells his angel that the souvenir is a G-string he picked up in France.

Compounding and confusing the situation are Mrs. Kipple, Hubert's mother-in-law; Reverend Pinkley, the minister, who is friend of all and Mr. Willoughby, the tactless but well-meaning undertaker.

In the cast are: Marshall LaCombe as Hubert Singleterry, Jim Martin as the Guardian angel, JoAnn Gresham as Laura Singleterry, Jim Rayfield as Reverend Pinkley, and John Hoffman as Mr. Willoughby and Cris McGlasson as Mrs. Kipple.

Stage settings are by Bill Valle.

Computer Addition Acquired By FSU

... computers ... are checking ... of research problems at FSU's Computing Center, ... IBM 709 which has been in use for ... year and a half and a newly acquired IBM 1401 which shortens the time for production of printed results.

The IBM 1401, provided for by a $166,000 National Science Foundation grant, "reads" the problems for the other machine. They are computed on the IBM 709 which has a word memory four times greater than the new machine, and the answers are written on tape. Then the 1401, which reads and prints much faster than the 709, prints the results.

Dr. E.P. Miles Jr., professor of mathematics and director of the computing center, said that the NSF grant was made to purchase additional components for the IBM 709 and to cover part of the cost of leasing the 1401.

FOOD POLL

A poll of student opinion concerning the quality of FSU's food service will be taken today and tomorrow at each campus location, John Mering, chairman of the Senate Food Services Committee said yesterday.

The Naval Aviator Procurement Team from Jacksonville, headed by Lieutenant U.W. King, will visit FSU next week to interview, advise, and counsel qualified men who want to earn an officer's commission and fly with the fleet.

... teacher, this student feels that he can- ... really cover more material in an hour ... a half than he does in an hour, because a good lecture encompasses one main theme and the added time only gives time for embellishments.

On the other hand, there is less socializing, and students are having to eliminate extraneous activities. Also, there is no post-Christmas examination panic.

According to this student, the fate of the trimester hinges upon one thing -- is it making school an all-year operation as it was designed to do. If it succeeds, it may be worthwhile in spite of the difficulties; otherwise it is "useless."

The deciding factor will be the number of students who register for the third trimester in the summer of 1964.

Another student-professor brought out the colossal task of reorganizing lectures which is facing the faculty. In the longer periods, they cannot merely read seven minutes into the next lecture. Their points must have broader scope.

As a student, he finds difficulty in doing a good job on the monthly and term papers. The class time is the same, but the outside reading time is greatly decreased.

"Suspicious disapproval" is this student's attitude.

One graduate student favored the system, saying that he now has no time for slacking off in the spring, as he did under the semester system. It means increased time to earn money for those who work during the summer. "People can't party all the time," he added, they must acknowledge the "academic stress."

"Picking the brains of trained men" is what the college process is to one graduate student. He feels that the cut in extra-curricular activities can do little but good because he believes that people do come to college for the academic training of their minds, not to become professional derby riders, newspaper writers or court judges. Activities must be subordinate to the academics.

"Know-how" can cut a considerable amount of time away from studying, and the trimester forces this.

Against the argument that the system is more oriented to the above-average than to the average student, he stated his belief that the system is more oriented to the average student than to the poor student.

The trend towards graduate education counteracts, in his mind, the fear that people will be graduating too young, because this system will enable people to gain graduate degrees at an earlier date.

Although the students in the physical sciences who must perform laboratory tasks, and the music students who must practice are experiencing difficulty with the system, this graduate student believes that it is a "great advantage to the school as a whole."

Diligent Student Denied Opportunity For Quality

To the Editor:

As a student having studied at FSU under both the semester and the trimester systems, I would like to register considerable displeasure with the new system of operation. My prime objection is that in its present form it simply does not allow sufficient time per term for a diligent student in certain fields to obtain the high quality, well-rounded college experience this institution is potentially capable of delivering. Examples of the time shortage problem are easy to cite, even if we were to dismiss student and faculty complaints regarding lack of time as excuses for laziness.

1. The loss of "dead day" and the shortened examination periods. The seriousness of final examinations is difficult to overemphasize, a fact brought out by the administration of such institutions as M.I.T. and Princeton, which allow two-day "reading periods" before finals. Resolution of this problem by beginning classes earlier in September might result in registration falling before Labor Day.

2. The dropping of December commencement exercises. This forces December graduates who wish to participate in the time-honored tradition of formally receiving their diplomas to return in April.

3. The near-abolition of vacations. Having to attend classes on a Saturday so that students might eat Thanksgiving dinner with their families points up the impossible scheduling of the system, as does the fact that the only previous vacation of the second term, Easter, is sandwiched into final examinations. Changing the starting date of the second trimester would only create additional absurdities elsewhere. This lack of vacation is, in my estimation, an insult to the academic quality of FSU. Schools such as Yale, Princeton, U.C.L.A., Harvard, and M.I.T., to name a few, recognize that their curricula are rigorous enough that students may need time to catch up. The numerous recesses granted at these institutions were not planned to give students an opportunity to loaf.

4. The extreme difficulty in scheduling some course, especially laboratory courses. Dr. Werner Herz brought out in a panel discussion reported in the February 7th Flambeau that the system causes problems in operating laboratory classes in the Chemistry Department. This is understandable, considering the fact that the same number of experiments are to be covered but that scheduling difficulties cause the loss of eleven minutes per period under the new system. As a chemistry major, I can personally and emphatically assure the reader that this difficulty is quite acute, and it is almost a certainty that similar difficulties are encountered in any department scheduling large numbers of laboratory courses.

5. Concern has been expressed by instructors as to the ability to cover the material in the time allotted. In the same panel discussion, Dr. Calvin Billman of the History Department expressed concern about covering the specified material in large lecture classes, while Dr. Robert Kramer of the School of Music asserted that there is no longer enough practice time for music students. Loss of follow-up courses after internship is a problem presently plaguing the School of Education. Many professors, the discussion brought out, are of the opinion that fourteen weeks is not long enough to read, study and absorb the required material, and that students are forced to study more for exams than for knowledge.

6. While it can only be surmised that increased pressures are keeping many students away from worthwhile extra-curricular activities, it is a fact that there is an acute problem regarding scheduling these activities. If anyone wonders why the February 9th performance of the highly touted Four Saints was so poorly attended, the fact that a basketball game and the Valency play were scheduled that same night, as well as a swimming meet that afternoon, may provide part of the answer.

Many more examples of the time shortage problem could be brought forth, but space does not permit. It should be clear in the first analysis that the loss of three full weeks of study time to cover the same amount of material can only result in undue difficulties for many students, depending upon the individual's major area of study and consequent academic load.

The system has not been in operation long enough for a statistical analysis to be meaningful, but a look at the results of the first trimester may at least show a trend. We find undergraduate grades up slightly and grades slightly down in the Graduate School neither enough to defend or condemn the system. But then [illegible] of course hours dropped (10.4 as compared to 8[illegible] of 1961 with an in[illegible] students) [illegible] erage number [illegible] as compared [illegible] seem to have [illegible] it also known [illegible] has dropped, [illegible] were not avail[illegible] increased pr[illegible] alleviate their [illegible] manner ope[illegible] ping out of school. Education - Yes, But Quality ?

To the Editor:

As one drives into Perry, Florida, one is aware that there is a factory in the vicinity producing paper by the Kraft process. The same general air of stagnation in Tallahassee is indicative of the fact that at FSU they are producing bachelor's degrees by the trimester process.

The deans have said that judgment on the trimester system is premature. Now publicly deans traditionally live in a world of see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil. As far as the taxpayer is concerned life at the University could not be better. Those few who came to the campus with perhaps a drinking habit are practically on the wagon. Those coeds who were perhaps under-wise have tightened up their virtue. Daily the faculty and students grow bigger and better in every way. Privately of course, the deans know exactly what is going on. Which may be why their remarks seem to indicate, that if they have not seen or heard any evil, they have at least smelled some, and it is creeping into their speech.

Of course what they smell are "coincidences" and in no way connected with what they cannot admit they observe. Illness struck the campus with unusual force. Doesn't the trimester system provide for the unusual? Sickness strikes periodically and occasionally in force. The deans say that the change in the sorority rush system was a coincidence. That change was concomitant. Get a dictionary and see, and stop wasting so much of your 40 hour work week reading the Flambeau. Time consuming organizational meetings are only a coincidence. When is an organizational meeting not time consuming?

They remarked that there is a new sense of "academic urgency" on the campus. There sure is. But the fact is that academic matters are matters of leisure. Such leisure is wealth--if it is being wasted on casual parties and flirtations that occupy so much of the time of the students here, no doubt the deans should be concerned.

But it seems clear to me that if you take away this wealth, then you are just as poor as if you squandered it. And that is what the trimester system attempts to do: take away leisure time in order to increase productivity of the physical plant.

Now it may be too early to assess the damage that this attempt has done. But it is not too early to examine the goal of the trimester system. That should have been done before it was begun. It is too late for double talk.

I have undergone experiments with the trimester system before. I cannot see any different results shaping up with the experiment here. Overall, those who underwent the experiment fell behind those who had leisure to learn, whether they spent the same time in class or not.

When you are handed that piece of paper after so many semester hours of whatever it is, you are competing with others with similar pieces of paper, produced elsewhere. It is then pertinent to ask, "What process produced your paper?"

Kraft paper is used for wrapping quality paper.

28 Hour Day Only Solution

To the Editor:

If the trimester program has left you a bit breathless, you can readily see the reason. The whole plan presupposes compression of the semester program so as to cover three semesters in one year. This is readily achieved by going over to a 26-28 hour day. But until we adopt this logical necessity, we shall continue to face insuperable trimester problems.

Work during a typical fall semester was spread over a period of 120 days plus an 8 day period for examinations plus registration. The actual number of M-F class days was 78. On the trimester system the work was spread over a period of 98 days plus 7 days for examination plus registration. The actual number of M-F class days was 70, but the lengthened periods compensated for the fewer class hours.

There are several tacit assumptions in the trimester program. (1) One possible assumption is that only class contact hours are important. Whether students have 100 days or 120 days to master the work is secondary. Or perhaps, (2) in the past, the majority of the students have supposedly been spending so much time on outside activites that they can adjust to the longer day by merely working harder.

Continuation of the trimester operation might be possible if all students will register for sufficiently reduced course loads, say an average of 12 hours to compensate adequately for the available time. Unfortunately there will be enormous pressures to dilute the course content instead.

It is my strong recommendation that some other form of year around operation be adopted before the fine educational programs in the Florida universities are seriously crippled. Either the two and one-half semester system or the four quarter system would fit the 24 hour day.

Trade Quality For Quantity

To the Editor:

Mr. van Assenderp, in the Flambeau (March [illegible]) states: "The [illegible] of the trimester has been an incentive to study to those few students who could be pushed to work in no other way. On the other hand, a real, serious, dedicated, student who recognizes the values of books is being hindered in his quest for the quality of education he is seeking. A professor 'who is truly a professor in that he is interested in spending time with his students and is dedicated to his own discipline and to the University, in that he enters into research' is being cut down on both sides. For this type of professor, the time shortage is hindering him severely."

I think that the above statement almost sums the heart of what is wrong with the trimester system. I do not think that one can justify sacrificing the "quality" of the two groups--the dedicated students, and the professors--to the turning out of the "quantity"--the first type of student "who could be pushed to work in no other way."

This reduction in the length of the term (12% shorter than the semster) I feel, greatly lowers the quality of education that a student is getting. Much of the administration seems to feel that [illegible] carried" and "grade point [illegible] earned" [illegible] ucation gained," and that if [illegible] fails, that all is well. I [illegible] question [illegible] 125 trimester hours credit [illegible] mesters.

If the student has not had the [illegible] to study (I have heard many st[illegible] complain 'the trimester is [illegible] cram--there is not time to [illegible] one just crams and hopes to [illegible] it long enough to pass the te[illegible] hopes that the final exam wo[illegible] er the entire course), and [illegible] flect, and time just to THINK A[illegible] what he is [illegible] ing it; if the student d[illegible] the time to review and to [illegible] late the inform[illegible] missing the most important [illegible] education.

I like to think [illegible] ing composed [illegible] is the memorizing of [illegible] getting the general picture [illegible] is going on; the second, the [illegible] important part, is the [illegible] one reflects and think[illegible] he has been studying; the [illegible] one argues with, attack[illegible] fends what he has learned--t[illegible] when the ideas [illegible] cease to be mere words, [illegible] transformed into tools. How[illegible] in the rush of the trimester [illegible] often barely has the time to le[illegible] the essential fact[illegible] be tested on), and often is for[illegible] to omit the reflecting (the [illegible] valuable part--the part, which [illegible] ever, usually is not necessar[illegible] pass a test).

Dr. Chalmers states that man[illegible] dergraduates are complaining [illegible] the lack of leisure time, giving [illegible] impression that he feels it [illegible] unnecessary. However, leisure [illegible] serves an important [illegible] it relaxes the student, enabling [illegible] to 'put more into each hour of [illegible] ing.'

Furthermore [illegible] college education [illegible] studying in order to soak up a [illegible] tity of facts, this could be done [illegible] ally well away from the [illegible] with a pile of books, and a [illegible] set tuned to an 'educational pro[illegible] gram.' But, the value of living [illegible] the environment of a university [illegible] certainly greater: the meeting of [illegible] people and new ideas, and the [illegible] tural events, are as necessary [illegible] the knowledge gained in the [illegible] room in giving a person a [illegible] er and more meaningful life.

Trimester On Trial

Editor Note: Trimester at Florida State University has been the topic of heated debate since its inception with the beginning of the fall school term 1962. After on complete trimester, as soon as the facts and figures were in, and enough time had passed to be able to reflect more accurately, the Flambeau undertook a study of the system.

We have gathered statistics, compared them with those of the semester system; we have gone to administrators, staff members, faculty and students to capture an accurate picture of what trimester is really like, its strong points and weak ones.

We now ask that you, the readers, comment on what trimester means to you personally. What are the advantages and/or disadvantages. Will it assist you in your educational goals. How does it stand in the spectrum of your desire for an education.

Today's editorial page is devoted to the first of at-large student-faculty comment. We encourage everyone connected in any way with the university to let their views be known.

foolhardy, especially when such experiments are now being carried on elsewhere.

To close, I wish to emphatically make the point, that, if administrators are convinced of the superiority of this system over another widely used full-time plan of operation, if it is felt that the system will bring more financial support, and if it is believed that use of such a system can aid the progress of this institution toward nationwide academic recognition, then there must soon be a widespread revamping, rearrangement, and reduction of course content in many fields. Only in this way can we endow the trimester with any semblance of that attribute common to the systems used at respected institutions throughout the land--the gift of sufficient time to actively pursue one's chosen field while broadening and rounding out one's education through participation in and attendance of activities outside one's major field of interest.

Sincerely, and in the best interests of the University,

Horace B. Gray, Jr.

Calhoun To Boost Tribe As Senior Quarterback

BY HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Most spring football publicity has bally-hooed sophomore Steve Tensi as THE quarterback for Florida State next season, but one important gridder is being neglected.

That's junior Charlie Calhoun, who has piloted the defensive Renegades through two seasons. With FSU's switching to two-platooning, Head Coach Bill Peterson says the 184-pound Tallahassean will see much more offensive action as a senior. Considering that Calhoun kept graduating senior Eddie Feely on the second string through four-of-five weeks in last year's spring practice, this isn't surprising.

During the past 4-3-3 season, Calhoun was even respectable, though not astonishing, on the statistical tally sheet--in addition to his remarkable defensive work.

For instance, he averaged 4.0 yards per carry for the second-best average on the team, although, as a defensive field-general, he only rushed five times.

The lanky quarterback Steve Tensi, who is now in charge of FSU's first string, rushed 47 yards, but was hit for 36 yards loss to finish with an 0.6 average.

Calhoun passed only three times during the year, and he completed two of them for the best percentage and for one touchdown. The two comple- tions added 31 [illegible] yardage.

His speciality, however, was punting, for the 20-year-old [illegible] booted [illegible] he averaged 37.9 yards a [illegible] career punting record. His 113 rewrote the old mark of 96 Tommy Brown.

Seminole Practice Termed 'Ragged'

By JOHNNY DAVIS

Florida State wound up its fourth week of spring football drills, last weekend with a controlled scrimmage that was described by the coaching staff as "ragged in spots."

Defensive work drew most of the attention for the Seminoles, and standouts along the first string forward wall included tackle Avery Sumner of Adel, Ga., and big Red Dawson, a 6-3, 215-pound native of Valdosta, Ga.

Sumner dropped enemy ball carriers all afternoon and spent a great deal of time in his opponents' backfield, while Dawson was described by a coach as a regular "stump" at his defensive end post.

Another defensive standout that drew praise was halfback Fred Biletnikoff. The Pennsylvania sophomore picked off several stray passes and one of his interceptions virtually robbed the Garnet team of a sure touchdown.

On offense, it was fullback Dave Snyder who again paced the first unit. The 5-11, 185-pound senior from Jacksonville ripped off several long gains and battered the opposing lines with his quick powerful bursts.

Terry Garvin, a promising sophomore end from Pensacola, watched the scrimmage from the sidelines due to a knee injury sustained in last week's session. Garvin has his knee in a cast, which will remain there for an indefinite period.

Max Whettstein, another sophomore end, also suffered a knee injury, but a first report disclosed that it was not considered to be too serious.

Rifle Squad Downs Marion

The FSU Army ROTC Rifle Team defeated the Marion Institute Rifle squad this weekend, 1266-1205. High individual for the match was John O. Reinhardt, who fired a 263/300 for the Florida State team.

He was followed by teammate Charles E. Holmes of Jacksonville. Holmes registered a 257/300.

van Assenderp Speaks

State Of Campus Address Is Given

President of the Student Body Ken van Assenderp delivered his final state of the campus address to the Senate yesterday afternoon.

Van Assenderp's speech, centered on two main items: the Bureau-Staff System and the policy of the student government. The president also mentioned the reorganized Contact Committee, the funds for the new swimming pool and the controversy of class officers in conjunction with the Kramer Report.

Speaking of the Kramer Report, van Assenderp said it is a "carefully prepared work for the reference of the Senate." The president also commended the Senate on their work so far on the class officer question.

He spoke at some length on the work and research being done on the incorporation of the student government. This move is being made because of the possible liability to officers acting in a capacity with the student government.

Van Assenderp had this to say about the Bureau-Staff System. "The Bureau-Staff System was instigated at the end of the fall trimester and is now functioning well." He stressed that the system is efficient and effective.

"We have found by actual usage that a cabinet-bureau-staff system works and is adaptable to our student government."

Summing up the president said, "The system works. It's here to stay."

He complimented in-coming president Smith on his proposed changes in keeping with the Bureau system. He also urged strong support for Smith in his future efforts.

Van Assenderp's parting words to the Senate outlined the policy and philosophy that has been followed by our student government. He said that the policy has a sound basis.

In emphasizing the necessity for careful consideration of matters concerning student government, van Assenderp said, "We must preserve the force, integrity and unadulterated voice of our student government as it continues to speak for the students it represents. If we fail to do this, we would present a meaningless, bungled and unrespected front."

Student government as a spokesman for the student body must be "cognizant of its overall long range needs. It must also focus on the crucial short range aspects of student life in its proper perspective. "Representation means sensitivity."

In commenting on the student government's role in state politics he said, "When we speak out officially... we owe it to the students we represent to speak firmly on the basis of real understanding and preparation."

The president ended by urging that everyone support the incoming president in his actions.

Van Assenderp received a prolonged standing ovation following his speech.

Other action in Senate included the passing of a bill which will delete the statute from the Student Body Statutes which bound the Senate to appropriate $13,000 annually for the pool.

The proposed budget was discussed in length, but due to the lack of a quorum, Senate dismissed without taking any positive action. A meeting has been called for Friday afternoon at 4:15.

At FSU, where she took her undergraduate work and now is studying toward an advanced degree, Miss Donaldson has studied voice under Herman Gunter, Jr., Elena Nikolaidi and presently Richard Collins, director of opera.

She has taken leading roles in these FSU productions: "Tosca," "La Traviata," "Madame Butterfly," "Marriage of Figaro," "Orfeo and Euridice," "La Boheme," "Kiss Me Kate," "Bartered Bride," and "Wuthering Heights."

During the past summer she was the leading soprano in the Asolo Theater Comedy Festival sponsored by FSU and Ringling Museum at Sarasota. She has sung as soloist with the Florida West Coast Symphony Orchestra, Jacksonville Symphony and FSU Symphony. Her most recent concert was in the Artist Series event Feb. 18 at Southern Union College, Wadley, Ga.

Except for the fact that she is in the opera at FSU this weekend, Miss Donaldson would go to New York Friday to take in matinee or evening performances of the Met on Saturday, meet people with the opera and rest for the auditions. She will sing the role of Georgette in the opera Saturday night, produced by FSU's Opera Guild.

A native of Palatka, she attended high school there. She got her bachelor of music degree from FSU and while studying here has received various scholarships.

Her Florida auditions in the Met contest were at Sarasota, March 19.

Student Senate

There will be a special session of the Senate at 4:15 p.m. Friday.

Students Should Contact Advisor

All students should contact their faculty advisers during the period from March 22 to April 12.

It is necessary that each student secure during this period a green trial schedule which has the approval of his adviser in order to register for either session of the third trimester or the first trimester, 1963-64 (fall).

Freshmen and sophomores who are uncertain as to their adviser may secure this information from the Counseling Center, 302 Westcott.

Juniors and seniors who have questions or serious problems should contact the dean of the school in which they are enrolled.

ohnny Smith Gives Trimester Observations

By LINDA SAVIDGE

Academic learning constitutes the most important facet any university, but the mark of a great university is recognized when it can not only produce knowledge, but also ...ade for its application," President-elect of the Student ... Johnny Smith affirmed.

...ith believes that only one year's experience with the ...ester does not qualify anyone to make a final judgment ...e trimester system and that most people are "to a ...ree," ignorant of the factors which brought the system ... existence.

...ever, he has "personal reservations about whether ... trimester system is the most effective academic set... for FSU," even though he is "aware that the trimester ...em has provided needed opportunities for many stu... and faculty members.

...any of the advantages thought to be gained by its institution have not yet materialized, and it's questionable whether they will," he observed.

Student activities are a "vital part of any university system," he declared. Knowledge which is stored without an outlet through which it can be "applied or used" is of "no value.

"Unfortunately for our students, the trimester does not allow the needed time to participate in these activities and thereby to develop the areas of personality other than the academic," he maintained.

"Student Government, as a form of extra-curricular activity, realizes its full significance" in light of the application of academic knowledge through it.

Through activities of the Student Government and cooperation with its expanding areas of influence, "one learns to deal justly with other individuals and how to develop, through observation or group interaction, his own personal values," Smith added.

Not only personal relationships, but governmental ones may be learned through Student Government. "It is here that a practical knowledge of governmental structure and an awareness of democratic principles are learned," Smith said.

Citizenship is an important by-product of an active Student Government program. "It is here that one can expand his capabilities and realize his potential in a spirit of service; it is here that citizens are created and leaders bred," Smith declared.

"I wonder if the other benefits of the trimester are worth jeopardizing some of these principles which were guaranteed under the semester," he concluded.

He noted that "it will take at least another two years before an evaluation of the trimester can have any validity in the light of experience."

FSU Students Perform Two Outstanding Operas

By JAN WARREN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The Cloak" and "Gianni Schicchi," two outstanding one-act operas will be performed by students and FSU faculty tomorrow and Saturday night at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium.

Puccini has once more influenced the Opera Guild in its choice of performances with these operas, which were first performed by the Metropolitan Opera in 1918. FSU has successfully presented three of his other works: "Madame Butterfly," "Tosca" and "La Boheme."

Richard Collins, of the FSU faculty, direct both operas and sings the title role of "Gianni Schicchi." Collins has played this part before with a professional opera. Conducting the orchestra will be Robert Sedore and the set design and costumes are the creations of Harlan Shaw.

"Gianni Schicchi" is Puccini's only opera devoted strictly to comedy. The idea for the story came from the reference to the Florentine rogue Gianni Schicchi in Dante's "Inferno." It is principally a macabre theme concerning the changing of a will by the greedy relatives of Busco Donati, who has left his wealth to a monastery.

Schicchi impersonates the dead man long enough to alter the will. Much to the amazement and disgust of the relatives, he wills the largest portion of the estate to himself, so that his daughter will have a dowry and can marry.

Lonnie Keene and Walter James play the male leads in "The Cloak." Hedi Svendsen and Ethel Donaldson are co-casted for the title role of Georgette. Miss Svendsen will perform tomorrow night and Miss Donaldson will sing the part Saturday night.

This tragedy involves a love triangle set among the poverty stricken barges of the Seine river. The young Georgette, unhappy because her aging husband is making her feel old, has taken on a young stevedore as a lover. One of their rendezvous is tragically ended when the husband accidentally gives the signal for the stevedore to come aboard the barge. A murder ensues and the body is hidden under the husband's cloak as Georgette enters the scene. The opera ends on a well worked-up-to note of passion and horror as the cloak is opened and the body falls to he stage.

Performances will be at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium. The tickets will be on sale at Westcott Ticket Office at $2 for the public and $1 for students.

Food Service Poll Is Taken

A poll on student opinion concerning campus food service will be completed today. Polling places are inside each campus food service. "I would like to emphasize the importance of this survey," stated John Merting, chairman of the Associate Food Services committee.

"This survey will provide the student body with an excellent opportunity to express their views and suggestions concerning the food service," Merting continued.

"We have met with Mr. Skokas and members of his staff this year and have found them to be most attentive to the committee's recommendations. In several instances committee recommendations have been speedily heeded. We are sure that the opinions of the student body, expressed through this poll, will yield prompt and positive results," Merting concluded.

agerty Speaks On "The Need To Know"

Vacuum Exists In Public Knowledge

amul vacuum exists today in ic. -- in public knowledge and anding, James C. Hagerty, Broadcasting Company's resident in charge of news, events and public affairs, a speech entitled, "The Need w."

state of vacuum is aided in whenever our news sources, and electric, fail to present le world image of the United -- credits as well as debits, s said. "And it thrives on the who doesn't seem to be in-ed."

m feels that this vacuum be of concern to all Ameri- the silent, the unconcern- the uninformed. Minority th left and right often ntage of any kind of vacuum and the words of these minority groups are often quoted overseas, by friends and enemies, as indications of the thinking and belief of all the people.

"I am not saying that we have reached this point yet, nor am I criticizing the news and public information presentations in my own country. But what I ask myself and my colleagues is: are we getting through to the American people as we should, as we are capable of doing, as we are trying to do?

"Everyone will admit that today we are living in perilous times. But throughout history free men have always lived in perilous times -- for 'Freedom is a hard-won thing.' But also throughout history free men have rallied their spirit, have gained strength to resist from the knowledge that Divine power resides in the individual, not in the dictator-- and have withstood... all efforts to subjugate the dignity of the individual..."

This is not the time, Hagety noted, for the free world to sit and cry or view itself with self-pity. This is the time to stand firm and rededicate a belief in the ideals of free people. A belief in God and belief in the dignity of the individual are credits on our side. This nation's people have a decent respect for the opinions of mankind. They do not seek to degrade or to enslave any people. They are the strongest nation in the world, but strong for freedom's sake. It is easy to put this on paper, Hagerty asserted, but it is difficult to get them told in the nation and in the world to counteract Communist propaganda. Public interest in front page news stories and in television specials and documentaries must be stirred.

"The disinterested attitude is a challenge to our nation, and a challenge that will have to be made by the broadcasting industry. We will strive all the harder to make our news, special events and public affairs presentations more interesting. We must hold audience interest during the months between crises by presenting hard-hitting studies and documentaries of the problems that face America and the Free World.

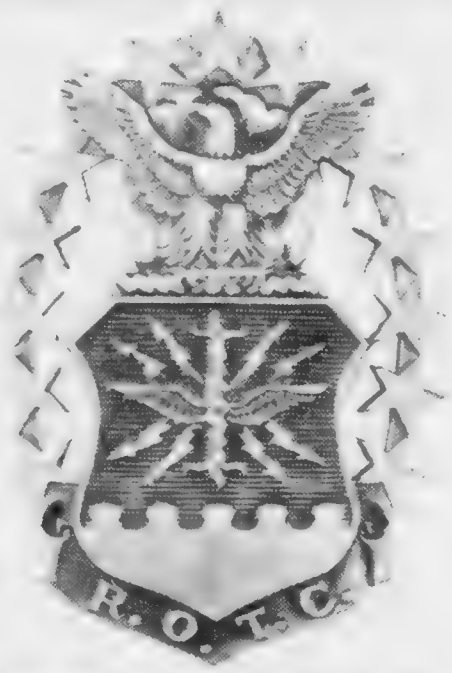
Square Dance

A campus wide square dance, sponsored by the recreation club, will be held Friday from 8 to 11:30 p.m. in the women's gym.

Admission will be $.25 stag or drag. Dress is casual and refreshments will be sold. Dr. William Tait, head of recreation curriculum, will be caller for the dance.

Sec. Of State To Speak Here

Secretary of State Tom Adams will speak on "The Humanities in the Space Age" before the 16th annual meeting of the Southern Humanities Conference, which will be held April 5-6 at FSU.



Adams' talk, which is open to the public, will be at 8 p.m. Friday, April 5, in the Library Lecture Hall.

Four formal discussions of the humanities are scheduled.

Dr. Michael Kasha, the director of FSU's Institute of Molecular Biophysics; Dr. Wiley Housewright, professor of music education; and Dr. Paul Piccard, director of FSU's Honors Program, will hold a symposium on "Are the Humanities Expendable?"

William Kehl, the director of the University of Pittsburgh's computing center, and Dr. Louis Shores of FSU's Library School, will discuss "Technical Challenges," while President Jack Tilford of the Florida College English Association will speak on "Lo the Poor Kokapo."

A general discussion, moderated by Dr. Gulnar Bosch, head of the Department of Art, will be held Saturday morning.

This we change.

This we don't.

Now you can see for yourself where we make most of our changes. Way down deep. Every part you can see (and every part you can't see) has been changed again and again and again.

But we never change the Volkswagen without a reason. And the only reason is to make it even better.

When we do make a change, we try to make the new part fit older models, too.

So you'll find that many VW parts are interchangeable from one year to the next.

Which is why it's actually easier to get parts for a VW than for many domestic cars.

And why VW service is as good as it is. The same principle holds good for the beetle shape.

We made the rear window bigger one year so you could see other people better. We made the tail lights bigger last year so other people could see you better.

But nothing drastic. Any Volkswagen hood still fits any VW ever made. So does any fender.

And, in case you hadn't noticed, every VW still looks like every other VW.

Which may turn out to be the nicest thing of all about the car.

It doesn't go in one year and out the other.

Basketball Squad Tabs Charlie Long As Most Valuable

The team's only senior -- co-captain Charlie Long of Louisville, Ky. -- has been named Most Valuable Player for 1962-63 by the Florida State basketball team.

Long, a 6-4 forward, led FSU in scoring with a 16.5 average. Over the last dozen games, he averaged about 20 points and finished the year with a field goal percentage of 51.1. He was recently named to the All-State collegiate first team.

Long received 11 of 13 votes from his teammates -- all but his, which went to Guard Wally Dale, and another going to Guard Pete Rogers.

"If it hadn't been for Charlie, we would have been in bad shape," commented Coach Bud Kennedy. Long was the only experienced player for FSU, and paved the way for a surprising 15-10 season.

Alumni Won't Play In Garnet-Gold Contest

The annual Garnet-Gold clash, which highlights the Seminoles' spring football drills, will not pit the varsity against the alumni, announced Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

Last year, FSU broke tradition of having an intrasquad game when it featured a varsity-alumni game, and the administration is returning to the intrasquad matches.

The game will be played at 2 p.m. March 30 in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Coach Bill Peterson said several upcoming seniors would not have to play in the contest.

Baseballers Down Auburn In 8-3 Go

Facing a jinx squad that defeated them four times in a year when the Tribe went to the College World Series, the FSU baseball players deep-sixed a superstitution in an 8-3 triumph over the Auburn Tigers.

The Seminoles edged the Alabamians, 2-1, in their opener at Seminole Field.

Using 13 hits and sharp pitching, the Seminoles relied on the outstanding performance of first baseman Gary Nichols to really break the game open.

The New York sophomore slapped a single, double and a two-run homerun in four times at bat, while second baseman Jim Reed, centerfielder Mike Augustine, and right fielder Clyde McBride had two hits apiece.

The winning pitcher was starter Allen Thomas. The Cairo, Ga. export surrendered three hits and two runs before leaving in the fifth due to an injury.

His relief, Frank Echols, continued the fine pitching. The Tallahassee senior finished the game and only gave up two hits.

Florida State's baseball team will be busier than a team of touring pros toward the end of this week, with four games scheduled at FSU's Seminole Field between Thursday and Saturday afternoon.

The Seminoles, who opened their 1963 season Saturday and Monday against Auburn, will host Clemson College Thursday and Friday in single games beginning at 3:30 each day. Saturday afternoon at 12:30, a doubleheader involving the Naval Academy, Clemson and FSU has been tentatively scheduled.

If Navy can fly in from Annapolis, it will meet Clemson at 12:30, with FSU playing Clemson in the "nightcap" at 3:30. If Navy can't make it, Clemson and FSU will play a doubleheader.

FSU Coach Danny Litwhiler says senior righthander Al Beccaccio -- effective in his first start Saturday against Auburn -- will start the Thursday game. Other pitchers likely to start over the weekend include Senior righthander Allen Thomas of Cairo, Ga., Soph righthander Jim Lottin of Pensacola and Junior southpaw Marty Howell of Bartow.

Clemson finished 11-8 last year. Litwhiler says the Tigers have "plenty of power and two of the finest young lefthanders in the South."

Rumor-Mongering Smears Tribe

(Editor's Note: The Bryant-Butts-Post squabble has managed to envelope the name of FSU. The following is an article by Alf Van Hoose in the Sunday Birmingham News.)

An enigmatic sort of sideline quote, thrown in near the end of Saturday Evening Post's forthcoming "The Story of a College Football Fix," is from Johnny Griffith, Georgia's head football coach since 1961.

"We knew somebody had given our plans to Alabama," Griffith was quoted after the Post had lengthily charged his former boss, Wally Butts, had given Paul Bryant, the Post said, "Geogia's plays, defensive patterns, and all the significant secrets Georgia's football team possessed.

"And," Griffith was quoted further, "maybe to a couple of other teams we played."

Griffith did not go on, to name teams, but he hardly had to. Recent rumor-mongering, from New York to Florida, has done the job completely already.

And, when some vicious whispers reached Bill Peterson here at Florida State, it naturally upset him. Peterson's fine FSU team, which tied Georgia Tech and Auburn in 1962, defeated Georgia at Athens, 18-0.

Peterson admits talking to Butts the week of the FSU-Georgia game and adds that the phone conversation took place during an FSU staff meeting.

"Butts called," Peterson said, "to remind us that a maneuver we'd used--a flanker coming back toward the formation and cracking the defensive end--had been ruled illegal by George Gardner (SEC official secretary) after LSU used it against Georgia Tech.

"Let's have a clean game," Peterson said Butts asked him.

"I told Butts that Gardner had already informed me that officials had been instructed to label this maneuver vicious (and taxable). I thanked him for his call, and told him we intended to play cleanly, as we always try to.

"I know this," FSU coach added grimly, "I know we didn't get any pre-game help from Georgia.

"If we'd known what they were going to do, I don't believe they'd have taken the opening kickoff and marched it some 70 or 80 yards to our one.

"We'd had some idea about a defense that they threw at us, too, which totally surprised us.

"I wouldn't have accepted any help if it had been offered.

"Besides, doesn't it stand to reason that such help might be a trap?

"Any charge that we got any help, from Georgia or anybody is ridiculous.

"I also view with suspicion the notion that an athletic director knows the little things his coach is putting in anyhow.

"Vaughn Mancha's my athlet[illegible] ector, and he's a former co[illegible] I'll guarantee I don't tell [illegible] anybody, any secret stuff we're [illegible] ting in for the game."

Faculty React To Trimester System

By LINDA SAVIDGE
Flambeau Staff Writer

"...at's the hurry?"
...s was the reaction of one professor when he was asked ...pinion on the trimester system. "Graduates have long ... ahead of them, so why push them so rapidly toward ...?"
...ranging well among FSU professors, many complaints ... the system were aired.
... value of reflective education cannot be ignored, and ...xtra curricular life of a student is important also. On ...ther hand, poor students are using the system as a ...for their failure.
...ever, Dr. Winkler, a German scientist who has spoken ... was reported to have said that Germany tried the ...ster system during the war and that they soon stop-...
...e of the problem with salary cuts and increasing work loads, this professor is not against the trimester's working if it can effectively utilize the facilities as it was intended. But so far, the effects of the transition have not been in its favor.

Another professor has noted that the purpose for the change was "economic, not pedagogical."

He stated that high quality professors will be increasingly difficult to recruit because of the cut in time that is allowed to them for maintenance of their "scholarly reputation."

Students are especially pinched if they have numerous papers to write, if they are in laboratory science, or if their fields entail skills such as musical ability or acting.

This professor also stressed, however, that the system can work if the Legislature can adjust the requirements placed on both students and faculty to allow them time.

Another professor believes that the system can endanger the strength of the academic program.

The students can and often do drop courses, but this privilege is denied the profesors. Their teaching duties cut down on their publishing and research time. Their vacation as it now stands gives them little time to renew themselves, to rewrite lectures and rearrange course contents. All of those activities are vital to a good professor.

Students who loaf until the end of the trimester are pushed by fear, in many cases, to realize their academic responsibilities earlier in the year. However, grades are often higher than what is deserved because of the professor's "gifts."

A fourth professor said that he and his colleagues in his department had found compromise with their standards necessary in all areas.

The amount of outside reading has been cut down; simpler texts have been substituted for old ones in some instances; professors are skimping on the amount of time they are spending in research and preparation of lectures. Finally, the professors have much less opportunity to know their students.

The push for time is especially hard on students such as those in applied music who must practice. It is very hard to compress learning of this type into a shorter period of time.

The primary complaints of the professors seem to be aimed at overloading, cutting down counselling and research time, reduction in courses' scope by reducing outside reading and practice time, and vacation problems.

Several professors noted that if the students earnestly want to return to the semester system, they must apply pressure to the Florida Legislature.

Several national magazine stories have helped to spread the word of the Limeliters. "Time" remarked, "If the Kingston Trio are the undergraduates of big-time US folk-singing, the Limeliters are the faculty..." and Newsweek, called them "the most versatile and musically challenging of the many groups now performing."

The members of the Limeliters are Lou Gottlieb, Alex Hassilev and Glenn Yarbrough. Lou's personality dominates the group, for it is he who provides the out-of-whack commentary that gives the group its character and distiction.

Alex, born in France, is an accomplished actor as well as singer and plays both the guitar and banjo.

Glenn, the major solo voice of the Limeliters, vies for the title of the Most Deceptive Appearance in contemporary show business. "He sings like an angel...and looks like a wrestler," is the most often heard comment from places at which the group has appeared.

Poster Violations

Fines Plague 67 Students

Fines plagued 67 candidates the first two days of active campaigning.

"The high number of fines were caused largely by persons working for candidates who failed to receive proper instructions as to where to place posters," said Ron Jones, Secretary of Elections. Jones warned the candidates to remember to follow the rules and regulations given to them at the time of their declaration of candidacy. Extra copies of these rules are still available in the elections office, 210 Longmire Bldg.

"We, the elections bureau, have been checking as close as possible to see that every candidate has an equal opportunity to campaign both on and off campus. Even with 14 people working, we are not able to catch every violation. There have been reports that signs have been torn down, defaced or moved by the elections bureau has not been able to find any such violation to this time," continued Jones.

Any person caught tearing down or moving candidates signs can be taken to honor court and/or fined $10 for each offense.

Candidates should continue to check their posters and see that they are properly secured wherever they may be posted.

WHO VOTES

All students, freshmen through graduates, may vote on all court positions--Honor Court and Men's and Women's Judiciary.

However, for class officers and senate positions, only freshmen may vote for sophomore positions; sophomores may vote for junior positions; juniors may vote for senior positions.

Seniors, whether graduating or not, may vote for their permanent class officers and the outstanding senior men and women. They can also vote for court positions.

The Constitutional amendments, the referendem question on class officers and the poll on graduation may be voted on by all students.

Play Discussed At Coffee Hour

A Thornton Wilder play which will be presented by the FSU Theatre on April 3-7 as part of the Florida Fine Arts Festival observance will be subject of this week's English Coffee Hour Friday with director Arthur H. Dorlag as the speaker.

Dr. Dorlag, director of University Theater, will discuss how "The Matchmaker" is representative of Wilder's effort to change the shape of modern theater at the 4 p.m. literary-social hour in Westminster House. The public is invited.

Dorlag will discuss the background of the play, how in its various forms it is "at least partially what it is today because two of the 20th century's greatest theatrical directors, Max Reinhardt and Dr. Tyrone Guthrie, worked on it."

Role Of State University In Education

FSU Hosts State Education Conference

FSU's Department of Government will host political scientists and public administrators at a conference today on "The Role of the State University in Education for the Public Service."

In two discussion sessions they will deal with the problems of educating future public administrators for government service. A morning session discussing the needs of the public service and the role of the university will be presided over by Dr. Marion Irish.

Dr. Malcolm B. Parsons will preside over an afternoon session discussing the building of a program designed to meet these needs. Held at the Business Bldg., the day's activities will be opened by a greeting from President Blackwell.

Referendum Vote

In Tuesday's election the student body will have the opportunity to vote on 114 candidates and four constitutional amendments.

The student body will also have an opportunity to vote for or against the abolishment of the Class Officer Program at FSU.

Tuesday's election will climax a week's hard campaigning. Not only will those running for class offices have had to campaign for their own election but they will have been forced to do some serious talking as to the basic purpose and reason for existence of that aspect of student government they have so staunchly supported.

Many arguments have been put forward for retaining the COP at FSU.

Perhaps the most common is that the COP allows many more persons to participate in student government than would otherwise be possible and furnishes some of them with opportunities to enter into more active and responsible branches of student government.

This is partly true. Many Freshman who run for class office do so with the idea that, like high school, the classes play a major role in the student government and that consequently being an officer of their first class is the best and most important step towards success in campus politics at FSU.

Going along with this logic, many fine student leaders have risen out of the ranks of class officers.

Likewise, because of the double spring elections here at FSU, if a political hopeful misses out on a mjaor office in the first election, he can always run for a class office and bide his time until another, perhaps more favorable year.

There is only one hitch in this scheme--student government at FSU will only be as good as the people who comprise it. In other words, the COP attracts many people who, if they were not class officers at FSU, would most likely migrate into the central student government to further and advance its causes and programs.

Another argument not so commonly expounded in favor of retaining the COP is that more people are interested in assuming the few responsibilities of class officership in return for the magnanimous title of Officer of The Class than would be willing to assume the same responsibilities under a more appropriate, though not as impressive title.

No where else in student government are titles so deceptively given--which reflects to the discredit of the entire student government.

The student body will have the opportunity Tuesday to decide whether they wish to continue perpetrating this hoax on themselves, their student government and their university under the lame excuses of "maintaining tradition."

Vo Der Schnapps Ist

I have heard several complaints recently that there's just no place for college students to go and let loose. Fort Lauderdale, according to many who went last year, has been ruined by an overdose of publicity. The Mardi Gras in New Orleans is still pretty wild, but nowadays it's hard to tell just who's masquerading and who isn't. I have heard about a gigantic minstrel convention to be held in Oxford, Mississippi, but they don't even have a beach there. Drawing from the vast experience of my one and a half semesters as a Foreign Affairs major, I would like to make a suggestion for a new collegiate Mecca. All we have to do is move Easter back to where it comes before Lent, and find a way of getting back and forth across the Atlantic cheaply in one weekend.

In the much romanticized province of Bavaria in Southern Germany, the predominantly Catholic population (and a few outsiders) celebrate the pre-Lenten holidays of Fasching. The province's sprawling capital city of Munich witnesses many nightly parties and balls during the last days of February, but the biggest blast by far is held, oddly enough, in the city's stately art museum. I don't know what they do with the paintings, but an entire floor of the huge structure is cleared and tables inserted in all the smaller outside chambers. There is a central chamber about the size of a football field that is constantly packed with a shifting, writhing sea of dancers. There are dance bands at either end of the hall, and the music alternates between old German oompah and rock-and-roll.

The best time to arrive is about 10 p.m. I guess you would say it was a costume ball, but heck, the way those women dress, you'd know who it was every time. There is a stairway in one corner that leads to an upper level which is usually occupied by the European version of Joe College. They come out of the woodwork of Schwabing, Munich's answer to Grennwich Village, and sit in long, bleary-eyed rows along the walls. Most of them scowl a little when they notice that you have a crew-cut and are therefore an American. Things are a little more violent in this region and you must be careful not to step in the broken glass. The happier ones stand up in the middle of the room, clowning around and singing. The drinks for the entire shebang are supplied by piston-legged beer maids that chug like little red-faced locomotives through the sea of people without spilling a drop. The party breaks up around 6 a.m. as taxi companies do a land-office business. I have always wondered whether the people went directly to day's work or whether they went home to rest for the coming evening.

If we are to take advantage of this new attraction, we must do so quickly before it too falls victim to overpublicity. Rumor has it that a German movie company is soon to release a film about the festivities starring Conrad Adenauer and Connie Francis.

Why Fear Communists?

Today Americans are perplexed by a fear of that world faction which has been called Communism. At the outset of this column, I am quite willing to acknowledge the fact that a Communist menace does exist. We have many persons in America who are constantly urging individuals to "stand up and realistically face the challenge of Communism." Exactly how this should be done is certainly in dispute. Let us briefly analyze the current situation in which the Communist world finds itself.

Perhaps the most glaring failure of Communism has occurred in the field of economic development. Even though Russian national income has risen from 54 billion rubles in 1950 to 144 billion in 1960, and even though the production of goods such as cement and steel has been rapidly increasing, this does not mean that greater quantities of goods and services are being made available to consumers. Is this increase in the amount of steel being used to make prisons or homes? Concerning agriculture, the grain harvests of 1960 and 1959 were smaller than the harvest of 1958. From sparsely gathered fact, the conclusion is most probable that the supply of goods available to the people has not been increased by the Communist system.

The deficiency of the Soviet system has been very apparent in East Germany. Even though, according to statistics published by the Red bloc in 1958, East Germany claimed a higher rate of economic growth than that of West Germany, the regime was forced to decrease its production of aircraft, etc., in order to meet bare existence standards for the East German people.

In China, in 1959, one third, and in 1960, almost one half of the arable land suffered from contamination, flood, and hailstorms. The overpopulation problem, probably China's greatest, has hardly been confronted. Communist leaders hostile to birth control, are depending on the economy growing rapidly enough to take care of the ten million births a year, and to the present, the economy has not been able to do this.

The housing situation is another problem the Soviet government has never solved. In 1957 there was less total living space per person in urban areas than there had been in 1926, considering the fact that from 1940 to 1960 the proportion of population located in cities rose from 31 percent to 58 percent.

With respect to foreign aid, the Soviet regime promised about $5 billion from 1954 to 1962, of which only about $200 million a year was delivered. The United States far exceeded this figure, having paid out more than $56 billion from 1947 to 1962.

In one field the Communists have excelled: they have developed a powerful war machine, and have realized many achievements in space.

Through the above [illegible] Communist system, I wished to illustrate the fact tthat we are confronted with a power devoid of problems (not to mention dissestion in the highest ranks of the party) one that in the future must solve abundane of them.

If we in America truly believe our form of government, why do we have such a fear of Communism? Why do we drive the Communists America underground? Why are we in many cases afraid to let them speak before an American audience?

It would seem [illegible] strengthen our nation, not by appointed "super patriotic" by actively endorsing our [illegible] within the framework of a free society.

DELTA GAMMA -- Terry Tucker has been tapped fo the Social Welfare honorary.

DELTA TAU DELTAs are readying themselves for the 1963 Delt Weekend. The theme will be "Delts on the Nile." Friday night "The Crescents" will be featured at a formal dance at the Tallahassee Women's Club. At this dance the new Delt Queen and her court will be announced. The Delts and their dates will spend Saturday swimming and boating at Mystic Lake. "The Johnny Jenkins -- Otis Redding Show" from Atlanta is the featured highlight of the Saturday night costume party and dance at the closed "Shelter."

DELTA ZETA's new pledge officers are: Cam Kilgrow, president; Jan Wackenhut, vice president; Sharon Goode, secretary; and Sheila Pennywit, treasurer. Dee Weber was chosen as a cheerleader for 1963-64.

GAMMA PHI BETA had Chaplain and Mrs. Minus for dessert Thursday. Dr. Minus is faculty advisor to the Gamma Phis.

KAPPA ALPHA will be sponsoring a Barbecue Chicken Dinner at the Kappa Alpha Mansion Saturday night from 5-7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited.

KAPPA DELTA -- Fairfax Smathers was first runner up in the Florida Citrus Queen Contest. New pledge officers are: Karen Hammond president; Becky Witt, vice president; Robin McNenin, sec.-treas.; and Marie Hale, activities chairman.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMAs will be entertaining the Pi Phis this Saturday for the Monmouth Duo. (Monmouth College is where both sororities were founded.) Lillian Amos was recently initiated into Sigma Alpha Iota; Linda Lee Pursley and Louise Carter were initiated into Sigma Delta Pi. "Kappa of the Month" is Judy Merritt. Pam Wilks received the highest scholarship award. Gail Snyder is a new pledge.

KAPPA SIGMA's newly elected officers are: Dan Wallace, president; Barry Kempson, vice president; Jeff McGehee, secretary; Dave Capuzzi, treasurer; and Peck Casson, master of ceremonies. Maggie Wiley was crowned the new Kappa Sigma Sweetheart at the Black and White Ball last weekend. Named in her court were Janice Fry and Ginny Grace.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA weekend begins Friday night with a semi-formal dance at the Shrine Hall featuring the "Checkmates." Saturday afternoon the brothers and their dates will go to Fred Dillman's lake house for sunbathing. Saturday night there will be a costume party in line with the "Treasure Island" theme featuring the "Dukes and the Five Knights." Sunday a coast party at Panama City will end the weekend.

PHI KAPPA TAUs had their annual pledge-active softball game. Actives won 12-3. Phi Taus are having a record party Friday night.

PI BETA PHIs are having a brunch with the Kappas Saturday celebrating their mutual foundership at Monmouth College. Lynne Rodgers has been elected president and Tina Fletcher has been elected vice president of Gilchrist for next year. Linda Hagan is a new cheerleader for next year.

PI KAPPA ALPHA will begin their weekend Friday night with a "Dream Girl" formal dance and will end their weekend with a beach party at the coast Sunday.

PI KAPPA PHI -- This Saturday the Pi Kapps and the Sigma Chis will have a joint social.

Dr. Kasha Gives Last Lecture

...da cannot develop great uni... ...es under their present ... asserted Professor Michael ... talk Wednesday night ... Mortar Board Last Lecture ...

... Kasha, ... of chemistry ... director of the ... Institute of Mol... ... at FSU, was chos... ... the Distinguished Professor ... year. ... had much experience with great university systems as a visiting professor at Harvard, a Reilly lecturer at Notre Dame and a Lind lecturer at Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Because of these and other positions at great universities, Dr. Kasha feels qualified to evaluate "Why Florida Cannot Develop Great Universities."

Although the alert citizens of Florida are very concerned about education and its "acceleration development," they tend to overemphasize the material aspects. The student is largely ignored in the rush for new buildings, and increased operating and capital expenditures. Because of this "freedom from external pressures," a very essential criteria for a "true university," is lacking in Florida universities.

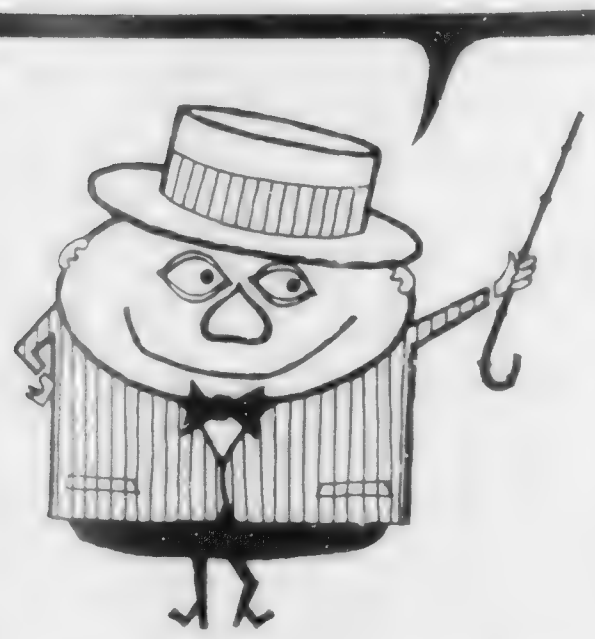
As a concerned professor, Kasha asserted, "I can only state that there is a public neglect of this chief ingredient needed for the development of true universities: freedom from external pressures."

To be a true university there must be "an atmosphere of complete freedom in this zealous search for truth and enlightenment." The student in Florida is hampered by local pressures or social restrictions imposed from the outside. "Citizens of Florida must take the general, longer range view and be more tolerant toward universities," for the student will be serving humanity.

Another missing ingredient in Florida universities is "the proper recognition of the nature of the learning process itself." Under the present trimester system, economic pressures have forced "superscheduling of teaching," and the rating of educational value on a statistical basis of "class-student-semester-point units. Profound learning and profound teaching require time for reflection, time for absorpiton." Kasha suggested the extension of this trimester to include monthly "reading periods" to provide "fallow periods for the process of original, deep understanding."

There are several suggestions for the improvement of Florida higher education. Essential for development is the creation of a Board of Regents, replacing the present BOC, which would facilitate more independent action by administration. Also necessary is the revision of the trimester system. A mature and enlightened society is further needed for "the much more difficult problem of learning to accept the activities of a true and great university."

Informed citizens should realize that Florida development is dependent on its university system; "as a developer of brain power and enlightenment, attraction of new talent, a catalyst for economic advances, and the hallmark of civilized and cultural distinction."



Kasha said that despite many elements of strength, Florida can't be described as the home of any "great university."

Beccaccio Keys 10 To 7 Tribe Baseball Triumph

Florida's only World Series college baseball team racked up its third straight victory yesterday afternoon when the Florida State Tribesmen downed the Clemson College Tigers, 10-7, in a game at Florida Field.

Pitcher Al Beccaccio hurled the entire nine innings, and surrendered only seven hits. Only three of Clemson's seven tallies came from earned runs.

In two contests thus far, Beccaccio has given up a total of four earned runs. Last year, the Seminole, who played second base, pitched for 12-1/2 innings.

In addition to his pitching prowess, Beccaccio slammed two hits at the plate to help lead Florida State to victory. Catcher Buddy Teagle, who was named All-American last season, also hit two runs for the Tribesmen.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's nine got its 10 runs on only eight hits. Clemson's Tigers helped the Tribe immensely at times, and near the end of the game threatened to snatch the triumph away.

The Tigers had five errors and walked five Seminoles, to assist in the scoring.

In the top of the ninth, the Tigers put in their last big play for the victory , as they trailed by seven runs. In this inning, the Tigers scored four runs.

FSU was helping in the tallying by giving up two hits, two [illegible] balls, a hit-batter, a pa[illegible] and two errors.

Gymnasts Enter G-Ville Meet

FSU's gymnastics team will be traveling to the University of Florida this afternoon to defend their title in the Southern Intercollegiate Gymnastic Championship.

Under the direction of coach Joe Gusic nine boys will be competing against teams from the University of Florida, Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, Georgia Southern and David Lipscomb.

Rick Miller, Mitch Weinstock and John Kimbrough are competing in the "All Around" which consists of six gymnastic events yielding one composite score. Other members vying for titles are Guy Atkinson, John Cory, Bill Davis, Bob Emmonds, Tom Johnson and Joe Green.

TO MISS GARNET-GOLD GAME

Injuries Hamper Tribe, Says Pete

Several Seminoles have suffered injuries and will not be able to play in the March 30 annual Garnet and Gold football contest, announced Head Coach Bill Peterson.

End Terry Garvin, who sustained a knee injury two weeks ago, has been pronounced unable to play, in addition to Frank Pennie.

The grid mentor has also been keeping an anxious eye on the knee of quarterback Ed Pritchett, who has been having off-again on-again knee trouble.

Preparing for the match, Peterson will send the Tribes through a game-like scrimmage tomorrow. Next week, the Tribesmen will practice on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The game will be Saturday.

Last year, the administration broke precedent and tried pitting the varsity against the Seminole alumni, but this will not be done this year.

In the first and only varsity-alumni match, the undergrads won 48-6. The alumns only TD came when third team fill-ins, relieving the "tired alumni," scored after a 71-yard drive.

Peterson says some seniors-to-be may not have to play in this year's contest.

Seminole Boosters Inc., headed by Wendell Jarrard, will admit the public to the game for a price of $1.00 for an entire family. The money will go into the football scholarship fund.

Wrestling Title To Be Decided Tonight In Tully

The fraternity and independent intramural wrestling tournament will close tonight in Tully Gymnasium, as Greek, ODI, and all-campus championships are decided.

Grapplers will square off at 7:30 in the matches that decide Greek and independent winners. Immediately afterwards, the two winners will compete for campus laurels.

Officials will be Larry Brinkley and Andy Oltman.

Plaques and trophies will be presented to first and second place winners by Dr. Kenneth Miller, head of the physical education department.

In Match Tomorrow

Netters To Battle Northwesterners

Northwestern, relying on one of the US's top ten tennis players, will take on the Florida State Seminoles at 1 p.m. tomorrow on the FSU courts, next to Tully Gymnasium.

The public is invited to view the matches, in which Northwestern's Marty Riessen, a former Davis Cup team member, will battle Florida State's number one player, Lex Wood.

Giant-killer Wood, a South African import, has been humbled only once in six starts, the same as the team itself. He was defeated by another of the nation's best netters in the second match with the Fort Eustis (Va.) squad.

Seminole triumphs have come at the expense of Fort Eustis, twice; Georgia, twice; and Georgia Tech, once. The only loss was inflicted by Mississippi State in a close 5-4 tilt.

Just as Wood has won his last four matches, so has number two man Don Caton, a transfer student from Pensacola Junior College. Also winning consistently are Paul Bennett in the Number three spot and Don Monk manning the fourth position.

However, the fifth and sixth spots on the FSU have appeared uninspired in their play.

Phi Beta Kappa Honorary Taps 34 New Members

The FSU chapter of Phi Beta Kappa honor society announced today the election of 34 new members and the appointment of Justice Elwyn Thomas of the Florida Supreme Court as an honorary member.

In addition to the selection of Judge Thomas as an honorary member the chapter announced the election of David Jack Holmes of Birmingham as an alumnus member. Holmes received his bacheler's degree cum laude from FSU in 1952 and is now head of the history department at the Birmingham Branch of the University of Alabama.

Six juniors are in the group of members of undergraduate classes and recent graudates selected for membership in the organization, which selects its members from among the student with the highest scholarship in the College of Arts and Sciences.

The juniors: Patrick T. DeMarco (Inter-American Studies); Linda R. Diz (English); Michael D. Parker (Biology); Jamex A. Ramsey (International Affairs); Emile B. Reth (Mathemtaics); Kurt A. Snover (Physics).

The seniors: James G. Allee (Biology); Hazel A. Avery (Spanish); Alice M. Barron (English); Mary V. Bennett (English); Anita L. Eberly (Medical Technology); Horace B. Gray Jr. (Chemistry); George M. At April Performance

Casals And Zerbe Presented Degrees

Florida State University announced today that it will award an honorary doctor of music degree on April 1 to Pablo Casals, who will conduct an orchestra and chorus here at that time in the performance of his oratorio, "El Pesebre."

At the same time, President Gordon W. Blackwell said, FSU will award an honorary doctor of fine arts degree to Karl Zerge, distinguished painter who is a professor of art at FSU.

The honorary degrees will be conferred just prior to the third performance in this country of the two-hour oratorio by Casals with the 86-year-old self-exiled Spaniard conducting.

The performance, at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium, with many members of Florida's Legislature present, will mark the eveing opener for a weeklong Florida Festival of Fine Arts which is being planned to honor the lawmakers assembling in biennial session April 2.

The world-famed cellist, composer and conductor, who now lives in Puerto Rico, personally directed the performance of the oratorio in San Francisco last April and in New York's Carnegie Hall last June as part of his personal crusade for peace.

Kellum Fire All Smoke

Smoke filled Kellum Hall as a result of a trash chute fire which occurred after midnight Friday.

The smoke producing fire wasn't hot enough to set off the automatic sprinkler alarm in the trash room on the ground floor of Kellum before all floors of the big residence hall were filled with smoke.

Not knowing the location or nature of the fire, Assistant Counselor Gene Simmons summoned the fire department. Residents Phil Powell and Bob Dudley along with staff members 'Sarge' Merithew Clinton Terry and Doug Hendrikson had the fire out by the time the fire department arrived.

Phil Powell reported that he worked for about ten minutes on the fire before the heat was sufficient to operate the water sprinkler and set cffthe alarm.

Cause of the fire was attributed to a lighted match or cigarette carelessly droppeddownthe trash chute from one of the floors above. Normally, the chutes are kept locked at all times to prevent such occurrences. The smoke seeped into levels of the building through cracks in the air-conditioning system on the ground and first floors.

Tallahassee City Fire Chief Earl Levy, who was off duty at home (and nearly in bed at the time the alarm was sounded) expressed relief that the fire wan't more serious.

WOMEN'S OFFICES

Any women students interested in running for the following positions which will be in effect during the 3rd trimester must leave their name and the office they are seeking in the Women's Vice-President's P.O. Box, main office, Longmire, before 12:00 Monday.

The offices are: Chairman of Judiciary, Chief Fire Marshall, President of Dorm (4), Vice-President of Dorm (4), and Judiciary members (4).

rends Recognized In Trimester Evaluation

By LINDA SAVIDGE
Flambeau Staff Writer

The administration, students ... faculty were all represented ... in the articles which have ... in this series of the tri- ...ester.

...mpiling their ideas, a de- ...ded trend can be seen.

...e administration was represent- ... Dr. E. Lawrence Chalmers, ...ociate dean of faculties; Dr. Gor- ...Blackwell, president of FSU; Dr. ...ray Kenna, registrar; Miss ...abeth Lynn, assistant dean of ...men; Dr. Donald Loucks, dean of ...; Dr. Brewer, assistant dean of men; and Dr. Russell Gentry, director of the University Hospital.

The consensus is that the transition period, difficult though it may be for students and faculty, is not the time to judge the trimester system.

Statistics compiled contradicted the widespread student opinions that everybody's grades have dropped, that there has been a noticeably lower load average, and that the strain of the system has sent far more students to the University Hospital sick beds than ever before.

On the other hand, difficulties such as the insufficient library facilities, lack of time for students experiencing academic difficulty to regain an honorable scholastic status, and the faculty's financial and vacation problems were recognized. They believe these problems can be ironed out if the students and the faculty realistically approach their duties.

Student Body President Ken van Assenderp and President-elect Johnny Smith both declared their convictions that a college education consists of a well-balanced program of the academic and the extracurricular.

Van Assenderp said the Student Government had been prepared for the transition, so that efficiency and participation did not suffer. He believes the University is capable of achievement under either the trimester or the semester system if constructive criticism is expressed and heeded.

Believing, as does President van Assenderp, that evaluation of the system cannot be called valid at this time, President-elect Smith nevertheless expressed concern over the danger which the accelerated system presents to the extracurricular opportunities on campus.

Garnet and Gold Key members interviewed echoed the concern over the danger ot the extra-curricular program. To this they added the fear that too many people are now tending to study only for tests and are not taking the time to delve deeply into their course. Professors are accused of required too much busy work for the system, of poor coverage of their courses in the new lecture time, and of giving grade "gifts."

On the other hand, some members of these groups expressed satisfaction at seeing some activities cut so that the time which they require is in proportion their merit. Others said that the long summer afforded them more time to earn money. Still others said that the pressure of the system qas forcing them to learn to budget their time wisely. A number of them stated their belief that the

For several years, the FSU student political scene has witnessed a strange ritual between candidates for class office and voters. This ritual is strange in that nobody in or out of student government has been able to take a lesson from its poor logic.

The ritual begins about this time every year with the candidates for class office promising to "Bring Back and Reinforce the Grand, Old Traditional Class Officer Program at FSU." It ends with the student body blissfully ignoring the record of these people in office and in particular the fact that the same campaign promises were made the year before and the year before that.

There are two possible lessons which could be learned from this repeating play, neither of which is particularly pleasing and both of which would require drastic action on the part of student government or the voters.

The first possibility is that the COP is composed of essentially corrupt individuals who don't particularly care to honor their campaign promises. If this were the case, impeachment proceedings would be in order.

However, this isn't the whole case. The second possibility brings out much more of the truth, which is that the class officers haven't honored their campaign promises because they can't!

There is much logic to support this view. Freshmen often run for class office under the misconception that they're running for office of "grade 13"--and consider the race an extension of high school politics.

Upperclassmen often run for class offices with the same misconception--that they can stop the hands of time and bring back the fine tradition of class officers.

The fact of the matter is that class officers haven't been carrying their own weight in student government for many years and it is only the inertia of their past greatness at FSCW that keeps them here at all.

Class officers have enjoyed a mighty and glorious place on the FSU political scene. But that is in the past. The time has come to let them go without a whimper or a whine. We must look to the future and plan a strong and practical student government in which a title refers to a real job and not just an empty honor reminiscent of past glories.

The time and the opportunity are here for us to perform a great service to our University. Tomorrow the student body will be able to exercise one of its constitutional rights in the form of a referendum vote on the COP.

Tomorrow the student body will be able to unshackle student government from a burden which the trimester has made an object of ridicule and contempt.

Campaigns Ruin Meals

Campaigns, campaigns, campaigns and then even campaign posters, I for one am sick and tired of them.

Sitting over at the house trying to gulp down a nice quiet dinner after making it through three atrocious tests and handing in two half-written term papers is enough in itself. Sitting in front of a cold plate of last Tuesday's spaghetti and a glass full of some weird concoction of grape juice and pink lemonade which you can't really call palatable, but somehow resign yourself to eat, is nothing less than traumatic. Well, now that you have the picture you can just about imagine what is about to happen.

Nine people file mysteriously into your dining room. This in itself isn't really too bad, because they are female, or at least you think they are female, you can't really be positive. Three are dressed liked Vikings, three like geisha girls and the last three something like American Indians; or anyway that's a good guess. They all stand quietly in line giggling and pointing at each other until they figure out who goes first and then whatever it is begins.

At first the little thing they are mumbling rhymes, but as it progresses it absolutely refus[es] make any sense at all. Finally [we] get to the meat of the present[ation] the candidates' qualifications. It's really hard to understand what [is] being been an assistant patrol [leader] in scouts, a spotlight dancer [in] American Bandstand and a mem[ber] "The Cisco Kid Ranchers Club" [has] to do with any office on this ca[mpus] but at this point it's just pas[sed] in hopes that you can get back to [the] spaghetti and lemonade.

After five more minutes of q[ual]ifications it begins to be quite [a] take, so all you can do is to [get] from the table, excuse yourself [to] housemother and head for the [near]est eating establishment.

Well, anyway, it's at least a [little] quieter and the food looks just a [little] more appetizing. Really it's [quite] nice, you begin to relax, lean [back] take a deep breath and eat your [cheese]burger with the posters of [people] running for everything from [school] more social disease chairman [to] senior library monitor. Thank [God] for elections and the peace and [quiet] of the normal trimester.

Economics Improving

Many of the recent criticisms of [the] Socialist International are [based] upon the supposed lack of any [practi]tical plans for dealing with the [many] problems confronted by up and [coming] socialist parties in Asia [and] Africa.

Socialists have been accused [of] spending too much time on [ideo]political ideology, and too little [time] dealing with basic economic and [soci]cial problems. This may have been true in the past, but ever since the sharp criticism by Asoka Mehta (India) at the 1960 Socialist International at Haifa, steps have been taken to correct the imbalance between politics and economics.

Politically the International [has] several important resolutions [on] (David Ennals, "New Statesman," Vol. LIX, No. 1521, 7 May 1960) [includ]ing China in Tibet, South Africa's racial discrimination demanded a cease fire in Algeria, demanded [that] popular governments be allowed to join the OAS, condemned the absence of deomocracy in the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua, and Haiti and requested the restoration of political freedoms in Argentina.

Resolutions have their place -- but Ennals points out some very crucial questions for world socialism: "What is the appropriate ideology of Socialism for raising the rate of investment in the economy from 5 per cent to the 15 per cent that assures self-sustaining growth? What pattern of cooperative and agricultural development fits into the Socialist ideology? What about Africa?"

The practical problems of Socialism have been too long ignored and now that socialists are coming into power -- primarily in Asia and Africa -- are required by [many] these non-European comrades to achieve some measure of success.

The International has responded to this need by creating the "Standing Joint Committee on Developing Areas," in cooperation with "Asian Socialist Conference." The purpose of this committee is to hold seminars in Asia and Africa as to the meaning of Socialism today, and to combine common experiences and ideas in the working out of economic problems and in foreign affairs.

Once again the Socialist International has responded to the needs of the peoples of the world with practical and feasible solutions to their difficulties.

COP Needed--Haney

To the Editor:

A few students would lead you to believe that the Class Officer Program is a functionless, outdated system of student representation. They are mistaken. Evidently, they have not realized the effect of the trimester system which has increased, not decreased, the need for class officers.

The trimester system threatens to give FSU the appearance of a diploma machine. Class officers are the only student representatives whose functions are designed to make a student's stay at our university a more meaningful and enjoyable experience. With bewildered freshmen enrolling and exhausted seniors graduating with each new trimester, the class officers are seeking to preserve the friendly reputation of FSU by welcoming the freshmen with the usual Freshman Orientation and bidding the Seniors farewell in commencement ceremonies at the end of each new trimester. These two events are meaningful and will be remembered by most students long after other memories of their college days have been lost.

Since the trimester system has drastically limited the amount of time which students may devote to extracurricular activities, the number of students who participate in student government should be increased. The class officers are presently carrying out a number of functions.

For example, the Junior Class Officers, which are generally considered to be relatively inactive, sponsor such projects as the selection of the Hall of Fame, the selection of the outstanding Senior man and woman, the selection of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, combo dances for all students, and faculty-student functions designed to increase the working relationship between the two groups.

Class officers are also seeking new ways by which to serve the University. For example, class officers recently formed a standing committee composed of the vice presidents of the classes which will work closely with the Alumni Association in an attempt to house FSU alumni support. Class officers are willingly and able to take on more functions. Why abolish a group of capable workers when the need for workers has been increased?

The trimester system is still young, and its full implications are not yet evident. Admittedly, the Class Officer Program may have to undergo a few changes in the future, but most phases of the University have been forced to make changes by the new system. Class officers should continue to carry on the meaningful functions for which they are now responsible and undertake new responsibilities.

Fear Communists

"Why fear Communists?", asks the head on a column by Thomas Brooks. Basically, Mr. Brooks, it is both because of the nature of the Communist ideology, and because of communism's brutal record of performance.

The Communist ideology itself tells us why Communism is a "clear and present danger" to the open societies of the world.

Basically, Communism holds out the promise of a far better world than the one in which we now live. Moreover, the Communist philosophy masquerades as a "science," and once one accepts its basic premises, its conclusions follow as surely as night follows day.

One of the basic premises of the Communist ideology is that the nature is determined by the economic forces which confront him: economic determinism. The Communists hold that man is merely a higher order of animal than the others, and has no immoral soul. As a result, his behavior is determined not by moral law, but by economic factors. The Communists further hold that capitalism, with its system of competition, has brought into the world many of the evil qualities of man: greed, corruption, and so on.

To make the world better, it therefore follows that capitalism must be completely destroyed... this is one of the requisites of the Communist ideology. Once capitalism is destroyed, i.e., once Communism is in complete control of the world, and the manifestations of the burgeois ideology have been removed through murder, terror and indoctrination, the stage will be set to construct an economic system, socialism, which will eliminate the flaws in the character of man.

With greed, criminality and self-interest, products of capitalism gone, we shall emerge into the era of communism in which persons will work for the pleasure of it, give to their fellow man that which they produce but do not need, and there will be no further need for government. The State will wither away, and the well-known slogan, "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need," will become a reality.

This vision of the Communists is what captivates intellectuals, and also explains the Communist morality: whatever advances Communism is right, because it further the noble vision of Communism.

He later began to work with polymer tempera, then with acrylic resins, both modern plastic media. Whatever materials he used Zerbe showed in his landscapes, figure paintings and other works which a critic once called, "the response of a distinguished artist of basically European sensibility to the physical and cultural scene of the New World."

A retrospective exhibition of Zerbe's works has been touring the country under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts under a grant from the Ford Foundation.

Elena Nikolaidi, mezzo-soprano from the FSU music faculty, is a native of Athens, Greece. Herbert Beattie, leading bass of the New York City Opera and the San Francisco Spring Opera, is coming to take one of the solo roles and Richard Collins, baritone, director of the FSU Opera Guild, will take another.

Miss Iglesias and Saharrea sang in the New York presentation of "El Pesebre." He will take the role of the Narrator of the FSU production of the oratorio which follows the Nativity story. She will sing the part of The Angel. Collins sings the part of The Shepherd; Beattie the roles of Man, The Fisherman, and The Plowman.

system will put FSU ahead academically.

Graduate student opinion varied from those who maintained that the system was too much like a business operation to those who expressed the opinion the average, with a certain amount of "know-how" can cut enough time away from his studying to effectively work under the system.

Recalling that the system was set up for the purpose of making the school operative all year round, one felt that the 1964 summer enrollment will show whether or not the system has accomplished its purpose.

Faculty opinion echoed a recurring belief that the students expecially hurt are those in applied skills, such as music, laboratory science, or those who write a great number of papers. Why rush through a period of maturation, was another faculty opinion which repeated student complaint.

Professors who want to know their students, who want to present their lectures well and who wish to spend time in research and publish, thereby maintaining their reputations as scholars, are finding that time is too short.

The over-riding opinion seemed to be that while the transition has affected both good and bad results, the trimester cannot yet be appraised.

All those interviewed expressed the belief that changes will have to be made before the system is effective and that the attitude with which the changes are approached will be what determines the fate of the trimester system.

French Institute Set For This Summer

High school teachers of French who need to brush up on the language will have an opportunity to increase their speaking, writing, reading and listening knowledge of the language at an eight-week institute at FSU next summer.

FSU has received a grant of $80,000 from the U.S. Office of Education for its first Summer Institute for Secondary School Teachers of French June 23 - Aug. 16, and stipends of $75 a week with dependency allowances are available for the 40 public school teachers who will be selected to attend. Private school teachers may attend but no stipends are available.

Dr. Jean Charron, associate professor of modern languages at FSU and institute director, said the French language will be used almost exclusively at the institute which isconductedfor teachers over a nine-state area of the South. A "no-English" rule will be observed even on trips away from the campus in company with staff members and participants will learn French songs and poems, see one French movie a week and spend time daily in a language laboratory.

Improving a knowledge of France, its life and institutions, and learning new teaching methods will be other objectives of the institute.

Charron will be assisted in conducting the institute by several experts in French language and literature, including Dr. Georges Paul Collet, professor of French literature at Tulane University.

FSU Student Sells Play

By BETTY LYNN GRISSOM
Flambeau Staff Writer

Television station KOA in Denver, Colorado has recently bought the rights to a play written by Dennis Center, an FSU student.

Dennis, a junior English major, is elated over his recent accomplishment and feels that this has given him the incentive to go into professional writing. He realizes that writing requires not only skill but a great deal of devotion and self-sacrifice. At present he is concentrating his efforts on his education and does creative writing only in his leisure time. He did, however, express the hope that he would soon be able to spend more time with his chosen profession.

Dennis lives in Denver, Colorado but has also lived in many European countries. Having traveled abroad so extensively, he now considers this an important part of his life and a definite contribution to his zeal for writing.

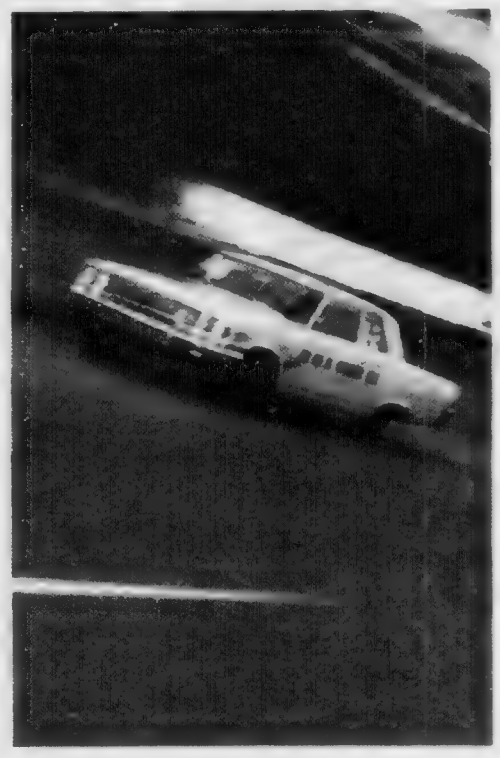
The play that he sold derives its name from "Lamier Street" in Denver, which is nothing more than a continuous row of bars and begging vagrants. Last summer when Dennis was home he happened to encounter one of the typical inhabitants of the street. His conversation with the vagrant proved to be interesting and prompted him to channel his creative talents into play writing.

"Lamier Street" is a half-hour long play and much of its material is taken from the ramblings of the old vagrant. There are three other characters in the play, a little boy and girl and a middle aged woman. Being fascinated with children, Dennis said that he attempted to portray in his play the approbation, affection and kindness that these children feel toward the vagrant.

The play will be shown on television March 31.

Beals Sets 'Punishment'

Dr. L.W. Beals, Professor of Philosophy at Williams College, will give two lectures on "Punishment."



Wednesday, March 27, at 4:15 in the Library Lecture Hall, he will talk on "Theories of Punishment." Thursday, March 28, at 4:15 in Longmire Club Room, he will lecture on "Guilty or Sick."

Professor Beals has been associated with Williams College for 38 years and has published in many of the leading journals as well as contributing to philosophical books. He is well known for his work in social and political philosophy.

36 DAYS THAT CHANGED THE PERFORMANCE PICTURE IN AMERICA

In 36 days, starting with the Monte Carlo Rallye in January of this year, our products have posted a series of competition wins that have made performance history. Here's what has happened:

Three V-8 Falcon Sprints were entered in the Monte Carlo Rallye. This is not a race. It is a trial of a car's total capabilities. We did it (nervously) for the experience and with practically no sense of expectation, because we had not entered an event like this before. One Sprint ended the experiment in a snowbank. But the others finished 1-2 in their class with such authority that they moved the good, grey London Times to say: "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country in the world." That was Number One.

Number Two was a double win in the Pure Oil Performance Trials. Fords captured Class 1 and Class 2 (for high performance and large V-8's). Both of these trials were for over-all points rolled up in economy, acceleration and braking tests.

Then, at Riverside in California, in America's only long-distance stock car event that is run on a road course (as opposed to closed circuit, banked tracks such as the track at Daytona), Dan Gurney pushed a Ford to first place.

The latest news comes north from Daytona. There in the open test that tears cars apart—the Daytona 500—Ford durability conquered the field. Fords swept the first 5 places . . . something no one else had equaled in the history of the event. In a competition —which anyone can enter—designed to prove how well a car hangs together, 9 Fords finished out of 12 entered . . . a truly remarkable record considering that over 50% of all cars entered failed to finish.

Why do we keep such an interested eye on competitions such as these? Is speed important to us? Frankly, no. The speed capabilities of the leading American cars are now grouped so closely together that the differences have no real meaning. To us, who are building cars, success in this kind of competition means just one thing: the car is strong. This kind of performance capability means that the car is so well built that it can stand up to normal driving—the kind of day-in, day-out demands you put your own car through—for thousands of miles longer than less capable cars.

In tests like the Daytona 500 and Riverside, we find out in an afternoon what might take us 100,000 test-track miles to discover. We learn how to build superior strength into suspension systems, steering systems, drive train, body, tires. Anyone can build a fast car. What we're interested in is the concept of "total" performance.

We believe in this kind of total performance because the search for performance made the automobile the wonderfully efficient and pleasurable instrument it is today—and will make it better tomorrow.

Resource Control Advocated

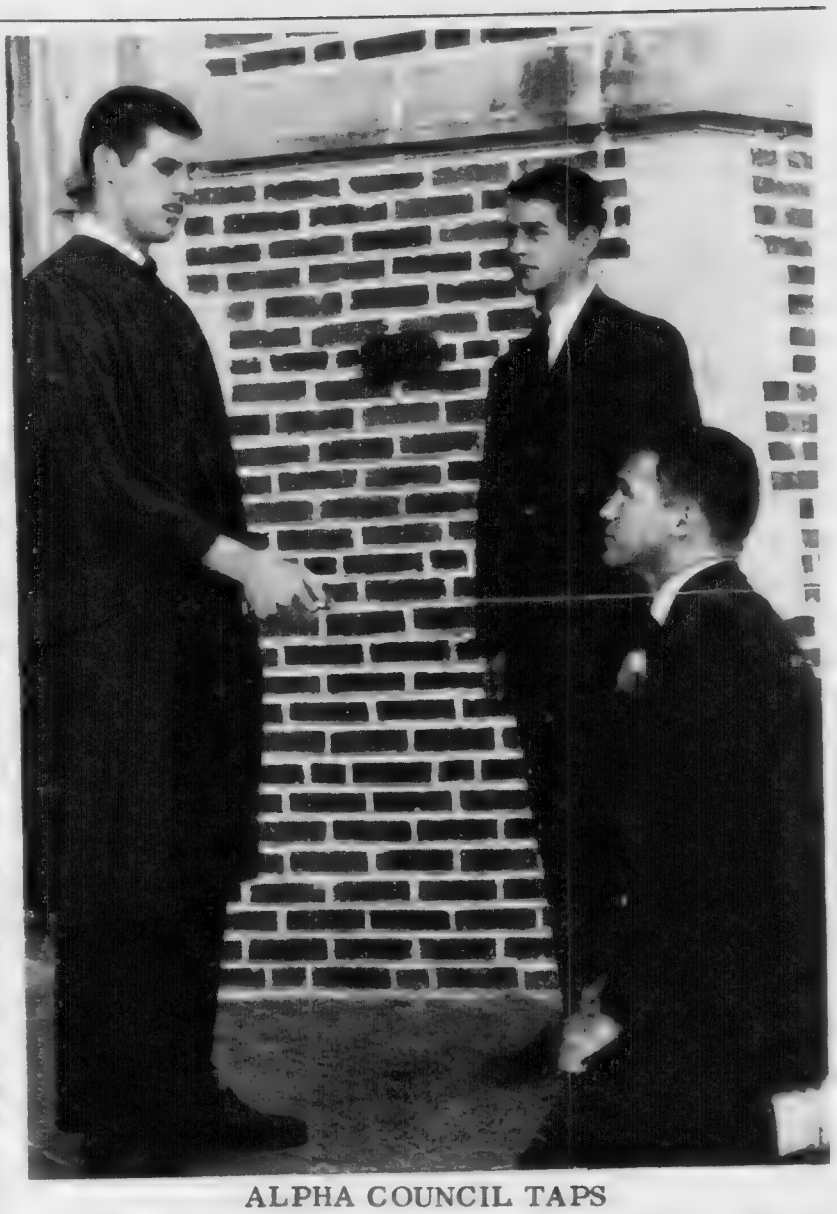
By MILA ARNOLD

...ained control of our natural water resources would prevent floods and prepare for periods of draught and future periods when the water supply will be insufficient, according to John Boynton, speaker at the American Studies Lecture Wednesday night.

Boynton, director of research for the Florida Development Commission, described his pet project, which he said would provide this control, and which has received national attention and is being practiced to some extent.

He calls his project "Dam Everything."

Boynton stated that the reason this project and similar ones dealing with other resources have not been fully undertaken sooner is that people refuse to believe in the possibility of something which has never before happened in their frame of reference. People simply cannot forsee a shortage of food and resources when supluses are now being stock-piled, in spite of the evidence that the shortage will occur if appropriate measures aren't taken.



The speaker deplored this "myth of inexhaustible resources."

Boynton added that "The insidious thing about a myth is that it exists long after knowledge of its fallacy has been presented." He stated that myths are involved in our value systems and in a common tendency toward inflexibility. Relating this statement to our educational situation, Boynton added that education should aim toward a flexibility and intellectual readiness to modify the old and investigate the new.

He warned that if we continue to nurture and maintain this myth, it will speed up related problems such as population explosion. He declared there is not time to waste in getting conservational methods into action.

Boynton supported his propositions that our natural resources are exhaustible with statistics showing that our land and resources are decreasing at an increasing rate. According to Boynton, the old adage, "You don't miss the water until the well runs dry," is all too true.

Hope for solution of the problem of rapidly diminishing resources lies in immediate action and in development of minds that will recognize that a problem does exist.

Astronauts Educated At State Colleges

Of the nation's nine new astronauts, one of whom may be the first man on the moon, six received all or part of their education at state universities and land-grant schools.

Four of the spacemen earned degrees in aeronautical engineering at state universities -- one on the master's level and three on the bachelor's level. Two of the four degrees are from the University of Michigan, one from Purdue University and one from the Georgia Institute of Technology.

A fifth astronaut holds a master of science degree from the University of California at Los Angeles, and a sixth spend two of his undergraduate years at the University of Wisconsin.

Air Force Capt. James A. McDivett graduated first in his class at the in aeronautical engineering and AF Capt. Edward H. White II earned an MS in aeronautical engineering from the same university. Neil A. Armstrong, X-15 pilot, received his degree in the field from Purdue University, and a fourth with a degree in aeronautical engineering is Navy Lt. Comdr. John W. Young, with a BS from Georgia Tech.

Elliot See, Jr., test flight engineer and experimental test pilot, holds an MS from from UCLA, and Navy Lt. Comdr. James A. Lovell attended the University of Wisconsin for two years before going on to the US Naval Academy.

In the original group of seven "Mercury Astronauts," three of whom were the first Americans to orbit the earth, five were graduated from or attended public universities. Three were aeronautical engineering graduates, from Purdue University, the University of Minnesota and the University of Colorado. A fourth attended the University of Hawaii for three years, the fifth took courses at the University of Maryland.

WASHINGTON--Democratic Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina says Russia is at least several years ahead of the U.S. in the development of a defense system against ballistic missiles. Thurmond--in a letter to constituents--mentions Scientific Presidential Adviser Dr. Jerome Wiesner. Thurmond charges that Wiesner is the principal opponent of rapid U.S. development of the Nike-Zeus anti-missile weapon. Defense Secretary McNamara said recently he wants to await development of a new and better anti-missile system, known as "Nike-Y."

NEW YORK--Striking printers in New York City have reversed a previous union decision and voted to end their 107-day walkout against the city's newspapers. Yesterday ratification vote was 2,563 to 1,763. One other union--the Photo Engravers--is still negotiating with the publishers. But prediction is that the presses will roll again this week, possibly Tuesday.

Another local of the Printers Union, in Cleveland, is apparently representing the last major roadblock in efforts to settle Cleveland's 115-day newspaper blackout. Photo Engravers have reached agreement and officials are optimistic about an early return to wok.

PARIS--Negotiations between representatives of striking French coal miners and France's nationalized coal industry have broken down. And no date is set for a resumption of talks. Three major miners' unions and the industry are reported deadlocked in the latest efforts to end the 24-day strike, called over wages and working hours.

White Team Sparkles In Scrimmage

Preparing for the second annual Garnet-Gold game, the Florida State Seminoles ran through a rugged game-like scrimmage Saturday afternoon in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Head Coach Bill Peterson said the first team sparkled during the Saturday drill, as it scored three touchdowns against the No. 2 squad, which failed to tally.

Two of the touchdowns were scored on runs by halfback Dave Snyder of Jacksonville, while the other came on a two-yard pass from quarterback Steve Tensi to end Don Floyd.

Other touchdowns were tallied by halfback Bill Hammond, who caught a 55-yard pass from signal-caller Bill Pritchett; by Pritchett, who jogged three yards across the goal line; and by quarterback Russ Fischer, who scooted three yards around end.

Peterson said six men stood out on offense. They were Pritchett, Snyder, Tensi, Floyd, fullback Larry Brinkley and halfback Fred Biletnikoff. Steve Slay, Jerry Wooten, Darrell Willett, Bill Daly, Chuck Robinson and Avery Sumner were outstanding defensive players.

In the Garnet-Gold game, the head mentor said he would pit the "best against the best."

AGAINST FSU BASEBALL TEAM

Tigers Split, Navy Triumphs

STAFF SPORTS WRITER

Whatever dreams Coach Danny Litwhiler may have visualized for an unbeaten season became shattered Friday afternoon, when Clemson's Tigers put together an almost faultless defense and fine clutch hitting by centerfielder Jonny Jones to hand Florida State's powerful Seminoles their first setback in four contests, 12-7, before an estimated 1,000 fans at Seminole Field.

Clemson, a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, was dropped by the Seminoles 10-7 in their initial game of the infant season Thursday.

Litwhiler was forced to eight of his 11 pitchers, and the loss was charged to starter Gary Williamson. Williamson, a lanky righthander, worked only one and two-thirds innings, but surrendered five runs on an equal number of hits. He also walked six and struck out one Tiger batsman.

Picking up the win for the Benals, was sophomore southpaw Tommy Chapman. Chapman went the entire distance, giving up seven runs on 14 well-spaced hits. He managed to fan four Seminoles, while he walked six more. He received much help however, from an almost air tight defense which committed only one error. Senior Jonny Jones, a native of Orlando, Florida, collected three hits, including a two run double in five trips to the plate to further aid the victory cause.

Sparking the tribe hitters was little centerfielder Mike Augustine, of Philadelphia, Pa., Augustine pounded three hits in four times at bat, driving in three of the Tribe's seven runs.

Saturday morning, the Tribesmen once again met the Tigers from South Carolina, and this time the Seminoles greeted their northern visitors with a 15 hit barrage and a crafty pitching job by righthander Allen Thomas to gain an easy 12-3 victory.

Mike Augustine once again was the big gun at the plate, rapping four hits in five tries to drive in two runs. All-American catcher Buddy Teagle slammed a bases loaded home run in the third inning to erase a 3-1 Tiger advantage, and pave the way for the Tribe slaughter. It was Teagle's second round-tripper of the year.

The losing pitcher was Ron Smith, who was knocked out of the box after Teagle unloaded with his tremendous blast in the third stanza.

Thomas, a sophomore from Cairo, Ga., picked up his second win of the season in as many starts. He needed relief, however, from senior righthander Frank Echols of Tallahassee to preserve the win late in the seventh frame. Allen was touched for six hits and all three Bengal runs, while Echols gave up only one hit in his two inning stint.

The Naval Academy's Midshipmen presented Florida State with thier second loss of the current campaign in Saturday afternoon's nightcap, when they edged the Seminoles, 8-7, despite a determined rally by the Tribesmen in the last of the ninth inning.

Jim Loftin, a 6-2 righthander from Pensacola who generally gains his fame on the gridiron, was the starting hurler for the losers, but after dix hits and three runs, he was relieved in the eighth by Frank Echols who was booked with the setback.

The winning pitcher was Bob Hennessey, despite having seen only two frames of action.

Big guns at the plate for FSU were Buddy Teagle who collected two raps in four trips, and John McConnaughhay, another ex-footballer whose pinch hit, bases loaded double drove in all three Tribe runs in the last of the ninth.

In between the two Seminole games, Clemson clobbered the M... 17-4, to round out the day's t... header.

FSU will now travel to Aub... a repay visit to the Tigers M... and Tuesday, and then ret... Tallahassee on April 5-6

BUT TRIBE LOSES, 6-3

FSU's Wood Upsets Riesson In Net Match

Facing the Number Two collegiate netter in the United States, FSU's Lex Wood pulled a stunning upset Saturday afternoon when he defeated Marty Riesson of Northwestern.

Wood, a South African export, lost the first set, 5-7, but bounced back in the second set to whitewash Riesson, 6-0, in the deciding set, Wood downed Riesson, 6-3.

The drama was duplicated in the second singles match when FSU's Don Caton faced Northwestern's Clare Graebner, who is ranked 14th in the nation. Caton won his first set, 6-4, and downed Graebner, 6-1, in the final set.

Paul Bennett, FSU's number three player, faced Skip Gage and won in 7-5 and 6-3 sets to give the Seminoles their last win of the day.

From then on, it was Northwestern's game, for the visitors eventually won the match, 6-3, capturing the other two singles and the three doubles events.

Northwestern's Bill Rice downed Don Monk of FSU, 6-4 and 6-1, while Jim Kohl defeated Dave Mower of FSU, 6-3 and 6-1. NW's Carver Blanchard dropped Ken Alcorn, 6-3, in the first set, but Alcorn turned the tables, 2-6, in the second set before falling, 6-4, in the final set.

Riesson and Graebner battled FSU's Wood and Caton through three sets before winning the first doubles match. The Northwesterners won, 6-2, in the first match. Then the FSU team rebounded, 3-6, in the second match. Riesson and Graebner took the third match, 9-7.

In the second doubles, FSU again fought it to the wire as Seminoles Bennett and Monk won one, 4-6, and then lost, 6-3 and 6-2, to Gage and Rice.

In third doubles, Kohl and Alcorn lost the first set, 1-6, but then downed FSU's Fischer and Alcorn in the other two sets.

Coach Eddie Cubbon's netters are now 6-3 for the season, and will battle the University of Florida Gators Tuesday in Gainesville. A previous match between UF and FSU was rained out.

Pablo Casals On 'Crusade For Peace'

...Casals plans to carry his "crusade for peace" to ...eral capitals of Europe and an equal number of cities of ...country with personally conducted performances of his ...ame, "El Pesebre," (The Manger) which will be per...med at FSU next Monday night.

...at active at 86, the famous cellist told an audience of ...ents and faculty members at FSU's School of Music he ...to conduct orchestras and choruses in London, Berlin, ...burg, Frankfurt, Philadelphia, St. Louis and possibly ...ington.

...The performance at FSU's Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. ...Monday, a gala concert which is the evening opening of ...Florida Festival of Fine Arts, will be the third perfor...ce in this country of the two-hour religious work. Casals ...directed performances at San Francisco and New York ...sic, and the work has been performed about a dozen ...s under Casals' baton throughout the world.

...Casals made it clear that he thinks music can be a strong...force than anything else in unifying the world for the ...ause of peace and good will.

...He proposed to the late secretary general of the Unit...Nations, Dag Hammarskjold, (and plans to propose to his ...essor, U. Thant) that a day be set aside for the entire ...rld to perform Beethoven's Ninth Symphony as one big ...ert and orchestra.

Casals ruled out only politics as he seated himself, pipe in hand, in an armchair in the staff room of the School of Music building and asked for questions.

Most of the questions involved music. What, for instance, did he think of rock and roll? "I don't think it is very healthful," he said.

About "contemporary modern music," he said, "I'm sorry to say that I think modern music is in error. They want to find something independent of what has been done in music. But it is difficult to find something different. In their useless effort they have learned to make music with machines."

Casals said he thought that in the modern day effort to do many diverse things, man has forgotten some of the "Simple" and basic things.

"When we hear Beethoven and Bach we are moved. Bach, Beethoven and Mozart were not different from people today. Life still is based on the same principles. We need the same sort of things today to satisfy our spirit and soul, and why should we not follow the same path in music?

"When my servant says, 'Good morning, sir,' it moves me. And yet there is nothing more banal than 'good morning.' But his saying it represents a movement of the soul and this movement is translated in words. How wonderful! We must say good morning in music."

Had Casals entirely silenced his famous cello? Not at all, he replied. He'll play at the Casals Festival in Puerto Rico in the summer, and then at the Casals Festival at Prades, France, where he lived in exile for many years.

"I knew this country before many of you were born," said the smiling native of Spain. His first concert tour of America was in 1901. "I love Florida, I love California and I love the West."

Casals said he knew FSU's late Ernst von Dohnanyi and admired him as "a great artist." They were good friends and Casals say Dohnanyi in Hungary nearly every hear in the days when Dohnanyi lived there.

When asked why he had chosen Puerto Rico for his home, (he moved there in 1956 from France) Casals smiled at his beautiful 26-year-old wife, who sat nearby and translated a few of the questions.

"There are very good reasons," said Casals. "My mother was a Puerto Rican. She left Puerto Rico when she was 17 years old and went to Catalonia to visit members of the family. She never returned but met my father, studied music with him, married my father and bore children and children and children.

"Then I married a Puerto Rican, and that is why I went to Puerto Rico after the death of my mother."

Mrs. Casals, who is a former student of the maestro, explained in answer to one question that her husband did not like publication of his compositions, since he has not wanted in effect to "force" them on others.

Casals amplified this by saying that after his death "the things that are worthwhile to publish will be."

Polls Open 9To5 For Votes On Candidates And Issues

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

Fifty-three offices are being sought by 115 candidates in today's Court, Senate and Class Elections.

Four constitutional amendments, a student opinion poll on graduation, a referendum vote on the abolishment of class offices, selection of permanent Senior Class officers and Outstanding Senior Man and Woman candidates will also face FSU students at the polls today.

Bryan, Seminole Club, Library, Student Center, and Smith Hall.

All students, freshmen through graduates, may vote on all court positions--Honor Court and Men's and Women's Judiciary.

However, for class officers and senate positions, only freshmen may vote for sophomore positions; sophomores vote for junior positions; juniors for senior positions.

Seniors, whether graduating or not, may vote for their permanent class officers and the Outstanding Senior Man and Woman. They can also vote for court positions.

The Constitutional amendments, the referendum question on class offivers, and the poll on graduation may be voted on by all students.

Any person voting out of his proper class in the class officers' races will have his entire ballot thrown out. Every person voting should make sure that the poll worker checks the proper class column that he is to vote in. Any ballot that is not checked for the proper class, but that has been marked in class officer positions will be thrown out.

"We will probably have even more people vote in today's election than voted in the last record breaking election," said Ron Jones, Secretary of Elections. "Because of the large number of positions being voted on, elections returns will not be in until late Tuesday evening. To avoid errors which may cause the ballot to be voided, everyone should read carefully all the instructions," urged Jones.

Radio Station WTNT will be covering the election returns live from Longmire all evening.

The Constitutional changes are as follows: Be it enacted by the FSU student senate: That article IV, Section 2, part A be amended to adding the words: Chief Justice of the Honor Court shall have had his experience "On this campus." Section 2, part B will be amended in order to delete the words pertaining to the required experience for the clerk of the Honor Court.

Be it further enacted that: Section 7, part B be amended by deleting the words: The clerk of the Honor Court "shall assume the duties of the Chief Justice in his absence." Section 7 will be amended to read "The Honor Court shall select one of its members to assume the duties of the Chief Justice in his absence."

Murray And Yon Elected By BOP

By JANE FRANZINO
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Board of Publications selected Jim Yon and Lana Murray as editors of the "Smoke Signals" and "Flambeau" respectively, Thursday evening.

Members of the Board are Drs. Reid Montgomery, Sidney Kobre and Griffith T. Pugh; John Schaffner, Beth Ann Legate, Mary Ellen Harris, and Toni De Carlo (chairman); ex officio members: Barbara Hoon, Sally Street, Sandy Bowes, and Ben Sharp.

There was only one candidate vying for the editorship of the "Smoke Signals," and he was selected by acclamation.

Four candidates applied for the position of editor of the "Flambeau." These were Lana Murray, Bill Smart, John Wood, and Paul Steel.

Due to an inability to meet the constitutional qualifications, Bill Smart and Paul Steel were eliminated from the competition.

Qualifications to be met were as follows: a 2.3 average and at least two full prior semesters of work in a responsible position on the "Flambeau."

Newly elected editors Jim Yon and Lana Murray will take office at the beginning of the third trimester. Both will have the option of remaining in office for three trimesters and then will have a chance to go up for re-election through the Board.

Movie Change

Due to the "Festival of Arts" programs being held during the next two weekends it has been necessary to make the following changes in the FSU campus movie schedule:

"The Greatest Show on Earth" will be shown Saturday and Sunday nights at 7:30. There will be no campus movie shown Friday night.

"Bad Day at Black Rock" will be shown as a late show at 10:30 Friday night, April 5, and again at 5 p.m. Sunday, April 7. There will be no campus movie Saturday night.

Detrimental!

After reading yesterday's editorial in the "Flambeau" on class officers, senior class president Duncan Moore challenged the editors of the "Flambeau" to "find one detrimental thing done by class officers."

By his statement Mr. Moore revealed that he wasn't completely aware of the situation of which he is so intrinsically a part and that he really hasn't gotten to the heart of the arguments for abolishing the Class Officer Program at FSU.

The COP should not be abolished because of the activities carried out by the program. It should not be abolished because of the type of people in the program.

IT SHOULD BE ABOLISHED because the class officer Program has so little to do with classes. It should be abolished because it is out of step with the rest of student government and the FSU community.

There is no doubt that the COP can be maintained and enlarged. For years it has had the appearance of a "catch all" in student government. The greatest services performed by the COP have nothing to do with classes and are not attended on a "class" basis.

It is utter nonsense and the worst type of deception to continue people in office on the disproven theory that FSU has any class spirit. After their freshman year FSU student have more loyality to their residence hall, fraternity, club or central student government activity than to any class.

Mr. Luther Kramer has gone to a lot of time and trouble to present the student body with the facts on the COP. By his detachment from the COP and by virtue of his experience in student affairs on the FSU campus he has been more unbiased, logical and efficient than any committee could have been on such a delicate and controversial subject.

At any time in the past several years the Senate has had the authority to shore up the COP. Their failure to do so reflects their lack of concern or their desire to have a more definite mandate from their constituents.

Today the student body has the opportunity to issue that mandate.

Such a mandate will reflect on the COP itself. It is the COP and not its members who are "detrimental" to FSU.

WS

Use Opportunity

Today the student body has the opportunity to vote on 115 candidates for 53 vacant offices, four constitutional amendments, one referendum and one poll. All we have to say about this election in general is--If you don't vote--Don't gripe.

COP Controversy Heard

Is Not 'Corrupt'

To the Editor:

During the past few weeks, our FSU Flambeau has published several unfavorable editorials concerning our class officer program. If one stops to think, he will realize that this criticism is wholly subjective, based on no positive facts, since one cannot term any class officer function detrimental to the student body or to the University.

In addition to the editorials, there is the Kramer report. Although the Karmer Report has been referred to as "unbiased," it cannot possibly be so since the material was edited after Mr. Kramer had come to his conclusions concerning class officers. No one with a strong opinion on a given subject can unbaisedly edit material on that subject. Besides being biased, the report represents the opinion of only one student and is, therefore, subject to errors in reasoning.

Class officers perform a unique function, one that can be performed best by elected representatives, from the classes and not by appointed student government officials which would be the only other alternative unless these activities are discontinued. For instance, who would take charge of class night if there were no senior class officers? Other than sophomore class officers, who would logically initiate "rat week?"

These are two traditions, among others, which would possibly be discontinued were it not for class officers. There is a list of awards given to individuals in certain classes. Since these awards represent the classes, the class officers both supervise the selection of the recipients and give them their earned honors. This certainly is a class function and there are many others.

It has been said that the class officer program is a financial drain on student government. How can this be so when each class is budgeted only two hundred dollars per year and for the past four years the senior classes have contributed an approximate total of two thousand two hundred dollars to the university.

One Flambeau article stated that the class officer program should be discontinued so there would be more students available for other positions. This seems to be a rather questionable position for one to take--especially for a university newspaper. Students should be allowed a freedom of choice concerning their activities and this choice should not be limited but should be as diversified as possible.

Perhaps the strongest argument for retaining our class officer program pertains not only to class officers but to student government and all other student activities. Students come to Florida State University to learn, not only in the classroom, but in other spheres of campus activities. When these activities are gradually diminished, the purpose of a college education is weakened.

Therefore, let's retain and strengthen our class officer program and in doing so disseminate some of the responsibilities and duties which are such a burden to the few students who are assuming them. Class officers are willing and anxious to play an even more important role if permitted to do so.

Duncan Moore
President, Class of 1963

Report Defended

To the Editor:

This is a question that needs to seriously considered, particularly view of today's referendum on t issue.

It was a question I asked mys continuously during the last m I was compiling the Report on Class Officer Program for St Government.

As a result of nearly two m of questioning and examining COP at FSU and at eight othe versities, the conclusion I contradicted what I ha believed about class

This conclusion was that should be terminated campus. This should be two reasons:

1. The COP is not d job, that is, the COP coming anywhere near ing its purpose a. It does not ha or identity.
b. It has lost vast majority of the body.
c. It has not helped the al ni program in existing right class officer pr about 5% of the ticipating in

2. The COP will more difficult t problems or take on ones for two reasons:
a. The trimester calde which will mean that class ficers must se or serve as only part t ficers. The University burgh, also on the tri plan, found it detrim their COP and hence ated the COP at their
b. The increasing the school. This it very difficult degree of unity or cern among members of ticular class.

These two conditions are widen an ever tween the student body and officers. The class officer lost contact with the student

Attendance at class functio varied, but in some instan participation has grown pr ately smaller each year.

Naturally even with these erations being as significant a are, we could not termina without a reasonable su handle the several activities take care of. These exist in Student Government.

1. Student Government h lost contact with body. Every day of student governm tion is concerned with the lems and welfare body either through the tive, legislative branches.

2. Student Government ing on a year-round basis a hence will be able student activities all round.

3. Student Government has a cess to more money and to mo people than the COP traditional and meaningful vities.

For instance, the Rally orga tion could handle the rat cap or dances, or the Secretary ternal Affairs could handle and the permanent class could handle Class Night, the retary of Elections could handle Who's Who and Hall of Fame so on.

President Speaks Out

The controversy over whether the Class Officer Program at FSU should be retained or abolished will come to a head today, when the student body voting has been tabulated.

Student Body President Ken van Assenderp made the following statement to the Flambeau:

"I signed the petition to bring this question to the students. Since the students must decide they must know two things.

"One, the effect of the trimester on class officers, even relative to student identification with classes is still a premature consideration. Observations that the trimester system will kill class unity may or may not with the passage of time be proven valid.

"Second, the class officer system at FSU is weak. It is up to the students to decide whether these weaknesses should be eliminated, or the positions themselves.

"I believe that, as the Student Senate is already trying to, class officers can be strengthened, thereby making their contributions to campus traditions a responsible one."

Questions YAF 'Right'

To the Editor:

On the front page of a conservative publication "Human Events," there appears a cartoon which pictures Robert Kennedy as an "arm twisting, race agitating" Attorney General. Another part of the cartoon pictures him as being a hater of white southerners. The cartoon strongly implies that the conservatives who write "Human Events" are a bit dissatisfied with people who advocate equal rights for all citizens, especially Negroes. According to the cartoon, they fear someone like this, namely Robert Kennedy, will be elected president in 1968.

On the last page of "Human Events" the publishers advertise their own get-together: "The Human Events Political Action Conference." The fee to attend this conference is $75. However, a special price prevails for members of the Young Americans for Freedom, $45.

What quality does the YAF have that would cause a group with segregationist ideals to give them a $30 discount for attending their conference?

What views on segregation does the YAF on this campus embrace? Do they hold to the doctrine of white supremacy or do they believe in the freedom of all Americans as is expressed in their title?

University Lecture Series

Golden: 'Only In America'

Harry Golden, whose homespun philosophy is widely known through three best sellers, will be the University Lecture Series speaker Wednesday night.

"Only in America," title of one of his books, also will be the title of Golden's address at FSU. He will speak at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. The address is free and open to the public.

Golden's third book, "Enjoy, Enjoy," published in 1960, has now hit the best seller lists along with "Only in America" and "For 2 Cents Plain," both complications of the author's reflections on many subjects.

A letter to a beloved friend, "Carl Sandburg," was published in 1961, and in 1962 he published a fourth book of essays, "You're Entitled," much of which is based on his travels around the world.

His 16-page newspaper, "The Carolina Israelite" has grown from an initial circulation of 400 to some 50,000 today. Down-to-earth and independent in thought, it is characterized by homespun philosophy and whimsy set forth in tightly filled columns, and is unadorned by photographs.

Since his arrival in Charlotte, N.C., in 1941, Golden has become an institution. He was born in New York on May 6, 1903. His father was a reporter on "The Jewish Daily Forward." Golden attended City College of New York.

His famous Golden Vertical Plan is premised on the thesis that problems of integration arise only when Negroes sit down with whites. Therefore, he proposes that in schools the seats be removed and the pupils of both races stand at desks like those bookkeepers once used. Another proposition is his "borrow-a-child" plan. He reasons that since a Negro accompnaying a white child is seldom barred from any restricted area, the solution is merely for Negroes to borrow a white child when, for example, they wish to attend a theatre.

Such offbeat proposals take courage and might not be accepted from some. That they have been mentioned with approval by many among his Southern compatriots is an indication of where Golden stands in the community.

Golden's life lends itself naturally to dramatization. Therefore, it came as no surprise when ad adaptation of "Only in America" was produced as a play on Broadway in the fall of 1959. An avid theatregoer since his early days on the lower East Side of New York, Golden enjoyed the prospect of being transported back to those times through the magic of the theatre.

Circulation Studied By FSU Researcher

Voyagers since the time of Cortes have been criss-crossing the Gulf of Mexico, but in all these 400 years their observations have produced only a sketchy picture of the circulation pattern of the Gulf waters.

Florida State University oceanographer Takashi Ichiye hopes to fill in this picture using a bathtub size model of the Gulf.

His model is a circular tank, four feet in diameter, on a motor operated turntable, which circulates at five to 10 revolutions per minute to represent the circulation of the earth. Inside is a fiberglass outline of the Gulf into which water flows through that part representing the Yucatan Channel and out through the Florida straits.

To determine the circulation pattern, the jet is supplied a quantity of ink, and as the ink spreads through Gulf waters an overhead camera records in time-lapse sequences its course through the water. Further simulating actual conditions, a blower is rotated around the tank to simulate wind from different directions.

Dr. Ichiye, working at FSU Oceanographic Institute under a grant from the National Science Foundation, has completed the first 200 feet of film. He expects to report the results at a meeting of the American Geophysical Union in Washington April 17-20.

One of the reasons so little has been found from ship observations in the Gulf is that the important circulation patterns are found far beneath the surface, extending from a depth of about 50 feet to as much as 2000 feet. What has been learned about these patterns has come principally in hydrographic observation since 1950.

Ichiye checks his findings occasionally against on-the-spot observations where they are available. But his model Gulf provides a convenient, quick and controlled way of learning facts which would take hundreds of thousands of miles of voyaging to discover -- and without ever sailing out of the harbor.

One of the most interesting things about the Gulf, says Ichiye, is the strong current of wind-driven water which flows from the Caribbean Sea into the Gulf through the Yucatan Channel off the western tip of Cuba.

Placement Interviews Set

Seniors and graduates interested may register with the Placement Office in order to be eligible to interview with the companies listed below. To make an appointment, sign the schedules in Placement Office, Room 08 of Longmire Building and pick up the company brochures and application prior to the interview.

FSU Visited By Bishop

The Rt. Rev. William L. Hargrave, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Church for the Diocese of South Florida, will minister the order of Confirmation at the Chapel of the Resurrection, tomorrow at 5 p.m.

A native of North Carolina, Bishop Hargrave has attended Emory, Atlanta Law School, Virginia Theological Seminary, University of the South, and received his Doctor of Divinity degree from Virginia Theological Seminary.

Bishop Hargrave will be the Celebrant for Holy Communion and will preach the sermon.

Opinion Poll Set For Today

Polling of students concerning their opinions in the possibility of having more than one annual commencement exercise will be on the ballot in tomorrow's elections.

The poll will consist of a choice among three plans: 1. One April graduation per year. 2. One April graduation and 2 ceremonies per year. 3. Three graduations per year.

One April graduation per year is in line with the present plans of graduation. The second plan would mean having the regular commencement in April and two other graduation ceremonies which would be organized and administered through the student government.

The final plan would be to have three graduation exercises each year in April, August and December at the end of each trimester.

Dorlag Discusses Wilder

By ELLEN DEIGNAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"American Playwriting is lagging behind the rest of the nations and many people feel that the American theatre is unsatisfying," Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag quoted Thornton Wilder, author of "The Matchmaker."

Aspects of the play were discussed by Dorlag, director of the FSU theater, at the English Coffee Hour Friday.

"Wilder, having a feeling of dislike for the American theatre does something constructive about it in 'The Matchmaker'," reported Dorlag. "There must be individualism and zestfulness," he added.

Wilder, who reads Strimburg avidly, distrusts realism. Traveling a great deal of the time enabled him to see the foreign theatre where he gained many ideas. A classical tradition may be seen throughout his work, perhaps due to his travels and observations.

Dorlag said that Wilder has a wide understanding of what the theatre can do, and has adapted several European plays to illustrate his theories. "He updated the American theatre from realism to theatrical in theatre," reports Dorlag.

"The Matchmaker" began with the play "A Day Well-Spent," by Oxhankan in 1835. This play was later copied by a German farce entitled "Out for a Good Time," by Nestroid in 1842. Wilder adapted this version in 1938 under the title of "Merchant of Yonkers." He adapted his own play again, resulting in "The Matchmaker," which emphasizes several different characters throughout the piece.

Dorlag was of the opinion that two of the greatest directors have been Max Reinhardt and Dr. Tyrone Guthrie.

"These two displayed the importance of directors," emphasized Dorlag.

"The Matchmaker" is a farce. "Yet," explained Dorlag, "no great comedy was ever written unless there is some amount of farcery."

Dorlag continues with the interpretation of a farce. The audience knows something that the actors do not. A farce must be absurd. Finally, there must be a frank acceptance of the situation, and no one may pretend that the theatrical presentation is unreal or abnormal.

"The American twentieth century hasn't good comedy," states Dorlag, "because unconscious snobbery has developed."

Wilder has discovered that the theatre and farce belong and work together beautifully. Dorlag concluded with a wish for all to see "The Matchmaker" in order to confirm his beliefs.

CCUN Elects

The purpose of the Collegiate Council of the United Nations, stated newly elected president Paul Steel, is "to promote discussion and understanding of the United Nations and to provide a political meeting place for persons of all persuasions."

The next meeting of the CCUN will be April 2 in the Student Lounge of Longmire.

Delta Gamma Award Given Dr. Graham

Dr. Viola Graham, professor emeritus of the FSU Physiology Dept., has been chosen to receive the Order of the Delta Gamma Rose.

This highest award of the fraternity is based upon recognition on a national scale for outstanding contribution to the world in her chosen field through her individual talents and efforts.

During the first 10 years since the award was established, only 10 women have been chosen. Among these are: Ada Louise Notestein, president emeritus of Radcliffe College; Ruth Bryant Rhodes, former ambassador to Denmark; Audrey Auslander, Pulitzer Prize winner; Judge Sara T. Hughes, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women; Eva Marie Saint, actress. This year five others have been chosen, and Dr. Graham is the first in the province which includes Florida, Georgia and Tennessee.

Her contributions have included volunteer research on true blood sugar; equipping the laboratory and training technician in blood chemistry at the Ithaca Memorial Hospital; writing university pageant during World War I, the proceeds of which sent an ambulance to France; establishing physiology as a separate department at FSU, establishing the Viola Smithson Graham Research Memorial Laboratory in honor of her mother.

Other research there has put into service a simple determination of blood protein-bound Iodine. This service is available to all in the vicinity of Tallahassee Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Graham is a member of American Association of University Professors, the Florida Academy of Science, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in addition to those organizations already mentioned. She is also listed in the Who's Who is America, American Men of Science, and the Who's Who in Florida.

ATLANTA -- Former Georgia University Athletic Director Wally Butts has filed a $10 million damage suit against the Saturday Evening Post in Atlanta. The suit seeks damages for an article charging Butts with conspiring with Alabama Coach Paul Bryant to fix the Georgia-Alabama game last Fall. Both have denied the charges.

LOS ANGELES -- Boxer Davey Moore died in a Los Angeles hospital as he entered a four day coma caused by brain damage. Moore passed out in his dressing room Thursday night after losing his featherweight title when knocked out by Sugar Ramos. Doctors say that in falling in the final round, the base of his skull struck the lower ring rope, causing the fatal damage.

In Washington, Democratic Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee has reacted by calling for a federal boxing commission to regulate the sport. A New York congressman, Democratic Representative Hugh Carey, says he'll introduce a bill to outlaw professional boxing.

GUATEMALA CITY -- Guatemala's president has decreed a state of siege, a modified form of martial law. An announcement says the move was taken because Communists and sympathizers have prepared a vast plan of agitation and violence throughout Guatemala, aimed at overthrowing President Ydigoras. His right-wing government is strongly opposed to Cuba's Castro.

There are about eight reasons why the FSU tracksters are likely to be tough this year. They are, starting at 12 o'clock and moving clockwise, Herb Kraft of Atlanta, Franklin Ford of Montgomery, Jim Lankford of Shreveport, Al Williams of Atlanta, Hugh Johnson of Atlanta, Dick Roberts of St. Petersburg, Craig Johnson of Houston, and Tom Houston of Orlando.

Tracksters To Host Roanoke Wednesday

Florida State's track team will be shooting for its first outdoor victory of the season Wednesday afternoon, hosting Roanoke College on the FSU track at 2:30. Some field events will begin at 1:30.

The Seminoles, fairly successful in three early indoor meets, have lost close ones so far to Miami and Furman. Despite that, however, they have won 20 of their last 24 dual meets in recent years.

Roanoke returns eight lettermen from last year's Mason-Dixon and Little Eight Conference champions. Roanoke was to open its season Monday against Furman, and will visit Miami this Saturday following the FSU meet.

Coach Mike Long's Seminoles have been led so far by weightman Al Williams, a 230-pound junior from Atlanta who has set the school record in the shot put. Williams has dominated both the shot and the discus in every meet.

Others who starred in the recent 78-67 loss to Furman were Bill Giswold (first in high jump and hop-step-jump), Franklin Ford (first in broad jump) and Hutch Johnson (won 100-yard dash with wind-assisted 9.5). FSU's 440 relay team of Jerry McDaniel, Al Cato and Hutch and Craig Johnson also set a school record, doing the distance in :41.7.

FSU will enter this Saturday's Florida Relays in Gainesville.

ALL-AMERICAN?

Shortstop Woody Woodward, who Coach Danny Litwhiler thinks will be the sixth All-American from FSU in nine years will be one of the FSU baseballers playing against the Auburn Tigers today.

Woodward led FSU in hitting (3.65) and set a school record for assists last season as a sophomore. Litwhiler says Woodward is "farther along at this stage" than ex-FSU shortstop Dick Howser, American League Rookie of the Year in 1961 with Kansas City.

Results from yesterday's FSU-Tiger game were not available at presstime.

Foul Balls Stay In First Place

By GEORGIANNA SWAN

The Foul Balls, sponsored by the Talem Coffee Lounge, still remain in first place in the Florida State Bowling League at Seminole Lanes.

Both the Foul Balls and the Tempo Beer Kings lost all four of their games, but the standings remain the same. The Beer Kings are three games out of first place and the Spastics are in third place.

Judy Kemp of the Beer Kings had a 190 game, while Jim McEachern of the same squad had a 587 series with a 217 game. Rick Andahl of the Presto Car Wash recorded a 212 game.

The Florida State freshman track team, which earlier swamped the baby Hurricanes of the University of Miami, added another win to its record by defeating Troy State, 73-67, here.

The Seminoles' top scorer was Daryl Guthrie, who captured three first places. These came in the javelin, broad jump, and hop-step-jump.

Tribe Tennis Team To Tangle With UF Today In Gainesville

By JOHN WOOD
Assistant Sports Editor

"Florida has a good team. Although they have lost their No. 1 man, they had a boy return to school his first year of eligibility who should fill in for them," Coach Eddie Cubbon remarked as he leaned beneath one of the tennis court's shade trees.

He continued as he watched his charges throw themselves into a light workout prior to their 6 p.m. departure for Gainesville and the waiting Florida Gator tennis team. "They (UF) beat Georgia Tech by the same score we did, winning both games by a score of 5-4. The only difference is that their No. 2 man lost to Tech's second ranked netter, which Caton had beaten when we played them."

"They are presently undefeated and are picked to down us by 5-4. They have gotten by Rollins, Georgia, Georgia Tech, and Navy. Although their depth is much better than ours, we're equal or better at the Number 1 and Number 2 spots. Our 3 and 4 spots will have to play their very best to win. The experts concede 3 4 and 5 spots in singles play, although we are equal or better at the No. 1 and 2 doubles. When the singles are over, if we have a 3-3 split, we'll have a good chance. Their coach Bill Potter is a fine man and has been their coach for 14 years."

He listed his starting lineup as Lex Wood at the top spot, Don Caton filling the No. 2 position, Paul Bennett at Number 3, and Dave Mower, Don Monk, Ken Alcorn in the 4th, 5th and 6th matches. However, he hastened to add that he may have to shift the last three around because they have been losing. "Alcorn especially has been losing, but he has made great improvement. I hope by moving these last three around, I can help them get settled down and find their best spot."

"Harry Folsom, a new boy who was with the circus, will get his first chance, and play doubles with Alcorn. I won't decide about Monk or the other three until I see them work out in the morning."

One factor which might affect the play of the Seminole netters is the presence at Gainesville of courts made out of Rubico, a brand-new substance to the boys. It is slicker and dustier than the courts which they are using [illegible] will affect their play and they have to adjust to it."

Cubbon shifted position to watch the annoying sun [illegible] follow his movements with a pleased tone in his voice. "We are improving match, and at this [illegible] better team this year than last year. Bennett has made [illegible] provement and is [illegible] He has made [illegible] gress. Caton improves with each match."

Thinking of his star[illegible] broke into a broad [illegible] toward Lex Wood. "[illegible] step toward the [illegible] ly ranked next [illegible] Marty Riesser [illegible] No. 2 ranked collegiate net[illegible] the U.S. That was the fourth [illegible] match he has won."

While on the [illegible] western, Cubbon mentioned [illegible] were Big 10 champs last year. [illegible] only other team we will [illegible] could possibly be [illegible] Wildcats is Miami."

Expanding on the merits [illegible] as a whole, Cubbon [illegible] "this year we have a [illegible] winning points at the [illegible] spots, whereas last year we [illegible] We're just as strong at 2, 3 and [illegible] Wood, at this point, is better than Scarpa was last year. Thursday, the team takes on Valdosta State College at the Men's Gym at 2 p.m. They then will have a breather until Monday and Tuesday when they meet Hope College and Amherst here. Hope won the conference last year, and although FSU beat Amherst 5-4 last year, they have all their boys back.

Unofficial Returns

Balloting Sparse In Class Election

By BEN SHARP

Confusion reigned last night as election returns trickled in and races remained inconclusive. Final returns are due this morning on unofficial tote boards outside Longmire Building.

The only thing certain at press time was that a low of only 3,352 cast ballots compared to 3,900 in the first elections.

A total of 1,292 freshmen; 964 sophomores; and 1,018 juniors cast ballots as rain cut into voting turnouts.

Due to improper marking of the ballots, 78 votes were voided. Incomplete returns showed:

Unofficial Sophomore class results showed: Tommy Garwood, 771; Chuck Beck, 333 for President; Jack Cannon, 427; Gene Stearns, 418; and John Noppenburg, 247 for Vice President; for Secretary, Sandy Clark, 359; Anna Faulds, 379; Ann Orum, 245; and Carol Talbot, 77.

In a surprise move, Lief Erickson dropped out of the race for Sophomore Class Senate. Erickson, Freshman Class President dropped out of school for "health reasons," he told the Flambeau.

Darry Wood, 328; Gary Hurlburt, 273; John Green, 172; and Jack King, 132 were leading in Sophomore senate races.

All other races were unavailable at press time. Results will be posted at Longmire Building.

Harry Golden Speaks Tonight In Westcott

Harry Golden, featured in tonight's University Lecture Series, is widely known for his writings and lectures.

He is the author of several collections of essays, including three best sellers. "Only in America," title of one of his books, will also be the title of Golden's address in Westcott Auditorium at 8:30 p.m.

Golden's third book, "En- Enjoy," published in 1961, has now hit the best seller list along with "Only in America" and "For 2 [illegible] 1962 he published [illegible]," a compilation of author's reflections on many [illegible] which is based on [illegible] the world.

[illegible] spectacled, scarcely [illegible] and-one-half feet [illegible] with a laugh that breaks out [illegible] gust, Golden is [illegible] historian by interest and [illegible].

[illegible] New York on May 6, 1903, [illegible] City, College of New [illegible] his father was a reporter on [illegible] Forward." Gold[illegible], was an avid reader [illegible] enthusiast in the Henry [illegible] movement for agrarian re[illegible].

[illegible] arrival in Charlotte, N.C., [illegible] Golden has become an in[illegible] 16-page newspaper, CAROLINA ISRAELITE, has [illegible] an initial circulation of [illegible] to some 50,000 today. Down-to-[illegible] and independent in thought, it [illegible] formed by homespun philosophy and homily set forth in tight-[illegible] columns and unadorned by [illegible].

His famous Golden Vertical Plan is premised on the thesis that problems of integration arise only when Negroes sit down with whites. Therefore, he proposes that in schools seats be removed and the pupils of both races stand at desks like those bookkeepers once used. Another proposition is his "borrow-a-[illegible]" plan. He reasons that since a Negro accompanying a white child is seldom barred from any restricted area, the solution is merely for Negroes to borrow a white child when, for example, they wish to attend a theater.

Such offbeat proposals take courage and might not be accepted from some. That they have been mentioned with approval by many among his Southern compatriots is an indication of where Golden stands in the community.

Golden's life lends itself naturally to dramatization. Therefore, it came as no surprise when an adaptation of "Only in America" was produced as a play on Broadway in the fall of 1959. An avid theatre-goer since his early days on the lower East Side of New York, Golden enjoyed the prospect of being transported back to those times through the magic of the theatre.

Incorporation Plans Set

By LYNN BISSLAND

Incorporation plans for Florida State University, initiated by President Ken van Assenderp and Men's Vice President Gene Brown, will be brought before Senate today.

The purpose of incorporation is the protection of individuals acting on behalf of Student Government. This would shift liability for these actions from individuals to Student Government as a whole.

"We have been searching for the pros and cons of this incorporation for two months and have found only assets are evident. The statutes and constitution are ready to deal with internal affairs, but have not encompassed as yet actions by the Student Government outside the university," said Brown.

A board of directors has been set up, consisting of the Student Body President, Vice-President, Men's Vice-President and Women's Vice President. It will be a self-perpetuating board, changing hands from year to year.

Van Assenderp stated, "Students should be aware that each year Student Government expands more and more, taking into its realm continually increasing numbers of responsibilities -- not only on the university and state level but on the national level as well."

INSTALLATION

The installation banquet for all Student Government officers will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Suwannee Room.

All winning candidates of the present election and the previous election, old and new dorm officers, presidents of sororities and fraternities and scholarship houses, club presidents and any else who wish, are invited to attend.

President Ken van Assenderp and President-elect Johnny Smith will speak after the dinner.

Tickets are on sale through Thursday at the Main Desk of Longmire. The price is $2.00.

Invitation

FSU's faculty, staff and students have been invited by the Board of County Commissioners of Leon County to visit the local Court house at any time this week to observe the duties, services and functions of the various departments of County Government.

Gov. Farris Bryant has proclaimed this week as County Government Week in Florida.

FSU students and personnel were invited to visit the Courthouse by Tom I. Brown, Jr., chairman of the Leon County Board of County Commissioners.

Limit Committee

The Legislative Investigating Committee headed by Sen. Charley Johns of Starke is under fire by its contemporaries in the legislature. Two former members, Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville and Rep. Woodie Liles of Tampa are planning to back a move to either abolish or harness the Committee's virtually unlimited power.

Sen. Mathews, a possible gubernatorial candidate, commented positively "The Johns Committee should be abolished. There might possibly be a need for an investigating committee, but not of the composition of this one."

Mathews stated for publication what many concerned citizens of the state have thinking for months, that the Investigating has gone to extremes in ferreting out "subversives" from every nook and cranny.

The committee has had a long and varied history of vigilante work.

It has delved into subjects as widely diverse as Communist infiltration, racial strife, homosexuality and subversion in the school system.

In the latter, the committee has been deeply criticized for causing havoc in the educational community.

The committee went into the University of South Florida and used strong armed tactics, spreading insecurity and educational timidity in their wake. They have investigated the University of Florida and used like tactics.

Fear has been the Johns' Committee chief weapon, and it has been used as a lever for attempting to conform the universities to the committee's own beliefs. Now, it is likely that the Committee will be called to task for its tactics.

It would be unrealistic to state that every action the Johns' Committee has ever taken has been bad. Likewise, concluding that the Legislature should take no interest in "subversive" and condone freedom for all groups regardless of their lawlessness.

But allowing the Johns' Committee complete power, and a large financial grant, to control unhealthy elements is as wise as taking the shock treatment for a cold. The treatment is worse than the sickness.

Illegal, immoral activities exist in Florida, just as they do in any other state of the Union. But likewise, professional police forces and qualified detective forces exist to handle investigations in an expert manner. These forces have the training and the experience to handle the same problems the Johns' Committee tackles in a capable and efficient manner.

The dangers in such a committee are many: the benefits are few. The Legislature would be wise to eliminate or greatly regulate the unlimited power of this committee.

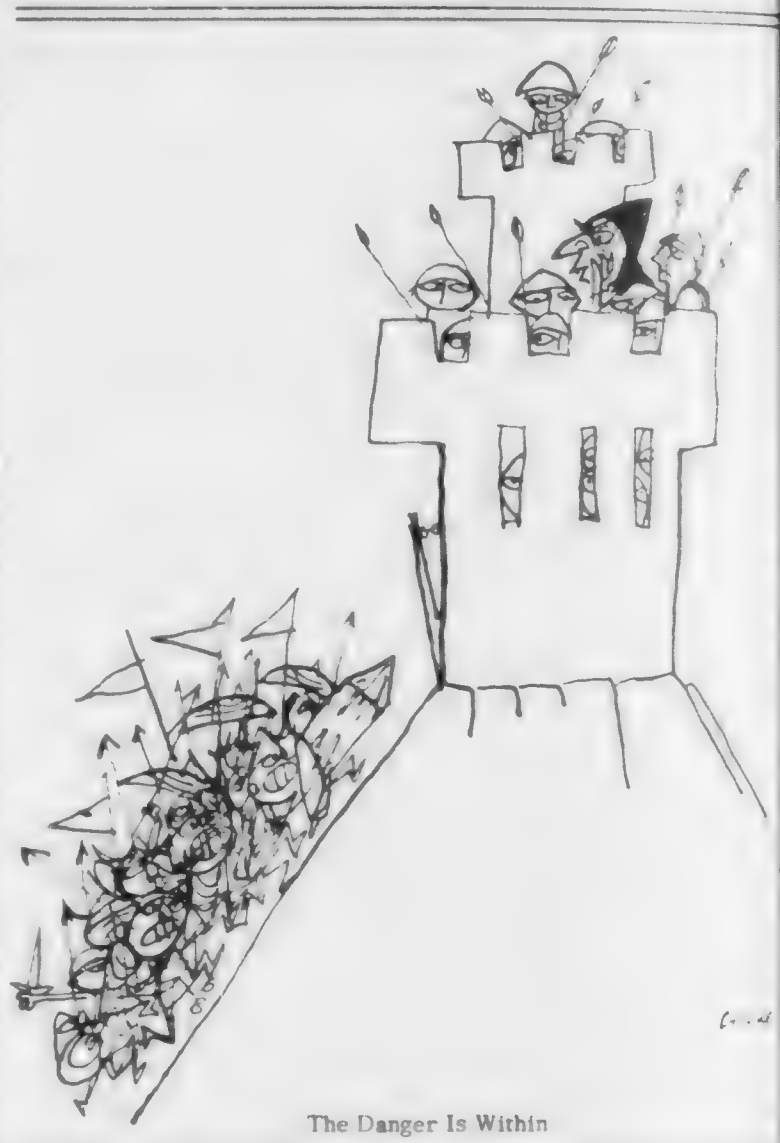
Save Our Saturdays!

The recent furor raised on this campus over the trimester system's success has raised serious doubts as to the individual student's sincerity in his unending pursuit of knowledge.

Those who have cast dispersions upon the struggling scholars (excepting science majors) of our fair intellectual haven have obviously chosen to ignore some of the more overt signs of student curiosity.

Among the more intense emotions that pervade the campus is the tremendous compulsion on the part of most students to go to the library and indulge for several hours in rigorous accumulation of knowledge. The validity of this statement is proven beyond question every time one enters the reference room and sees only bowed heads instead of the inquisitive faces of the social loafers or bored Phi Beta Kappas.



The esteem which non-academic organizations enjoy is a direct reflection of the prevalent intellectual vigor. By the number of such organizations which exist, it is obvious that they do play an important part in the development of a well-rounded FSU graduate. The important thing is the degree of well-roundedness. Everyone should be well-rounded, as it is common knowledge that people who probe deeply into subjects thus specializing themselves are unhappy people, despite what they tell us.

A third oft-ignored sign is the cloistered atmosphere which encompasses all those who trod our hallowed grounds. Any educated visitor cannot help but be impressed with the air of intellectual dignity and integrity which prevails throughout. How dare the cads accuse us of apathy.

Fourth and finally, the fact that students are already working a 10-hour day, five days a week, to compensate for the trimester schedule is constantly overlooked. The true sacrifice isn't fully realized until it is recognized that working men put in only right hours a day. These two extra hours are exemplary of the little extra effort which our university evokes from us, in order that we might thrust our academic heads above other institutions in neighboring states.

Now the sacred day of "catching up" and mental contemplation, Saturday, is imperiled, by the very persons who choose to ignore the aforementioned signs of intellectual sincerity. If students are forced to go to classes on Saturday, it will kill incentive and ultimately coast parties. Other institutions have fallen prey to this false doctrine and subsequently suffered the consequences: notably Vanderbilt, Yale, etc.

Every student should strive to point out the four neglected traits previously mentioned to all visitors and legislators. If one more "straw" study load is placed upon the "camel's back," it will surely break and the university system of the state will become chaotic. Help! SOS! Save Our Saturdays!

The Danger Is Within

Buckley Is Ethno-centric

William F. Buckley Jr.'s attack on Eleanor Roosevelt (National Review, Jan. 29, 1963) is a prime example of the type of conservative reasoning that, if it had wider appeal, would probably produce a generation of super-saturated American ethno-centrics. Mr. Buckley seemingly deplores what he terms Mrs. Roosevelt's "undifferentiated goodness," and her "permissive egalitarianism." He rebukes "Time" for saying that she had a "great mind," and calls her approach to the deplorable state of the human condition as one of "Franciscan naivete." Her principal bequest to mankind, says our conservative, is "to oversimplify problems" and as a result to send the world off on "humanitarian" projects doomed to failure.

Mr. Buckley then emotes some more grismal sentiments as regards the ex-First Lady and ends by singing the praises of the syllogism -- a strange thing for him to be paying respect to.

As far as I could see Mr. Buckley's arguments were not very well backed up, and hardly serve as a particularly bright critique of the subject in question. If Mr. B. intends to attack the liberal position which Mrs. Roosevelt represented, I think he would be more effective if he dealt with issues and not personalities.

Some examples of the "syllogism" that he uses to invalidate the Roosevelt position are: since she favored negotiation with Russia, that implies we have "something" to yield. I must admit that Buckley's logic escapes me. Russia was a major world power in the 30's when we recognized it, and since then has had a major part in all subsequent history. Since the US negotiates with all major and minor powers, it would be foolish to and indeed impossible, not to do the same with the Soviet Union. The only thing that I can think of that we have to "yield" is our conservative "holier than thou" attitude.

As to oversimplifing the position, Mr. Buckley commits the same error of which he accuses Mrs. Roosevelt. Poverty in Latin America is solely the result of internal conditions in that area -- he ignores any and all evidences of foreign exploitation.

In one sentence, 56 words, he disposes with the housing problem -- very astute. The only pleasure that I received from reading Buckley's article was detecting the odor of sour grapes -- a sweet [illegible] servative surround[illegible].

FSU Professor Starts Model Turkish School

An FSU science educator is helping set up a model science high school in Turkey on a $325,000 grant from the Ford Foundation announced by the University today.

The science high school, or lise, is part of a program of upgrading science education in Turkey and providing the scientists and technicians needed for economic development.

Dr. J. Stanley Marshall, head of the Science Education Dept. of FSU, will return to the United States April 10 after selecting eight Turkish scientists who will help build a curriculum and after overseeing the selection of 30 teachers for the high school, which will open in September, 1964.

The eight scientists will come to this country during the summer of 1963 to study recent developments in science curriculum. Most of their time will be spent on the FSU campus.

The scientists and teachers will spend the summer of 1964 on the FSU campus, working on curriculum development before start of the school during the fall of 1964.

Marshall said the science lise, for grades nine through 11, will be set up in Ankara for 300 of the brightest secondary students in Turkey. The students will be selected by competitive examination throughout Turkey and the ninth grade will open in 1964, the 10th and 11th in subsequent years.

Marshall has been in Turkey since mid-February on the FSU-Turkey Project of the Ford Foundation. The Ford contract, which is for the period through Aug. 31, 1964, provides for the employment of additional faculty and graduate assistants in the FSU Science Education Dept. The department will continue a program in which it is working with Florida teachers including a "saturation" program in junior high school science teaching in Broward County.

After Marshall returns to Tallahassee in April, Dr. Ernest Burkman, assistant professor of science education, will spend six weeks in Turkey winding up the teacher-selection phase of the program.

On Sept. 1 Marshall will return to Turkey with the eight scientists and will begin the operation of a series of in-service institutes during the 1963-64 school year for the 30 teachers, all selected from the Turkish school system after competitive examinations.

During both the 1963 and 1964 summer sessions at FSU, various FSU faculty members will be brought in to the project to work with the visiting scientists and educators. Dr. Guenter Schwarz, professor of physics, and Dr. Eugene Nichols, head of the Math Education Dept. will work in the program during both summers.

In addition, four outstanding American high school science and math teachers will be employed by FSU to work in the program. FSU has agreed to direct the project through the summer of 1966, at which time the lise will have been in operation for two years.

A second phase of the operation consists of extending curriculum development and teacher training to other lises throughout Turkey. It is hoped that experience gained from the Ankara project can be used in upgrading science education generally in Turkey.

The lise for outstanding students Marshall is helping to start will be the first coeducational boarding school in the country. It will be located adjacent to the campus of Middle East Technical University, an institution founded in 1956 which presently has a student body of 1100 but expects to have 15000 by 1970.

Kemal Kurdas, formerly minister of finance in the Turkish cabinet, is president of the university and is one of the strongest supporters of the lise project. In the planning stage for two years, the project is under the general supervision of a seven-man committee which includes scientists from this university and the University of Ankara. Dr. Erdal Inonu, a theoretical physicist who is son of the Turkish prime minister, is one of the committee members.

Limeliters Praised

CRITIQUE By RON SPAULDING

Within a few minutes the crowd had cleared out of the auditorium, and there remained three men behind the curtain, surrounded by a handful of autograph seekers and inquisitive students. There was a tense feeling in the air. A few minutes before, the voices of these men had filled every corner of that now empty auditorium. The chill of anticipation had penetrated every spine. For a moment there had almost been a revival of spirit, long forgotten by young people--the spirit of brotherhood.

There are no few words which can describe the impact left by the Limeliters. They held the audience, small as it was, in their hands, as one would a baby, and fed it the purest concentration of humor, song, and sincerity. The audience responded with shouts of joy and cries for "more." But the show was over, and the Limeliters were scheduled for a quick flight out of Tallahassee to another destination where they might again bring their and story and their song.

In the few minutes that remained of their stay, they were showered by a host of praise, and even more trivial questions. Lou Gottlieb had been caught by a group of young humorists who were trying to match wits with one of the undisputed leaders in this intellectual field. He looked tired. This had been the same story since the beginning of his tour, and yet he maintained a personal air that made his small audience feel much more at ease. Alex Hassilev spoke softly while he strummed a new classical guitar, praising some features of it and criticizing others--making conversation. And in another corner of the dressing room, Glenn Yarbrough told of plans to release a new record, with hopes of better sales than they have experienced in the past.

And then the men were gone. The auditorium was empty, but the echo of their voices could still be heard by the intent listener. They left something in Tallahassee. Something for everybody--something called goodwill. And every now and then each person who attended the performance will hear the voices of these three men ring in his ears. It was something to remember.

Script Awards To Be Given

The Society of Cinematologists, established in 1962 by the Richard and Hinda Rosenthan Foundation, announces that entries for the 1963 Competition for Scriptwriting and Film Production must be submitted to professor Robert Gessner by April 1, 1963.

An award of $1,000 will be given for the most original shooting script, intended for feature-length, dramatic production, written by an American under 25 years of age.

Scripts will be judged on their originality and total cinematic effectiveness. An award of $1,000 will be given, also, to the author of the most original production on 16 or 35 mm film directed by an American under 25 years of age. The production award is to be made to the individual most responsible for the film.

Entries must be accompanied by a notarized statement testifying to the age of the entrant, his citizenship, his authorship of the work submitted, and the copyright authority, if any.

There must be three typewritten copies of scripts and one print of each production, insured by the entrant. The Society will try to return scripts, films and video tapes, but cannot guarantee this.

Entries should be sent to Professor Robert Gessner, 13 Kirkland Street, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts.

Australian Studies Rattlesnake Sperm

An Australian biologist whose work heretofore has been on mammals has begun experiments at FSU in which he is studying the structure of sperm and the possible storage sites of sperm in rattlesnakes.

Dr. C. R. Austin, who is presently stationed in Cambridge, Eng., is using an electron microscope, which is capable of magnifying 100,000 times, for his studies in Florida during which a variety of amphibians and snakes will be used.

The scientist, who is with the External Scientific Staff of the Medical Research Council of Great Britain, has begun three months of work here as a visiting consultant in the Institute for Space Biosciences at FSU.

His first work here is with diamondback rattlers, five of which have been brought in from a farm in Grady County, Georgia. One reason for his interest in snakes, said Austin, is the long period of storage of sperm in female reptiles, leading to an interest in the mechanism of storage and the possible storage sites.

His work previously has been with rats, mice, guinea pigs, rabbits and other laboratory animals.

Austin is the author of a book, "The Mammalian Egg," published in 1961, and of numerous scientific articles, principally the result of research with mammals. He also is the editor of the "Journal of Reproduction and Fertility."

He was invited to come to FSU after serving with Dr. Charles Metz, a zoologist with the FSU Institute for Space Biosciences, on the staff of a training program last summer at Woods Hole, Mass.

"Playboy" Finds Ideal Joe College

Joe College, 1963, is 20.6 years old, has 12 or of 100 chances of being married, spent $68 for his back-to campus wardrobe, has a good chance of having the use of a car, is well-groomed, and has much of the equipment for the "good life."

This and other information was found in the "Male College Student Survey" conducted for the Market Research Dept. of "Playboy" magazine. Circulating a questionnaire among more than 10,000 male students at major colleges and universities, information was gathered to form a profile of the American college man.

The information helped to answer these important questions: Just who is the college student and what are his characteristics? Is his image as found in the non-student population correct? The results found proved to be very interesting.

The survey shows that 11.8 per cent of today's undergraduates pay for their entire expenses, while 17.2 per cent do not contribute to their college support. 62.4 per cent live on campus, 22.4 per cent off campus but not with their families, and 15.2 per cent live off campus with their families. 29.3 belong to social fraternities.

Concerning dependence on automobiles, the survey showed that 36.7 per cent have their own cars, while 10.7 per cent have full-time use of one.

When asked whether they drank alcoholic beverages, 66.8 per cent responded affirmatively. In addition, 60.5 per cent drink beer, 25.3 per cent wine, and 50 per cent liquor.

Further results showed that 50.4 per cent of all male college students smoked: 41.8 per cent cigarettes, 11.9 per cent cigars, and 14.8 per cent pipes. Among cigarette smokers, filter types were the favorite (66.8 per cent), followed by regulars and king-size.

The high use of personal grooming aids shows the college man of today to be far from the "beatnik" impression some have. 83.6 per cent use after-shave lotions; 91.3 per cent use deodorants; 72.8 per cent, shampoo; 69.3 per cent, hair dressing; 41.4 per cent, cologne; and 38.1 per cent, powder or talc.

The average expense for a back-to-campus wardrobe was $68, but 32 per cent spent over $100, while 8.7 per cent spent over $200. The typical college man's wardrobe consists of 2.6 suits, 2 sports jackets, 6.5 pairs of slacks, 3.8 pairs of shoes, 6.2 dress shirts, 10 sport shirts, 1.1 topcoats or overcoats, 1.4 other winter coats, .9 raincoats, .7 dress hats, 4.7 sweaters, 8.3 ties, 2.7 belts, 14.6 pairs of socks, 10 undershirts, and 10.5 pairs of undershirts.

As to other equipment, the survey showed that 49 per cent own record players, 16.9 per cent, tape recorders; 63 per cent, table model radios; 16.5 per cent, television sets; 53 per cent, transistor or portable radios; 59.3 per cent, typewriters; wrist watches, 89 per cent; and 81.6 per cent. fountain pens.

Irish Awarded Research Grant

Dr. Marian Irish, head of the department of government at FSU, has been awarded a Senior Research Award in American Governmental Affairs by the Social Science Research Council.

Dr. Irish, who has been a member of the faculty for 30 years, has asked to be relieved of administrative duties at the end of this year so that she will be more free to pursue her research.

From July 1 through Dec. 31, she will be in Washington as Guest Scholar at the Center for Advanced Study of The Brookings Institution. She will return to teaching and research at FSU in the second trimester.

Social Science Research Council, with headquarters in New York, makes three or four awards annually to "individuals who have demonstrated high competence in research and who, through their published works, have made significant contributions to the understanding of American governmental affairs."

Dr. Irish holds a master's degree in politics and English from Bryn Mawr and she received her doctor's degree from Yale University. A member of the FSU faculty since 1933, she is the author of "The Politics of American Democracy" with Dr. James W. Prothro, and of a high school textbook, "The People Govern," with Laurence Paquin. She is editor of "Continuing Crisis in American Politics," a book containing the eight lectures in government given on the FSU campus last year. This has just been published by Prentice-Hall.

Seminoles Split In Golf Matches

Led by Dave Philo's pair of 68s, the Florida State golf team was edged by Purdue, 10 1/2-7 1/2, and then slapped Michigan State, 13 1/2-1 1/2, Monday, in matches at the Capital City Country Club.

The Seminoles now have a 7-3 record, and faced Auburn, Purdue and MSU in a match yesterday afternoon. Results were not available at presstime.

Philo recorded his first 68 against Purdue as he defeated Charles Hellman, but then Purdue's Mike Martin, with a 73, downed FSU's Roger Kennedy, who recorded a 76.

The Seminoles obtained their second win on the efforts of Mark Blair, who bettered Purdue's Bill Templin's 78 by six strokes. However, for the rest of the match, it was Purdue's in front, as Terry Winter's 74 topped FSU's David Lee, who had a 77; as Bob O'Block [illegible] beat Johnny Parsons by one stroke; and as Dick Bullock was three strokes better than FSU's Roy Beall (81).

Philo defeated MSU's Phil Marston, who shot an 84. Then Kennedy's 76 bettered John Hunter's 84, while Blair's 72 was six strokes lower than MSU's Doug Schwartz, with a 78.

Lee, with a 77, followed this up by outstroking Ron Hartman (78 three), while Parsons recorded the same score to defeat Dennis MacDonnel. FSU's Beall closed out the match with an 81, which topped Dick Marr's 83.

Baseballers Gain 3rd Auburn Win

Florida State's All-American catcher Buddy Teagle hit a two-run triple to left field in the sixth inning to push the Seminole baseball team past the Auburn Tigers, 5-1, Monday.

Unlike last year when the Tribesmen lost four straight to the Tigers, despite going to the College World Series, this was the third straight triumph over Auburn.

Al Beccaccio also garnered his third straight win of the season, as the Seminoles reached a 5-2 season mark.

Auburn, which is 2-3 overall and 2-0 in the Southeastern Conference, had a return match with FSU Tuesday afternoon in Alabama, but results were not available at presstime.

Throughout the first five innings, the 6-2 Beccaccio held the Tigers hitless, but he ran aground when catcher Bill Turberville hit a single to right.

At the end of the game, the Tigers had outhit the Seminoles, 4-3, but FSU had the benefit of two runs scored on two errors and two walks.

The losing pitcher was sophomore Jimmy Crysel, who gave up only three hits, struck out four, and walked five in seven innings.

FSU hitter Jim Reed walked by Crysel, was advanced to third by Mike Augustine's and first baseman Larry Dempsey's singles and then he scored on a sacrifice fly by Gary Nichols.

However, the Seminoles couldn't get another hit off Crysel until the sixth, when Teagle hit his triple to score Nichols and Dink Haire.

The Tigers gained slight revenge by spoiling Beccaccio's shutout in the eighth inning, when pinch-hitter Tandy Geralds singled to left. Then Jimmy Barfield drove in the Tigers only run, as he failed in an attempt to turn his hit into a triple.

Besides Teagles' two hits, FSU's other hits came off the bat of Mike Augustine, while three of Auburn's hits were put in by pinch-hitters.

In other baseball action, Collegiate Baseball ranked the Seminoles third in the nation, ahead of the University of Florida in fourth and Oregon State in fifth place.

The first two positions went to the University of Michigan and the University of Missouri respectively.

Tribe Tracksters To Face Roanoke

By JOHN WOOD
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's track team will shoot for its first outdoor victory of the season this afternoon when Roanoke College of Salem, Virginia, comes to town for a 2:30 appointment. Some field events will get under way at 1:00.

The tracksters have lost close ones so far to Miami and to Furman, but have been fairly successful otherwise in three early indoor meets. They have won 20 of their last 24 dual meets in recent years.

Roanoke, last year's Mason-Dixon and Little Eight Conference champions, returns eight lettermen from last year's group. They opened their season only Monday against Furman, whom FSU fell to 78-67, and will visit Miami Saturday to test the Hurricane Harriers.

Outstanding performers for Track Coach Mike Long's Seminoles in their loss to Furman were Bill Gis[illegible] step-jump), Franklin Ford (first in broad jump) and Hutch Johnson (won the 100 yard dash with a wind assisted 9.5).

FSU's 440 relay team of Jerry McDaniel, Al Cato and Hutch and Craig Johnson also set a school record, making the complete circuit of the track in :41.7.

FSU will enter this Saturday's Florida Relays in Gainesville.

Nugent Attends Coaching Clinic

Florida State's lineup of coaches for its June 13-15 10th annual Coaching Clinic has been completed.

Four additional lecturers have been announced. The coaches are Norm Van Brocklin of the Minnesota Vikings professional football team, Coach Ara Parseghian of Northwestern, Assistant Coach Walt Kichefski of the University of Miami, [illegible] Wright Fairmore of the Valdosta (Ga.) High School.

Coaches previously announced were Frank Boyles of Arkansas and Tom Nugent of Maryland, in addition to basketball coach John Ryder of Georgia Tech.

NETTERS BATTLE FLORIDA GATORS

The Florida State varsity and freshman tennis teams battled the University of Florida netters yesterday in Gainesville in their first match of the year, but results were not available at presstime.

An earlier match, slated March 9, was rained out.

Miller Enters Gymnast Meet

[illegible] Miller, senior from Long Beach, Calif., will represent FSU in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) gymnastics championships at the University of Pittsburgh Friday and Saturday.

Miller will compete in the all-around, free exercise, flying rings, horizontal bar and parallel bars events. Last year, he finished 15th in the nation in free ex.

Accompanying Miller will be Dr. Hartley Price, professor of physical education, who will serve as chairman of the Research and Professional Liason Committee and the Honor Coaches Award Committee.

Three Chosen To Lead Classes In Elections

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Reporter

Tom Haney, Mike Wegelius and Tom Garwood were chosen in the final count to lead the Senior, Junior and Sophomore Classes respectively.

There were a total of 3,367 students voting in the election Tuesday, including 10 absentee and two write-ballots. The total of 1018 seniors voting included juniors voting for senior positions and seniors voting for court positions. A total of 1,292 freshmen and 964 sophomores voted for sophomores and junior positions, respectively.

Four hand counts were made and 79 ballots were declared void.

Tom Haney, running unopposed, received 491 votes for President of the Senior Class. Joe Rodgers (233) and Bob Stripling (190) defeating Don Thigpen (166) will be in the run off for Senior Class Vice President.

Cathy Mosley (319) defeated Trish Bassett (227) for Senior Class Secretary, and Susan Cawthon (393) defeated Sara-Lee Mackin (158) for Senior Class Treasurer. Anne DeHoff (299) was voted in as Senior Class social chairman over Ley Hulsey (186).

Jan Brantley (418) defeated Mickie Neumann (340) for Junior Class Secretary and Marilyn Johnson (426) defeated Linda Wilson (302) for Junior Class Treasurer. Carol Peters (367) is the apparent winner over Dot Hay (359) but a hand count will be necessary.

The voting on the Run Off candidates will be Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the same polls as Tuesday.

Ruth Doyle (334) and Carole Renfroe (380) defeated Sharon Dunn (309) and Jundy O'Connell (231).

Senate Passes Budget; JC's Receive Funds

Student Senate yesterday passed next year's Student Activities Budget, totalling $114,414, and $334,712 was allocated for the University Activities Budget.

Women's Vice President Jeanie Ferlita announced that Dean R. R. Oglesby has made provisions for $5 per year to be given to Junior Counselors for floor parties given in the dorms. These parties have previously been paid for out of the individual J.C.'s pockets. Supplies will also be furnished for the J.C.'s in the future.

Krishna Menon, president of the International Student Club, congratulated and thanked the Student Senate for its help during the International Week. Menon emphasized the opportunity the students have in influencing and guiding the international students in their attitudes and opinions about the U.S. He said that it is a shame that there is "so much misunderstanding rather than understanding" between the international students and American students.

Menon placed the responsibility for the growth of democracy and freedom on the shoulders of the students. Menon said a "stay-at-home Peace Corps" was needed and suggested an international house where students from the U.S. and other countries could live together.

This was the last official meeting of the present senate. President of the Senate Johnny Smith turned the chair over to newly elected Julian Proctor. Smith briefly complimented the present Senate, and said that he felt that the Senate had worked wisely and had been an active group.

Ken van Assenderp spoke briefly on the work being done on the incorporation of Student Government.

At only one time before this American tour have the Kendra left their subcontinent to perform. In 1961, on invitation from the Soviet Government, the group toured Moscow and several other Russian cities, to resounding popular and critical acclaim.

Kala Kendra began in 1952 by arranging public festivals of music and dance, with such success that the directorate had soon turned its attention to the major task of reviving the great Kathak arts. Within the year, a College of Music and Dance had been founded, and great teachers and performers in the traditional heirarchy were attracted.

The "Kathak" tradition is derived from the religious canons of the arts (the Shastras), and it is one of the purely classical styles which were created in Heaven by the gods and were already codified and formulated in the millenia "before history."

Sanskrit held the Brahman civilization together as the scholarly language of India, and preserved the continuity of the arts through the centuries.

A group of devout story-tellers (Kathaka) developed, who recited the ancient legends, religious ethics and beliefs and customs to the people. These Kathaka derived a highly developed art-form, as they were not only reciters, but rhapsodists and singers, who upon reaching a state of religious ecstasy, danced. Dance has always been the basic art in religious devotion in India and has been inseparable from the accompanying arts of music, poetry and drama. These added together constitute not only the Theatre of India, but the Kathak.

Kathak underwent various changes due to the influence of emperor-

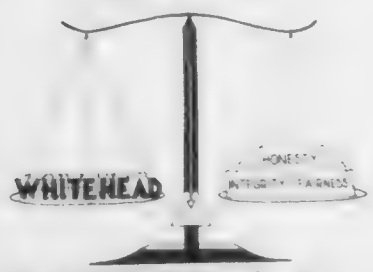
...nally 21 girls had tried out for positions on the synchronized swimming group. Of these, 12 were invited to return for final eliminations, and four were tapped for membership.

Tryouts are held each trimester, when the girls perform before a board of seven judges who rate on a 10 point scale, the top and bottom scores being struck from the sheets. The girls must present the four basic forms in water ballet: the ballet leg, porpoise, back dolphin and kip. The breast stroke, front crawl and back crawl are performed to music before the judges as well.



At the end of February the Tarpons received an invitation to perform before the executives of the Ford Motor Company at the Banyan Tree Club, in Daytona Beach.

Miss Glynise Smith, sponsor of the Tarpons Club, and Pat Anderson, incoming president of the Tarpons will be attending the Midwestern Festival of International Academy of Aquatic Arts, to be held in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, later in May.

Smith will serve as a judge and critic for the featured performances and competition, while Anderson will have her first opportunity to perform before the Midwestern Conference judges during the festival.

patrons, and thus the costume of dance has evolved to the styles used today.

As court entertainment, Kathak dance took prevalent court dress such as the extended skirt, which revealed the movement of the feet but accentuated rapid turns made by the dancers.

Today there are two main types of costume: classical, suited to the traditional Hindu Kathak, and the Mughal type, being often white and belted with a colored sash...with a knee-length skirt-coat for the men and a longer skirt for the women.

Ankle bells appear in both costumes as an indispensable part of the music as well as ancient classical tradition. Proof of a Kathak dancer's virtuosity is in his control of the hundreds of bells found in each anklet...down to the sound of a single bell..or silence.

The program for tonight's performance will include: "Jashn-I-Bahar," a poem honoring the rulers before the entrance of the dancers by the musicians and singers. "Kathak Fantasy," a fantasy in pure rhythm, with accent being placed on the feet and the ankle-bells; "Rumal," the handkerchief dance, is a folk dance in which the dancers create kaleidoscopic patterns with colorful handkerchiefs; "Taj Mahal," is the story of the Taj, in romantic Indian traditional legend; "Kaliya Daman," or the serpent vanquished, represents a story from te life of Krishna, most beloved of Hindu Gods, symbolizing the conquest of good over evil.

"Talmal," in which two Gods of the Elements, Fire and Water, meet in Paradise and have a contest in dance; "Dance of Femininity," attempts to delineate the essence of femininity, mirroring the lyricism of Kathak style; "Holi," the Carnival of Colors, ushers in Spring and is a re-enactment of Krishna's dalliance and play with the milkmaids of his pastoral Heaven; "Nupur," or the Ankle Bells, features the part played by these bells in the rendezvous of a girl and boy at the village well; "Kathak-Ki-Kahani," is a dance-history of Kathak from earliest times to the present... highlighting each period; when the dance served as pantomime, court dance, and today's Kathak.

The members of the Bharatiya Kala Kendra were guests at a reception held by the Indian Student Association last night in Longmire Lounge.

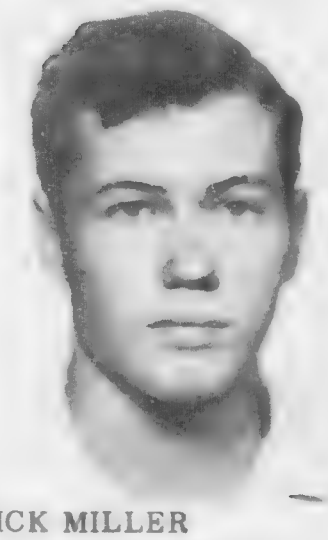
5 Nominated By Flambeau

Athletes from the five other sports have been nominated for Athlete of the Year, which is chosen annually by the Florida Flambeau.

Announced yesterday were nominees from football (Eddie Feely), basketball (Charlie Long), and baseball (Buddy Teagle). Today's issue will salute the four other varsity sports plus gymnastics, which still retains athletic significance.

The nominees are chosen for several reasons, including skill in their respective sports, contributions to their sports and to the university, leadership, teamwork, and other intangibles.

In track, junior Al Williams, a 230-pound weightman from Atlanta, has been the outstanding athlete. The junior has set a new school record in the shot put, as he has dominated both the shot and discus events in every meet.



In swimming, Coach Bim Stults' most successful tanker was sophomore Neal Allen of West Palm Beach. The 20-year-old, 163-pounder remained undefeated by an opponent throughout the dual meet competition.

In golf, senior Dave Philo has outshone other Seminole duffers, not having lost a dual match in 12 starts. The Number 1 FSU golfer has twice scored 68's in this typical week of competition.

In tennis, Florida State salutes South African Lex Wood as the best tennis player in Seminole history. Twice Wood has knocked off nationally-ranked competition, including Number 2 collegiate Marty Riessen. He has lost only one match this season.

In the now non-varsity gymnastics, senior Rick Miller is easily the tops. Miller has been practically a one-man show this season. Indeed, in a Louisiana meet, FSU finished third solely on the efforts of Miller.

Netters Hand FSU First Triumph Over Alligators

By JOHN WOOD
Ass't. Sports Editor

"It was such an outstanding match that when the match was over, the Florida crowd stood up and applauded Wood for five minutes," is the way Coach Ed Cubbon described yesterday's defeat of the previously undefeated Florida Gator tennis squad, which his charges won 6-3.

The recipient of the plaudits from the partisan Gator Group was one Lex Wood, who keyed the victory by besting the cream of the UF crop, Bill Tym, 6-4, 12-10. Coach Cubbon beamed: "Wood's match with Tym was perhaps as good a match as they will see in Florida all year."

Cubbon continued, "The boys were in a real good frame of mind all the way down. Caton (Don, the number two netter) and Bennett (Paul, the number three player) played magnificient tennis and beat their men in straight sets. They are both defeated so far this year."

Bennett, a sophomore, has been of the pleasing surprises so year. "He is almost a player than he was last year freshman."

SINGLES—Lex Wood, FSU, defeated Bill Tym, 6-4, 12-10. Don Caton, FSU, defeated Jerry Pfeiffer, 6-2, 6-2. Paul Bennett, FSU, defeated Fred Shasa, 6-7, 6-4. Ron Robboulin, Fla., defeated Dave Mower, 6-2, 6-2. Don Monk, FSU, defeated Bob Agnew, 7-5, 6-4, 6-3. Don Lo man, Fla., defeated Ken Alcorn, 8-6, 6-3.

DOUBLES — Wood and Bennett, FSU, defeated Tym and Pfeiffer, 7-5, 8-6. Caton and Monk, FSU, defeated Shasa and Wosman, 6-4, 6-4. Robboulin and Bobby Dodd, Fla., defeated Alcorn and Harry Folsom, 6-3, 6-1.

UF Frosh Fall For First Time

In their first match of the year under a new coach the Freshman tennis team outdid the varsity in bombing a Baby Gator team from the University of Florida, 7-2.

This marked the first time that a Seminole freshman tennis squad has ever beaten Florida's Frosh. The new coach, Jim Baker, who was the captain and number one netter at Penn State last year, had this to say about the team overall: "We have a real good freshman team. Matter of fact, we could use a couple of them right now on the varsity, if they were eligible. They have a lot of experience behind them for being freshmen. They are the best freshman team we have ever

The team is composed Steve Guse, from Little R kansas; no. 2 Steve Wellesley, Cameron from Clearwater who occupies spot number Jamieson, no. 4, is from Beach; Mike Galow is no. 5 player, while no. is Dan Vephula of Bangko land.

Florida's no. 1 Frosh net Gardiner, by Guse, 6-4, 6-2, in the ing match of the event. The nole number one doubles and Hartt also partners, 6-4, 6-2.

Duffers Defeat Three

Getting a clean sweep in four matches the FSU golfers defeated Purdue, Michigan State, and Auburn Tuesday. Purdue fell, 12-6, while MSU was dropped 15-0. Auburn was beaten, 26-1.

Leading the Seminoles was Johnny Parsons, who shot three 67's, as the Tribe racked up their ninth win against three setbacks.

It carries a boatload.

That's our Volkswagen Station Wagon, dressed up in ship's clothing.

Inside, it's big enough to swallow up a whole sailboat. Yet you can park it in about the same space as a VW Sedan.

When it isn't carrying boats, the wagon takes on 8 people, luggage and all.

Or practically a ton of anything else.

Just to give you an idea, it can handle a piano (with player) or an open bridge table (with 4 players).

There's a gaping 4-foot door on the side to load things into, and a sunroof on top to stick things out of.

There's also some sweet satisfaction in having a wagon that's so cheap to run.

You can expect 24 miles to the gallon, for example. 35,000 miles on a set of tires. And an air-cooled engine that never needs water or anti-freeze.

If you already own a VW Station Wagon, don't let people kid you about its shape.

Just carry on.

COP REFERENDUM

Counting of the Referendum ballots on Class Officers has not yet begun, announced Secretary of Elections Ron Jones today.

Because of the complexity of Tuesday's ballots and the large number of persons seeking office, members of the Elections Bureau were forced to work until 4:30 a.m. Wednesday morning. Wednesday afternoon and Thursday had to be spent in handcounts, certifying correct results from Tuesday's race and preparing for Friday's election.

The Referendum votes will be counted at the earliest possible date, commented Jones, who hopes to have the results for Monday.

Student Government Banquet Set For Suwanee Room

The major Student Government officers will be inaugurated at the President's Inaugural Banquet to be held p.m. next Tuesday in the Suwannee Room.

Honor Court Chief Justice Ross McVoy will install the recently elected president, vice president, men's and women's vice presidents, secretary of the Senate, Honor Court Chief Justice, Chairman of the Judiciary, Chairman of the Traffic Court, Chairman of the Honor Court Class Officers, and Senators.

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, Executive Director of the Board of Control, will be the evening's main speaker. Giving his inaugural address will be President-elect Johnny Smith. President Blackwell and other members of the administration are included among the guests.

Also among the activities planned is the conferring of certificates of appreciation and the presentation of the Outstanding Senator Award.

Tickets are on sale today and Monday from 3 to 5 p.m. on the main floor of Longmire. The cost is $2. All interested students are invited to attend.

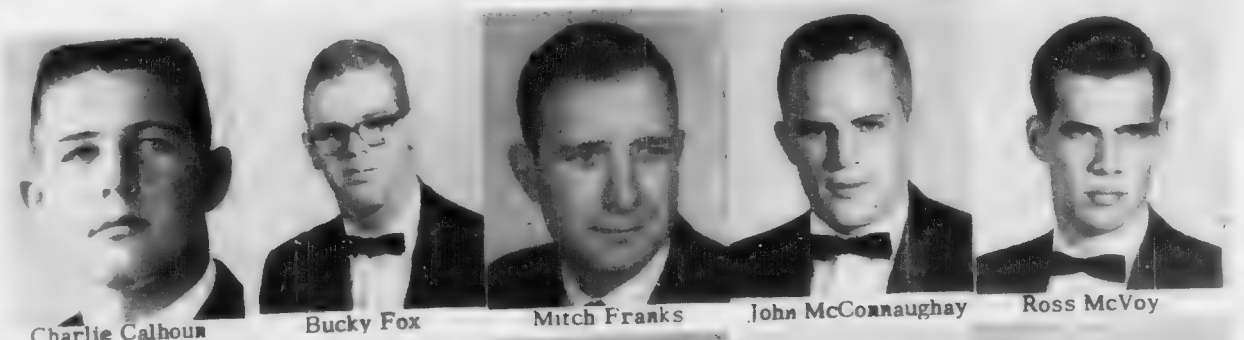
GE Requirements

Students planning to graduate in August or December of 1963 should have general education requirements checked immediately in the Registrar's Office, 102-B Westcott, Dr. Murray Kenna announced.

Women's Offices

Freshmen, Sophomore or Junior women students interested in running for president of an upperclass hall next year may contact the president of the dormitory in which they are interested to be considered for the slate.

Elections will take place in freshman dorms all day April 9, while upperclassmen will elect hall presidents at the house meeting Wednesday.



Secretary Needed

Anyone intersted in applying for the position of Secretary of Judiciary should see Betsy Coote on Monday and Tuesday from 4 to 5 p.m. in room 404 of Longmire. Applicants should have experience in typing and shorthand.

NAVAL UNIT HERE

The Naval Aviator Procurement Team from Jacksonville, headed by Lt. U.W. King, will be here through Friday to interview and counsel qualified men who wish to earn an officer's commission and fly with the fleet.

ODK Honorary Taps 11

Charlie Calhoun, Bucky Fox, Mitch Franks, John McConnaughay, Ross McVoy

George Powell, Andy Rogers, Richard Root, Frank Ryll, Nat Smith

Omicron Delta Kappa, national men's leadership honorary of FSU, has tapped ten undergraduate men students and one member of the faculty for membership.

Dr. James P. Jones, assistant professor of history, was the faculty member tapped in the traditional ceremony in front of Westcott yesterday. Jones received the Coyle E. Moore Jr. Memorial Foundation award last June for outstanding excellence in teaching.

Students selected for membership in ODK and some of their activities are: Charlie Calhoun -- varsity football, Gold Key and fraternity officer; Bucky Fox --president of Smith Hall, 3.1 grade average and Gold Key; Mitch Franks -- president of fraternity, vice president of Young Democrats and 3.0 grade average.

Students Want More Graduations

A college education is an arduous struggle. Time, money, and effort is required to traverse the grind between the first trimester of the Freshman year and the final round of the Senior year. Many are lost in the process.

The zenith of this climb is reached on one night, as pomp and circumstance flow through the darkened sky, platitudes are propounded, and black academic gowns drape eager students. Sentimentally expectant graduates reflect thoughtfully, parents strut, and brothers and sisters gaze reverently at newly crowned heroes.

Graduation is not the purpose of college, but at least temporarily the accomplishment of a college degree can be emotionally savored.

The Trimester System has cut this out for anyone savethose who timed their graduation for April two out of three classes presently will shuffle out of FSU, unheralded and unsung.

They can come back next year, but by that time the thrill of graduation will be dulled by the realities of the outside world. Few will likely return.

Student Government proposed to remedy this. In a unified effort, the Student Body President, the Cabinet, and Student Senate have taken action to support a plan of providing three graduation ceremonies.

Student Government has even gone to the extent of volunteering to support financially at least two of these ceremonies, August and December, if the administration will not.

An opinion poll was submitted to the Student Body Tuesday and Bill Sheppard, Secretary of Welfare, states that the vote was approximately 4-1 in favor of three ceremonies, run by either the administration or Student Government.

If the University will not provide a ceremony for all of its graduates, it is good that Student Governm supporting the wishe the student body an unteering to stage meaningful ceremo committee to handl affair is already wo and will be ready t vide a graduation in A if the University refus do so.

The Council of D which meets April 27, only hurdle betwee students and addi graduation ceremo The Council must giv mission for the cere to be held.

Students' wishes clear. The Council of D should at least all s dents to have a do-it- self graduation if they not provide one. Thi the least a student can pect after years of expensive labor.

Target Practice With Trimester

Being 'Cheated'

To the Editor:

Are we paying for an education or a degree? In our opinion, the trimester system leaves time to cram, and cramming may obtain the certain desired degree, but how much actual learning is achieved?

Are we becoming nothing more than automatic disposals, because of lack of time and personal attention? There just isn't enough time to delve very deeply into anything and still do fairly well in other tasks.

Scholastics is the major concern of a college, as it well should be, but not to the extent that it should jeopardize the student from becoming a well rounded, free thinking individual. More important than teaching the ability to spout forth fact, is to instill the desire to learn.

No machine has the desire to learn. A student needs to be able to set his own pace, or at least should be given the opportunity of keeping up well with the one set for him.

There has been a great emphasis on the supposedly "reduced outside activities," but how really reduced are they? And should they be? They are important in preparing a student socially and allowing him to learn to appreciate his own place in society, whatever it may be.

College should be a place of major adjustment in the growing and maturing process of a student. Learning to harmonize in a society of opposites is as important as being able to trace the respiratory system of a fetal pig.

We are speaking both as juniors who have studied under the two systems, and as junior counselors, who are able to observe first hand how the trimester system is affecting the freshmen. They have not experienced the less strenuous Semester Plan, but they do know that there just isn't enough time, and many of them are considering transferig to schools under another, less demanding program.

Whereas we profoundly agree that college isn't the place for "goofoffs," and while we might be getting rid of them, we are also in danger of losing many qualified students who have the ability but not the stamina.

The trimester system is in process, and we have to do the best we can under it, but somehow we feel that our best isn't as good as it could be, and is this our fault? If it isn't then the trimester with all of its time-saving, money-saving, space-saving plans isn't worth the paper it's written on.

Fond Memories. . .

To the Editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to tell the freshmen about how the semester used to be. Since they have never been in college under It, they are sort of left out and would probably like to know how things were before the mean old legislature attacked us.

We old-timers who have been slowly matured under this beautiful method look back with tearful eyes upon Its former splendor. Why? Well, you see, quite simply the Semester was perfect. Now It has passed away and with It have vanished the last remnants of our beautilful childhood.

There is so much that was good and true and faultless which we now have only memories of: the Semester, our high school kays, our mothers, the kids down at the end of the block, our Asian flu... Never again will we feel the joys we felt with our first loves, with our carefree grade-school summers, with the Semester....

You freshmen are the ones who will suffer. You cannot be made wonderful persons like those of us who have developed under the Semester. But lest you miss out on the fun of the Semester, let me tell you what It was actually like.

The main thing about the system was the great amount of extra time we had (a marvelous 12% more). There was no cramming. We could proceed through the Semester at our own leisurely pace. There was never any pressure. A broad enriching extra-curricular program was available for us. Expansive knowledge was gleaned from the outside reading in which we all participated.

Not only this, but under nearly every tree on campus could be found deep thinkers ruminating the wisdom to which they had gained exposure. Back then we could get the most out of our courses. Oh, how relaxed we were!

In addition the lectures were of a perfect length. Professors could tell us all there was to know, then, and lab instructors marvelled at how much time in which they had to teach their pupils.

And, oh yes, there were the long vacations. Hunt up some upperclassman and get him to tell you about the spring holidays we had when everyone spent weeks at Lauderdale. Or let him tell you of the fun we had during Christmas month.

Well, that's about all I can think of now. Let me say in passing that I really feel sorry for you. Here at FSU you will be pushed out into the world at too young an age with an inadequate store of knowledge. Not at all like the way things were in the good ole days.

This Is Education?

To the Editor:

"They" call it education. Yes, that is right--"they" call it education. Maybe a more appropriate name for this whole try-monster mess would be "programming." In this new system of higher programming in which Florida leads the nation, machines are marched into the punch-card factory to receive a maximum amount of data to be crammed into the minimum amount of space.

Professors are obsolete... only punch card operators are needed. Efficiency is of primary importnace; students and education are placed in the background. At this rate Florida may be the first "1984" or "Brave New World," and this may be accomplished before 1984.

This analogy could continue, but maybe the fun had better end for the moment to consider a serious concern. Final exams are no longer "just around the corner." They are upon us. Most of the student body is complaining because they have only five days to take finals, beginning this time at 7:30 a.m.

I can only say to them, "Be thankful that you are not graduating seniors." Seniors, if their professors are supposed to evaluate intelligently their papers and have final grades to the Registrar on Tuesday, should complete their exams on Monday--that is, take exams (four or five in most cases) Saturday and Monday.

Seniors are not even allowed the extra study time given to the other students; seniors are given barely enough time to take exams, let alone review for them. Then on Saturday after a four day embalming period the University will honor its graduating seniors at a memorial service.

How will the seniors make it. Well, I assume the punch card operators will have to punch at supersonic speeds and the machines operate on a 24-hour schedule if the job is to be finished. The only thing I pray for is that a tube does not blow out. But why should we, the machines, worry because "they" (whoever "they" are--Big Brother or Mustapha Mond?) say this is education?

Golden Speaks Out On The Negro

the Negro wait until the
to begin his push for civil rights? It is because, until then he had shared equal poverty, equal segregation with the white man. He had access to the white man through the back door, where the white man, the lintheads of the cotton mills, were segregated completely even in the church pew.

The impetus was the WPA and the "New Deal." To the white man, it was only a stop gap in wages, but to the Negro, he was for the first time earning as much as a white man for the same amount of work, for the same amount of time. The summit was in sight.

What of the Negro? The picture of no resistance is a myth. Are they happy? -- "Nobody knows the trouble I've seen." Golden says no one has bothered to ask the Negro what he thinks.

What of the White man? Why the resistance to anything as inevitable as the flow of the Mississippi River? Because the Negro is the only thing that stands between the white man's social oblivion. He loses his self-esteem; he has nothing to look down on; he has no one left to tell to step to the rear of the bus. Golden believes the US has a school-oriented society, and once that is cracked the whole pattern of segregation will collapse. This is the axis of the society -- "A Negro is going to school with my kind."

And why this push for integration? Golden says the eyes of the world are on the US. The first question they ask is not about TV's and refrigerators, they say instead-- "Tell us about the freedom riders."

He says there is no longer anything such as domestic and foreign affairs. If this were so, then Ross Barnett would be right; "you have no right to be here." But rather, it is the strange names from strange places that will determine the future.

He believes this isn't the depths of pessimism, but the heights of optimism, this sense of total involvement with the world. Golden further stated England carried this nation, piggy back up to World War I, and after that she couldn't anymore. "We are the richest men in town, and now it is our turn. We are custodians of a great wealth. It is our responsibility to pour it out on the world, and raise standards of living. It is our heritage -- the concern for the individual.

"It is necessary to be twice as good to get half as much."

New Frat Legalized

The new academic-social fraternity, Sigma Gamma Pi, originally formed at the beginning of this trimester, reached legal status last Wednesday with the signing of their incorporation papers.

Signing the document were the six charter members and the faculty advisors, Dr. E.L. Chalmers, Dr. John Carey, Dr. Grover Rogers, and Dr. George Crouch.

This fraternity, composed of individuals with a 3.0 average or better has completed arrangements for a place to house 26 of the present 31 members and will be ready for full scale operations by the fall trimester.

Weekly business meetings have been held in the Club Room at Longmire, while a dinner-meeting was held with the faculty advisors last Monday at the Seminole Club. A beach party is planned for the week after next which will complete this trimester's activities.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: JOE AMWAKE

Joe Amwake, B.S., 1959, is a Sales Engineer with the Long Lines Department of AT&T. Joe supervises five men who are responsible for the sale of interstate telephone services in the state of Alabama. Quite a responsibility for a man who's been in the business only three years.

Joe had demonstrated on earlier assignments that he could handle responsibility. For instance, on his first big job he coordinated the installation of new telephone typewriter services in Detroit. This earned him his job as Sales Representative where he contacted important network television customers, among others. Then came his latest step up.

Joe Amwake and the other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.

Inter-Divisional TV Degree Set

Practice Offered At On-Campus Studios

Among recent developments in American universities is the interdivisional program wherein several departments of a university cooperate in developing a curriculum that none could offer alone.

At FSU the Interdivisional Department of Radio-Television involves such a program. Directed by Thomas Wright, it is a four-year program leading to a bachelor's degree with a major in Radio-Television.

The administration is under the College of Arts and Sciences, and schools or departments contributing are Advertising, English, Education, Business, Music, Speech and the facilities of the University Broadcasting Services. The object of the curriculum is the preparation of students for careers in the communications field.

Among professionals in the field of Radio-TV is Edward Herp, director of the University Broadcasting Services. Herp has been a professional in television administration since 1950. Among positions he has held are those of program manager, producer-director, film buyer, and his present position.

Duane Franceschi, program director for WFSU-TV, is also instructor for "Station Operation and Programming." He was a producer-director at WQED in Pittsburgh before coming to FSU.

John Willmott of the University Broadcasting Services is instructor for "Speech for Radio and Television." In addition to having done radio and TV work in the Carolinas, he is a producer-director at WFSU-TV. Willmott produces and directs such programs as "FSU Sports," "Frontiers of Knowledge," and "Speaking of Speech."

James Kohlenberg, also of WFSU-TV, and the University Broadcasting Services, is a producer-director, instructor, and professional writer for television. His scripts have been produced on such programs as "Armstrong Circle Theatre" and "The Defenders." He teaches "Writing for Broadcasting" for the English Dept.

Students enrolling in the Radio-Television Devision will have access to the facilities of WFSU-TV and the radio station WFSU-FM as laboratory experiences. In the past students pursuing this course of study have been employed by the University Broadcasting Services and local television and radio stations in various capacities while still in school and also upon graduation. Students desiring further information should contact Thomas Wright, director of Radio and Television, at his office in Room 320, the Music Bldg.

Feely Is Named Athlete Of Year

ddie Feely, senior quarterback r the Florida State football team, been named the 1963 Athlete the Year by the Florida Flam-a.

our times chosen Back of the Week during the 1962 season by the state sports writers, the graduating senior has been a symbol of the new FSU image ever since he started varsity play three years ago.

Under Coach Perry Moss, Florida State conducted one of the roughest and hardest-fought recruiting battles in state grid history--all in an effort to get a Gainesville High football-baller, who was sorely wanted by the football kings at Florida U.

Breaking the tradition of FSU getting second best, Feely signed a grant-in-aid scholarship with Florida State and played for three years under present coach, Bill Peterson.

And during his career, this small, 5-7, 159-pound gridder became the man that future FSU great quarterbacks will be measured by.

Those who would be better than Feely will have to break three career records which the Little Fox set this season. Feely accumulated the most yards passing in a career (1,711), breaking Joe Majors' old mark of 1,649. He rewrote Nelson Italiano's career total offense of 2,129 by racking up 2,346 yards. And he smashed Majors' career pass completion record of 136 by connecting 160 times.

During his senior season, Feely proved to be the most effective quarterback as a rusher and passer, and was therefore named to the all-state grid squad by sports scribes.

On the ground, he charged 213 net yards, which was 180 yards better than the next quarterback's total. Although he was outpassed by 27 yards, he nonetheless proved to be the most effective aerialist, as he scored the most touchdowns in the air (sic) and garnered the percentage title (56-of-99 completions for 56.6 percent).

A state sports writer said, "Playing in the three-team system that Coach Bill Peterson brought with him from LSU in 1960, Feely saw less duty as a quarterback than he would have in a conventional system. Still he netted more yards than any player in FSU history.

"What Feely might have accomplished with a conventional system, with a better football team, is an intriguing question. In his first two seasons, FSU had, all told, perhaps the least dangerous sets of backs in more recent history...."

But among the bigger backs, Feely became the symbol of the giant-killing FSU. And since FSU does not stress sports above academics, he is also the symbol of the student athlete. Majoring in business, the 22-year-old has been awarded a scholarship to the Cumberland Law School of Howard College.

Roanoke Defeat Gives Tracksters First Win

Getting its first dual victory of the year, the FSU track team swamped the Roanoke College of Virginia, 106-32, Wednesday afternoon.

Cager-turned-trackman, Giswold, a 6-3, 180-pounder from Madison, Wisc., copped first place in the broad jump, the high jump, and the hop-step jump. His high jump of 6-4 set a meet record.

Tribe weightman Williams won the shot put and the discus. For the second time this year, Williams broke the school record in the shot with a toss of 55-11.

Team co-captain Johnson won the 440 and the 330 hurdles.

Winning 13-of-16 events, the Seminoles ran up their highest point total of the year.

Roanoke got its only points on the efforts of Larry Scott, who won the two-mile run; Fred Beals, who was first in the 120-yard hurdles; and Terry Roskelly, who was best in the javelin throw.

Garnet-Gold Game Set Tomorrow

Wanting to give spectators "the best game possible," Florida State Coach Bill Peterson is splitting the Seminoles into two finely-divided squads for Saturday's annual Garnet-Gold spring football game.

Basically, the Gold team will consist of FSU's first and fourth units, the Garnets second and third. Other players have been assigned to make the game as even as possible.

Seminole Boosters Inc. has laid plans to draw "the largest crowd ever" for an FSU spring game--offering such extras as a guided tour of dressing rooms for youngsters, the giving away of two game footballs, several halftime awards and the appearance of former FSU halfback Buddy Reynolds--now co-starring in television's "Gunsmoke" series.

Kickoff at Doak S. Campbell Stadium Saturday will be 2 p.m.

Peterson said he has decided to pit the "best against the best" for the fans' sake.

"Usually, we play the first and third teams against the second and fourth," he explained, "but I think we can make the game more interesting by splitting the squad more nearly even."

A dozen players will not play Saturday due to injuries. Among the big-name players in that category are linemen Frank Pennie, Ferrell Henry, Jerry Bruner and Jim Causey, plus back Gene Roberts. Peterson said he doesn't want to aggravate any of the injuries "on the last day of spring training," thereby giving all players a chance to recover by next Fall.

insert in 10 pt--GOLDS

BURT REYNOLDS

The annual grid contest has given a new look as additional attractions have been installed. For instance--

1. All students of junior high high school age will be led on a guided tour of the FSU dressing room following the game, getting a chance to meet the Seminoles.

2. Former FSU halfback Burt Reynolds, now co-starring in television's "Gunsmoke" series, will receive an award from the athletic department for "continuing success in professional life following graduation."

3. FSU's Angel Flight, the women's drill unit attached to Air Force ROTC, will march at the halftime during which time the Marching Chiefs will also perform.

4. Two footballs will be given to lucky teenagers.

Auburn Falls For 4th Time

Losing 4-of-4 to Auburn last season, the Seminole baseball team completely turned the tables this week dropping the Tigers for the first straight time this season.

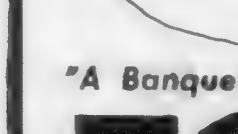
FSU's 9-7 come-from-behind victory ran its record to 6-2, while Auburn, which would normally be defeated, saw its mark lowered to 2-4. The winning pitcher was Bill Thomas, who came in on relief in the fourth after Marty Howell was bombed for six runs.

The Tigers' fourth inning performance gave them a 6-1 lead, which the Seminoles erased by scoring three runs in the fifth, four in the sixth, and one in the eighth. Both teams had 10 hits.

Leading the Tribe attack was second baseman Jim Reed with three hits out of five trips to the plate and three runs. He was backed up by left fielder Garv Nichols with two hits and Thomas with two.

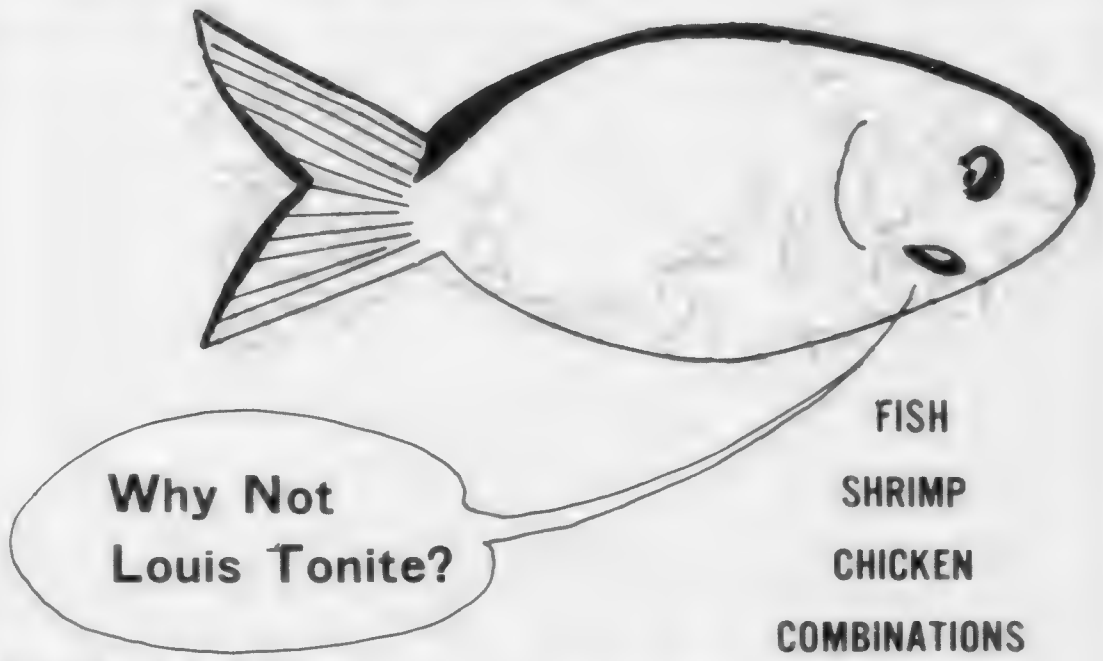
Mike Augustine and Nichols had three RBI's apiece for the Tribe.

The Seminoles will meet Florida Southern tomorrow in Lakeland and will battle the University of Miami next Monday and Tuesday.



Golfers Down MSU, Purdue

Dropping Michigan State and Purdue, the FSU golf team got its win against three losses Wednesday afternoon as Dave Philo shot a 68.



Philo bested Phil Marston, who shot a 73, as the Tribe downed Michigan State, 14-1.

Against Purdue, Philo registered 68 again to best Mike Martin in the 11-7 FSU triumph. The losers were paced by Terry Winn with 69, which beat FSU's Roger Kelly with a 73.

Casals Stars Tonight In Fine Arts Festival

Everything is in readiness or the Southern premiere erformance tonight of the ow-hour oratorio "El essebre" (The Manger) Pablo Casals, with the mous 86-year-old cellist s conductor of a 200-voice horus and 90-pice orhestra.

The musical event is at 8:15 o'clock Ruthcott Auditorium. Just before Casals steps to the podium FSU will confer on him the honorary degree doctor of music and on its own distinguished professor of painting Alfred Werbe, the honorary degree of doctor of fine arts.

"El Pessebre" has been heard before in this country only in San Francisco, where Casals personally directed a performance in April 1962, and in New York's Carnegie Hall, where Casals conducted an orchestra and chorus in a performance in June, 1962.

But the elderly Spanish-born musician, who has been known for more than 60 years as the greatest master of cello of all time, has conducted performances on some 10 other occasions throughout the world and plans to take the work shortly to London, Berlin and other European cities, as well as Philadelphia, St. Louis and other cities in this country.

Tonight's performance by university choral and orchestral groups is being presented as a gala opening night performance in a week-long Florida Festival of Fine Arts in honor of the Florid Legislature convening tomorrow.

Governor and Mrs. Farris Bryant will be in attendance, ty and FSU are presenting Casals and the Festival Chorus and University Symphony performance of Casal's oratorio about the birth of Christ.

In addition to orchestra and chorus five soloists, all selected by Casals, will sing parts in the oratorio. They are Olga Iglesias of Puerto Rico,

TV Opening Of Festival Slated

The "Florida Fine Arts Festival 63" will be featured by WFSU-TV nights this week.

The first showing of the program be tonight at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 11, and the second presentation will be Tuesday evening, at 9 p.m. President Gordon W. Blackwell of FSU will open the program with an invitation to the Florida Fine Arts Festival. His remarks will be followed by pictures and films showing the artists and events making up the Festival.

The main portion of the show will feature the opening day of the festivities. Gregg Stone of WFSU-TV will interview dignitaries Dr. Karl Keursteiner, Director of the Festival; Dr. Gulnar Bosch, Head of Florida State's Art Department; and Leon Mead, the Director of the Tallahassee Art Festival, which is part of the Florida Fine Arts Festival.

Also included in the ceremonies will be music by the Florida State Concert Band. After the music there will be a talk by Robert Henning, Director of the Tallahassee Junior Museum.

Student Suspended For Attempted Raid

An FSU male student was suspended by the University Disciplinary Committee last week for violation of two serious university regulations, according to Dean of Men Donald Loucks.

The student was found guilty of (1) engaging in activity conducive to promoting mob action, and (2) discharging fireworks on the University campus.

On Monday afternoon, March 11, this student painted signs and posted them in a number of university residences in an effort to stimulate an unauthorized mass demonstration which is sometimes better known to students as a "panty-raid."

Even though he was discouraged in this activity by two responsible fraternity officers who realized the seriousness of his actions, the student was apparently not sufficiently deterred from his intentions.

Later that same evening, he went to Kellum Hall, the advertised assembly point, and discharged a firecracker for the purpose of rallying together any students who may have seen his signs earlier in the day. Alert attention by the residence hall staff to the hazards of such an act resulted in his immediate identification and prevented any involvement by other students.

Abolished By Mandate

Referendum Ousts COP

By LYNN BISSLAND

The Student Body delivered a mandate to Student Senate to abolish class officers in a referendum held last Tuesday.

By a 1294-1222 vote, students elected to abolish the class officer program.

The referendum total exceeded the requirement of 25 percent of the student body voting needed to legalize the result.

Article II of the Student Body Constitution provides that:

"The members of the Student Body may demand a referendum election upon the properly signed petition of a least two hundred duly registered undergraduate students.

"Results of said elections shall serve as a mandate for the government of the Student Body, provided that such elections shall be carried out in accordance with this Constitution, and further provided that twenty-five percent of the Student Body shall have participated in said election."

The Class Officer Referendum compiled with all provisions, according to Sec. of Elections Ron Jones.

THE RUN-OFF ELECTION Friday brought only 2426 voters to the polls totaling nearly a thousand less than Tuesday's election.

"All elected candidates who wish to be installed must turn in their expense statements and pay their fines before 5 p.m. tomorrow," said Jones.

CCUN Plans Announced

Plans for future promotion of understanding the international commitment of the United States in the United Nations, on the campuses of FSU and the Florida A & M University, were announced by Student Body President Ken van Assenderp.

EARLIER this year, Van Assendepr rejected a move for FSU Student Government's participation in a model UN Assembly at FAMU. Present plans call for model assemblies sponsored by student groups separate from the student governments of either campus.

THE CCUN chairman will coordinate and conduct all aspects of its activities, and are now drawing up plans for the sessions to held in the future.

Van Assenderp issued a statement of the philosophy of Student Government operations at this time. "It is the duty of Student Government, in its official capacity as spokesman for our students, to be formally involved in issues beyond our campus only when critical matters have definite relation to our students' needs. We must represent our students," Van Assenderp said.

"REPRESENTATION means dedication to the students' best interests. It means cognizance of their over-all long-range needs. It means focusing the crucial short-range aspects of student life into their proper perspective. Representation means sensitivity.

"It also means action, non-negligence and energetic compliance to the needs of this academic community. When we speak out officially to the state, we owe it to the students we so represent to speak firmly, but only on the basis of real understanding and preparation.

Advisement Period

All students are to contact their faculty advisers during the period from now until April 12.

Educational Needs

Amid flowers, pomp and pleasantries, the 1963 session of the Florida Legislature opens today. Beneath the colorful facade, deep, abiding problems face the immediate attention of the lawmakers.

Furrowed brows will shortly replace the flowers as legislators from every section of a lengthy state struggle in interest-to-interest combat over problems facing the state.

Education is paramount on the list of tussles facing the legislature. Florida ranks 44th among the 50 states in percentage of its local and state revenue devoted to educating its children. This lack of funds, though Florida is among the nation's leaders in per capita income, causes binds in all phases of education from elementary to graduate school.

The State Department of Education is asking for an increase of $42.3 million in public schools just to keep up with the state's growth rate. This does not include a proposal for a teacher pay raise, across-the-board, in an effort to jerk Florida up from its 25th place in the nation in paying its educators. This would cost an additional $30 million.

The Board of Control is asking for a total of $257,853,248 for the university system in the state. Struggles are anticipated within this budget. Pensacola residents are clamoring for a four-year college in place of Pensacola Junior College. Orlando residents want an elbaorate "space institute" located near Cape Canaveral. Florida Atlantic needs money to get started. The Junior College system will need increases.

Meanwhile, the existing universities, Florida State, Florida A & M University, University of Florida, and the University of South Florida are all demanding more money to improve and expand existing facilities. FSU is asking the $64 million question: whether this amount of money will be provided so that this university can continue forward in its march upward in the ranks of the nation's universities.

Another proposal affecting the administration of the university system awaits the study of this legislature.

The Space Era Education Study, headed by Dr. Ralph McDonald, challenged the legislature to make basic revision in the university setup by removing them from control of the State Board of Education. In an effort to remove "politics" from the universities, the study advocated an increase in length of terms for members of a Board of Regents, an organization to replace the present Board of Control.

Education is only one facet of the complex problems facing the legislature -- but it is an important one. The future of Florida's school children depend upon education's success in winning over other interests. The struggle begins today.

Inner Strife Brings Fall

In a recent column entitled "Why Fear Communism?" I was by no means advocating dismissing the fact that a Communist menace does exist. What I was concerned with was primarily the means by which we combat such an ideology, and also an analysis of the fear Americans seem to have of Communism.

By pointing out some of the weaknesses and failures of the Communist system, I was attempting to counter the feelings of many persons that we in the United States are undoubtedly going to be living under Communism within the next 10 years. If this should by some means come about, it most likely will not be achieved through Communist military domination, but will come about as a result of dissention within our country.

If we wish to secure the blessings of liberty for our posterity, we should undertake not to indoctrinate our populace with "hate-the-governmental system." or "hate-that-governmental-system" attitudes, but to develop the social fabric through which a society incorporates change within itself. If present trends continue, our nation will soon find itself faced with a stagnant concept of America, one which views our society as coping with one major task: hating Communism.

It seems as though the most effective manner in which one may achieve national and local recognition as an upholder of American virtues is by showing oneself to [illegible] more patriotic than a fellow American. To label a person or institution of unimpeachable character and background a Communist, is to [illegible] patriotic in the most glorious fashion. By persons here, I mean presidents of the United States; by institutions, I mean those such as the Supreme Court.

I am not advocating removing these concerns from the realm of debate and scrutiny, but merely from the antagonism of super-patriotic groups that aggravate the situation by making the populace less receptive and open-minded, and tend to be very belligerent. These ultra "leftist and rightist" groups provide Americans with a variety of means with which to entertain themselves; ban text-books, publish "hate-sheets," manufacture stickers inscribed with [illegible] quite an uncomplimentary [illegible] prohibit Communist [illegible] defending their [illegible] America falls, it will be [illegible] of this type of internal dissention and not a result of the brute strength of Communism.

Again let me acknowledge the fact that the Communist faction does have a brutal past [illegible] as well as failures. However, we are only aiding them in their proposed task of world [illegible] extremist methods of "combating" their ideology.

Gerry Dobson

'You Don't Understand'

In my last column I started to answer a question posed by Tom Brooks, "Why Fear Communism?" That column dealt briefly with a part of the philosophy of Communism, and I would like to go into some of the things pointed out there at greater length.

True, Communism cannot exist on earth until the inevitable destruction of our bourgeois society, which destruction, in the absence of a God, is the untimate morality for the Communist. The Communist aids and hastens this destruction. Since Communism cannot be brought about until the annihilation of the capitalist system which currupts the nature of man, influenced as he is, solely by the economic forces which come to bear on him (economic determinism), it is fruitless to point out, as Mr. Brooks has, some of the shortcomings of the present Communist regime. A dedicated Communist recognizes that such shortcomings exist, but regards them as manifestations of the residue of bourgeois ideology in the Communist world.

As was pointed out before, Communist world domination is a prerequisite to the putting into effect an economic system which will remove from mankind the faults which capitalism has planted within it. Since God does not exist, Communist morality consists of any act which furthers world Communism. Nikita Khrushchev is not an immoral man. On the contrary, since his every act is designed to bring about the annihilation of Capitalism, and the advancement of Marxism-Leninism, he is the most moral of men, to a Communist's way of thinking.

Those "right-wing extremists" who fear Communism do so because they realize we are confronted with a "scientific" system which provides all the answers, and, in addition, has all the trappings of a religious crusade, in that the Communist, in his everyday acts designed to destroy all the values of Western civilization, is acting with the greatest possible moral integrity. It is the messianic nature of Communism, and the fanatical devotion of its adherents, which makes it so dangerous.

But, you say, "Communism is riddled with contradictions and its premises are plainly fallacious. Despite the advances it has made, it must therefore fall, for truth will win out."

But the fallacies of Communism, I answer, are well-known. Why has it been thus far successful? Pope Pius XI had the answer to that, and Mr. Brooks and those like him should take his remarks to heart: "How is it possible that such a system, long since rejected scientifically and now proven erroneous by experience, how is it, we ask, that such a system could spread so rapidly in all parts of the world? The explanation lies in the fact that too few have been able to grasp the nature of Communism."

Or, to put it another way, Mr. Brooks, if you can keep your head while all those about you are losing theirs, you just don't understand the problem.

Epidemic Strikes FSU

During the past weeks something quite mysterious, yet extremely gratifying to the human sesnes, has smothered the FSU campus. It was first noticed as students trod upon green blades of grass on their way to morning classes. Something was different.

Yes, it was the sound of wet sod squishing pleasantly underfoot instead of crackling frost, and the usual gray had been painted green. "Crackers" began to drawl a little bit longer and Miamians grew a bit more patient with the rest of Florida.

The sweet aroma of wisteria had been released and it promptly enveloped students as they caroused or dallied in front of the Sweet Shop or University Inn. It stung the nostrils as it leaped from the fumes of convertibles as they fled along Jefferson Street heading for the coast or Blue Sink. It soaked students in its essence as they feverishly writhed in unison to a combo playing in a dimly lit and hellishly humid room.

Through the milky evening mist filtered the gentle murmur of air conditioners, the raucous TV commercials, and the thumping of a fraternity man's hammer upon weekend decorations propelled by this mysterious force. Even the athletes could not escape it as belied itself in the snap of a first baseman's mitt as it snagged a line drive, or in the grunts of goliaths heaving the discus bathed in sweat and glassy-eyed with strain. Spectators gave witness to its presence as roars hurtled from their throats in appreciation of jobs well done and races well run.

Definite traces were seen in the blue eyes that danced in a smiling pink face surrounded by wisps of honey-blonde hair dripping with the wetness only Wakulla Springs can bestow upon a Florida State [illegible] Budweiser cans seem[illegible] a new brilliance as they litter the wayside or snuggled in a [illegible] of ice. Professors acknowledge the presence by filling out abnormal long absence reports, or by loosening their ties in sweltering classrooms. Shopkeepers watched their sales receipts as coffee sales dropped and soft drinks and ice cream soared.

It was felt in wispy breezes upon perspiring brow, and heard in the above as it hummed through the boughs of a thousand pines. Its warm hand was felt on everyone's neck as they grew crimson in color.

It's obvious to all as students laugh and smile, break out the Madras, and tell each other it's a good life [illegible] with the trimester. The sap is rising in a million pine trees and along with it the hopes of 11,000 students at FSU, because Spring is here.

Special Opera Replay Scheduled

...e who missed the two Opera productions "The Cloak" and "...Schicchi" a week ago will have an opportunity to see them at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, in Westcott Auditorium.

The one-act operas by Puccini, each about an hour long, are part of the Florida Fine Arts Festival, March 31 - April 7. Directed by Richard Collins, they will be sung to music played by the Opera Chamber Orchestra conducted by Robert Sedore.

Collins himself plays the genial rogue Schicchi, who arrives on the scene to upset a 13th century Florentine family's scrambel for the wealth a rich relative has left to a monastery instead of to them.

Jane Newton one of two co-eds who played the role of Lauretta, his daughter, in the March 22-23 productions, will sing the role in next Saturday night's.

The other opera, "The Cloak" will have Ethel Donaldson in the role of Georgette, the wife of a bargeman on the Seine, Michel, sung by Lonnie Keene. Her lover, Louis, a stevedore, is sung by Walter James of the music faculty.

Miss Donaldson won the southeastern regional auditions of the Metropolitan Opera several days ago and during the past week has been competing in New York against 13 other regional winners for the contract and music scholarship which will go to the nationwide winner.

Tickets, on sale at Westcott Ticket office and at the door on the night of performance, are $2 for the public and $1 for students.

But I digress. We were going to take up a topic you are probably unable to cover in your busy academic life. Let us start with the most basic topic of all—anthropology, the study of ...self.

Man is usually defined as a tool-making animal, but I personally do not find this definition entirely satisfactory. Man is not the only species which makes tools. The simians, for example, make monkey wrenches.

Still, when you come to a really complicated tool—like a ...ope, for instance—you can be fairly sure it was made by ... sapiens—or else a very intelligent tiger. The question one should ask, therefore, is not who made the tool, but what did ... with it.

For example, in a recent excavation in the Olduvai Gorge a large assortment of hominoid fossils was found, all dating back to the Middle Pleistocene Age. Buried with the fossils was a number of their artifacts, the most interesting being a black metal box which emitted a steady beeping sound. Now, of course, zoologists will tell you that tree frogs make such boxes which they employ in their mating activities (I can't go into detail about it in this family newspaper) but the eminent anthropological team, Mr. and Mrs. Walther Sigafoos (both he and she are named Walther) were convinced that this particular box was made not by tree frogs but by Neanderthal men. To prove their point, they switched on the box and out came television, which, as everyone knows, was the forerunner of fire.

If there is anything more you need to know about anthropology, just climb up on my lap as soon as my son leaves.

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes who sponsor this column, often with trepidation, are not anthropologists. They are tobacconists—good ones, I think—and I think you'll think so too when you sample their wares—available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states.

Kellum Awards Given Residents

Awards to outstanding residents and scholars in Kellum Hall were presented at a dance Saturday night in the residence hall.

Assistnat Dean of Men Robert Brewer presented the Outstanding Resident Award to Ray Holland and Charles Schmidt. Schmidt is the Vice President of the Kellum Hall Executive Council and Holland led the Kellum Singers to a first place in this year's Campus Sing competition.

Scholarship trophies went to four residents having a 4 pount average and carrying 14 hours. These were Hepfer, and Robert Zupkis. Honorabel mention went to Edward Deane and Emile Roth who also had 4 point average but only carried 13 hours.

Seniors And Grads Recruited

Associates Investment Company will interview for trainees students with a non-technical bachelor degree who are majoring in business administration, economics, finance, management, marketing, liberal arts and accounting today.

Boy Scouts of America will interview students with a degree between the ages of 22 and 35 Thursday.

Fields of Business administration personnel management, education, social science liberal arts or public relations are recommended.

Friday Northrop Space laboratories will interview advanced degree graduates in physics, EE, ME or math who are interested in working with a research oriented group in Huntsville, Ala.

Also Friday, Delta Air Lines will interview for stewardesses.

Next Monday, the US Treasury Department's Internal Revenue service of the Atlanta district is recruting for position of Inspector (Internal Security). Majors in Criminology are preferred.

Those interested in being interviewed should register with the Placement Office, Room 08 Longmire, and pick up the company brochures and applications prior to interviewing.

NEW YORK -- Guatemala's Rightwing President Miguel Ydigoras -- who has been worried about Communist infiltration -- has been overthrown instead by a military coup. The military leaders took over swiftly, saying they're in a better position to cope with the Leftwing menace. And they put Ydigoras and his wife on a plane for Nicaragua and exile.

Arriving in Nicaragua, Ydigoras called the military coup good for Guatemala and all Central America.

MIAMI -- US Immigration agents have ordered 18 Cuban exiles not to leave Dade County, Florida -- which includes Miami -- or the continental US. It's apparently part of the new US efforts to halt hit - and - run anit-Castro raids in Cuba. Cubans in the Miami area are reported angry. One liberation group leader says: "It seems we in the US are more closely guarded than those inside Cuba." He says the restrictions convert exiles into enemies of the US rather than of the Communist government in Cuba.

TEL AVI -- Israel's Security Chief has resigned in a dispute with Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion. He reportedly quit after Ben Gurion refused to accept the Security Chief's political evaluation of the crisis over Israeli charges that West German scientists and technicians are helping the United Arab Republic build offensive weapons.

NEW YORK -- After a 114-day blackout caused by a labor dispute, New Yorkers will have their newspapers back today. The end came when the last holdout union -- the Photo-Engravers -- voted to accept the new contract terms at a meeting yesterday. Some of the 19,000 newspaper employees idled by the strike quickly returned to their jobs, and morning papers were ready to hit the streets last night.

Garnets Get Gold's Goat In 20-12 Win

By JOHN WOOD
Sports Editor

In an action packed contest before 5,000 Campbell Stadium fans, Florida State's 1963 Spring Practice officially came to a close when the Gold team, composed of the first and fourth units, came from behind to squeeze out a 20-12 win over the Garnet unit, made up of the second and third strings. The Gold effort was paced by hard charging halfback Dave Snyder and his running mate at fullback Larry Brinkley, who ground out 111 yards between them.

Snyder scored twice from four and two yards and was the leading rusher in the game. The Tribe's number one quarterback, Steve Tensi, got the third touchdown for the Golds on a nifty run around left end. Les Murdock, the top place-kicking specialist, was true on two out of three extra point attempts.

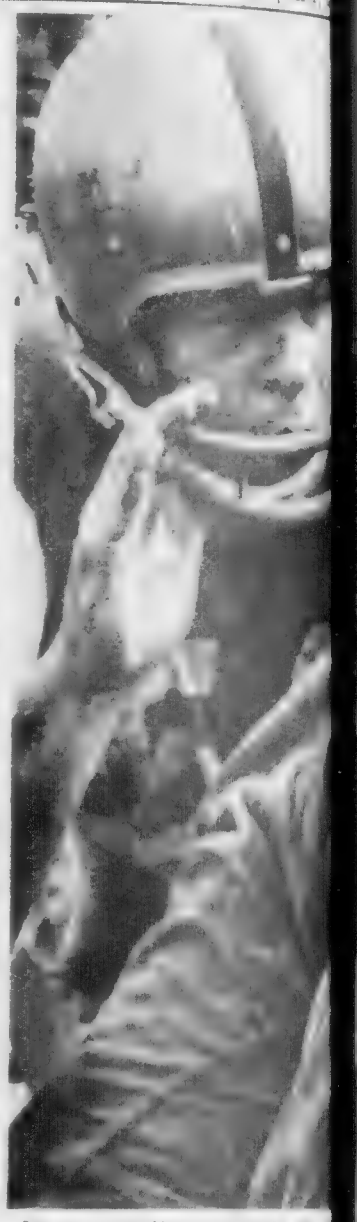
Local product Charlie Calhoun, playing both ways ball, kept the Garnet squad in contention all the way. Calhoun scored the last Garnet touchdown with a nine yard sweep around end and passed 12 yards to Fred Biletnikoff for the other tally. Doug Messer missed both conversion tries.

"Davey" Snyder led all the backs in rushing with 67 yards in 15 carries for an average of 4.4 yards per carry. Brinkley finished with the same average gain by logging 44 yards on 10 carries.

On the Garnet side, a surprising performer Ralph Norman led the rushing with 54 yards in nine carries. He had one 24 yard sweep and another for 11 yards. Calhoun carried eight times for a net of 37 yards, including one for 16 yards. Phil Spooner had 29 in 11 tries.

For the Gold's sophomore end Ed Pope and junior halfback Winfred Bailey each caught three passes; Pope gaining 23 yards and Bailey adding 30 yards to the cause.

The Garnet pass receiving was led by Fred Biletnikoff, who was switched from end to halfback at the beginning of Spring Practice, but came through with three catches for 39 yards and one score.



Coach Bill Peterson, who viewed the game from the press box had this to say about the game: "As far as the game was concerned I was dissatisfied on a couple of interceptions, but I was pleased overall."

Garnet-Gold Game Full Of Surprises

By BOB DENSMORE
Assistant Sports Editor

Saturday's Garnet and Gold game was a bushel of surprises, not only for the many pleased fans, but for the coachs and players as well.

A pleasant surprise to all factions was the sparkling performance of the Garnet squad. Composed of Seminole second and third stringers, their hardnosed play melted away any fears concerning lack of depth.

The big surprise to the players came with 6:39 left in the fourth quarter when Steve Tensi ran for a TD. Not that this is so shocking in itself; Tensi isn't that bad at picking them up and laying them down. But the fact is no one knew that he was going to run the play, not even his own team. The most appaled had to be Charlie Calhoun, however. Calhoun had pulled the same play on Tensi in three previous scrimmages and had in fact invented it.

Not to be overshadowed, however, is the action that took place in the lockers after the game. The lockers were open to the public, and half the grammar schoolers in Leon County must have been present for the occasion. It was a weird mixture of paraphenelia. Cowboy hats and shoulder pads. The kids seemed to have an obsession for chin straps, and none of the gridders were able to deny the requests.

Dave Snyder held court for a while in front of his locker dispensing autographs until it became apparent that the supply could never equal the demand. "Red" Dawson was busy auctioning off his chin strap; and, when the bidding ceased at 35 cents, he gave it away to the littlest. In a desperate attempt to disrobe himself, Jack Shinholser mounted the top of his locker, the only stable, unpopulated real estate in sight.

Fine Arts Festival

Women's Glee Club Featured Tonight

"The Stabat Mater" by the late Ernst von Dohnanyi will be featured on a program of the Women's Glee Club at 8:15 o'clock tonight in Opperman Music Hall.

The Glee Club, with nearly 100 members, will be directed by Betty Jane Grimm in the seven-number program, which is free and open to the public. The annual spring concert is part of the program of the week-long Florida Festival of Fine Arts.

Others among the works to be sung by the expert choral group include an arrangement by FSU graduate student Richard Powell, a medley of "When It's Sleepy Time Down South" and "Dixie."

This is a carryover from last year's program when the same arrangement was used in a program given by the Glee Club in New York's Town Hall.

In contrast to "El Pesebre," the Pablo Casals oratorio about the birth of Christ which was presented on the Fine Arts Festival program last night, Dohnanyi's work is about the death of Christ and the thoughts of Jesus' mother, Mary, at the foot of the cross.

The 20-minute composition, which bears one of Dohnanyi's last opus numbers, 46, will be performed with solo parts taken by Valerie Browne and Michele Ann Davenport, Rosie Wildes and Lillian Amos.

Part I of the Glee Club program opens with an arrangement by David Shand of "From the Realm of Souls Departed" by Gluck. Soloists are Diana Roland, Laurie Bunte, Patsy Kinsey and Barbara Morris.

"Lacrymosa" from the "Requiem" by Mozart, arranged by Lara Hogard, will be followed by an arrangement of Richard Strauss' "Devotion" by Harry Robert Wilson.

Gabriel Faure's "Tantum Ergo," Op. 65, No. 2, will have as soloists Judy Harrison Hughes, Lyndol Michael and Barbara Morris.

This will be followed by a Harry R. Wilson and Walter Ehret arrangement of a Kentucky folk song, "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair."

Accompanist for the Glee Club will be Martha Putnam. She will be assisted by Pat Winter in the "Stabat Mater," which will compose Part II of the program.

The best work of students in all four undergraduate classes will go on exhibition and faculty members will select the outstanding artists in the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes.

Smith Expands Cabinet

By SUSIE RHOADES
Asst. News Editor

President-elect of the Student Body Johnny Smith announced that Luther Kramer has been appointed as Secretary of Internal Affairs and Joyce Killian will be Secretary of Intercollegiate and Public Affairs for the 1963-1964 term.

Kramer is a junior pre-ministerial student from Sarasota. He was president of the F.S.O. Scholarship houses; is vice president of Westminster Fellowship; vice president of Alpha Phi Omega; vice chairman of the University Party and author of the Kramer Report on Class Officers.

Miss Killian is a sophomore government major from Miami. She has been a senator for two years and received the 1961-62 Outstanding Senator Award. She is vice president of East Landis, president-elect of Bryan, Junior Counsellor, historian of Garnet Key, Sophomore Council and on the Pow-Wow staff.

Smith said that Kramer has exhibited thoroughness in every activity he has undertaken. He has shown extensive administrative ability that is needed to carry the increased burdens of a reorganized Internal Affairs Bureau.

Smith also said that Miss Killian has worked hard for Student Government in her two years at FSU and she will continue to work actively to the best interests of the Student Body in her new capacity as Secretary of Intercollegiate and Public Affairs.

Political Systems Compared

By JAN WARREN

A change has evolved on the British political scene in the last twelve years, stated Dr. David Butler in his lecture sponsored by the Government Dept. Tuesday.

Butler, an Englishman who is a specialist on British and American elections, explained the difference about politics. The American political scientists are critical of the way the American government is run, parties and the people run the government and feel the responsibility of who is put in office. The British are not as critical of their system and there is a certain amount of apathy concerning elections, the speaker declared.

Right now the British government is in a period of change and three major factors have yielded this situation: 1. The growing Gross National Product; 2. The fact that England is no longer an Empire; and 3. England is no longer a world power. The change comes with the fact that the Conservative party which has held power during these events, is losing its popularity and the Labor party is moving in.

The six questions that should be answered concerning this switch in powers were discussed by Professor Butler. First, "What has happened to the stability of the Fifties?" This is summed up by three issues: MacMillian and the conservatives have lost popularity because of the Summit Conference, the crisis in International Market and the strong measures the conservatives had to take against inflation. These issues showed that the Conservative freedom didn't work and their formula for economic prosperity was a failure.

"Where does the Common Market struggle fit in?" Again MacMillian and the Conservative Party lost influence by having to switch their stand and deciding to join the Common Market in the summer of 1961 after they had refused the offer in 1958 and 1959.

"What is the current standing of the leaders in the different parties?" MacMillian, at one time billed as the "superman" of the Conservative Party, able to do anything, is at his "lowest popularity." People think it is "time for him to go." Harold Wilson, who replaced Gateskill as the head of the Labor party, is a "solitary man, relatively unknown." He is a hard politician but "a very able man and the best speaker in the House of Commons." Butler chose Richard Nixon as the personality most like Harold Wilson. Joe Goodwin, Liberal Party leader, was cribed as a "light weight in the tical field and not very tou

"What about the Liberal Party vival and will it last?" The rea for this revival, Butler said, appeal as being the "party least a party, not tied up with trade or Big Business." They are re on the support of people who dissatisfied with their own pa but are not radical enough to pletely switch to the other

"Is the outcome of the next tion decided?" Positively not, asserted. There is nothing er the Labor Party or the Libe Party can completely break u strong-hold the Conservative have.

"What if the Labor Party follows, in England and the W There will be no radical only limited reforms for the ing. This is mainly because or Party needs stronger those that are qualified as Conservative party, the lecturer clared.

"There is considerable chantment among the people." England will be turning towa government experience of th for help in reorganizing their cal scene, he added.

European Studies Institute

The Institute of European Studies has announced new admissions procedures and application deadlines for its academic year programs in Vienna, Paris, and Freiburg, West Germany.

Application periods for all three programs will open officially today.

Deadlines for applications have been moved from June 15 to June 5 for the programs, beginning next August and September. The Institute's admissions committee will review all applications simultaneously after the deadline and mail notices of acceptance or rejection June 15.

Institute officials said the changes were made because applications from qualified students have climbed beyond the capacities of the programs. To continue accepting qualified students as applications are received would result in rejecting some better qualified students who applied closer to the deadline date, they said.

However, students with good reasons for seeking admission may petition the admissions committee for a decision before June 15.

The Institute's program at the University of Vienna combines English taught liberal arts and general studies courses, intensive German language instruction, regular German taught university courses for those competent in German, and supplementary lectures and seminars. It is open to juniors and sophomores. There is no language requirement.

The "Das Deutsche Jahr" program is conducted for juniors only at the University of Freiburg. It stresses political science, philosophy, literature, history and German. All courses are taught in German. Tutorials have been added to aid US students in preparing for classes and examinations.

The Paris Honors program admits outstanding juniors and a few sophomores. It emphasizes contemporary European studies and offers qualified students opportunities for study at the University of Paris and other Paris schools. All classes are taught in French.

Each program includes two field-study trips in Western Europe with Institute lecturers.

A folder describing the programs and listing requirements is available from the Institute of European Studies, 35, E. Wacker Drive, Chicago 1, Ill.

Artist Series Has Army Band

The U.S. Army Field Band of Washington, D.C. will present a free public concert at FSU on Monday, April 6.

The program will be presented in Westcott Auditorium. The concert will be co-ordinated by the Artist Series in conjunction with the Department of the Army.

Organized in 1946, the band has played in inaugural ceremonies of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy. It has made appearances in all 50 states, countries of Europe and has presented 35 concerts in the Orient.

Included in the band's concert repertoire are classical, semi-classical and popular selections, arrangements, novelty numbers, military marches. Major Herbert Bierly of Silver Spring, Md. is commanding officer and director.

Singing several numbers on the program will be the Soldiers of Music. The chorus which combines voices of a group of the band instrumentalists, presents its own special arrangements of well known compositions.

The band is self sufficient as an Army unit. On tours of the U.S. it usually travels in its own 11-vehicle motor convoy. The motto of the band is "We are the Kings of the highway." It is in keeping with the "Kings of the Highway" song of the Infantry which the band uses as its musical signature.

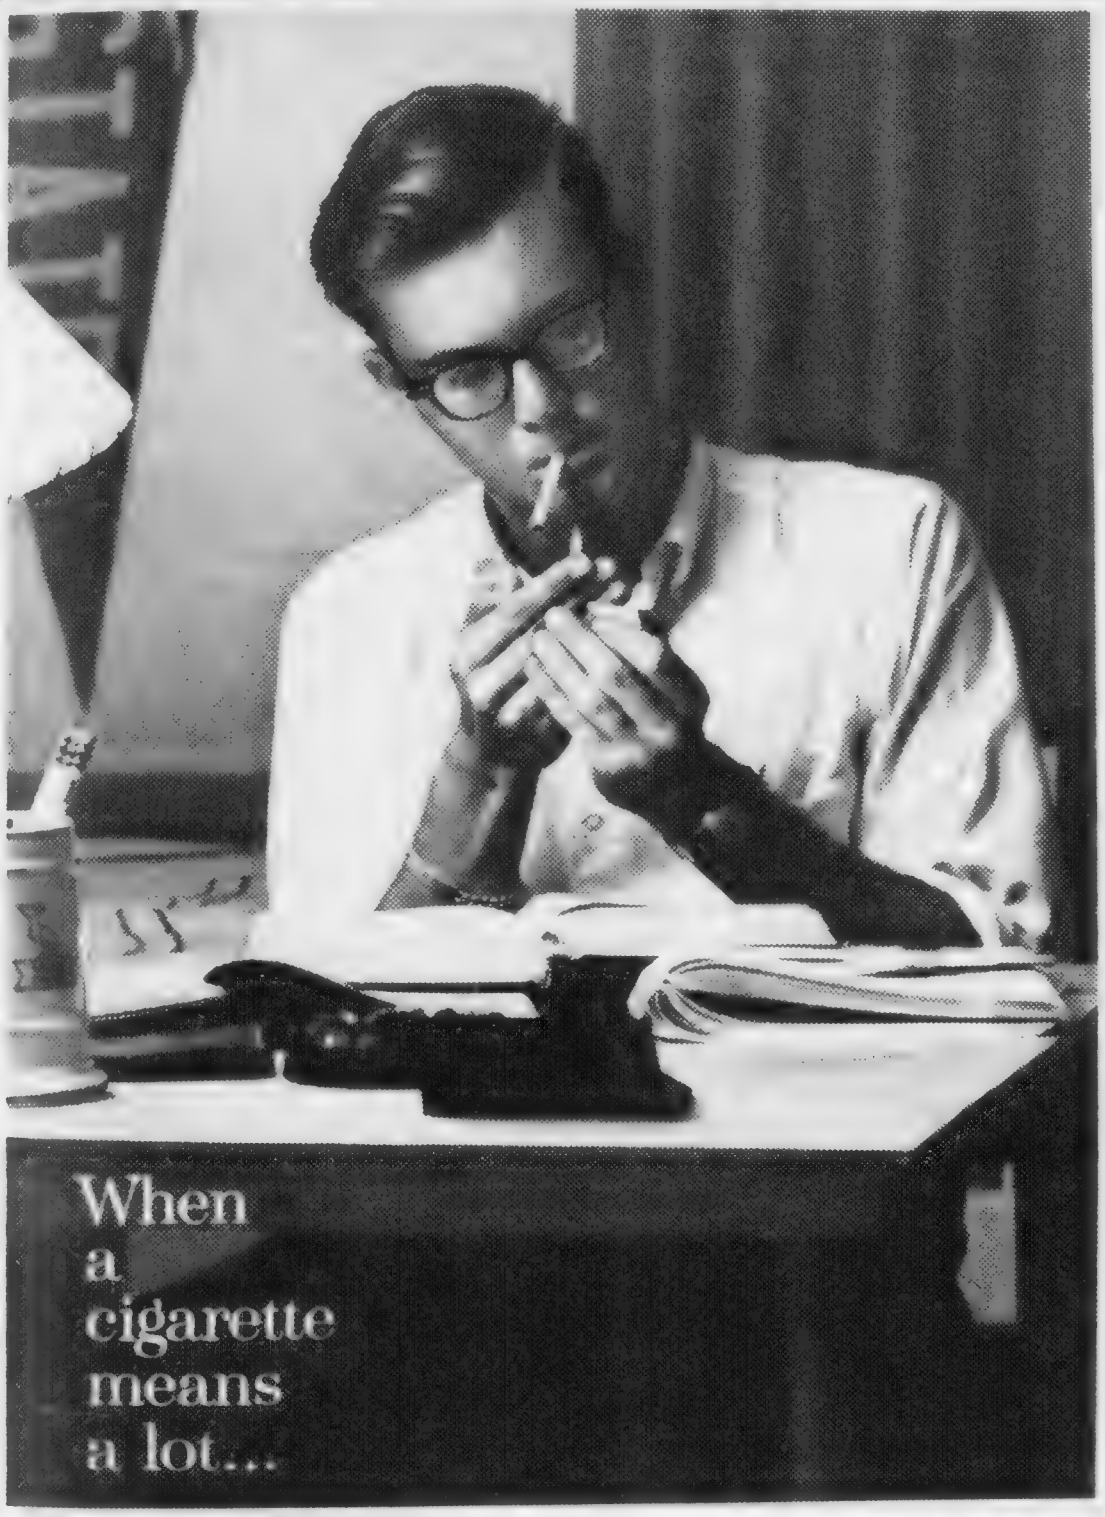
Festival Performance

Casals And Zerbe Honored

By AL GALBRAITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Casals was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of music and Zerbe received an honorary degree of fine arts degree last night after performance of the Casals' trio, "El Pesebre," in Westcott Auditorium.



Casals, a native of Catalonia, has been acclaimed for more than sixty years as the greatest master of the cello. He is recognized as the pioneer performer of music of his contemporaries, and as a reformer and improver of the technique of the cello.

He has presented symphonic masterpieces to even the humblest people with the Pablo Casals Orchestra of Barcelona. He created the Festivals of Prades and Puerto Rico, veritable shrines for musical pilgrims.

Casals was cited for presenting his music "only for the highest purposes and greatest humanitarian ideals, while serving as an unsurpassed inspiration to your colleagues and the world of music."

Zerbe, born in Berlin, was recognized as an outstanding contributor to the development of the techniques of encaustic, polymer-tempera and acrylic painting. He was cited as a "single-minded and diligent seeker after knowledge of artistic form and invaluable personal contributor to that knowledge through a still-growing corpus of paintings."

Zerbe has been recently honored by a retrospective exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art, by a traveling exhibition of his work shown at the Municipal Museum in Munich, and by his contribution to the major exhibition called "Art U.-S.A. Now," currently on world tour.

Master's Program For Eligible Sophs

Sophomores with a 3.2 or better average are eligible to apply for a three year Master's Degree program which will begin for juniors with the fall term of the 1963-64 academic year.

The departments of biological science, English, government, history, mathematics, modern languages, and physics are the ones from which the students will be chosen.

Approximately 30 students will be chosen for this program, selected by both their departmental staff members and the graduate school. Each department is allotted from 3 to 5 students for participation in this program.

Interest on the part of the student in doing graduate work and in college teaching are of primary importance, since the goal of the program is preparation of qualified students for immediate jobs in college teaching positions or for continuation of their education to the Ph.D. degree.

Application forms are available at the Officer of the Director, Dr. Thomas R. Lewis, Associate Dean of the Graduate School.

Student Study Abroad Offered This Summer

The International Student Travel Center has outlined a stepped-up program for student work and travel abroad in 1963, according to recent information.

Among the innovations offered for the summer ahead are job opportunities outside of Western Europe, travel grants, and a two-way exchange program whereby ISTC members can obtain travel expense reductions by providing work or room and board for foreign students visiting the U.S.

The goal of the ISTC is to provide stimulating work, study and travel experience abroad as an essential part of education and a means of furthering good will. In the past, both students (ages 16-35) and teachers (no age limit) have participated in such programs, which include paying jobs, orientation seminars and tours.

For the most part, job openings are in unskilled categories, with minimal language qualifications. They cover such occupations as farming, construction and factory work, child care and hotel-resort work. Wages are based on the standard rates in the various countries and may range from room and board in a Spanish work camp to $190 a month in a West German factory.

ISTC members are at liberty to make their own travel arrangements or sign up for a seminar program that includes low-cost jet transportation and tours. ISTC travel this year will be handled by SITA.

Founded in 1933, the Students International Travel Association is one of the largest and most experienced travel organizations in the world. More than 25,000 persons from 50 states and 46 foreign countries have participated in SITA trips. SITA travel grants up to $500 are available to ISTC members.

One of the more extensive European tours ISTC has planned, in collaboration with SITA, is the Road-to-Rome Seminar, a 21-day, 7-country tour that precedes the job assignments. This year, for the first time, there will also be a Middle East Seminar in Israel.

Round trip jet travel to Tel Aviv will include stopovers in Rome and Paris. A two-day seminar in Tel Aviv on the culture and history of the region will be followed by a five-day tour of Israel and a month's work on a Kibbutz.

The brochure, "Student Passport for Work, Culture and Knowledge Abroad," can be obtained for 20¢ from ISTC, 39 Cortlandt Street, New York 7, N.Y.

Tracksters Top Sports Agenda

Yesterday's track meet here against powerful Tennessee highlighted this week's action on the spring sports calendar at Florida State. For the seven-day period, a total of 15 events are on tap for FSU's four spring sports teams.

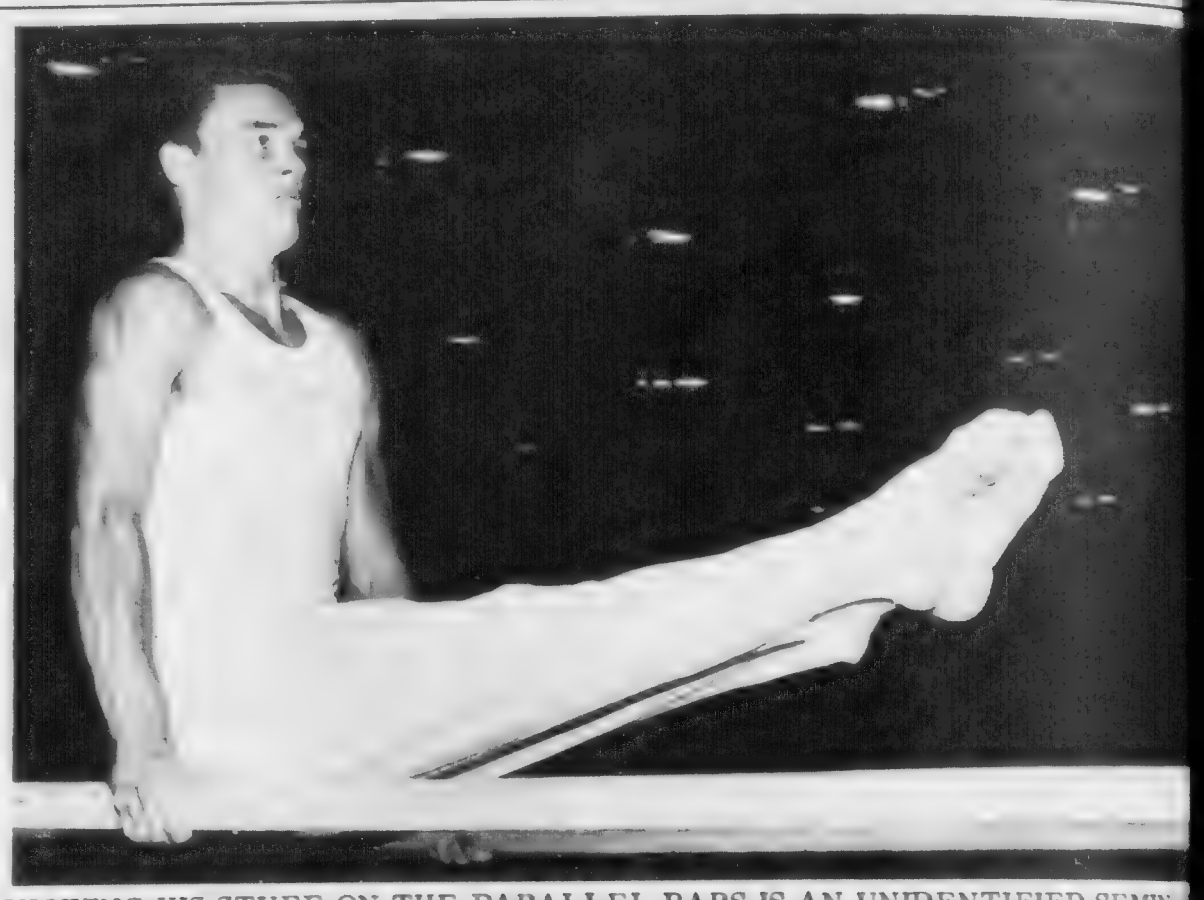
Monday's track meet--beginning at 1:30 with field events--pitted Coach Mike Long's Seminoles against one of the rising powers of the Southeastern Conference. Chuck Rohe, former coach at Furman, has taken the Vol helm and vowed to place Tennessee out front in track. The way things have gone, he may make it, according to Long.

FSU, hit hard by graduation after winning 20 of 22 dual meets, went into the meet 1-2 in dual action this season. The Seminoles pasted a 106-32 decision on Roanoke College Wednesday after losses to Furman and Miami.

Coach Eddie Cubbon's tennis team will play every day but Wednesday, and all of the matches will be at home. FSU was 9-2 in tennis.

The FSU golfers, being handled by Capital City Country Club pro Chuck Rea since the resignation of Coach Bill Odeneal, travelled to Auburn yesterday, Alabama today and will return home for seven-team matches Thursday and Friday.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's baseball team, ranked third in the nation this year by Collegiate Baseball newspaper, is at Miami yesterday and today comes home to host Furman Friday and Saturday.



This week's Seminole sports log:

Tuesday--Tennis, Hope College here, 2; Baseball, at Miami; Golf, at Alabama.

Thursday--Tennis, Columbia here, 2; Golf, FSU, Columbia, Miami, Stetson, Florida, Florida Southern, Rollins here, 1.

Friday--Tennis, Columbia here, 2; Baseball, Furman here, 3:30; Golf, FSU, Columbia, Miami, Stetson, Florida, Florida Southern, Rollins here, 1.

Saturday--Tennis, Columbia here, 2; Track, at Carolina Relays (Columbia, S.C.); Baseball, Furman here, 1:30.

SHOWING HIS STUFF ON THE PARALLEL BARS IS AN UNIDENTIFIED SEMINO

Despite fine individual efforts the Gymnastic Club lost their title in the Southern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League Championship to Georgia Southern by points.

Gymnasts Lose Title

The Florida State Gymnastic Club found itself on the short end of trying to defend the title won last year at Southern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League Championship, after the final points were totaled. The new champion for 1963 is Georgia Southern, a newcomer to SIGL circles.

Team places and total points are as follows: Ga. Southern, 152 1/2; FSU, 136 1/2; Ga. Tech, 110; U. of Fla., 97; Citadel, 80; David Lipscomb, 42. The league is expanding every year with such teams as LSU and Furman becoming possible members in 1964.

Rick Miller defended his All-Around title successfully by nosing out Bob Snyder of Ga. Tech. Miller also won Floor Exercise, Still Rings, Parallel Bars, and Tumbling. He placed second in the High Bar, and garnered eight points in side horse, four points in long horse, totaling 76 points for the team.

Mitch Weinstock came through with the best performance of his gymnastic years at FSU by placing fourth officially and third unofficially in the all-around. Weinstock placed 7th in floor exercises, 6th in side horse, 6th in still rings, 5th in long horse, 8th in high bar, adding 36 points to the team total.

John Kimbrough did extremely well in his first effort in the tough all-around by placing seventh. Jon[illegible] placed 6th in the high bar, [illegible] nine points for the team.

Netters Blank Amherst 9-0

In action on the home courts yesterday, the Florida State tennis team won its third straight game by blanking its opponent Amherst, who was the patsy for the netters by a score of 9-0.

Top banana Lex Wood vanquished Ken Cousens by a tally of 6-1, 6-0; Don Caton won the no. 2 match over Jack Levine by 6-1, 6-2; and Paul Bennett took Tom Poor for a 6-2, 7-5 ride.

Don Monk, who has been improving steadily since last week's victory over Florida and now occupies fourth place, won his match with Bob Guthrie by 6-4, 6-0. Dave Moore took Jon Saphier 2-6, 6-2, 8-6, while Kenny Alcorn was toying with Pete Kleinman, 6-1, 7-5.

In doubles action, Bennett and Wood beat Cousens and Levine for the number 1 deicision, 6-1, 6-1. Caton and Monk topped Poor Ransmeir, 6-3, 6-1. Dick Fischer got into the act by joining Alcorn to jump on Guthrie and Williams, 6-3, 6-4.

In morning action, Hope's Varsity squeezed by the Seminole Frosh.

Sharp Shooters Garner Honors

Florida State's Army ROTC Rifle team defeated rifle teams from the University of Florida, Stetson University, and the University of Miami for first place honors in the All-Florida shoulder-to-shoulder match held last Friday in Gainesville.

The team was led by Jim Moore of Tallahassee, who was the top individual marksman at the meet.

In addition to Moore, the team includes Charles E. Holmes of Jacksonville, John O. Reinhardt of Darien, Connecticut, Peter M. Goldman of Orlando, Leo E. Padgett, Jr., of Plant City and Larry D. Johnson of Topeka, Kansas.

The FSU team is coached by Capt. Edward J. Stein Jr. and Sgt. Dewey D. Furches. Their record for this trimester if 16-4.

In Conradi Theater

'Matchmaker' Opens Tonight

By PAT FREEMAN
Assistant News Editor

"The Matchmaker," a riotous farce by Thornton Wilder, opens tonight at 8:15 in the Augusta Conradi Theatre, as a sort of belated Valentine's Day gift from the cast to the audiences who attend.

The stage, which will be framed in a "hearts and flowers" motif, resembling a floral picture frame, will come to life at 8:15 p.m. with all the picturesque buffoonery of Thornton Wilder's image of the 1880's.

The story evolves around a cantankerous old Dutchman wishing to find a spouse, the matchmaker (secretly scheming to win the Dutchman) whom he hires, and the adventures of his charming (and alarming) young niece.

Two humorous young clerks who work for the Dutchman absent themselves from the line of duty to frolic in New York City for the first time, and the stage is more than set for an evening of entertainment plus.

Arthur Dorlag, director of the four act play, promises that what began as a relatively simple situation will acquire complication after complication before the performance is over.

Al Snelko plays the old Dutchman; Chris McGlasson portrays the Matchmaker; Sam Baker, Cornelius Mackl, one of the clerks; Rhett Bryson plays Barnaby Tucker, the other clerk; Susan Jekel plays Miss Flora Van Huysen; Louise Beddingfield will play Mrs. Irene Mallory; Pat Bain is Minnie Fay, the assistant; Jim Rayfield will play Malachi Stack, a new employee; Sammy Kilman portrays Ambrose Kemper, an artist; John Hester plays Joe Scanlon; Tom Delaney will be Rudolph; Dave Harrison plays August; Barbara Quinn will play Ermengarde; John Hofman is a cabman; Ingrid Terese plays Gertrude; and Betty McConnell will play Miss Van Huysen's cook.

French Play To Perform

Le Treteau de Paris, making its fifth campus tour of the United States under the auspices of the French government, will present two plays in Westcott Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. on April 11.

The traveling company will bring "L'Appolon de Bellac" by Jean Giraudoux and "Orphee" by Jean Cocteau to be performed in French, as a part of a three month tour of 50 colleges.

Tickets will be available at the Modern Languages Dept., and are selling for $1 for students, faculty and staff; and at $1.50 for the public. The department is sponsoring the plays with the Interdepartmental program in Humanities.

"L'Appollon de Bellac", first produced in 1947, is a spoof on French bureaucracy. The part of Agnes, a pretty, naive girl, is played by Nicole Desurmont, who had an equally successful role in Moliere's "L'Ecole des Femmes" on the 1961 tour.

The other play on the twin bill, "Orphee," one of the Cocteau series of updated Greek Tragedies, stars the upcoming young French star, Bernard Verley as Orpheus and Colette Teissedre as Eurydice.

Florida Festival Of Fine Arts

Art On Exhibit Today

Some 100 works of art, the best productions of students at FSU during the current school year, go on exhibition at 3 p.m. this afternoon in the University Gallery.

The exhibition opening from 3 to 5 is part of the Florida Festival of the Arts which also has on today's schedule this afternoon a performance by the Madrigal Singers, specialized singing group of the School of Music, at the Executive Mansion of Governor Bryant.

Students whose work is selected as most outstanding will receive letters of commendation from FSU Vice President John E. Champion at 3:30 p.m. today in the art gallery. The award winning works along with the best work of all art students will remain on exhibit through June 1. The art honors work exhibit will include nearly every kind of media and will represent each area taught in the Department of Art at FSU. Award winners will be selected from the best in the following areas: painting, pictorial composition, sculpture, figure drawing, graphics, commercial advertising design and fashion illustration.

Judges of the works include George Frederick Holschuh, Rudof Jegart, Ann Kirn, Karl Zerbe, David Bungay, Charles Wright, Taizo Miake, and William Walmsley.

Madrigal Singers, directed by Walter James, perform at the Executive Mansion at a 4 p.m. tea at which Mrs. Farris Bryant and Mrs. Gordon Blackwell will be hostesses and wives of legislators the special guests.

Their program includes "Adieu, Sweet Amarillis" by Wilbye; "On the plains, fairy trains," and "The Nightingale," both by Weelkes; "O felici occhi" by Arcadelt; and a Thiman arrangement of a Somerset folk-song, "On No John."

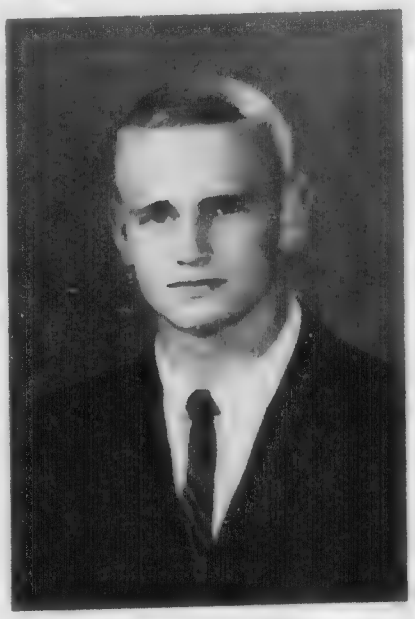
Additional Bus

A second bus providing transportation between classes from Kellum Hall to the Student Center and then to Westcott will begin service today, it was announced.

The buses will leave Kellum each day 10 minutes before classes begin, 10 minutes after classes begin, and 20 minutes before classes end.



SENATE CHANGES

Student Senate will change hands today as Johnny Smith adjourns the old senate for the last time and Julian Proctor calls the new senate to order for its first meeting. All students are welcome to attend this ceremonious occasion to see the administration change over and perhaps to witness some hot legislative debate.

AUDITIONS HELD

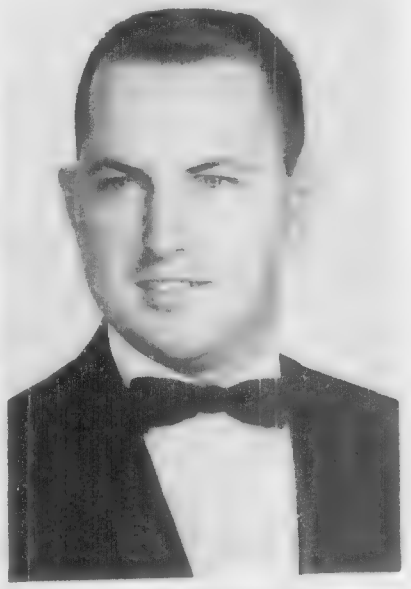
The Opera Guild of FSU announced today that auditions will be held on April 9 for Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," which will be performed on May 17-18.

Jones And Branch Appointed To Cabinet

JOHN JONES

By BOB RACKLEFF
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student Body President Johnny Smith announced the appointment of two new cabinet members yesterday.



Serving for the 1963-64 term will be John Jones as Secretary of State and Bill Branch as Secretary of Finance.

A junior psychology major from Tallahassee, Jones has served in Student Government as Co-secretary of Finance, a Presidential adviser, and been on various committees. Jones has also been active in Circle K, Pershing Rifles, and is a fraternity officer. Consistently on the Dean's List, he has maintained an overall average of 3.6.

Branch is a verteran of the Air Force, and is a junior meteorology major. A senator this year, he has served as vice chairman of the Elections and Appointments Committee, and as Co-chairman of International Week. Branch is also active as a fraternity officer and is on the Board of Directors of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

About Jones, Smith said, "John has exposed himself toj wide range of collegiate activities, and is acquainted with almost every phase of campus life, which has provided him with excellent qualifications for this position."

Commenting on Branch, Smith said, "Bill has been an outstanding senator this past year, and has especially done a remarkable job in working with our international students."

Fire Danger

Yesterday, the Florida Legislature opened for what might turn out to be the most important session in its history. The issues at stake will have much to say about where Florida will rank among the 50 states ten years from now in almost all fields of its development.

One of the most important fields which the legislature will be considering is education. Few will debate the need for funds in the area of construction of new and expanded campus facilities, but the time has come to re-examine the low priorities given to maintainance and upkeep of existing facilities, in particular in terms of fire safety.

Incorporated into most buildings on campus are adequate fire safety devices. These generally aid in detecting and putting out any fire that should occur. If a fire is too large for a sprinkler system or a fire extinquisher to handle, alarms are provided to warn persons to leave a burning building.

The balcony of Westcott auditorium was evidently not constructed with the possibility of fire in mind.

The only egress from the balcony is through the main administration building. There are no water sprinklers in the auditorium or in the main building.

IF WESTCOTT SHOULD CATCH FIRE while the auditorium is in use, we could witness a tragedy more horrible than any disaster we have heard of in recent years. The danger doesn't lie in Westcott auditorium, which is comparatively new and by itself nearly fireproof. The possible tragedy lies in the administration building itself, most of which is made of wood.

A CHAIN IS ONLY AS STRONG as its weakest link. Since the only exit from the balcony is through the main structure, the balcony of the auditorium is only as fire-safe as the wooden walls and flooring of most of the administration building.

FSU administrators have been trying to remedy this situation by installing an outside fire escape such as the north side of the first floor of the auditorium already has, or by putting in a sprinkler system.

Both of these plans have been stymied for lack of funds. It is not through ignorance by the Universiy administrators that this situation has been allowed to continue. A good example of the vigilance which the administration maintains over our facilities is the Science Building. Because of its aged wooden construction and the fact that it is used for scientific experiments there are more than 100 fire extinguishers located at various places about the structure. This profusion of fire extinguishers represents the efforts of Bill Watson, FSU Safety Coordinator, and his staff. They can provide such things from their budgets and inspect the campus to see that fire codes and safe practices are adhered to. However, installing a sprinkler system or extra stairway is way above their means.

The time has come for us to take the necessary steps to see that proper safety from fire is assured the University community by seeing that a proper priority is given fire safety in Westcott.

THE COST NOW would probably run several thousand dollars -- the cost later might be human life.

Force Bends Despots

Recently, "Flambeau" readers were treated to an interesting evaluation of Communist trouble-making potential. The writer did an admirable job of summing up communist economic failure, but he is in serious error when he assumes that Communist material impoverisment obviates eternal vigilance on our part. A mangy, sick flea-bitten dog is still capable of delivering a severe bite.

The right wing, so often accused of nurturing irrational fear of communism, doesn't fear communist opposition in an arena where all sides abide by the same rules. We do become concerned, though, when the other side makes its own rules as it goes along, e.g. the breaking of atomic test moratorium, severing of free access in Berlin, nonsharing of U.N. expenses, use of diplomats for espionage activities, and myriads of other broken agreements and instances of subterfuge.

The Communist, like a wrestler who has been observed gouging his opponents's eyes, holds his hands up and loudly protests his innocence. The middle-of-the-roader and leftist rather than acknowledging that some people do those things, would rather believe that the poor fellow is innocent and that the loud mouth yelling about what he saw from the sidelines must be some kind of nut.

The same writer suggests that the fact that Communist speakers often are not allowed to speak implies that we are not sure of our own democratic procedures. This is possible. Why is it that Gus Hall, the American Communist Party head, is not as violently set upon as Lincoln Rockwell, the American Nazi Party Chief? Shouldn't one gang be afforded the same number of hatchetmen as the next?

The point of all this is that from time immemorial, despotism has been incompatible with free society and from time to time nations have had to preserve their freedom by dint of force which unfortunately entails hard work, sacrifice and bloodshed. These are the only things that despots understand and yield to in the final analysis.

Where Is Evidence?

To the Editor:

I was very interested to read Mr. Paul Steel's column in the March 12th issue of the Flambeau. He made the statement that a person should disagree, if indeed he does disagree with another person's views, not with the other person himself. With this as a debator, I most wholeheartedly agree -- indeed, any thinking person would.

However, I must answer Mr. Steel's column on two points:

(1) He argues that one should never use "Argumentum ad Hominem," that is, arguing against a person and not his views, yet, in his column and in prior columns he has personally attacked Fulton Lewis III and Mr. Richard Hahn. Apparently he follows the philosophy of "do as I say not as I do," for while advocating one philosophy he follows another.

Also, there is a difference between attacking a person and questioning his ability and capacity to make a judgement upon certain things. Mr. Steel lists a fine set of qualifications. Of course, he never elaborates upon them, so that one can not be sure what his qualifications really are; but this awaits further explanation. In addition, we of the debate team have never seen Mr. Steel at an FSU debate, we therefore, question his ability to render judgement on FSU's debate team. All of which brings us to my second point.

(2) Where is Mr. Steel's evidence? Someone supposedly qualified to speak about debate ought to know one must support his arguments with re- many comments and many statements but has yet to offer one shread of evidence; this would seem to any debater, or thinking person, to render his arguments subject to doubt, indeed grave doubt.

I would like to go a step beyond Mr. Steel and offer evidence to support my view: Colonel George A. Lincoln who is director of the West Point National Debate Tournament has stated, "Debating fosters mental discipline leading to trained minds." And Professor Kim Giffin of the University of Kansas has stated, "I have never found anything which motivates students to try so hard to learn so much as competitive tournament debating." In fact we find debate, as a necessary discipline, supported since the time of Corax in 460 B.C. through Protagoras, Aristotle, Quintilian, Cicero up to this very day, where is is recognized that communication of ideas and beliefs is paramount.

Mr. Steel speak of attacking persons as wrong, yet he does it; he says we should discuss views and yet he does not. Just what are we to conclude?

ROTC Has No Value

To the Editor:

Of what reasonable value is required ROTC? Does it really fit the future teacher, scientist engineer to spend 72 hours slogging up and down the drill field-- marching the tin soldier? Does he learn leadership by goose-stepping or polishing brass? Or does he only acquire the fine art of spit-polishing a shoe?

Take into consideration the [illegible] of ROTC class -- does an Anthropologist find the "care and feeding of an M-1 rifle of academic value? Or does the intelligent college student need to be reinformed about Communist threat and our defense policy -- at the eighth grade level of complexity?

A very small amount of [illegible] clearly shows the required course to be insignificant value to all but the career-bound gung-ho. Even the staunch patriot is being deprived of the value of the [illegible] necessity of watering the course down to match the pseudoability of the reluctant, grumbling, entrapped students.

The merits are few indeed, and the grinding waste of time for the majority can be fatal to academic averages and to the [illegible] actual vital knowledge it is possible to gain in the first two years. The program even wastes the government money -- and steps are being taken to rectify the [illegible] of today's student and tomorrow's new plan -- if it is passed -- will take effect for two to four years.

Meanwhile "You cut three times you flunk."

CP Defense Is 'Faulty'

Philosophy suffered a slight setback last week in the Library Lecture Hall, when Dr. L.W. Beals of Williams College spoke to the Philosophy Club on "The Theory of Capital Punishment." He presented the [illegible] major positions of the enemies of CP, and then proceeded to criticize them from his perspective as a quasi-supporter of the CP doctrine.

CP falls under two heads -- civil CP and state CP. The abolitionists tend to concern themselves primarily with CP as it is related to civil crimes. Their protests take the form of 1) Juridical --i.e., the state has in the past executed men who were later proven to be innocent; 2) Theological--i.e., only God should have the power of life and death over human beings; 3) Rationalistic--i.e., CP is the degenerate remains of a crude and primitive age, it is a barbaric recourse to the "lex talonis." CP is rooted in irrationality, it's an animal instinct to get even, it looks toward the past and not the future -- retributive and not reformistic.

Beals pointed out that the main objection to CP is the pragmatic one. It fails in its object -- viz. the deterrence of future crimes. The pragmatist supports the Reformative theory -- that punishment should not only be directed to the prevention of crime, but also to the reformation of the offender.

So much for the essence of Beals' characterization of the "humanistic" position toward CP. He explicitly rejects this out-look, and maintains that all three humanistic views share the common failing of assuming that we already know what a "crime" is. Beals objects to this view and says that in a manner of speaking the punishment precedes the crime. Punishment is a device used to verify the fact that a crime has been committed -- it is used as a measuring stick to define the crime. What else can express the enormity of murder, Beals quotes, except CP.

What are some of Beals' reasons for rejecting the abolitionist position and what fallacies does he commit in so doing? One reason he gives is that the humanist influence is out of proportion: in reality the State is responsible to the welfare of society, not to the individual. But here Beals' objection is against the ontological foundations of humanism, an objection that not many would care to make. A humanist might just as well advocate the contemporary view -- it would hardly change the outcome of the dispute. The State's welfare is the welfare of the individuals comprising it.

Beals ignores the juridicial objection to CP, and rightly rejects the theological view -- the Church has supported CP in the past as a God-given right of the State (Romans 13:4). He cannot, however, deal with the rationalist objections. He quotes Barzun as to the barbarity of life imprisonment as opposed to CP, and 15 minutes later mentions the fact that few people really serve the entire life sentence, most spending less than 10 years in jail, and some serve only one or two years.

His own thesis leads him into a contradiction. If the punishment is necessary to define the crime, as he claims, and he also supports me to quote -- "What else can express the enormity of murder except CP?" he has already defined the enormity of murder and seeks to use CP as the definition of it.

ultural Commission stablished At FSU

... underway to es- ... a cultural commission at FSU ... ise students as agents of ... throughout all ... in the state.

... that one of Florida's major problems is attracting tourists, the establishment of the cultural commission is an attempt to make the state the cultural center of the Southeast.

The forming of fine arts programs, symphonies, art centers, and theatres would constitute a greater incentive for visitors to leave their homes and vacation in Florida, thus profiting the tourist trade.

Under the FSU commission, students would be chosen by the Secretary of State and would be instructed in methods of effectively persuading local merchants and civic leaders in their home towns of the economic advantages to be derived from sponsoring culture media within their city.

At FSU, the commission will be directly responsible to the student body president. The commission has not yet been statutorily established pending passage by Student Senate. Students interested in working on it are urged to contact Secretary of State Jim Blue.

'Miss Tallahassee' Underway

The Miss Tallahassee Pageant presented each year under the sponsorship of the Tallahassee Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be held in Westcott Thursday night at 8 p.m.

The Pageant is the official local finals contest for the Miss Florida Pageant, and held in cooperation with the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Tallahassee.

The winner of this local pageant is the official representative of Tallahassee in the Miss Florida Pageant held in Florida. The winner of the Miss Florida pageant participates in the Miss America Pageant held each year at Atlantic City, New Jersey.

The entire musical score for the Miss Tallahassee Pageant was written, arranged and directed by Rick Martorano. He is a musician at the FSU school of music and also the resident musician in the Tallahassee area.

Tickets for the Miss Tallahassee Pageant can be purchased on campus from any member of the FSU Jaycees or at Westcott Auditorium Thursday night at 8 p.m.

Finney Lectures And Dines At Sigma Xi Banquet

The FSU chapter of the Society of Sigma Xi, an organization devoted to the promotion of research in the sciences, held its annual banquet and introduction of new members last night.

Following the banquet, an authority on scientific statistics from Scotland, Dr. D. J. Finney, addressed the chapter on the topic, "The Statistician in Scientific Research." Dr. Finney is director of the Agricultural Research Council Unit of Statistics at the University of Aberdeen and is currently a visiting professor in the Department of Statistics at Harvard.

Besides his present capacity, Finney was lecturer in the design and analysis of scientific experiments at Oxford University. He has been consultant in statistics to the National Foundation for Educational Research of Great Britain and statistician to the United Nations F.A.O. attached to the Indian Council of Agricultural Research.

The speaker has received numerous honors, being a Fellow of the American Statistical Association, a member of the International Biometric Society, chairman of the Research Section of the Royal Statistical Society, Honorary Fellow of the Eugenics Society and recipient of the Weldon Memorial Prize in 1956. Dr. Finney is a graduate of Cambridge, a Fellow of the Royal Society, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh and the holder of the master of arts and doctor of science degrees.

Dr. Ralph Bradley, head of the Department of Statistics at FSU, said about the speaker: "In speaking on the topic, 'The Statistician is particularly well qualified. The role of the statistician in research is largely that of a consultant on the planning, design and analysis of experiments and he must bring to this activity both a knowledge of the statistical aspects of experimentation and insight into the subject matter field under investigation. The speaker exemplifies the best qualifications in this regard in that his publications and activities in statistics have been closely related to experimentation and studies in biology and genetics and more recently in the field of education."

Dr. Finney will also present a seminar in the Department of Statistics Seminar Series Monday, at 4 p.m. in Room 303 of the Mathematics-Meteorology Building. The topic of his seminar will be "Linear Regression for Sets of Correlated Variates."

The 13 new members and their areas of research are Mark Frederick Boyd, epidemiology and parasitology; Theodor Foerster, chemistry; Donald Hoerneschemeyer, chemistry; Thomas Lee Hopkins, biology; Shriniwas Kashav Katti, statistics; Tai Wan Kwon, food sciences; Cornelius Frederick Moore, nuclear physics; John Norman Murrell, chemistry; Wilford Neil Shelton, physics; Charles David Trader, chemistry; Charles Edward Watson, nuclear physics; William Buford Wilson, biological oceanography; Wayne Sieck, chemistry.

TALLAHASSEE -- Governor Bryant told lawmakers in Tallahassee that the state's current financial books are balanced, but booming growth has imposed increasing demands for up to 250 million additional tax dollars.

WASHINGTON --- The Federal Government is making moves to sidetrack a threatened strike on the nation's railroads. The roads notified the railway mediation board yesterday that changes in work rules -- which would wipe out thousands of jobs --would go into effect next Monday. The board, in turn, notified the White House that an emergency exists. This clears the way for President Kennedy to name a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute and delay a strike for at least 60 days.

Both the railroad unions, which oppose the changes in work rules, and railroad management have made it clear that they will cooperate with the government in a move to find a way to resolve their differences.

The Unions have taken strike votes -- but they say the appointment of a fact-finding board would avert a crisis.

BUENOS AIRES -- Argentina has been split by a military revolt. Ships to the Argentine navy are reported steaming toward the capital, Buenos Aires, in an effort to oust president Jose Maria Guido. Rebel Air Force jets are said to have bombed and strafed government tanks south of the capital. Argentine military commanders have ordered an all-out offensive against the rebel forces.

The Argentine revolt was launched by two retired army generals --with the announced aim of preventing national elections in June which, the rebels claim, would give control of the country to the followers of ex-dictator Juan Peron.

The generals got the support of Navy forces and the Marines, who twice surrounded President Guido's palace in the capital -- and withdrew both times, without explanation.

The rebels claim control of two cities -- Bahia and La Plata -- and they have ignored an order to surrender.

MOSCOW -- The Russians fired their fourth and biggest shot at the moon yesterday. They say it is flying well. They expect it will reach the area of the moon in three and one-half days. That could mean sometime Saturday. Russian scientists want the new spacecraft to take more pictures of the moon -- but it isn't clear whether they're aiming at a landing or a moon orbit.

The new Russian Lunik is five times heavier than its predecessors, all of which were launched in 1959. The third Lunik got pictures of the dark side of the moon.

It's believed that the new Lunik was the final stage of a multi-stage rocket which had been put into orbit around the earth.

Night Games

Next year, the Florida State football games will not be held at night as much as in the past, said Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha.

There are several ramifications from this change of policy. Some good; some bad.

First of all, it will allow FSU football fans from outlying areas to travel to Tallahassee during the day, watch a game (perhaps shop in town, the merchants say), and return home...all in one day.

As it is now, a Pensacola or Jacksonville alumnus is not willing to hop into the family car and travel 200 miles to see a grid contest and then return after it ends around 10:30 p.m.

No kicks so far.

Secondly, the university will benefit because the newspapers of the South will be able to give the game coverage. In the past, the games have ended after or close to the deadline of such newspapers as the St. Pete Times, Tampa Tribune, Miami Herald, and Jacksonville Times-Union -- all influential and well-read papers in their areas. If the coverage is put in the paper, more than likely, it is in the second or third edition, which does not go to out-of-state areas like Tallahassee.

Thus FSU students do not see the coverage in their hometown papers...or, if the article does appear, the students need magnifying glasses to find them.

With the game ending at 10:30, only the newspapers west of Tallahassee in Central Time zone have been able to amply cover the Tribe.

And no big paper west of Tallahassee is interested in FSU.

However, with a game ending around 4 to 5 p.m., these normally disinterested papers might play up FSU more out of convenience than interest.

Furthermore, it takes an enormous weight off a reporter's shoulders, when he knows that he has time to double-check his split infinitives and percentages.

But the bad points; (and this involves an old cliche) no one can do anything about the weather.

With the student section situated the way it is, FSU fans are going to have the sun shining right into their eyes. The layout of Campbell Stadium is not unlike Gainesville's Florida Field, and, being so, the paying customers will have the best seats since they won't have Sol roasting their corneae. A definite inconvenience.

But if it rains...

Tribe Tracksters vanquish Volunteers

Winning all the 15 events but five, the Florida State track team chased off a weaker than expected Tennessee team Monday afternoon at the Florida high track. The Vols should be willing to stay away this time, as they were losers by 98 to 35.

Tennessee was supposed to be one of the rising powers of the Southeastern Conference. Chuck Rohe had moved to the Vol helm from Furman, which earlier had stopped the Seminoles by 78 to 67. He vowed to place Tennessee out in front in track.

Tennessee managed to win only in the Mile Run, 330 Hurdles, 120 Hurdles, Javelin and Broad Jump. The Seminoles won all the other events.

The meet saw two track records and one school record fall, as well as one track record tied. Al Williams of FSU set a school record in the shot put and a track record in the discus. The Vol's Russell clipped the track record in the 330 hurdles, and FSU's Giswold matched his previous track record in the high jump.

Buddy Teagle singled in the run that pushed Florida State over Miami 2-1 in a tight baseball game there Monday.

Florida State's Alan Thomas allowed only four hits. His teammates came up with three double plays to keep Miami from cashing in on its few opportunities.

Teagle's single to center in the eighth inning scored Gary Nichols who had walked, stole second and gone to third on a balk.

Senior Bruce Darsey, Florida State All-State football player, is sworn into the Naval Aviation Officer program by Commander William M. Miller, the executive officer of the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit at Jacksonville.

At Inaugural Ceremony

New President Addresses Banquet

By MIKE HICKEY

tudent Government at U is number one in the th and Midwest because lervies its "collective rength through individual rticipation," said newly talled Student Body Pre- ent Johnny Smith at the ugural Banquet, Tues- night.

Smith prefaced his inaugural address with a quote from University President Gordon Blackwell, asserting that the university with the capabilities to assume a competent role in national and international affairs is one that "encourages free student self-government as basic to education for responsible citizenship."

Main order of business for the banquet was the installation of all new student government and class officers by retiring Chief Justice Ross McVoy.

Guest speaker for the affair was J. Broward Culpepper, Executive Secretary of the Board of Control. FSU, its students and student government in light of an ever-changing world, was the message carried in Culpepper's talk. "Student government," he said, "is a laboratory in citizenship and government."

Florida, according to Culpepper, has not kept abreast in higher education and must now build to meet the huge student influx.

The impressive candlelight ceremonies were interjected with a short farewell speech by Ken van Assenderp, in which he admonished his audience to "Stand by what you believe in -- every day." It has been a tendency of the administration, faculty and students of FSU, van Assenderp continued, to "lapse into fearful pseudo - sophistication" which is damnation to a great university's growth.

The installation of officers was preceded by presentation of the Outstanding Senator of the Year Award to Joyce Killian.

A special award was made to outgoing President Ken van Assenderp by Attorney General Lyman Fletcher, on behalf of those persons who had worked with van Assenderp in student government during the past two years.

New Senate Begins By Passing Bills

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau Staff Writer

The 1963-63 Senate led by Julian Proctor, student body vice president, convened yesterday, passing five bills as the first official business of the new legislative body.

Proctor, in his address to the Senate expressed his belief that the Senate as a whole working together could carry out its plans and reach its goals in a successful manner.

"To have a successful Senate, we cannot depend on the hard work and dedication of the few, but we must seek the aid of the students that have helped us and whom we represent. This is no guarantee against criticism," said Proctor. "I ask for your support, criticism, and encouragement which I will in turn give to you."

The bills concerning the adaptation of the court system, the revision of the President's cabinet, and the inclusion of the elections bureau into the statutes were passed unanimously.

Bill No. 1 adapts the Honor Court, University Court, and Traffic Court to the Trimester system. Vacancies in the Judicial system will be filled third trimester by the trimester committee.

Bill No. 2 revises the President's cabinet by lowering the number of cabinet members from ten to six. This bill is in correlation with the new cabinet system under Johnny Smith, student body president.

Bill No. 4 changes the committees under cabinet positions to "Bureau" with the exception of the elections committee which will be called the elections commission.

Bill No. 5 puts the elections bureau policy into the Statutes. This includes restriction of parties, rules and regulations.

Bill No. 8 changes the elections committee cabinet positon to Commissioner of Elections.

Bill No. 3, to abolish Class Senators, was tabled until September of next year. This bill would reapportion class senators to cabinet positions and add to the number of precinct senators.

Arnie Gibbs, Bill Branch and George Miller sent in letters of resignation of Precinct Senatorial positions due to recent cabinet appointments.

The Cabinet appointments by Johnny Smith, student body president, were announced and sent to a committee to be brought up for approval in Senate at the next meeting.

Cox Posthumously Awarded

A short story written by the late Dr. James T. Cox of the English faculty has posthumously received one of the 1963 O'Henry Memorial Awards.

The story appears in "Prize Stories 1963: The O'Henry Awards," a book which has just been published by Doubleday and Company.

Dr. Francis G. Townsend, head of the English Department, will read the story at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. Friday in Westminster House.

The short story, entitled "The Golden Crane," was one of 14 selected for the O'Henry Award given for the best of the entire year's published output. The story, which is about Tallahassee, was first published in a West Coast literary journal called the "MSS," in 1961.

Dr. Townsend described Cox as one of the most creative persons who ever came to the FSU campus and said his death cut short a career that was just beginning to come to its peak.

"This is evidenced by the imposing quality of this piece of literature which he produced just before his death," Townsend said.

Kaney New Commissioner

Student Body President Johnny Smith announced the appointment of Jon Kaney as Commissioner of Elections today.

A junior, majoring in government, Kaney will be the first in three years to have had elections experience prior to appointment as commissioner.

A transfer student from North Florida Junior College, Kaney was president of the freshman class and vice president of the student before coming to FSU. He has served as a member of the Elections Bureau and was on the Policy Board of the University Promotions Bureau.

According to Smith and Kaney, the responsibility for elections will no longer rest with any cabinet position. This was done in order to remove any student concern that the elections procedure is in any way associate with executive activities. The Elections Commission will be, therefore, a separate entity of the executive branch.

Kaney has had extensive experience in elections rules and procedure, having worked as a member of the Elections Bureau earlier this year, and Smith has expressed his confidence in Kaney's new position as Commissioner of Elections during the coming year.

Statements Due

All candidates must file expense statements with the Elections Bureau by 5 p.m. tomorrow, it was announced today. Statements may be picked up and returned to the main desk in Longmire Bldg.

WASHINGTON--News Conference--President Kennedy was asked at his news conference about former President Eisenhower's view that the budget can be cut. The President replied that Eisenhower had consulted Maurice Stans, Eisenhower's Budget Director, and Stans was the official under whom the nation had the highest peacetime deficit in its history.

Kennedy was asked about Eisenhower's charge that money is being wasted on the space program. The President said this was not a new position for Eisenhower. He said Eisenhower had disagreed in the past with those who wanted an all-out effort to make the U.S. first in space accomplishments.

The President estimated some 4,000 Soviet troops have been withdrawn from Cuba in the last month or so. He said the Russians still have some thousands on the island and the U.S. will keep a close watch while continuing hope that more Russians will be withdrawn.

Kennedy reiterated U.S. opposition to hit-and-run raids on Cuba by anti-Castro Cuban exiles. The President said such actions are ineffective but could push the U.S. into a war and the U.S. ought to have some control in the matter. He contrasted the raiders with some 500 veterans of the anti-Castro Cuban invasion who have joined the U.S. Armed Forces

WASHINGTON--The U.S. rejects Russia's charge that the U.S. was responsible for two recent attacks on Soviet ships in the Cuban area by Cuban exiles. A U.S. note rejects the Soviet charge that the U.S. encouraged such raids. And the U.S. reminds the Russians of the U.S. governments statements and actions aimed at preventing such raids.

BUENOS AIRES--Leaders of an Argentine Navy revolt to topple the government of President Guido are reported seeking a truce. Military leaders loyal to the government claim the rebels have quit, but rebel sources deny this. Meanwhile, the rebels also claim victory and say a new national government will be set up in the Port City of Bahia Blanca.

GREENWOOD, MISS.--At Greenwood, Miss., police have broken up another group of Negroes marching to register to vote. Police repeatedly ordered the 19 Negroes to break ranks, but they refused. The police then grabbed them one by one and sent them to jail, on disorderly conduct charges.

Debaters Close With Victories

The FSU Debate Squad closed out its season with a victory at the University of Tennessee Invitational Tournament this past weekend, and with Tau Kappa Alpha initiation and pledging on April 2.

The squad brought home two trophies, numerous medals and certificates of excellence.

The negative team of Peyton Wynns and Louis Barnett received a first place trophy, with five wins and no losses. The four-man unit of Wynns, Barnett, Joan Corey, and Richard Root compiled seven wins and three losses to bring home the second place sweepstakes award.

Dean Fadely and Marilyn Young were among the highest scorers in individaul speaking points. Others making the trip were Bill McCarron, Richard Erickson, Susan Harrell, and Barbara Jackson. Coaches accompanying the squad were Richard Hahn and Glynn Riley.

The novice squad garnered every award available at the University of South Florida tournament on March 15 and 16. In addition to winning overall sweepstakes, the team of Barbara Jackson and Nancy Dale received the award for best affirmative unit, while Susan Harrell and Peyton Wynns placed as best negative team. Miss Dale, Miss Jackson, and Wynns received individual speaking awards also.

The forensic year ended April 2 with Tau Kappa Alpha initiation and pledging. Requirements for membership in Tau Kappa Alpha, national forensic honorary society, are two years of participation in forensics, academic standing in the upper third of one's class, and high character.

Those initiated were Joan Corey, Richard Erickson, Bill McCarron and Peyton Wynns. At the same time the chapter pledged those with one year's experience in forensics who indicated interest [illegible] activity. Those pledged were Canner, Carol Clifton, Nancy Susan Harrell, Barbara [illegible] Doug Padgett[illegible] Dean Fadely and Jack [illegible] received as transfer [illegible] Howard College. Humanities Conference

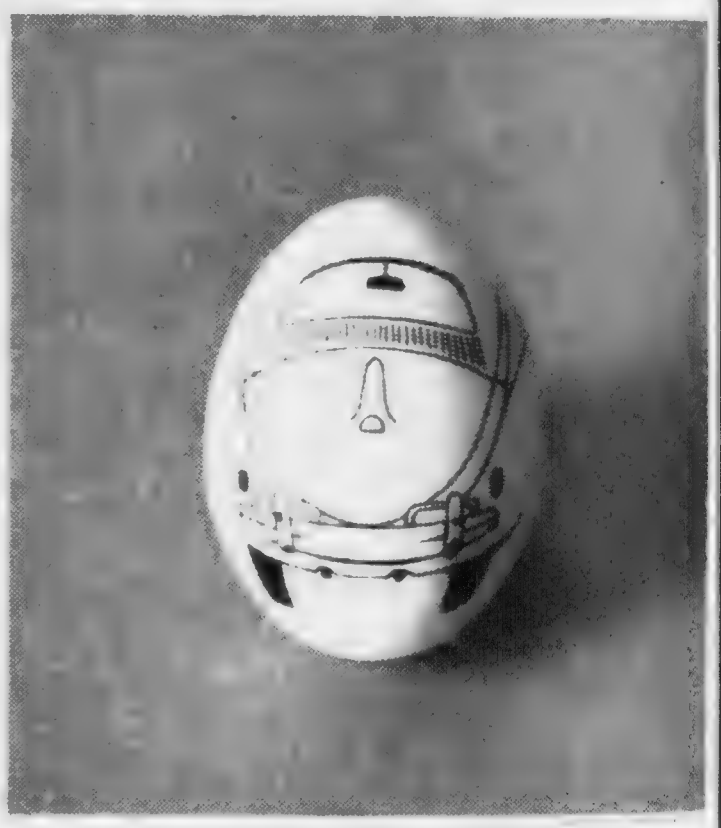
The 10th annual meeting of the Southern Humanities Conference gets under way here tomorrow and the first panel discussion at 9:30 a.m. is on the subject "Are the Humanities Expendable?"

Panelists will be Dr. Michael Kasha, director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics at FSU; Dr. Wiley Housewright, professor of music; and Dr. Paul Piccard, director of the Honors Program, with Dr. Robert Lawton, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, as moderator.

Conference chairman is Edd Winfield Parks of the University of Georgia. Between 40 and 50 persons are expected for the two-day conference. Most of the discussions are in the Starry Conference Room of the School of Business.



An address on "The Humanities in the Space Age" Secretary of State Tom Adams will be delivered in the Strozier Library Lecture Hall at 8 p.m. tomorrow. The public is invited.

"Technical Challenges" will be the subject of a talk by William Kehl, director of the Computing Center University of Pittsburgh, at 11 a.m. Friday in the Starry Room. Dean Louis Shores of the FSU Library School will lead a discussion afterward.

Chester L. Neudling, specialist for the humanities, US Health, Education and Welfare Dept., will speak at 2 p.m. on "A National Humanities Foundation." "Industry's View of the Humanities" will be the subject of a talk by Bernard Raboy, technical director of advanced engineering projects for the Martin Company.

The guest speakers will be John W. Carr III, professor thematics at the University of Carolina and past president Association for Computing Prof. William B. Kehl, director of the Computation and Data Processing Center at the University of Pittsburgh and specialist in legal information retrieval and whole text literature processing; and Prof. Joseph Balintfy of Tulane University, specialist in operations research and linear programming as applied to hospital diets and medical diagnosis.

Following a welcoming address by President Gordon W. Blackwell in Longmire Auditorium at 2 p.m. Thursday Dr. E. P. Miles Jr., director of the Computing Center, will report on research, instructional and service activities of the Computing Center for 1961-63. Dr. Carl McMurray, assistant professor of government, will speak on "A Computer Study of Attitude Patterns."

At 8 p.m. Thursday Professor Kehl will speak in the School of Education Lecture Hall on "The Use of a General Purpose Digital Computer for Information Retrieval."

On Friday Kehl will speak at a joint session with the Southern Humanities Conference in Starry Lecture Hall on "The Computer in Service to the Humanities." His talk will be at 11 a.m.

Dr. Balintfy will speak in Room 120 of the School of Business at 4 p.m. Friday on "Some Applications of Linear Programming to Optimal Dietetics in a Large Hospital."

At 9:30 a.m. Saturday a special session will be held in Room 101 of the Mathematics - Meteorology Building for students in the Honors Program, members of Phi Beta Kappa and other scholastic honorary groups. Dr. Paul Piccard director of the Honors Program, will preside.

Piccard Goes To Oakridge

Dr. Paul J. Piccard, associate professor of government and director of the Honors Program, has been selected to participate in the 1963 summer institute on "Humanistic Discussion in Science" in Oak Ridge June 17 - July 26.

Piccard will be one of 30 participants. They have been selected on a nationwide basis from departments of economics, government, history, philosophy, political science and sociology. In addition, a small group of research scientists primarily from Oak Ridge National Laboratory will attend the institute as participants-consultants.

The six-week institute presented by Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies is sponsored by the Division of Nuclear Education and Training of the Atomic Engergy Commission.

Theme of the institute will be discussion of the humanities in science, into which will be interwoven the subject of the nuclear age. Included in the topics covered will be science as a factor in international affairs; trends in the influence of science and scientists in government relations; the organization of large scale research and the psychology of creativity.

BONNIE BROMBERG
... a junior at FSU, has won the southern regional contest for students conducted by the National Federation of Music Clubs. A piano student of Prof. Edward Kilenyi, Bonnie, who is 19, now will compete in the national contest at Pittsburgh, April 20.

Science Foundation Grants Fellowships

The National Science Foundation has offered cooperative graduate fellowships to eight students to study at FSU during the next academic year.

Robert N. Rigby, in theoretical physics; Hal Merriar Gilmore, mathematics; Edward James Powers, organic chemistry; Frank Atkinson Richey Jr. nuclear physics; Lawrence Stanislaus Husch, mathematics; J. Patrick Tatum, chemistry; Francis Josephy, mathematics.

In addition, the foundation has offered summer fellowships to seven students to work as teaching assistants at FSU during an 8-12 period.

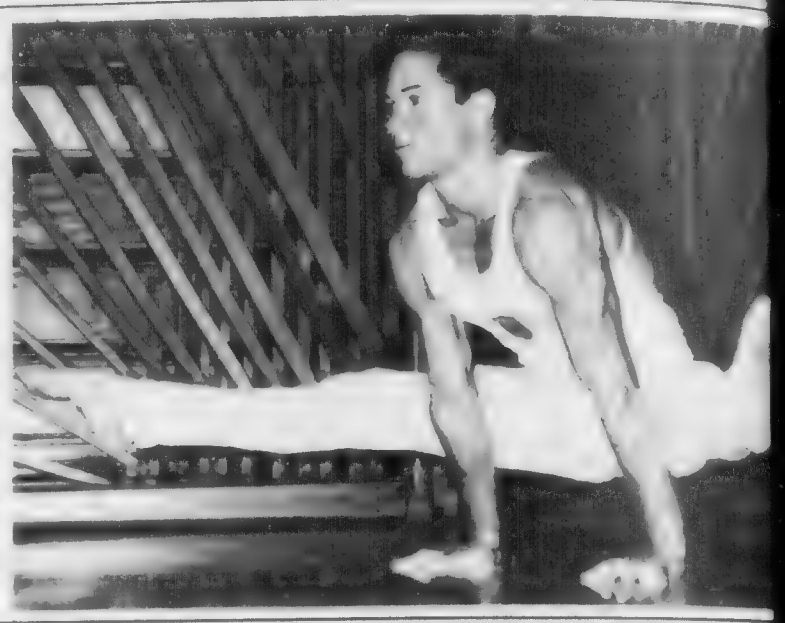
Miller Is Eighth Of 73 In NCAA Meet



Rick Miller placed eighth in a field of 73 entries in the Floor Exercise event at the National Collegiate Athletic Association Gymnastic Championship in Pittsburgh, Penn., March 29-30. Miller's eighth place score was 9.125, while Mike Henderson (Mich.) and Tom Seward (Penn State) tied for first with a score of 9.40. In the finals Miller had the third best score for his performance but the preliminaries and finals are added to give the gymnast a combined total then averaged to give him a place in the event.

Miller was the only entry from Florida State and the entire Southeast. Michigan was the team champion with 129 pts., Southern Illinois was 2nd with 73 pts., and Miller placed FSU 25th out of 42 teams.

Coach Joe Gusic was as pleased as Miller with the eighth place finish. He said about his performance, "Rick said that the boys ahead of him were just too tough to beat, and that the caliber of gymnastics was th best that has ever entered an NCAA gymnastic championship, all pointing toward a remarkable advancement in the sport of gymnastics in colleges and universities."

Coach Gusic was unable to make the trip to see him work a new routine that they had worked out only a week before the meet.

The University of Pittsburgh was host of this 1963 NCAA meet and a sellout crowd of over 4,500 watch the finals Saturday night.

Diamond Men Return Friday

Florida State's baseball team, now 8-3 on the year, will play at Seminole Field on the FSU campus Friday and Saturday against Furman of the Southern Conference.

Both will be single games, the Friday tilt beginning at 3:30, Saturday's game at 1:30. Probable pitchers for FSU will be righthanders Al Beccaccio and Allen Thomas.

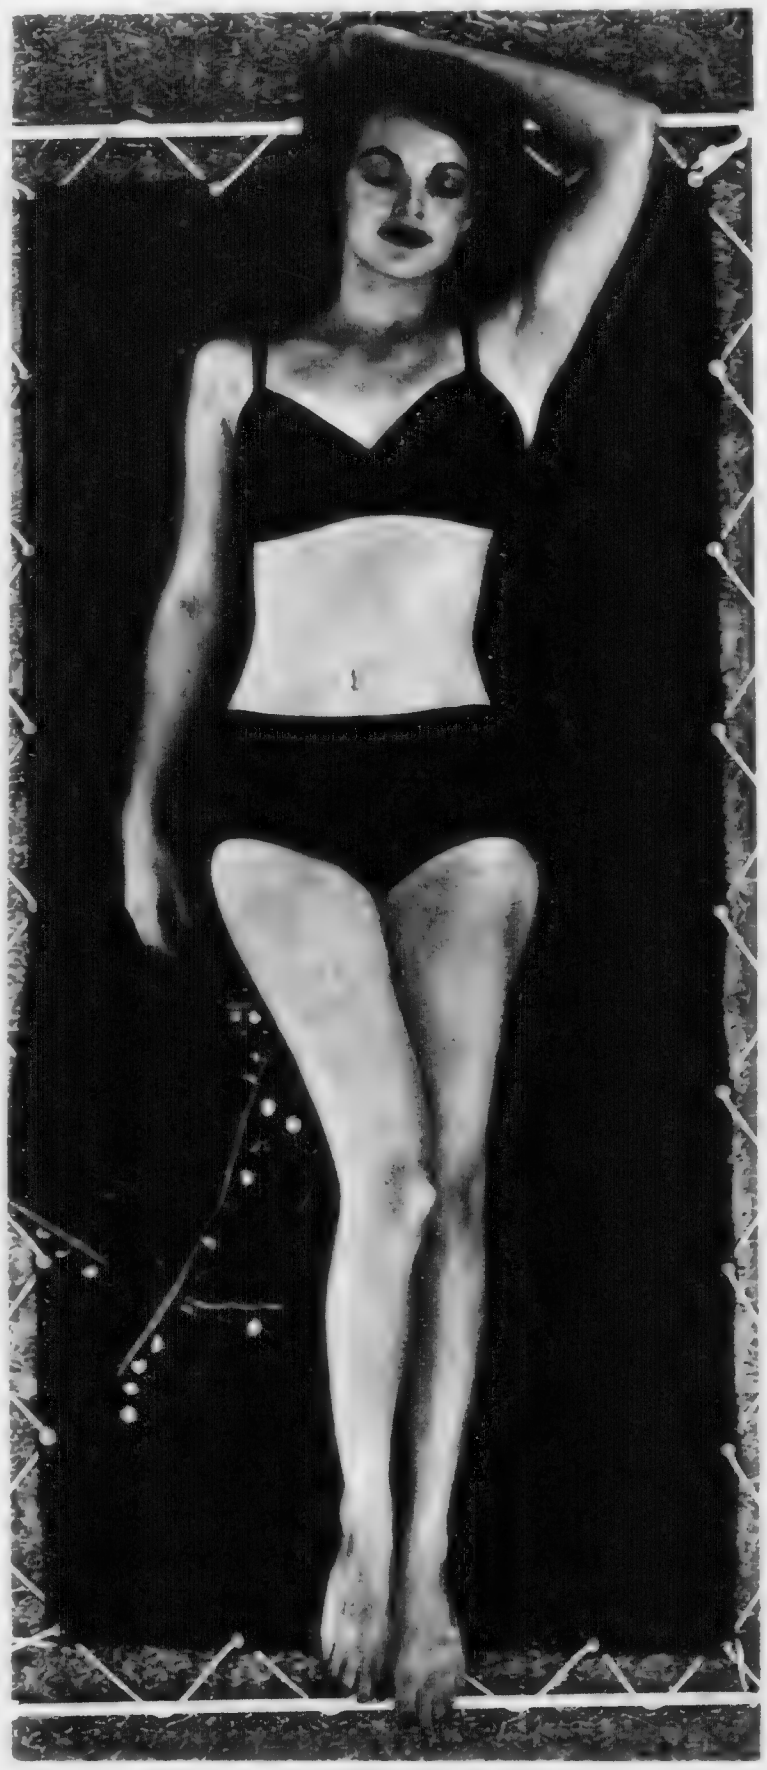
The Seminoles will also play here on Tuesday against Valdosta State before taking a break for final exams. On April 20, Coach Danny Litwhiler's team will head toward the Carolinas on a week long trip in which they will play seven games between Statesboro, Ga., and Camp Lejeune, N.C.

In other spring sports at FSU this weekend, the Seminole tennis team meets Columbia today, Friday and Saturday; the golfers are involved in seven-way matches today and Friday; and the track team enters the Carolina Relays Saturday in Columbia, S.C.

Frosh Tracksters Tromp Troy Staters

Florida State's freshman track team defeated Troy (Ala.) State College for the second time this year Tuesday at Troy, 72-59, to run the Baby Seminole dual-meet record to 3-0.

Only double winner for FSU was Darrell Guthrie of Fort Myers, who took the low hurdles and broad jump. Richard Carrico won the mile and barely missed in the two-mile.



Other FSU winners were Andy Nobles in the 440, Jim Morton in the shot put, Mike Mason in the javelin, Dean Sellers in the pole vault, plus FSU's mile relay team of Nobles, John Weatherspoon, Jeff Rozhon and Frank Kirk. FSU won eight of the 14 events.

Next meet for the FSU frosh comes April 20 against Florida during the 7 p.m. FSU-Florida varsity meet here.

A SAMPLE OF "AN EVENING OF DANCE"

Tonight In Opperman Music Hall

Theatre Dance Performs

Some original dance compositions will be performed by members of FSU's Theatre Dance Group tonight for the Florida Festival of Fine Arts.

The program will be at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited. Holly Chapman, instructor in physical education and recreation is director of the dance group.

All of the numbers on the program were choregraphed by Robin Leeger, president of Theatre Dance. A senior at FSU, she has studied at the Connecticut College of Dance and with May O'Donnell in New York City.

Miss Leeger choreographed "Time Held Me" and "Tertulia" and dances a duet number "Love Trilogy" with Clyde Friedman.

"Transovaem," a title taken from the Russian phrase for "Come let us dance," was choreographed by Ann Mairalla. A junior majoring in English, she had ten years of ballet training at the Mayer-Gould Studio in Palm Beach. Six dancers perform her composition.

A composition on a philosophical theme, "Barrier of Loneliness," was choreographed by Charlotte Fontana and Marilyn Finch. Miss Finch has been elected president of the group for 1963-64. A freshman, she had 13 years of ballet training with the Atlanta Civic Ballet.

Another FSU freshman, Sarah Adams, has been elected vice-president for next year. She formerly appeared with the Miami Ballet Company and studied at the Miami Conservatory. She dances in "Castalia" choreographed by Gerarda Everett of Miami.

A satire on the classical ballet "Swan Lake" entitled "Duck Pond" was choreographed by Fairfax Smathers. Five dancers perform the number.

Appearing as one of the dancers in "Duck Pond" and in three other numbers is Lin Pollard. A graduate student in geology, she studied ballet for 12 years in Texas, composing dance for various musical productions.

Other dances on the program include "Undercurrents" choreographed by Miss Chapman and "One

Many of the musical compositions featured in "An Evening of Dance" were written by Lester Bruch, musical director of the group.

'Cloak', 'Gianni Schicchi'

Festival Concludes With Two Operas

Florida State University's Opera Guild will present two one-act operas, "The Cloak" and "Gianni Schicchi," both by Puccini, tomorrow night, as one of the events winding up the weeklong Florida Festival of Fine Arts which ends Sunday.

The operas, each an hour long, will begin at 8:15 p.m. and will be staged in Westcott Auditorium. Richard Collins is director of the productions and sings the title role in "Gianni Schicchi." Music is by the Opera Chamber Orchestra conducted by Robert Sedore.

TICKETS ARE PRICED at $2 for the public and $1 for students and will be available at the door on the night of performance.

One of the greatest comedies of the early centuries, "Gianni Schicchi" is a contrast to "The Cloak" which is in a tragic vein. Settings also are of opposite extreme with the events of the first opera taking place in the 13th century palace in Florence while the other is set among sordid surroundings on a barge on the Seine near Paris today.

Jane Newton, one of two coeds who played the role of Lauretta, in the March 22-23 productions, will sing the role in tonight's performance.

THE OTHER OPERA, "The Cloak" will have Ethel Donaldson in the role of Georgette, the wife of a bargeman on the Seine, Michel, sung by Lonnie Keene. Her lover, Louis, a stevedore, is sung by Walter James of the music faculty.

Miss Donaldson was one of the ten finalists in the recent Metropolitan Opera auditions in New York.

ADDITIONAL BUS

Buses will run between Kellum and Westcott on a 20 minute basis until exams are over.

CAMPUS MOVIE

The Campus Movie for this week will be "Bad Day at Black Rock," starring Spencer Tracy, Anne Francis, Robert Ryan and Walter Brennan.

The movie will be shown Friday at 10:30 p.m., and again on Sunday at 5 p.m.

TENNIS REQUEST

Students have been requested by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby not to play tennis on the courts near Magnolia Hall after dormitory closing hours.

Dean Oglesby said that residents of this girls' dormitory have reported being disturbed by tennis matches there late at night.

'Class Night' Activities Set For Graduating Seniors

Class Night, one of the many activities held during graduation week for all seniors and their guests, will be held Tuesday, at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Traditionally, awards, presentations and exchange of caps and gowns are made at this function. A musical program presented by Seniors, reading of the class poem and history and recognition of class sponsors and outstanding Seniors are also highlights of the program.

FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell will present the Hall of Fame for the Class of '63. Outstanding Seniors will be presented by Dr. Daisy Parker and Dr. Claude Flory. Dean R.R. Oglesby will present the Permanent Class Officers.

The James Litely Award given by Phi Delta Theta Fraternity will be presented by Coach Hugh Durham to the outstanding athlete of FSU. This award was formerly presented at the Spring Formal.

Each Senior should ask a Junior to receive his cap and gown. Men or women may be invited to receive this honor. Seniors with their respective Juniors are to line up for the Processional at Opperman Amphitheatre at 7 p.m.

Seniors are urged to invite parents and friends to attend this ceremony. Dark suits for men and white dresses for women will be the appropriate attire.

FSU Artists Fare Well In Competition

Three members of the faculty and one graduate student in the Department of Art at FSU had paintings accepted in the 1963 Artists of the Southeast and Texas Exhibit at the Delgado Museum of Art, New Orleans.

One of the faculty members, David Bungay, assistant professor of art, won one of the five equal prizes in competition against 425 artists who submitted some 700 works. His painting, entitled "Landscape with Two Automobiles," won for the artist a cash prize of $100 and a chance to have a one-man exhibition at the Delgado Museum next year.

The other art faculty members and their paintings represented in the exhibit are William Walmsley, instructor, a collage, "Le Jardin;" and Charles J. Wright, instructor, an oil painting, "Woman by a Window."

FSU graduate student Lynn Badeaux of New Orleans, an art student of Karl Zerbe, has an oil painting in the exhibit. It is entitled "Three Figures in an Interior." Miss Badeaux's work was recently shown at the FSU University Gallery.

The Delgado Museum holds an annual exhibit of paintings and sculpture by artists and sculptors of the Southeast and Texas. All the works in the current exhibit will be up through April 28.

LANDSCAPE WITH TWO AUTOMOBILES

Student Government

In case you haven't noticed there are two buses now making the rounds on campus during each day of classes. This extra bus and the revised schedules of both buses came about through the efforts of the Executive Council of Kellum Hall. This Council, working through the Business Manager's office have secured the extra service on a trial basis. They fell that the size of the campus and the location of the men's residence halls and several classroom buildings at one end of the campus warrants the additional service provided by the extra bus.

Whether or not this additional service remains is up the student body -- if the buses are used during the next week's trial period, more than likely next Fall will see two campus buses on a permanent basis where there was once one.

Many would question the propriety of the action of the Kellum Hall Council in this and other matters affecting the entire campus. Some feel that all such actions should lie in the province of the central student government situated in Longmire. Such feelings arise from the fact that our student government is patterned after the United States government and that consequently all legislation passed pertaining to the campus as a whole is the rightful province of the central Longmire government.

Following this line of reason it is only a hop, skip and jump to where the central student government should incorporate all residence halls, sorority, fraternity and scholarship house governments into the central student government in order to more closely resemble its national federal conterpart. This would be ridiculous: the analogy between our student government and that of the United States extends to the Student Body Constitution and stops right there.

There is a basic difference between the United States and the FSU campus: The student governments of FSU--all of them -- be it Kellum Hall, Pi Kappa Phi or Longmire are guided and supported by University administration just as much as by the student body. The United States government has no 'outside guiding force' (on this earth, at least) comparable to our administration to see that our laws are adhered to and that everybody has an opportunity to be heard.

FSU is fortunate in having an administration willing to listen to anyone who makes sense and is motivated by a sincere desire to aid and further the University and its programs.

It should therefore be the aim of all the student governments to protect and further their rights of access to these interested administrators.

Trimester Being Judged Now

Note: This article is the first of a series on the trimester system, being printed as a guest column.

By KEN PEALE

As now nearly two trimesters are history, the cliche, "It is too early to tell yet" becomes less and less truthful and more and more meaningless with every day. The fact is that the trimester is definitely a poor academic system.

If one compares the dates registration began of the semester system in September, 1961, and on the trimester system in September, 1962, he notes the fall trimester begins a week before the fall semester would have. (Registration began September 5, 1962 and September 13, 1961.) A similar comparison shows examinations will end six weeks earlier this year than they would have on the semester schedule. "Examinations will end this year on April 19. The spring examinations ended under the semester on June 1, 1962.)

This indicates that two trimesters, supposed to cover the same work as two semesters, are "completed" in five weeks less time. Although class periods have been lengthened to compensate for the shortened schedule, precious out-of-class study time is forever lost.

The out-of-class study time is the time in which true learning is done--not by cramming, but by assimilation. It has been brought out in earlier columns that nothing stays long with a student if he merely crams without truly taking in the knowledge and making it a part of him. This process of assimilation takes time--time not available on the trimester schedule.

The human mind can be compared to a classical wine jug. It can hold a lot of wine, but only a small amount can be poured through the narrow neck at a given time. Likewise the mind can store in it a great deal of knowledge, but can ingest it in only limited quantities. Trying to force excessive amounts of knowledge into the mind at one time is the same as trying to pour more wine into the jug than its narrow neck will take. The wine will be spilled and go to waste.

So will knowledge--lost forever. Psychologists have said it is unsound to cover great amounts of material in small times. Better results, they state, are obtained when the time factor is lengthened.

The trimester's advocates say let the students use their time "more efficiently." What is "more efficiently?" Is it the elimination of recreational activities? It is a known fact that recreation is a need that must be fulfilled just as the needs for food, sleep, exercise, fresh air, water and elimination of wastes. Obviously, no one has suggested reduction of mealtimes in favor of studying--cramming.

Is it the elimination of extra-curricular activities--cultural events, student government, honoraries? These are the things that give student a fully balanced and bene cial experience at college. A devoid of all recreational and extr curricular activities is as sever out of balance as one in which st and assimilation are unwelc strangers.

The trimester denies the stud the right to be a student and tra forms him into a machine--one merely an item being processed on an assembly line. Assembly li produce Fords, but Fords do not the world; the world runs the wor

More fundamentally, this is a que tion of quality versus quantity. Florida Legislature ordered state universities to be open yea round in order to educate more st dents faster. A check in the F catalog reveals, however, that trimester keeps the universit open only two and a half weeks lon er than the semester. This does move very far toward year-ro operation and does not justify denial of the students' assimilat time.

Even if true year-round operat was attained under the trimester, loss of assimilation would still prohibitive price to pay. As the ation now stands, the third trim ter, 1963, will be little more a summer session on the seme system. There are only a limi number of courses offered. Pr sumably this is based upon e mates of the numbers of students intend to attend the third trimest Thus this indicates that a limi number of students planning to co to the third trimester. Will m students attend the third trimest 1964? Even if they do this to is worth the price. Thus there is need to wait until 1964 to judge trimester.

FSU Playing MusicalHouses

Life in Mabry Heights must be good fun, you never know from one week to the next where you will be living.

Several weeks ago, the administration decided that they would allow a private company to build a new dormitory, and a dozen families were notified to move out within a week. Four days later, the families were told that since the Board of Control had refused this profit-granting contract, they could stay temporarily. But only temporarily, for when money allows, new dormitories will replace this married housing.

Space may require this but what are they doing with the old houses? Evidently there are those who miss the old Social Welfare building and other such clapboard horrors that once adorned our campus. The intent seems to be to move houses from Mabry as fast as a piece of ground that will make the appropriate eyesore can be found. With over sixty houses left to move, the campus should be a real sight by 1965.

Even if one recognizes the necessity to move these houses, why must married students be, as usual, on the losing end. With the destruction of Mabry Heights, low cost family housing disappears. There are many apartments at Alumni Village available, but their greater cost and more difficult location could prevent many families from living there. Indeed, if not for Mabry some students could not have afforded to finish college.

It is certainly about time equal consideration was given to the financial problems of married students and it is equally necessary that these students be given representation in the student government.

If Mabry Heights must go, why cannot these houses be moved to a new location and established as low cost scholarship family housing. Space, certainly cannnot be claimed as a limiting factor, for greens, golf courses and vast vacant areas surrounding Tully Gym could be used in a much better way as location for many of these houses. Properly managed, such a housing area could provide living for economically pressed students at even lower costs than at present.

Where Is Appeal?

In his latest column, Mr. Dobson would have us believe that a large part of the world has fallen victim to Communism because of the inability of Western liberals to understand the problem of the nature of Communism.

On the contrary, I would juxtapose the Communist threat with the Capitalist "hope of a better world," and maintain that the reason the East has made major gains in the last few decades is not due to the nature of Communism, but instead can be explained by the nature of Capitalism. The Communists make their widest appeal to the underdeveloped regions of the world, regions well acquainted with the exploitive techniques of the capitalist.

Capitalism is the symbol of tyranny and economic suppression, the symbol of freedom for the "white man" and of equality for all except the colored races. Native intellectuals are drawn to the theories of the Leninists and find deep satisfaction in the view that by controlling their economy they can plan the type of world they wish to live in.

Liberal Western socio-capitalism, or neocapitalism, is not the capitalism that most of the ex-colonial world is aware of. The view of capitalism that these people hold, be it true or false, combined with the "utopian" ideals of communism is the crux to the solution of the reasons behind the great communist advance. Eric Fromm has long pointed out the spiritual alienation that cap talism has produced in Western M this alienation takes the form crass materialism in our values mores, a materialism that is shu ned by the peoples of emergent tions.

The Democratic Socialist sees communist advance as the produ of two factors: the failure of cap talism to capture the loyalties emergent peoples due to its inhere anti-humanistic and pro-materia istic doctrines, and the attractiv ness of communism due to the h manistic, pro-idealistic views th it claims to have.

Western liberals are wedded to th concept that they must somehow pre serve capitalism, even after su dismal failures as 1929. To do th they have mixed varying degrees socialism into the capitalist opera tions of major businesses and in the social fabric of the capitali society. But this will not save West from further communist ad vances. Capitalist expansion ma lead to war, indeed many believ that capitalism and war go hand hand.

Democratic Socialism attempts offer a solution to the communi threat as well as to spiritual aliena tion of our own neocapitalist sys tem. Silone was right when he sa socialism was more than a politica theory, it is a way of life that at tempts more than most to carry ou the ethic of Christ.

Heavens To Lecture

Dr. Oliver Heavens, British physicist and expert in optics from Royal Holloway College, Surrey, England, will serve as a visiting lecturer at FSU Monday through Wednesday, April 8-10.

He will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers at the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is supported by the National Science Foundation.

Lectures, informal discussions, assistance to faculty members concerning curriculum and research problems in physics, and talks with students will feature Dr. Heavens' visit. Professor Earle K. Plyer, head of the Physics Dept., is in charge of arrangements for Professor Heavens' visit.

Dr. Heavens obtained his doctor's degree in 1951 on work in the realm of thin films, on which he wrote a book (Optical Properties of Thin Films) published in 1955. In 1956, he joined Royal Holloway College, of the University of London, as Reader in Experimental Physics, continuing work on films.

The session 1959-60 was spent on leave of absence at Columbia University in the City of New York, working with Charles A. Townes on optical masers. Work on this subject and on various aspects of thin films is now continuing at Royal Holloway College.

He is a Fellow of the Institute of Physics and member of the Optical Society of America.

Computing Conference Underway

Florida State University's Computing Center announced today it will begin a service for local Sunday school teachers in two weeks -- locating verses in the four Gospels which fit phrases and citations provided by the teachers.

If a Sunday school teacher wants, for instance, to find all the verses where the phrase "forgiveness and repentence" occurs, this information can be obtained on FSU's IBM 709 and IBM-1401 computers within two or three minutes after the question is asked the computing machinery, according to Dr. E.P. Miles, director.

Miles said Mathematics Prof. William B. Kehl director of the Computation and Data Processing Center at the University of Pittsburgh had provided FSU a key-punched text of the New Testament of Oxford Press' "New English Bible." Next week, FSU will receive from Kehl a computer concordance to go with the Testament, enabling the FSU Center to make a quick search of the New Testament for phrases, words and other language of use to Sunday school teachers.

Although the FSU Computing Center and those at other universities are used primarily for quantitative work Kehl predicted at the Third Annual Computer Conference that in 10 years computers would be used more as "information processors" than as computers. The term information processor, already better fits the big electronic machines, he said.

Kehl, speaking on use of the computer in information retrieval, reported on work in Pittsburgh in which themes had been used for comparison with aptitude tests to tell something about the ability of the young authors.

Computers are also useful, he said, in analyzing medical reports on individuals. Thus, he said, when a person tells a doctor she has a headache "this descriptive information may be of more value than the subjects blood pressure or temperature in determing what is wrong. Computers are of some value in analyses of this kind after it has been determined that certain descriptive phrases fit certain illnesses."

Herz Achieves Editorship

Dr. Werner Herz, professor of chemistry at FSU has been appointed one of the senior editors of the Journal of Organic Chemistry.

He will be senior editor in charge of natural products chemistry.

Dr. Herz is known for his work on the isolation and structure of constituents of Florida plants. The Journal of Organic Chemistry is the main outlet for the publication of research results of organic chemists in the United States and is published by the American Chemical Society. Editorial offices for work in natural products chemistry will be established on this campus when the appointment becomes effective this summer.

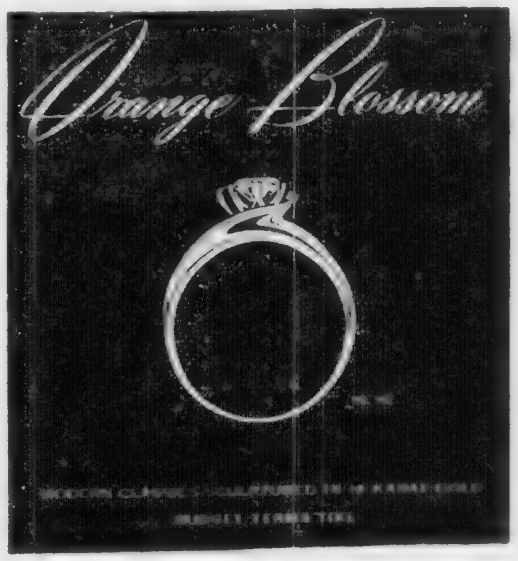
Dr. Herz has recently been appointed consultant to the National Cancer Institute for the purpose of providing scientific advice in the further development of its natural products program. He also serves on the cancer chemotherapy study section of the Division of Research Grants, National Institutes of Health, and is a member of the advisory panel on chemistry of the National Science Foundation.

He has been serving on the editorial board of the Journal.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.



So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Monterey Institute Offers FSU Credit This Summer

Dr. Herberto Lacayo, director of the Summer Program in Monterrey, Mexico, has announced that applications for enrollment are being accepted by the Department of Modern Languages for students and teachers in the 1963 Summer Session at the Instituto Tecnologico de Monterrey, Mexico.

FSU is sponsoring a group of students to attend the foreign six-weeks course in Mexico, from July 13 to August 23, for six hours maximum college credits in courses such as Spanish (all levels), Economics, History, Mexican folklore, Archeology, Geography, Botany, Geology, Spanish teachers training, Art, Workshops and College English. Also High School students who have completed the sophomore year are eligible to take Spanish for one full High School credit.

INTERNATIONALLY FAMOUS, the Instituto is termed by the "New York Times" as Mexico's center of Technology training, "a school of rigid discipline and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology of Latin America."

"Time" magazine has recently called it the "best institution of higher learning" in Latin America. Last summer over 650 Americans from 34 states attended the session. Part of the summer program includes scenic mountain trips, industrial visits, cultural entertainment, sports, and many social events.

INDIVIDUAL COSTS for the six weeks are $310 including a room on campus, board, laundry, medical services, tuition, side trip tours and industrial visits.

Further information and catalogues on the foreign tour summer session may be obtained from Dr. Lacayo at the Modern Languages Dept. Deadline for enrollment is June 30, 1963.

AROUND THE WORLD

HAVANA -- The Swiss Embassy in Havana says that the Cuban government has ordered the suspension of repatriation of American citizens and their dependents. A Swiss Embassy sourve explains the Cuban government opposes having installments of Bay of Pigs ransom delivered in ships which will not return to the US and therefore cannot take repatriates and others with them.

NEW YORK -- Argentine Navy leaders are reported to discuss ending their three-day rebellion. The rebel fleet, threatened with a showdown battle at its remaining stronghold, steamed into the Puerto Belgrano Naval Base. Earlier, loyalist and rebel chiefs broke up truce talks and reports that the Navy insurgents were sticking to their demands for the ouster of President Jose Maria Guido.

WASHINGTON -- In Washington, the House cut nearly 92 million dollars from the Post Office Department's appropriations for the coming fiscal year. It acted despite a warning that the cut might put an end to Saturday mail deliveries. The roll call vote approving the cut was 385 to 17.

BERLIN -- Communist East Germany has put pressure on road traffic to West Berlin, slowing down traffic moving to and from the city. The East Germans also demanded more control over the air corridors. Two days ago, Soviet jets menaced a British private plane in the air corridors. The Russians implied yesterday they might shootdown the plane if it tries to fly out of Berlin.

DELTA CHI's social affiliate of the month is John "Hoppy" Hopkins.

Moore Leads Cancer Drive

Dr. Coyle E. Moore, Dean of the School of Social Welfare, has been appointed as the chairman of the Cancer Crusade at FSU for the faculty and staff.

The American Cancer Society has designated the month of April as the cancer control month. Governor Farris Bryant has issued a proclamation endorsing the observance throughout the state.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION states: "1963 has been designated as the Year of the Volunteer by the American Cancer Society. It is a tribute to more than 65,000 men and women in Florida, and the 2,000,000 throughout the nation, who have dedicated themselves to the fight against cancer.

"TO SPEED the final victory over cancer, and try to reduce cancer's mounting death rate of more than 8,300 citizens in Florida alone, the American Cancer Society is determined to intensify its effort to bring life-saving facts to the public; to improve services to the cancer patient, and to accelerate its cancer research programs.

"TO THIS END, every citizen of the state of Florida is urged to observe Cancer Control Month by giving support to the American Cancer Society

FSU Offense Is Best Ever

It's a long, long time from here to September, but Coach Bill Peterson of Florida State figures he can rest in peace until it comes time to prepare for the 1963 football season next fall.

"We still need more men who can go on both offense and defense," says Peterson, "but I am well-pleased with the outlook right now."

For one thing, said Peterson, the Seminoles may have "the best running game since I've been here." That covers three seasons--and, admittedly, an FSU problem each year has been the lack of strong runners.

At the moment, FSU's top ball carriers appear to be Halfback Dave Snyder and Phil Spooner and Fullbacks Larry Brinkley, Gene and Marion Roberts. Off his performance Saturday, Halfback-Fullback Ralph Norman has to be considered, also. And Halfback Jim Loftin of Pensacola--playing baseball this spring--still has as much potential as anybody on the squad.

With Steve Tensi and little Charlie Calhoun at quarterback, then, it is conceivable that FSU will be a definite offensive threat next Fall on the ground and in the air. Calhoun showed Saturday that he may really be the defending, punting, running and passing with equal grace.

"It looks like we'll use a two-team system and work in a cople of specialists when we can," says Peterson, once concerned about new rules virtually killing FSU's three-team system.

"At most positions we seem to be all right for two-way men, though that will still be our No. 1 problem next Fall. Tackle has me worried in that respect."

Dave Snyder

...who ground out 67 yards in 15 carries in Saturday's Garnet and Gold game and was the top rusher in practices, heads the list of Football superlatives.

Coaches Tap Top Gridders

Rugged little Dave Snyder, a defensive fullback for two years but now a strong running threat for the Florida State football team, has been tabbed the most outstanding player of spring training by Seminole coaches.

FSU's Spring Superlatives, based on performances during spring drills:

BIGGEST SURPRISE--End Don Floyd, Madison; Guard Joe Parrish, Auburndale. MOST OUTSTANDING--Halfback Dave Synder, Jacksonville. MOST IMPROVED BACK--Fullback Larry Brinkley, Willoughby, O. MOST IMPROVED LINEMAN--Center Bill Daly, Jacksonville. STRONGEST RUNNER--Snder. BEST ALL-AROUND RUNNER--Snyder.

Pensacola (Loftin did not participate in spring drills).

BEST ALL-AROUND OFFENSE PLAYER--Spooner. BEST PASSER--Quarterback Steve Tensi, Cincinnati, O. BEST PASS RECEIVER--Halfback Fred [illegible]off, Erie, BEST BLOCKER, BACKS--Fullback Marion Roberts, Cordele, Ga. BEST BLOCKER, LINEMEN -- Guard Chuck Robinson, East Palestine, HARDEST TACKLER--End Red Dawson, Valdosta, Ga.; and Guard Dick Hermann, Marianna.

BEST LINEBACKER -- Hermann and Robinson. BEST ALL-AROUND DEFENSIVE PLAYER--Quarterback Charlie Calhoun, Tallahassee. MOST DETERMINED -- Snyder. PLAYER WITH MOST POTENTIAL --Loftin.

Dade Invades Tully Tonight

Dade County Junior College invades the Florida State campus tonight with their powerful gymnastic team, the same team that handed the Seminoles their second loss of the season, 81 1/2 - 63 1/2. Dade JC is coached by former FSU National Trampoline Champion Dick Gutting.

FSU Coach Gusic expects the meet to be one of the finest displays of gymnastic talent that has hit campus. Tonight, the following men will make their final appearance at Tully: Rick Miller, Mitch Weinstock, John Cory and Guy Atkinson. Miller is nationally ranked in floor exercise.

The action will take place at 7:30 in Tully Gym. Featured also, will be the Florida State women's drill team.

Frosh To Swim

There will be an unscheduled meet for the Freshman Swimming team at 2:30 p.m. inMontgomeryGym. It will be against two high school teams Leon High and Robinson High of Tampa. The baby Seminoles will attempt to expand their 8-1 record.

Play Features Talking Horse

By PAT FREEMAN
Asst. News Editor

"Mister Ed," famed talking horse of television-land, may experience a serious setback when Le Treteau de Paris returns to FSU at 8:30 in Westcott Auditorium, Thursday night with their presentation of "Orphee," a one-act play by jean Cocteau.

Why? The explanation is found in a horse... not a real horse. but a "Cocteau horse." No,--Monsieur Cocteau's horse doesn't talk, it taps out messages for Orphee in dubious poetic form.

Orphee? The explanation is found Orphee? Well, he's a fellow from classical mythology who's gone modern. Orphee writes poetry, or rather he did write poetry... until that horse came along. Just ask Orphee's pretty young wife, or Heurtbise, an angel in disguise who fixes windows as a hobby.

Heurtbise, who also concerns himself with the future of the two members of the erratic Orphee family, will not be the only one "up in the air" about the tragic situation unfolding Thursday evening, but tickets only cost $1 for students, faculty and any of the general public who wish to try out la langue francaise.

Ah yes, the plays will be in French. After all, Le Treteau de Paris is toruing the United States under the sponsorship of the French government, and has already traveled to fifty campuses with "Orphee" by Cocteau and "L'Apollon de Bellac," by Jean Giradoux.

Is "L'Apollon de Bellac" any easier to understand? Of course, Giradoux wrote the one-act play to explain a woman's secret of success over the opposite sex. It's quite simple.

Agnes, the "everywoman" of the play, merely heeds some timely advice from a stranger on how to overcome her fear of men. This man, the stranger from Bellac, should go into the profession of pedagogy permanently after the success he experiences with his first pupil. For Agnes not only overcomes her fear, but conquers a butterfly and a chandelier which happen to fall into the line of learning.

Giradoux wrote of his play: "It is not a lesson in how to win friends and influence people... nor a comedy about the male ego glowing in the warm sun of female attention. It is a fable to show that love is a creative act of the imagination."

Tickets are now on sale at Westcott Ticket Office, the Modern Languages Office (309 Classroom Bldg. A) or at Mendelssohn's Department Store.

Politicos Perform For Staff

Probably on another part of this page is a political column, which was written by one of the stalwarts of the Flambeau, one of the many bickerers that has made life as a staffer enjoyable.

For, while writing news, feature, and sports copy during dull lulls, we staffers could always count upon one of the political reliables to enter stage left and begin a typical performance.

"Did you see what HE wrote?" he would ask, eyes flashing vividly, jugular vein pulsating, teeth grinding.

This question is pregnant with meaning.

First of all, we know immediately that HE is either left or right, depending on whether the present stalwart is right or left.

Secondly, it implies that staffers actually read political columns; hence, the proper reply probable should be, "Who he wrote?" Admittedly, this doesn't make much sense, but, when dealing with stalwarts, logic doesn't count.

Thirdly, it gives you the erroneous idea that HE, be he right or left, actually wrote what HE wrote. We staffers know he may not, because we have viewed the births (or abortions, if you please) of columns for over 135 issues.

The politicos either hunt-and-peck arguments they've used in arguments (which they didn't win) with the opposition, paraphrase articles by Cousins or Buckey (which were used by C & B in arguments with each other which they also didn't win), or the stalwarts repute paragraphs in previous articles by the Flambeau opponents.

This rabid rewriting of each other's work recently resulted in not a single word appearing outside quotation marks in several columns, whereupon the irate editor rightly demanded a small touch of originality from the writers. The columnists in question pointed out what they considered to be original phrases, but closer investigation showed even these sentences had been lifted verbatim from Beetle Bailey comic books.

When not butchering the English tongue, the stalwarts engage in arguments with the opposition. The personal cuts and doctrine assinations bounce back and forth, pro and con, until one side slices a particularly difficult point across the political net. At this point, volume increases on both sides, for, if reason won't help, the stalwarts raise their voices.

Eventually (it always happens), one of them inevitably stomps out of the room, hollering "Wheelsu" to the head of the YPSL, YAF, YMCA, KKK, etc. (depending upon the head). For a while, we staffers thought "Wheelsu" was a word used in the Soviet Union, but then others said it sounded Germanic. A third faction, however, favored the theory that "wheelsu" was an ancient Hebrew word to be used when skewering Gentiles.

As things turned out, all three sides were wrong. "Wheelsu" pronounced with a sane tongue means, "We'll sue." For when one side used the stock phrases like "fascistic," "communistic," "Millard Fillmoric," against the other side, the injured parties foam at the cuspids and shout, "Wheelsu."

So, glory be, Charley Johns thinks these nuts represent the opinions of the Flambeau. If you only knew, Charl; if you only knew.

More Time Needed

By KEN PEALE

(Part 2)

Development of the world in all fields -- scientific, social, cultural, economic, political, religious, ad finitum -- has made the world in which we are preparing to earn a living increasingly complicated.

THERE IS MORE TO LEARN. In the United State, the human lifespan is getting longer. In the light of this, it makes sense to spend MORE, NOT LESS time in school. To rush through such a vital process is utter folly. Slow but steady, the fable says.

Due to lack of time for the semester-length courses to sink in, rather than lose assimilation completely, it will be necessary to reduce the material a given course will attempt to cover. Either way the courses offered under the timester are worth less than when offered under the semester.

It is noted that not only are two weeks of time eliminated from the course of a trimester, but also holidays are less frequent. Now holidays served two purposes: to allow a student a short rest to renew himself in order to make a fresh start, and to provide a time to catch up in some work where he was behind. (It is a rhetorical question to ask how many term papers are written over a holiday weekend.)

A person interviewed for Linda Savidge's series of articles on the trimester said the December examinations rid the January air of examination tension. They also rid the December air of Christman spirit and replace it with examination tension. The students of the University have just as much right to enjoy the Christmas season as do other citizens.

Christmas is a major Christian holiday and since the majority of the students at FSU are Christian it is fitting and proper to respect the season. An existence withou holidays and rest is certainly a drab one and not conducive to normal living and learning.

Likewise, weekends should not be filled with the routine cramming that the trimester imposes on most students. It should be a time of non-routine activities -- recreation, proof-reading, reflection, recouping strength to face the next week.

There are two groups who may appear to be benefitted by the trimester. One is the very talented group of persons who are extremely well endowed with ability, whose performance does not seem to be affected by trying circumstances. However, these persons are being hurt. If they can assimilate much more during the longer semester.

The other group that seems to benefit is the "just get by" crowd. The trimester is made to order for these. They go to college ust to get the degree without really caring what they learn -- if indeed they do learn at all. Since their feeling seem to indicate that learning is a shallow process, the mad rush does not confound their sparse efforts. Truth to tell, for there is little to confound. Would these students come to the summer trimester? If their outlook on their studies during the regular academic year is any indication, they are probably looking forward to the longer summer vacation the trimester brings.

A university is an institution for higher learning. This implies that it should be a place for persons motivated toward a full endowment of knowledge. An extra effort is required in order to obtain this goal. Those students who just want to get through on a minimum effort do not belong in college. A student who wants to get by on little or no effort on his part belongs somewhere outside of college -- belongs back in high school.

Gunch Mourns COP

The recent decision by the students of Florida State to abolish the class officer program signals the doom of one of the finest pieces of bureaucratic deadwood that ever existed on any college campus. However, the 1,294 hatchetmen that applied the axe failed to notice what 1,294 wacks have wrought.

Unbeknownst to these heartless COP haters, the life of one, Alfred P. Gunch III, has been shattered hopelessly beyond repair. Now Alfred wasn't very sharp, but he was well loved; in fact he was known as "nurd," "nub," or just plain "nubby nurd the third" around the dorm. Despite the profound love harbored in Alfred's patriotic little breast for his fellow man, he could not help but wonder about the justice of the abolishment. Gunch had become a symbol of the dignity and integrity of the class officers, and never had this noble nurd dirtied his unbiased hands in the dirt of partisian politics.

How then darest the belligerent to dash Alfred's 10 years of hard and diligent toil as president of the freshman class of "53" upon the electoral rocks? Had he not attended every Christmas party at the president's house with undying faithfulness; had he not worked his fingers to a nub painting "class of 53" in purple on the backs of all the turtles in Lake Bradford "to build strong class ties and loy ties thereby promoting indirect pride and concern for the alma ter?" As evidence of the success sincerity of his efforts did not class of "53" donate 1,000 bott of mosquito repellent, 23 1/2 stic of deodorant, and 68 slightly u bars of floating soap to the class "63"?

"Rise up and revolt, ye stude of the realm! Recast the dyel bent ya'll!" Alfred P. cried as wrung his hands in agony and gulp down his motsaball soup. But n have rallied to his hue and cry, surrounded his noble talisman ar ed to the teeth with pen in h eraser at the ready to extract sw revenge at the polls from th paltry peons who dared to cross COP's.

Flambeau Forum

Was COP Editorial Valid?

To the Editor:

The Class Officer Program at FSU has been of great importance to me as I have participated as an officer for the past three years.

I realize that last Monday's editorial (March 25) by WS was a personal opinion, but I question the reason behind and the validity of his statement in his discussion of the possibilities of their failure of the Class Officer Program.

"The first possibility is that the COP is composed of essentially corrupt individuals who don't particularly care to honor their campaign promises."

The students have voted on the issue of class officers, but this is not my main concern at the present. It is, rather, the principle behind the above statement.

The careless use of such unfounded statements reflects on many fine people who have served and are now serving their university as class officers and in some cases, other important phases of student government.

I am disappointed that editorials of this caliber are allowed to be printed in the Flambeau and I hope that a more careful selection will be made in the future.

Socialize Elsewhere!

To the Editor:

Since I have come to this country, I have seen that college serves many social purposes of students, and I have sympathized with it.

However, there is one place on this campus where I resent it, and that is in the library. It is very irritating to be surrounded by giggling and chatting while you are trying to write a paper or to comprehend a difficult journal article.

I wish some of those people would try to develop a justified sense of discrimination of where to do what and to learn to respect other people's interests.

Suggests Plan

To the Editor:

Frankly, I think, or perhaps I know, that those in charge of "Smoke Signals" ought to reorganize their distribution policy.

As a "full-fledged" student at FSU, I know that all students with ID cards should receive one and only one issue of the "Smoke Signals." Then, when the "Smoke Signals" staff figures that a large proportion of the students got their own individual copy, the "Smoke Signals" staff should start selling for cash extra copies.

Perhaps a two or three day period for those students to get their own individual copy, then an extra day for the sale of "Smoke Signals" to those who want extra copies or to non-students.

Socialism Is 'Suicide'

Mr. Riggins, in questioning my belief that a great deal of the succes Communism has had is due to the lack of understanding of the nature Communism on the part of many in the free world, gives us a classic ex ample, which we may examine, of this lack of understanding.

He says that the "Democratic Socialist sees the communist advance the product of two factors: the failure of capitalism... and the attractive ness of communism due to the humanistic, pro-idealistic view th it claims to have." Mr. Riggins has, of course, working from within h own frame of reference, i.e., that philosophies such as Communism, cap italism and socialism are competing freely in the market place of ideas completely overlooked the very thing I claim that he and others do not un derstand: that Communism is a conspiracy, dedicated not to victory in th market place of ideas, but to victory through terror, deceit, subversio etc. It is this nature of Communism which many in the West sti do not understand.

In no nation has Communism been successful in obtaining power throug democratic means. Generally a Communist triumph occurs while les than five percent of the people of a nation are Communists. Communism takes power through a highly organized, well disciplined minority, a min ority which will stop at nothing to achieve its ends.

It is ignorance of Communism which leads us to make concessions to th Reds, to negotiate, to attempt to show them we mean to be reasonable, an that we are acting in good faith. The Communists aim to destroy us; it i part of their doctrine. They could care less if we desire peace and coex istence. They are not bound by our moral code and therefore need keep n agreement with us.

Mr. Riggins should realize that in the end both my capitalism an his bourgeois socialism are doomed should Communism come to power. As for his suggestion that if we accept his brand of socialism we will be saved, nonsense. It matters not if the masses in the world are pleased with the system under which they live... the "vanguard of the proletariat" is not dependent upon mass support. It seizes power not through the ballot, but through subversion and terror. As for me, I feel that the idea that we must accept socialism to forestall Communism is about as sensible as shooting oneself to avoid being murdered.

Myths Permeate Society

By CAROLYN LEARY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Our society is more myth-making than scientific," declared Dr. Alan Thompson, professor of English, as he looked at Myth and the Mass Media for the Program of American Studies lecture.

Because our lives are so strongly permeated with myth and because it is an unrecognizable force, Dr. Thompson warns that it is all too easy to be lulled to sleep by it. We are ill informed on many facts because of the influence of this force, he declares. We had no idea that the Russians could send up a satellite and even today many people still do not believe it.

The main elements of myths are the imaginary and real worlds. Richard Chase says that "myths exist to transmit the real into a magic reality." Myths are identified with the hopes and fears of a world of being--a collective psychic tension brough on by crisis. These collective tensions become confused with the objective reality and can't be distinguished from it.

Cassirer says that the relationship between myth and language is seen quite clearly in religion in that the development of mythological feeling starts with two opposing forces--night and day, light and dark, good and evil. Because all religions contain mythical elements, it can be seen that language is of great importance to myths, the speaker explained. The word is the means by which man takes possession of the meaning of things. To name something is to understand it; to name it is to use it creatively. This is true in science as well as religion. But language goes beyond fact and becomes involved in myth. We are a world dominated by technology, trying to come out of primitivism and yet still using a mythical language. Civilization is destroying its creative men and looking for a scientific Utopia declared Dr. Thompson.

The lecturer examined two leading news magazines and studied their coverage of Khrushchev and Eisenhower during the latter's term of presidency. He points out the strong two-dimensional orientation of light and dark, good and evil, by examining several phrases used in these magazines to describe these two men and, in doing so, emphasizes that these are not taken from editorials but appeared as parts of "factual news reports."

Eisenhower, Thompson feels, was treated as the great conquering hero, the proverbial knight in shining armor who has won the victory for the good side. He is called the "grand plebecite of history" who wears a "flashing smile" and never loses that "real folks" quality. This image was set up and Ike was maintained as an idol during his entire term of office.

Khrushchev, on the other hand, explained the speaker, represents the dark and evil side of the picture and is shown as "shrewd, cold-blooded and egotistical." During his visit to the United States, the Russian was described as "barrelling his way across the U.S." while "boasting of his accomplishments" and displaying a "crude frankness." The Premier's background, which is almost identical to Lincoln's deified log cabin birthplace, was called "hard, peasant beginnings." This, Dr. Thompson feels, shows clearly that language unites facts with deeper implications and that images of the sort described in these magazines cannot be analyzed rationally but appeal to the psychic tension on a mass scale.

In addition to newspapers, other media, especially the advertising field, make an extensive use of the mythological factor in appealing to the buyer. The user of any product is pictured as popular, happy and carefree, and the buyer and user of the product is almost certain to be the same.

Language, Thompson stresses, is illusive and deeply imbedded in myth and often contains more emotion than fact. For this reason, he warns we should keep a stronger watch for what is factual and be able to distinguish it from what is merely meaningless words and concepts.

Receive Art Awards

Honor work awards have gone to six students who produced the best works of the year in seven art areas taught in the Art Dept. at FSU and their works along with the best work of other art students are on exhibition in the University Gallery.

Awards were for consistent quality of work throughout the year and not for any one work, according to Dr. Gulnar Bosch, head of the Art Dept. Letters of commendation were given to the six outstanding students by FSU vice-president John E. Champion.

One student, Alan Herbert Stecker, was honored for proficiency in two areas, painting and graphics. A senior in the honors program, he attended Emory University before coming to FSU in 1961 to study with Dr. Karl Zerbe. Stecker will have a show in Atlanta's Fine Arts Gallery in May.

Several of his works may be seen in the gallery. Taizo Miake, curator, said they include lithographes of Karl Zerbe and David Bungay and a painting entitled "On a Door." One painting is 7 ft by 5 ft. 9 inches.

Jacquelin Krause was named most outstanding in the sculpture area. She is a student of George Frederick Holschuh. Her works include two wood structures, a plaster double image and a three dimensional assemblage.

Other winners include Patricia Gail Leddy, advertising design; Marilyn Joyce Moore, fashion illustration; Nancy Bell, design; and Georgie Neggers, art history.

The gallery area has been redesigned for the exhibition by Miake and the students in design. The exhibition will be up through June 6.

Miss Jenny McIntyre, a graduate student of FSU, is this year's recipient of a $25 award presented to the outstanding woman student in the field of the social sciences.

Gamma Chapter of Chi Omega presents the award annually after final selection is made by Dr. M. Nimkoff and the Sociology Dept.

McIntyre is working on her doctor's degree at present, and she plans to specialize in the field of medical research.

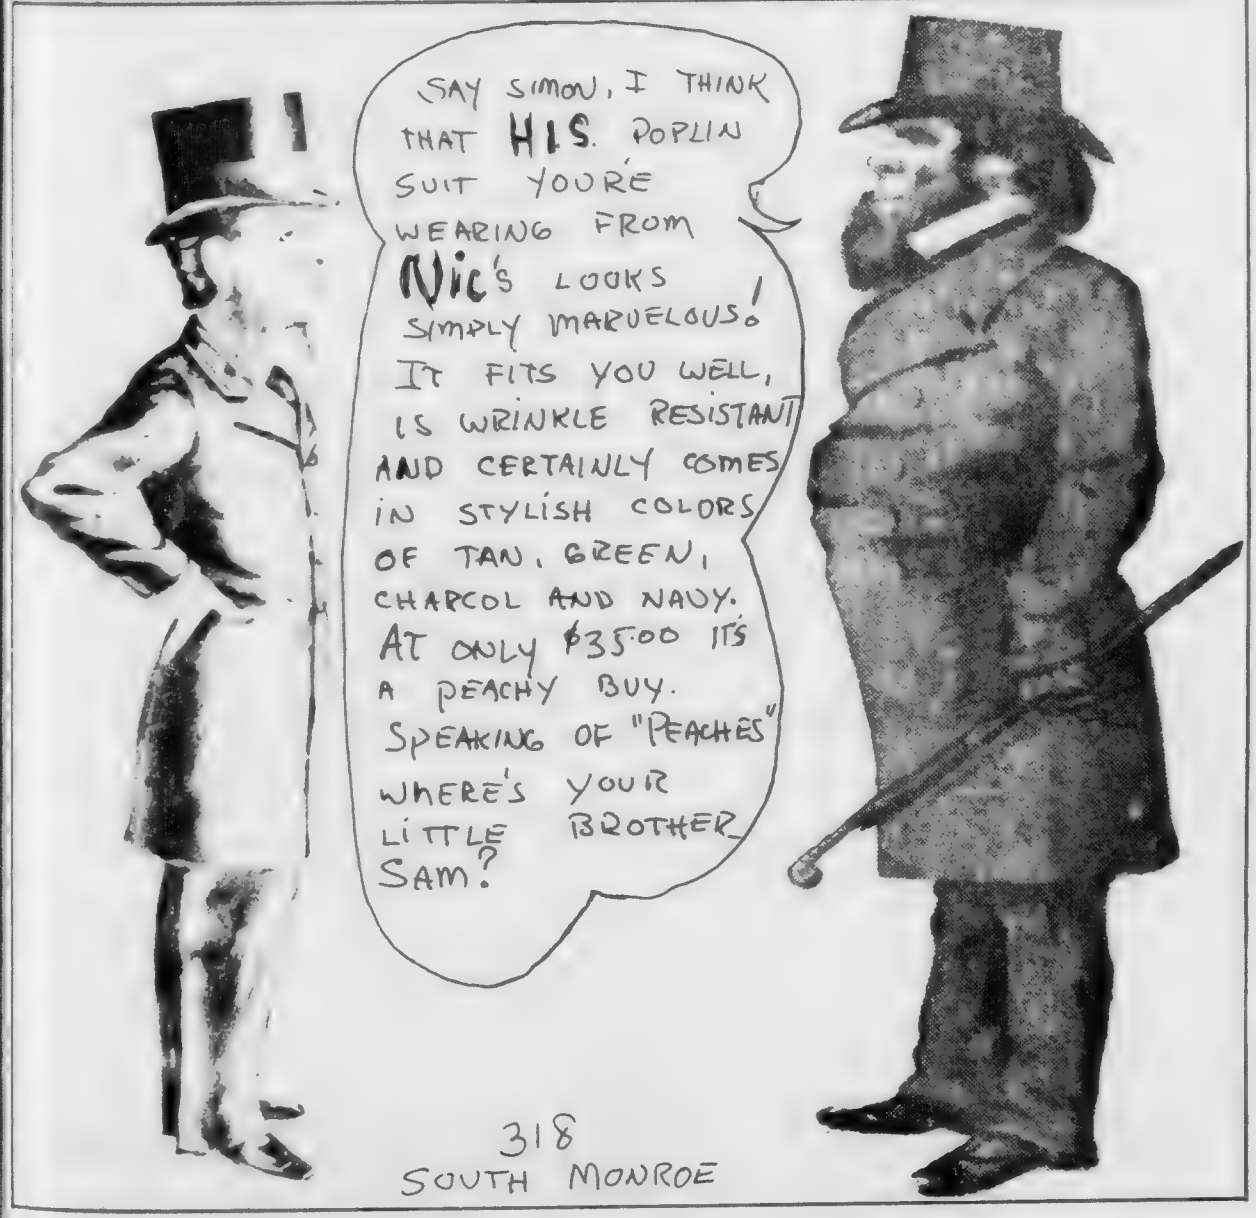
The award was presented at a special dinner honoring McIntyre and Dr. and Mrs. Nimkoff, given by the Gamma Chapter at FSU.

Credit Given For Tour

The English and Speech Depts., at Louisiana State University in New Orleans is sponsoring an English Study Tour of Europe which will combine travel with study for two months during the summer.

The group is scheduled to sail from New York on June 5 aboard the Italian Lines' M.V. Vulcania and fly home from London by Alitalia jet August 4. Included in the tour are visits to Italy, Switzerland, France, Germany, Scotland, England and Spain.

Three hours of lectures and discussions will be held each day aboard ship to Naples, and one hour will be devoted to study each day while in Europe. Courses, offered for credit or non-credit, are: English 95 (3 cr) -- the more popular plays of Shakespeare; English 135 (3 cr) -- Romantic poetry: Wordsworth, Byron, Shelley, and Keats: and English 99A, B, C (1 cr) -- independent study. Dr. Gordon Fleming, associate professor of English will be the instructor for the tour.



The price of the tour is approximately $1400. Included in this total price will be the cost of all transportation, hotel accomodation: and meals, all sightseeing and conducted tours, all gratuities and tickets to all Shakespearean plays in Stratford on Avon.

Further information may be obtained from the Department of English and Speech, LSU in New Orleans, Lakefront, New Orleans 22, La.

Plan European Trip

Anyone connected with FSU, faculty members or students, who might be interested in flying to Amsterdam or Paris this summer at a group rate may call extension 2237 for further information.

The flight will leave New York on June 13 and will return on September 12. No one-way tickets will be sold.

BUENOS AIRES -- The latest uprising against the government of Argentina -- this one led by Navy officers -- has collapsed. Key leaders of the revolt have gone into hiding. And there are only a few diehard holdouts. A leader of the revolt, retired Admiral Isaac Rojas has surrendered to police at his Buenos Aires residence. Forces loyal to the government of President Guido are in control of a rebel center, the city of Bahia Blanca 350 miles south of Buenos Aires.

MOSCOW -- Russia blasts West Germany in a note. The Soviet Union accuses Germany of an openly hostile act in halting sale of large steel pipe to Russia. The Adenauer government is accused of violating its bilateral trade agreement with Moscow.

NATO had recommended export of large pipe to Russia be stopped because it helps build Soviet military strength. West Germany stopped shipments last month, with orders for 160,000 tons of pipe not filled.

PARIS -- Secretary of State Dean Rusk had a long meeting in Paris yesterday with the foreign minister of France, Maurice Couve De Murville. And the French official is said to have expressed a flicker of interest in the projected nuclear force for the Atlantic Alliance, a project which President Charles De Gaulle has been opposing.

NEW YORK -- Diplomatic sources in Laos have said that nearly three dozen soldiers have been killed in a renewal of fighting between Neutralists and pro-Communists. And, these sources said, there also have been many casualties among civilains -- in the plaine Des Jarres area of Central Laos, where the fighting broke out last week. Consultations are said to be under way to restore peace to the area.

NEW YORK -- Cuban rebel sources in Miami said yesterday that their movement to get rid of Fidel Castro in their homeland has been dealt a crippling blow by the American and British clampdown on Cuban raiders. The members of a group which escaped the British and American net said they have lost an important supply link with anti-Castro fighters inside Cuba.

Senator Barry Goldwater yesterday came out in favor of American support for Cuban exile raiders -- and also in favor of an economic blockade of Cuba. And if necessary, said Goldwater, the United States should support an invasion of Cuba under the flag of the organization of American States. Goldwater does not believe such actions would mear war with Russia. He said: Russia is not going to risk losing her world empire over a tiny island in the Caribbean.

Faculty Notes

Professor Is Honored

Dr. Leo Mandelkern, professor of chemistry at FSU, has received a $22,440 grant from the National Institutes of Health for a study of contractile processes in fibrous proteins.

The research is directed toward an understanding of how fibrous substances are utilized in the conversion of thermal or chemical energy into mechanical energy.

Fibrous substances are composed of long chain molecules known as high polymer or macromolecules, and are of either synthetic or natural origin. It is the large size of these molecules which give them their unique and versatile properties.

By studying the physical-chemical properties of the simplest of these large molecules, it is hoped to better understand contractility in actually functioning systems such as those involved in muscle contraction and cell processes.

Mandelkern received the Arthur S. Fleming Award in 1958 while working as a chemist with the National Bureau of Standards.

A two-color ink drawing "Satsumas" by FSU graduate student Gladys Shafran-Kashdin has won an award of merit at the 45th annual member's exhibition of the Palm Besch Arts Institute at Norton Gallery of Art in West Palm Beach.

The drawing was done last year as part of a Tallahassee flora and fauna series that includes some 25 paintings and drawings. Another painting by Mrs. Kashdin, now on exhibit in Norton Gallery, is a plastic base study of the sun breaking through the fog.

Mrs. Kashdin graduated (magna cum laude) from the University of Miami and holds a master's degree in art from FSU. She is at present studying toward a degree of doctor of philosophy in humanities at FSU and is a graduate assistant in the Humanities Dept.

She has had one-man shows in Miami, at the Tucker Galleries in 1950 and the University of Miami in 1960 and has taught classes in oil painting and art appreciation and design in Palm Beach County.

The Government Dept. at FSU has announced the poublication of "Continuing Crisis in American Politics," a Spectrum Book by Prentice-Hall.

The book brings together the eight public lectures in American government sponsored by the Department of Government in the Spring semester, 1962.

The book is edited by Marian D. Irish, head of the Government Dept., and the authors are Robert G. McCloskey, Harvard University; Robert Harris, Vanderbilt University; Paul David, University of Virginia; Stephen K. Bailey, Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs; Clinton Rossiter, Cornell University; Alpheus Mason, Princeton University; Morton Grodzins, University of Chicago; and Arthur Amithies, Harvard University.

The book focuses on such topics as American ideology, political parties, constitutional issues, civil rights, the President and Congress, the Supreme Court and foreign economic policy.

It provides an assessment of the government in action and considers the future in terms of changing values as well as changing institutions and new roles in political behavior.

The School of Social Welfare announced that three faculty members have been elected fellows of the American Orthopsychiatric Association.

The new fellows of the Association are Mrs. Maridell M. Benner, assistant professor of social welfare; Dr. David L. Levine, professor of social work; and Dr. Barbara K. Varley, assistant professor of social welfare.

The American Orthopsychiatric Association is made up of psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers and other professional people whose work and interests are in the study of personality and behavior and in the treatment of personality disorders.

Dr. Mary Virginia Alexander, associate professor of physical education at FSU received the 1963 honor award from the Health Physical Education and Recreation section of the Florida Education Association.

The award was presented at the FEA meeting in Jacksonville.

Honor awards are presented annually by FAHPER for "outstanding service, leadership and contributions to the Association and to the profession of health, physical education, recreation and camping."

Dr. Alexander has served the FAHPER as district director, editor of the Newsletter; chairman of the working conference; state chairman for the White House Conference on Children and Youth "Follow Up Activities;" chairman of the public relations committee; chairman of the Florida Association of Physical Education for College Women; and chairman elect of the elementary section for 1962-63.

Business Frat Initiates 23

Beta Psi chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity held its Spring initiation banquet yesterday.

Honor Court and Initiation took place at the Business Building, with the banquet following at the Cherokee Hotel.

Benjamin Cambell Thornal, Florida Supreme Court Justice, was initiated into the brotherhood as an honorary member and was the speaker for the evening. Supreme Court Justice Elwyn Thomas and other honorary members also were present for the ceremonies.

The coveted Scholarship award, given by Beta Psi chapter of the senior man holding the highest grade-point average in the School of Business, was awarded to Edward Tempest.

Also in the ceremonies of the evening, the following new officers will be sworn in: Ed Dumond, president; Ed Welch, vice president; Jim Houff, secretary; Doug Spencer, treasurer; Bob Rocklyn, master of rituals.

Townsend Reads Cox' Award-Winning Story

The outskirts of Tallahassee was e setting of the short story by the te Dr. James T. Cox of the Engsh faculty entitled "The Golden rane."

This story was one among 14 given e O. Henry Award for the best of e entire year's works published. Dr. Francis G. Townsend, head of e English Dept., read the story at e English Coffee Hour Friday at e Westminster House.

"It's a simple story," said Townend, "centering around the main haracters Mr. Gillespie, Mrs. Lesr and Junior."

Mr. Gillespie is an alcoholic who es his hardest to overcome this ce. After Mrs. Lester tries to nter his life around God and the urch. Junior, Mrs. Lester's son, reaches the gospel to the elders of e community.

these surroundings the Lord is ermost in the community. The ort story is wrapped up in bibli- passages and whole sentences d thoughts usually end with rases like "Praise the Lord" and Amen."

Mrs. Lester and Mr. Gillespie shed to get married. The former isted that they get married by nior, but since Mrs. Lester was arried before, Junior's only ansr was "Whoever put away his wife d take another has committed ultery."

A revival had taken over the city for Junior in order to get a new church of his own. Also praises were made to Gillespie for his great overcoming of alcohol. Suddenly Junior jumped up and told Mr. Gillespie to kneel down. "Have you broken your covenant to the Lord?" says Junior. "Yes, Lord," was the reply. The emotions of the crowd could be witnessed in the screams. "All pride and lust is the weakness of a sinner," said Junior.

A paper bag containing a little box inside, which had the name "Betheo Durspek."

The box contained unfinished jewelry and stones needed for a metals class. Anyone finding the box please return it to the Art Education office in the Education Bldg. There is a reward offered.

Anyone finding a gold charm bracelet with a baby ring, small violin, Civitan emblem and National Honor Society key on it, please return to Gloria Tucker, 224-8203. It was lost in the vicinity of West College Ave.

Any student who left a pair of glasses downtown at Huggins Business Machines last Thursday may claim them at the Lost and Found in Longmire Bldg.

Goni Receives AF Decoration

Lieutenant-Colonel Frank X. Goni, USAF (Ret), received the First Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Force Commendation Medal in ceremonies before FSU's AFROTC Cadet Wing at Campbell Stadium last week.

Lt. Col. Preston B. Hardy, professor of Air Science, made the award.

Goni was assistant professor of Air Science at FSU for three years before his retirement last June. He received the Oak Leaf Cluster (equivalent to a second award of the same decoration) for meritorious service.

In the words of citation, "By his tireless effort and personal inspiration, (he) made outstanding contributions to the successful accomplishment of the detachment mission of selecting and educating qualified university men to become Air Force officers."

Goni revised the professional education program to provide greater motivation to AFROTC graduates toward an Air Force career, and has actively "promoted a better understanding and appreciation of the Air Force officer's professional capabilities which he instilled with the civilian members of this university and the surrounding community."

"Through his outstanding leadership, professional competence, and dedication to duty, Lt. Col. Goni has reflected great credit upon himself, Air Force ROTC, and the United States Air Force."

Goni presently is an instructor in Spanish on the FSU faculty.

Taxpayers Can Afford Higher Education Cost

Can American taxpayers afford the cost of providing higher education for vastly increased numbers of young people who will seek it during the next 15 years?

A just-completed pilot study of Kansas showed that they can.

Enrollment for full-and part-time students in all colleges and universities in Kansas is estimated to reach 119,000 in 1975, compared to an actual 1961 enrollment of 57,500. Private institutions, which now enroll some 10,000 students, are expected to do no more than double this number during the period. The remainder of the increase will be absorbed by public institutions.

Gross personal income for Kansas in 1976 is estimated in the neighborhood of $9 billion, compared with an actual 1961 gross of $4.7 billion. If Kansas taxpayers--who now pay just under one per cent of their total personal income to finance higher education in the state--are willing to pay between 1.5 and 1.75 per cent of this income, they will be able to meet the increased costs arising from more than doubled enrommments and other built-in cost-of education expenses.

This is the conclusion reached by Sidney Tickton, secretary of a panel of advisers appointed by the Kansas Board of Regents to make an exhaustive study of the state's ability to handle the next exploding 15 years of higher education. Tickton, formerly assistant director of research for the U.S. Treasury Dept., is currently program associate with The Fund for the Advancement of Education.

AFROTC Top Award Won By Simonetti

Several students received decorations and awards this week at the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps ceremonies held in the Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

The awards day ceremonies were established to provide incentive and to recognize achievement by cadets and special cadet units.

Peter F. Simonetti received the President's Award, which goes to the student who has made the greatest contribution of FSU, AFROTC, and student government.

The Air Force Association award went to Daniel W. Litwhiler, who was honored for his individual leadership and characteristics.

The Chicago Tribune Award for the outstanding cadet in Air Science 4 was given to seniors John S. Baughman for the first trimester and Patrick R. Parrish for the second trimester, while the Chicago Tribune Award for the outstanding cadet in Air Science 3 was presented to juniors Edwin E. Powell for the first trimester and Walter S. Burghmann for the second trimester.

The Reserve Officers' Association Awards for outstanding leadership ability and grade average were given to six students for each Air Science class, band, and speech. The winners are Gary L. Cline (AS4), Anthony F. Germann (AS3), Albert P. Sims (AS2), George P. LaMaze (AS1), Stephen H. Foster (band), and Walter S. Burgmann (speech).

The Sons of the American Revolution Award for the best basic cadet on the Drill team was given to George T. Galt III, while the Air Force Times Award for the cadet contributing the most to constructive public attention for the Cadet Corps went to Jay W. Mercer.

Frank D. Rhoads won the 9889th Air Reserve Squadron Award for outstainding leadership laboratory achievement.

Nine students were given distinguished AFROTC cadet badges for outstanding leadership ability and academic standing. They are Peter F. Simonetti, John S. Baughmann, Jay W. Mercer, Patrick B. Sampey, James E. Barineau, Patrick R. Parrish, Albert W. Koller, Edwin E. Powell and Gary L. Cline.

Carol Haught and Patti Warren received the Cadet Commendation Medal for meritorious achievement to Angel Flight Commanders for the first and second trimesters respectively.

James S. Webster, head of the cadet chorus, was presented a Cadet Commendation award for Meritorious achievement, while six students received Cadet Commendation Ribbons. The six are James E. Lovill, Brian A. Manty, Frank W. Stapor, Albert Wetterspoem III, Neil S. Reyer, and Lester M McCullough.

Cadet Merit Ribbons for exceptional achievement were given to Edward J. Isaacs, Harlen L. McCauslin Jr., Maxwell G. Courtney.

WAC Course Set

The summer months ahead can be a rewarding experience for qualified college juniors or first semester seniors who choose to enroll in the Army's College Junior orientation course.

The program is designed to present a four-week familiarization with the myriad aspects of life as a commissioned officer in the Women's Army Corps.

The Army will provide first class round-trip transportation, attractive summer uniforms, excellent accommodations and meals during the four weeks at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Numerous recreational activities can be enjoyed during off-duty hours and shared with the young people one will meet on the Post.

Young ladies between the ages of 18-29, physically fit and interested in previewing life as a WAC officer can look forward to a rewarding experience without obligation. Commissions in the WAC are tendered to those qualified upon graduation. The final decision rests with the individual.

Tribe Poles Paladins 9-2

Getting warmed up quickly, Jim Reed and Woody Woodward poled second inning homeruns to set off a 9-2 Florida State baseball victory over Furman last Saturday. The chunking was provided by converted infielder Al Beccaccio who chalked up his fifth win against no defeats.

The key frame was the second inning, which saw the Tribe thumpers jump on Furman starter Ralph Harwood for seven Seminole runs on eight hits and one base on balls. Harwood could only retire one man before reliefer John McCormick could come to the rescue. The important hits in this second inning were Reed's three-run round-tripper and a two-bagger by Woodward, his second in two days.

The leading hitters for the Seminoles, beside those mentioned already, were Bill Williamson, three for three, and Larry Johnson, who was two for three. The only visitors who could manage more than one hit were Phil King and Tom Rhoads, with two apiece.

When the last run was made, the Tribesmen had unleashed a 12-hit attack, including another homer by Mike Augustine and a double by George Rountree. The defense also shined with three double plays involving the classy combination of shortstop Woodward and second baseman Reed.

Beccaccio, the regular second baseman last year, gave up seven singles and no earned runs for the seven innings he was in. Another infielder, Dave Dahlen, took a crack at pitching to take over for Beccaccio.

In action at Miami last Wednesday, the Seminoles suffered their third defeat when Hurricane Bobby Ward allowed only three hits and one unearned run in pitching a 4-1 Miami victory.

FSU starter Jim Loftin lost control in the first inning and forced in two runs with walks.

The Seminoles had edged the Hurricanes the day before, 2-1.

The victory made FSU's record 10-3 for the season. The next victim will be Valdosta State College, who arrives Tuesday for a 3:30 p.m. single game. After this contest, the Tribe heads through the Carolinas on a week-long trip, clashing witth such powers as Duke and Wake Forest.

Netters Triumph Over Columbia

Saturday afternoon, Florida State's talented tennis team, under the direction of Coach Eddie Cubbon, again trounced Columbia University. It was their third straight win over the visitors from New York, this time, 7-2.

The netters, now holding a record of 14-2, meet Presbyterian here next Thursday at 2:00 p.m.

The summaries:

SINGLES — Lex Wood, FSU, defeated Jim Braziller 6-0, 6-0. Don Caton, FSU, defeated Harley Frankel 6-2, 7-5. Paul Bennett, FSU, defeated Bob Darmon 6-?, 6-1. Don Monk, FSU, defeated Hank Kaplan 5-4, 6-2. Seth Schein, Columbia, defeated Harry Folsom 6-3, 6-2. Ken Alcorn, FSU, defeated Clyde Bernard 9-7, 6-1.

DOUBLES — Wood and Bennett, FSU, defeated Frankel and Kaplan 6-4, 6-1. Caton and Monk, FSU, defeated Schein and Dorman 7-5, 6-3. Braziller and Bernard, Columbia, defeated Alcorn and Fischer 6-1, 6-3.

Seminole star Lex Wood is rapidly becoming known as one of the finest college tennis players in the country. The picture above shows Wood displaying some of the form and power for which he is so widely respected.

Rodgers, Bloodworth Are Future Frosh

By BOB DENSMORE
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State has signed two of the state's top high school basketball players. Arriving at FSU next fall will be John Bloodworth of St. Pete's Dixie Hollins High and John Rodgers of Daytona Seabreeze.

Bloodworth, a 6-1 guard, captained Dixie Hollins to the semifinals of the state tournament. Averaging close to 15 points per game, he was named to the All-Pinellas County team selected by sports writers, the All-Pinellas Conference squad named by coaches, and the St. Petersburg All-City cage squad.

John Rodgers, younger brother of FSU's Pete Rodgers, averaged 17.9 points per game for a Daytona Seabreeze team that had a 24-3 record. Rodgers, who played forward, stands 6-4 1/2 and is, as Asst. Coach Durham recently stated, "a strong rebounder with bigger hands than any player we have on the squad."

The Rodgers brothers will have no chance to play together. Pete completes his eligibility next season.

Finals Stymie Spring Sports

With final exams coming 'round the corner, Florida State's spring sports teams will be virtually idle during the coming week.

Only two events are scheduled. Tuesday afternoon at 3:30, the baseball team hosts Valdosta (Ga.) State College. And on Thursday at 2 p.m. the tennis squad entertains Presbyterian (S.C.) College.

The following week will be almost a dry for sports fans, with only four events set for the FSU campus during finals week.

Foul Balls Lead

This was a very interesting week for the Florida State University Bowling League at Seminole Lanes. The Foul Balls, sponsored by the Talem Coffee Lounge, who were in first place by three games playing the Tempo Beer Kings, who were in second place. The Foul Balls won three of the four games, giving them a five game lead over the Tempo Beer Kings. The Spastics are still in third place.

High games and series this week went to Jim McEacheron of the Tempo Beer Kings with 193,198, and 591 for a 591 series. Connie Zois of the Foul Balls was second with games 194, 203, and 193 giving him a 590 series. Georgianna Swan of the same team had a 548 series with games 181, 192, and 175. Gary Knight of Al Warren Neon Sign Company converted the 6-7 split and Sherriann Sellers of Presto Car Wash also converted the 6-7 split.

At Alpha Council Banquet

Beck Elected New President

In its annual banquet Saturday evening, the Alpha Council elected Chuck Beck as new president. The meeting of the newly selected members was held at the Elks' Club.

The banquet began with the devotional delivered by Joe Betts, past vice president. Following the dinner, elections were conducted by Sherman Henderson, past president; Betts; and Chris McEven.

The newly elected officers of Alpha Council are Beck, president; Jack Cannon, vice president; Bruce Robinson, secretary; Ken Creely, treasurer (elected by acclamation); and Keith Brockman, sergeant-at-arms.

All 80 members tapped March 20, were chosen for their outstanding leadership during their freshman year. Besides leadership, these men had to have maintained at least an 2.0 average overall.

Objectives of Alpha Council include assistance to student government, development of school spirit, and service to the university.

They take part in the campus chest drive, and the heart fund drive.

During orientation week, the men of Alpha Council carry on the sale of rat caps to the incoming freshmen and act as sludges.

The banquet close with statements by past president Henderson and president-elect Beck.

"I wish you a most successful year and hope you can build Alpha Council to the great organization it is meant to be. It will need strong officers and cooperation among all the members, but if you all work together, you will succeed," said Henderson.

"I appreciate your electing me to the office of president of Alpha Council. I am looking forward to a good year with this organization, and hope I can depend on your support and cooperation for the betterment of Alpha Council," said incoming president Beck.

FSU-TV Cops Award For Its Documentary

By CHRIS CLARKE

WFSU-TV has won first place in the competition for the 1963 Perry Como Award. The prize of five hundred dollars and a gold plaque was awarded to Channel 11 for the best half-hour television documentary produced by the television department of a university.

The competition was sponsored by the American Foundation for the Blind. It was open to any college or university in the country having a TV department. Along with the other winners, the Channel 11 film will be distributed to educational and commercial television stations throughout the country.

The program, to be shown in Tallahassee, tonight at 9 p.m., is entitled, "Soon There Will be 74." At present there 73 blind persons in Leon County. The telecast is dedicated to a Tallahassee girl who at present has partial sight but will soon be totally blind.

She has attended the Daytona Beach School for the Blind and in the fall will enroll in the St. Augustine School for the Blind. At St. Augustine she will complete her high school education and will be prepared for her coming total blindness.

The basis of the program is encouragement for this 16-year-old girl.

After speaking with her host, Gregg Stone will interview Mrs. Joseph Taylor, who is blind herself and who has encouraged the girl to continue her schooling.

"Soon There Will Be 74" was written by Marshall LaCombe, and was produced and directed by Duane Franceschi as a public service presentation of WFSU-TV.

The filmed portion of the show will feature interviews with five people from Tallahassee who are blind themselves and are successful in the community.

SPRING IS HERE!

... and Bob Mahoney and Janet Wells take time from finals studies to soak up some of the fabulous sunshine that has been so welcomed in the past few weeks.

Class Night' Held Tonight

Class Night, one of the many activities held during graduation week for all seniors and their guests, will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Traditionally, awards, presentations and exchange of caps and gowns are made at this function. A musical program presented by Seniors, reading of the class poem and history and recognition of class sponsors and outstanding Seniors are also highlights of the program.

FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell will present the Hall of Fame for the Class of '63. Outstanding seniors will be presented by Dr. Daisy Parker and Dr. Claude Flory. Dean R.R. Oglesby will present the permanent Class Officers.

Each Senior should ask a junior to receive his cap and gown. Men or women may be invited to receive this honor. Seniors with their respective juniors are to line up for the processional at Opperman Amphitheatre at 7 p.m.

Sophomore Council

There will be a meeting of Sophomore Council at 9 p.m. in Longmire Lounge. All members please wear blue and white with name tags.

Smith Gives Plans At Cabinet Session

At Student Body President Johnny Smith's first cabinet meeting, held yesterday afternoon in his office, he expressed his policies, philosophies, and general plans for the operation of the student government next year.

President Smith made known his thoughts on the position of the executive branch in the student government with the administration, the "Flambeau," other branches, and the university at large.

Expressing his philosophy that "Only the active people are moving forward," President Smith said that "there is no excuse for inactivity."

He also stressed the importance of an internal, reciprocal alliance among the members of the cabinet because "We are our own best critics."

President Smith also explained his concepts on how he felt the new cabinet assistants, directorates, and commissioners should function and also how the newly reduced cabinet (from ten to six members) should function.

Cabinet members present were Ben Thornal, administrative assistant to the president; Arnie Gibbs, attorney general; John Jones, secretary of state; Joyce Killian, secretary of intercollegiate affairs; Luther Kramer, secretary of internal affairs; Bill Branch, secretary of finance; Gail Motes, assistant cabinet secretary for student welfare; Sherman Henderson, assistant secretary for student events; Frank Milwee, executive assistant to the president.

Notice

All students are to contact their faculty advisers during the period from now to April 12, to secure a green trial schedule which has the adviser's approval in order to register for either session of the Third Trimester or the 1963-64 Fall Trimester.

Freshmen and sophomores who are uncertain as to their adviser may secure this information from the Counseling Center, 302 Westcott. Juniors and seniors who have questions or serious problems should contact the dean of the school in which they are enrolled.

WASHINGTON--The United States has accused Communist forces in Laos of violating a cease-fire agreement by attacking Neutralist troops. The charges were made in Washington by the State Department and in Paris by its boss, Secretary of State Rusk. The State Department called on Russia and Britain, as co-chairmen of the Geneva Conference on Laos, to take prompt action to restore the cease-fire arranged by the Conference last June. Britain and Russian reportedly are already consulting on what to do.

PARIS--Under the shadow of the Communist menace in Laos, statesmen of the United States, Britain and France are seeking to align their political and Strategic differences in meetings in Paris. Secretary of State Rusk attended a conference of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organizaton, met with President de Gaulle and conferred with the French Premier. The British and French Foreign Ministers met for 25 minutes. De Gaulle gave the impression of trying to be friendlier.

WASHINGTON--Defense Secretary McNamara says it is easier for Americans to sacrifice their money in the fight against Communism than it is to sacrifice their lives. McNamara testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in support of an administration request for one billion, 400 million dollars for overseas military assistance. The Defense Chief cautioned that a return to the so-called fortress America concept of defense would lead to slow suicide.

HAVANA--Informed sources in Havana say an unidentified American shipping firm is seeking to resume a link between Key West, Florida, and the Cuban capital. The link was broken when American and Cuban relations began to deteriorate. The sources say a firm has offered to put a 600-passenger ship into service on the line and they say they've been informed by the firm the U.S. government apparently has no objection.

Literacy Seminar Trains Chileans

Sixty students from various universities in Chile recently participated in a national seminar designed to train literacy campaigners, for the forthcoming national university campaign against illiteracy.

The seminar was held in Valparaise, second largest city in Chile, during the last two weeks of February. The event was supported by the Coordinating Secretariat of National Unions of Students (COSEC), whose literacy director assisted in the organization of the seminar. COSEC also provided funds and educational and printing materials. The Secretariat is the administrative agency of the International Student Conference.

The aim of the seminar was the training of leading literacy campaigners who, at their universities, would assume responsibility for their region in the national university campaign against illiteracy, to be waged in Chile in the near future.

The seminar was divided into two sections: a round table discussion and a literary training course. The round table discussion groups served to acquaint the participants with the problems of illiteracy and adult education, and with the plans of UNESCO and the government of Chile in the area of education. The chairman of these groups were predominantly professors and education officials. Among the most outstanding guests were the representative of UNESCO in Chile, Mr. Oscar Fuentes, the UNESCO expert and national leader in educational planning, Mr. Oscar Vera, and the superintendent for national education in Chile, Mr. Jose Herrera.

The training courses were given by specialists in adult education from the Chilean department of adult education. At the end of the course the participants were in a position to assume their first tasks: to pass on their knowledge to their fellow students at their universities, that these may go on to teach the illiterates.

A resolution adopted by the participants at the end of the seminar expressed the wish that every literacy campaign be coordinated and supported by the Chilean Ministry of Education.

Summer Work Plan Started

Student Government is sponsoring an internal agency (within the President's Cabinet) to service interested students in helping them to gain summer jobs, student body President Johnny Smith announced.

Students who are interested in summer employment opportunities should inquire in the Student Government offices, second floor Longmire Bldg.

Foreign Students Helped

A special program to assist foreign students to find summer employment has been launched by the Institute of International Education, Albert G. Sims, executive vice president, announced today.

The Institute has established a Cooperative Service for Summer Employment and Practical Training for Foreign Students as an administrative unit to encourage, assist and coordinate the efforts of community organizations to find summer jobs for foreign students.

The Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs has made a grant of $108,000 to provide employment and practical training opportunities for foreign students this summer. Funds will be disbursed through the Cooperative Service.

Mr. Richard T. Dunnebacke, director of placement at Michigan [illegible] leave of Mining [illegible] Houghton, Michigan, has been appointed director of the new [illegible] vice. He is on leave of absence from his college post until September. Mrs. Edwina Scofield is assistant director.

Representatives of community, national and government organizations met recently at [illegible] New York City to discuss ways which the Cooperative Service can best facilitate the summer employment placement of foreign students. It was stressed at the meeting that current job market is critical and that foreign students that seek summer employment urgently need earnings. Trade associations, industries, business firms, individual employers, civic and service organizations will be asked to recognize the need for job opportunities for foreign students in their communities.

Foreign student employment programs are already operating in several metropolitan areas.

A pair of brown-framed glasses in a brown box were lost along with a pair of contact lenses in a black box somewhere in the vicinity of the Education Bldg. Anyone finding either the glasses or the contact lenses please notify Betty Keel at the Kappa Delta house immediately.

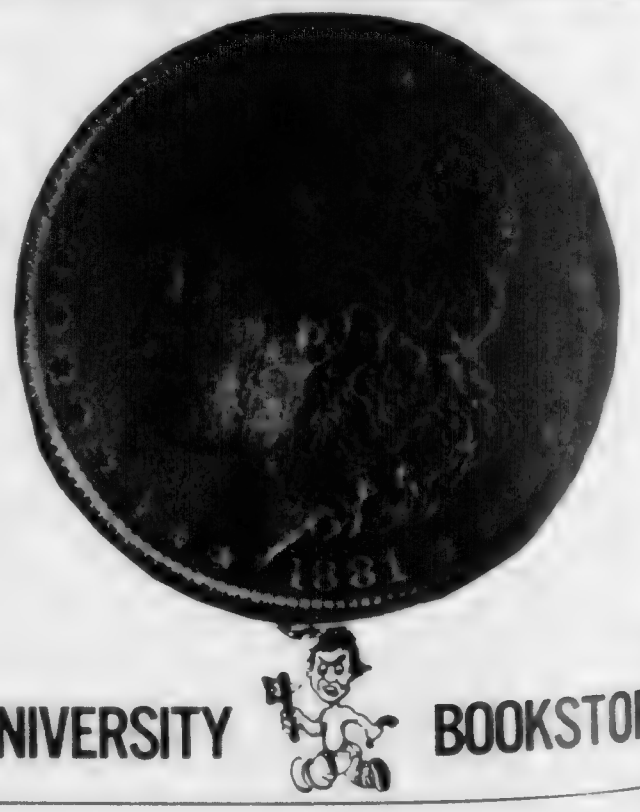
LOST: A pair [illegible] glasses in the area of the "A" [illegible]. The glasses were in a white case, which had "Dr. Shoaf, Delray Beach" stamped on it. If found, please return to Bette Starkey in 101 Dorman Hall.

Applications Taken For Study Abroad

Applications are now being taken for the Wagner College Study Program in Bregenz, Austria, which will run from September, 1963, through May, 1964.



A liberal arts program of an American college in Europe with a curriculum at the upper undergraduate level is offered. Students may choose from courses in German, French and English in language and literature, history, philosophy, economics, political science, humanities and anthropology.

Wagner College has a fully accredited faculty of American and European professors and all instruction, except foreign language courses, are in English.

The fee is slightly more than the yearly cost a good liberal arts college for resident students, and includes transportation from New York [illegible] Bregenz [illegible] insurance. A limited number of tuition scholarships up to $500 each are available.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 1

Summer vacation is just around the corner, and naturally all [illegible] are going to Europe. Perhaps I can offer a handy tip or two. I must confess that I myself have never been to Europe, but I do have a French poodle and a German shepherd, so I am not entirely unqualified.

Just let me say that no trip to Europe is complete without a visit to England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Liechtenstein, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, Crete, Sardinia, Sicily, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Lapland, and Andorra.

Let us take up these countries in order. First, England.

The old ones are thrown away.

The capital of England is London—or Liverpool, as it is sometimes called. There are many interesting things to see in London, chiefly the changing of the guards. The guards are changed daily. The old ones are thrown away.

Another "must" while in London is a visit to the palace of the Duke of Marlborough. Marlborough is spelled Marlborough, but pronounced Marlboro. English spelling is very quaint, but terribly disorganized. The late George Bernard Shaw, author of Little Women, fought all his life to simplify English spelling. They tell a story about Shaw once asking a friend, "What does g-h-o-t-i spell?"

The friend pondered a bit and replied, "Goatee."

Shaw sniggered. "Pshaw," said Shaw. "G-h-o-t-i does not spell goatee. It spells fish."

"How is that?" said the friend.

Shaw answered, "Gh as in enough, o as in women, ti as in motion. Put them all together, you get fish."

This was very clever of Shaw when you consider that he was a vegetarian. And a good thing he was. As Disraeli once remarked to Guy Fawkes, "If Shaw were not a vegetarian, no lamb chop in London would be safe."

But I digress. We were speaking of the palace of the Duke of Marlborough—or Marlboro, as it is called in the United States. It is called Marlboro by every smoker who enjoys a fine, rich breed of tobaccos, who appreciates a pure white filter, who likes a soft pack that is really soft, a Flip-Top box that really flips. Be sure you are well supplied with Marlboros when you make your trip abroad. After a long, tiring day of sightseeing there is nothing so welcome as a good flavorful Marlboro and a foot-bath with hot Epsom salts.

Epsom salts can be obtained in England at Epsom Downs. Kensington salts can be obtained at Kensington Gardens, Albert salts can be obtained at Albert Hall, Hyde salts can be obtained at Hyde Park, and the crown jewels can be obtained at the Tower of London.

The guards at the Tower of London are called Beefeaters because they are always beefing about what they get to eat. This is also known as "cricket" or "petrol."

Well, I guess that about covers England. In next week's column we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—France.

© 1963 Max Shulman

Wherever you may roam in Europe and in all fifty states of the Union, you'll find Marlboro ever-present and ever-pleasant—filter, flavor, pack or box.

Brass And Percussion Present Joint Concert

Two small groups of specialized instrumentalists, "The Brass Choir" and "The Percussion Ensemble," will present a joint concert tomorrow in Opperman at 8:15 p.m.

"The Brass Choir" is conducted by William F. Cramer and "The Percussion Ensemble" by Ramon E. Meyer.

Opening numbers on the five-part program will be "Contrapuntus I" (From the Art of Fugue) by JS Bach; "Symphony for Brass Choir" by Victor Ewald; "Scherzo for Percussion" by William J. Schinstine and "Sketches in Sound" by Ramon E. Meyer, the Ensemble's conductor.

Volunteers Needed For Peace Corps Services

June graduates with degrees in physical education or recreation will find ample opportunities to use their skills and training in Peace Corps service.

Requests for Volunteers with experience in these fields have doubled for 1963 as emerging nations look to the Peace Corps to supply persons with this specialized knowledge.

Ten countries, India, Sierra Leone, Morocco, Guatemala, Venezuela, Columiba, Eduador, Cameroon, Ethiopia and Barbados have appealed to the Peace Corps for sports educators. They will serve as teachers and coaches in elementary and secondary schools, on the university level and some will also work in general athletic programs.

Specifically, the Volunteers will be assigned to develop physical education curricula, supervise and administer sports programs and organize teams to participate in local, regional or international competitions.

A total of 200 men and women with the necessary backgrounds and qualifications will go into training this summer for these projects.

At present, the Peace Corps has nearly 100 Volunteers actively engaged in physical education and recreation projects in seven countries. Coaches are involved in athletic training in Thailand, the Ivory Coast, and Senegal; teachers of physical education are giving classroom instruction in Tunisia and Colombia; recreation workers are organizing youth groups in Venezuela and a new group of Volunteers are now in training for assignment to Indonesia.

"These projects will enable teachers and recreation leaders to gain invaluable experience overseas," Jules Pagano, Director of the Peace Corps' Professional and Technical Division, has stated. "The opportunities are both unusual and challenging and provide a real training ground for dedicated Americans who wish to share their skills while learning from others."

To qualify for any of these Peace Corps projects one should have a degree in physical education or recreation. Teachers with degrees in other academic majors, but who have worked in recreation or physical education are also eligible. Experience in physical education, either through coaching or organizing team competition is highly desirable.

Volunteers must be American citizens over 18. There is no maximum age limit. Married couples are eligible if both can do needed jobs. They may have no dependents under 18.

A Volunteer receives $75 a month readjustment allowance. The total, $1800, is paid at the end of the two-year tour of duty.

He also receives allowances to cover food, housing, clothing, and incidentals. Transportation and medical care are provided.

All Volunteers go through a training program in the United States which prepares them for their jobs. They study the history, culture and language of their host country; technical courses in their special areas of concentration; American history and world affairs; health education and physical fitness and preventive medicine.

Additional information and Volunteer Questionnaires are available by writing to Mr. Pagano, Professional and Technical Division, Peace Corps, Washington 25, D.C.

Hollywood Seeks Untapped Talent

Hollywood's most ambitious program, just developed by Universal Studio to seek out, develop and encourage fresh, new young talent--producers, directors, writers and actors was announced this week by Edward Muhl, vice president in charge of production.

"The company," Mr. Muhl stated, "is providing opportunities in a 'new film horizons' program for such talent, to be given a chance to express themselves in the actual creation of motion pictures rather than in any training program.

"For this purpose Universal has allocated a substantial budget for the production of a number of such motion pictures. The range of subject matter for these productions will be such that they can run the gamut from release in smaller, specialized long-run theatres all the way to pictures that might conceivable play Radio City Music Hall. The emphasis, however, will be basically on quality product, pictures of the highest calibre, with the budgets for each picture dependent upon the picture's needs.

"This major development in picture-making has a four-fold purpose:

(1) To answer the mounting demand by theatres throughout the world for additional suitable product. (2) To reply to those critics contending that young American picture-makers have not kept pace with the recent 'new-wave' or neo-realism school of producers abroad. (3) To tackle in a concrete and practical manner the problem of developing major new picture-making talent behind the camera as well as performing artists. (4) To demonstrate anew Universal's present schedule of top-level production. That program will be expanded to provide a maximum number of top pictures."

Mr. Muhl stated that an awareness of Universal's "new film horizons" program will reach the many fine young talents who presently exist in the United States but are reported to be finding difficulty in interesting major studies in their projects or in obtaining financing for projects which they have developed.

Tuition And Fees Rising

Tuition and fees for residents rose 11 per cent at state universities and land-grant institutions in the past year according to figures compiled by the U.S. Office of Education for the Joint Office of Institutional Research.

During the same period, 1961-62, tuition and fees for non-residents rose by 7.4 per cent, room rates by 6.2 per cent and board charges by 1.7 per cent. Using a national average for these schools, a student who paid $815 for his education at a state university or land-grant institution in his home state in 1961-62 is currently paying $860 for room, board, tuition and fees.

The Office of Education's comparative study covered 90 institutions. Forty-five raised their tuition and fees for residents, 49 for non-residents. Room rate increases for women were made by 40 institutions and for men by 43 institutions. Increases in board charges occurred at 39 institutions for women and 42 for men. Median tuition and fees increases for all institutions surveyed were $30 for residents, $50 for non-residents. The median increase for room and board charges for men was $20, for women $24, while board charges averaged an $18 increase for both sexes.

For 75 institutions attended predominantly by white students, average tuition and fees for residents rose from $263 in 1961-62 to $293 in 1962-63; average tuition and fees for non-residents from $593 to $635; average room rates from $240 to $251 and average board charges from $422 to $435. For 15 institutions attended predominantly by Negro students, residents' tuition and fees rose from $165 to $186 during the period; non-resident tuition and fees from $391 to $422; room rates from $128 to $140 and board charges from $305 to $310.

Individual increases ranged from under $10 to over $100. Area most affected by increases was non-resident tuition and fees, where 25 of the 49 institutions raising charges upped them by over $50 and 11 of this number by more han $100.

Shifting the burden of college costs increasingly from society as a whole to the student is a source of major concern to the institutions represented in the Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and the State Universities Association. The two Associations have stated:

"The process of making students pay an increasing proportion of the costs of higher education will, if continued, be disastrous to American society and to American national strength.

"It is based on the theory that higher education benefits only the individual and that he should therefore pay immediately and directly for its cost--through borrowing if necessary. . . .

"This is a false theory. Its adoption. . . will jeopardize seriously our national strength, reduce our standard of living, and reverse the entire tradition of equal opportunity in life for our young people.

"The primary beneficiary of higher education is society. It is true that great economic and other benefits do accrue to the indiviual, and it is the responsibility of the individual to help pay for the education of others on this account--through taxation and through voluntary support of colleges and universities, in accordance with the benefits received.

"Since there is little correlation between the intellectual ability of the student and his family income, the American public college or university must not become a device to reverse our historic trend away from a class society. We should continue to open wider doors of opportunity for students of genuine ability without regard to income status."

SPORTS

The Wood Pile

Play Ball

Take me out to the ball game! I want to see Kennedy throw the first ball out with "great vigah."

That old American custom, watching the old ball game while munching a hot dog, is back in style due to the kicking off of the new baseball season yesterday. President Kennedy, a righthander with an easy rocking-chair delivery, did the honors for the Washington Senators, who fell before the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 on homers by Jim Gentile and Boog Powell. Kennedy now has a one-two opening game record.

Washington catcher Ken Retzer made a lunging catch of the pitch and then rushed up to get the president's autograph.

Striking hot dog and soft drink vendors removed a picket line from D-C stadium only 90 minutes before game times. They were persuaded by Secretary of Labor Wirtz to do so and meet with him and the management of the stadium concession area tomorrow. The White House announced the removal.

The only survivors from opening day 1962 were President Kennedy and Senator rightfielder Chuck Hinton. The other eight starters weren't even on the Washington squad. Three weren't on the roster at the start of spring training.

Another interesting sports highlight is a speech given to baseball writers by American League President Joe Cronin. Cronin joined the trend toward approving the enlarged strike zone. He is of the opinion that it will make baseball more interesting. "It'll help both pitching and hitting."

And, to nobody's surprise he picked the New York Yanks to win the league pennant again. "They're tough," he said, "they're the team to beat."

Cronin, a feared, hard hitter in his years as manager-shortstop of the Boston Red Sox and Washington Senators, also expressed the opinion the rule calling for pitchers to await their turns at bat in the on deck circle will speed the game.

He said that the new strike zone is good for a pitcher with a hard, high fast ball and that it would get the hitters swinging more. "It'll make the batter think. They're always ready to go for that one you know."

He doubted that the boys in blue would be bothered by the new zone, now between the shoulders and the knees, instead of the letters and the knees. "Our umpires are stand-up umpires and they'll be in a good position to call it."

Cronin mentioned only a few clubs when asked how the league appeared to him, not necessarily in the order of finish he thinks they might achieve.

"The Yankees--Tough, the ones to beat.

"Minnesota--Sound, well constructed, but they need a good right handed pitcher.

"Detroit--A lot depends on what they do around second base. They have good power, a top outfield.

"Baltimore--Definitely strong in the infield and all-around outfield."

A Sports Oddity snatched from the files of the AP discloses that Green Bay's Vince Lombardi is the only veteran head coach in the NFL who has never coached in a regular season game that resulted in a tie.

Then, there was the one about Michigan State Baseball coach John Kobs who brought his team on a Spring Training trip down South and ran into some questionable umpiring. After one game, Kobs complained bitterly to the umpires, whereupon one of the umpires fired back: "Oh, you're just mad because we beat you."

Contrary to what was said in yesterday's Flambeau, the tennis player on the left is not Lex Wood, but Don Caton. The two are caught here receiving a piece of instruction from netter coach Ed Cubbon.

Wood (R), from King William's, South Africa, ... the no. 1 man, while Caton is no. 2 seeded. Ca... hails from Pensacola, Fla.

FLAMBEAU NOTICE

Any students planning to attend Trimester II, III-A, or III-B who are interested in working for the Flambeau please sign up on the second floor of Longmire before Friday.

ROTC Awards Commissions

Col. Wolfred K. White, Professor of Military Science at FSU, has announced the commissions of 20 ROTC cadets, and four women students as Second Lieutenants in the Army.

This year's commissioning exercises will take place on the morning of April 20, and will be a joint exercise, with candidates receiving commissions in the Army, Air Force, Navy and the Marine Corps. Those selected for commissions in the US Army, and their branch of service are: Kenneth W. Almond, Artillery; Hardy W. Bryan, III, Signal Corps; Frank H. Echols, Artillery; Frederick S. Guerin, Artillery. William G. Gulledge, Quartermaster Corps; George M. Harriett, Artillery; James A. Jackson, Finance Corps; Terrence E. McDonald, Armor; Ephriam E. McDowell, Military Police Corps; Charles K. Eddy, Military Police Corps. Tecumseh S. Penney, Armor; Cosmo Ernest Rennella, Armor; Lester Rodgers, Jr., Artillery; Walter Richards, Artillery; David T. Sanchez, Infantry; George D. Shea, Infantry; Gerald B. Sims, Artillery. Nathaniel E. Smith, Army Intelligence (Infantry); James W. Wade, Artillery; and Paul L. Williams, Military Police Corps.

The four women students who will receive Second Lieutenant commissions in the Army Nurse Corps are: Linda Sue Knight, Norma Anne Martin, Minta Lillian Urquhart, and Carol Jean Webb.

HONOR COURT

Any student who desires to seek a position either as a defense counselor or as a member of the prosecution staff may notify Kelley Reid, Chief Justice of the Honor Court, at the Honor Court Office, room 404 Longmire Bldg., extension 3004, or may submit a written statement with name, address, and phone number.

Office hours for the remainder of the second trimester will be from 4 to 5 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays.

MURRAY W. KENNA

High Schoolers Set For College Credit

Twelfth graders who have taken college-level courses in high school can chalk up college credit in 11 fields at FSU by taking examinations between May 13 and 17.

The fields are American history, biology, chemistry, English, European history, French, German, Latin, mathematics, physics and Spanish.

The testing program and college courses-in-high-school program is part of the College Entrance Examination Board's Advanced Placement Program in which FSU participates.

Twelve Florida high schools, including both public and private schools, participated in the program last year and others may also give the examinations next month.

Schools which have participated are Coral Gables High School, P. K. Yonge, Gainesville; Ribault and Bolles, Jacksonville; Melbourne, Miami Beach; Seminole, Sanford; Florida High, Tallahassee; Titusville; Everglades School for Girls, Miami; and Graham Eckes, Palm Beach.

The examinations, for which three hours will be allowed, will have primarily essay-type questions. Since the examinations are based on college-level courses, students who have not had preparation beyond regular secondary school work should take the examinations only if advised to do so by their teachers. After careful grading the scores will be provided FSU or other participating colleges where the student may have applied as a basis for advanced placement and college credit.

Dr. Willis Caldwell, associate registrar and director of admissions of FSU said:

"We would like to see more high schools take advantage of this opportunity and to have on our campus these students who already have proved themselves capable.

"We feel the program is both advantageous to the student and to us. The student is allowed to proceed on to more advanced studies in his area and the program fits in with the objectives of the trimester to serve a greater number of students."

He said that after the tests given in the high schools are returned to Princeton and graded the Educational Testing Service will send the tests to the department concerned.

Brass Choir Sets Concert Tonight

The Brass Choir" and "The Percussion Ensemble" will present a joint concert in Opperman at 8:15 tonight. William F. Cramer is conducting the choir consisting of brass instruments, while the percussion group will play under the baton of Ramon E. Meyer.

"Contrapuntus I" will be the opening number for the program tonight, coming from the Art of Fugue by J.S. Bach. Other numbers to be featured will be "Symphony for Brass Choir" by Victor Ewald; "Scherzo for Percussion" by William J. Schinstine and "Sketches in Sound" by Ramon E. Meyer, the conductor of the small ensemble.

The concert will be free and open to the general public.

Rules For Fall Announced

3rd Trimester Sessions Set

"Those students not enrolled in the third trimester need not worry about readmission if they are in good standing with the university at this time," said Dr. Murray Kenna, registrar.

"All information will be sent to students during the third trimester concerning registration for the fall. Only those persons not in good standing with the university for such things as academic probation or other probation will have to apply for readmission," he continued.

"The maximum load for the full third trimester is 18 hours, but with special permission from the dean, a student may be permitted to take 20 hours," Kenna stated.

Students must maintain a balanced load during trimester IIIA and IIIB. For an 18 hour load, a student may not take 12 hours during IIIA and six hours during IIIB, but must take nine hours for each half of the trimester. These standards were set by the faculty-senate committee.

Maximum hour load for a graduate student during trimester III, 1963 will be 15 hours. A maximum of eight hours may be carried during either trimester IIIA or IIIB.

The cost for the third trimester is as follows:

Only students paying full fees are to receive I.D. cards. Interns and part-time students should be given a library Permit Card. Full fees are $113.00 for 14 weeks, and $60.00 for seven weeks, and $38.00 for three weeks.

Part-time students who are auditing pay registration fees only. Out-of-state tuition is paid only for courses taken for credit.

Graduate assistants must pay a minimum of $60.00 for a full trimester or $30.00 for a seven-week term.

PRE-MED NOTICE

All premedical students who plan to enter medical school in Spetember, 1964, should take the Medical College Admission Test May 4.

Applications may be obtained at the University Test Service, 203 Education Bldg., and must be mailed before April 19. For further information contact Dr. R.W. Yerger, Premedical Advisor, 126A Conradi Bldg.

LOST

A music pocket score of six string quartets by Bela Bartok has been lost.

If found, please return to Manueal Alvarez, 801 W. St. Augustine St. or to the Music Library.

ALSO LOST

A pair of brown contact lenses in a small blue and white case was lost.

If found, please return to Carmen O'Rork at 529 1/2 W. College Ave. A reward is offered.

Student Government

Student Body President Johnny Smith voiced some interesting and thought-provoking philosophy concerning our student government yesterday.

He said that for many years the Florida State University Student Government has primarily concerned itself with setting its own house in order; it has strived to improve and perfect its organization.

However, he cautioned, in doing so, it has failed to partake of its full and rightful role in the lives of the students.

He mentioned that it is the hope of his administration to stimulate student government towards more "outgoing" action, which would be more noticeable and more immediately fruitful to the student body at large.

He feels that student leaders have built student government into a great and workable tool and that the time has come to use that tool for the betterment and progress of Florida State University.

These ideas expressed by one in such a high place are indeed heartening. Incoming incumbents in the past have always carried with them high ideals and great plans for improving and advancing the cause of the students of the University; however few leaders have been able to give their administrations such a direct and practical goal in so short a time.

For many years, on many issues with direct bearing on the students the government has failed to step in and take a practical hand to correct or improve a situation. This is certainly not meant as criticism. Student Government has been going through a phase of adjustment at FSU for many years.

After all, FSU has been co-educational for less than 15 years, and most of those 15 years have witnessed tremendous growth, which itself has forced the student government to expand tremendously. With the advent of the trimester student government leaders have had to force many other adjustments to keep the various aspects of our government functional and meaningful.

This process of adjustment is a continuous one, the greater part of which is past. Now the time has come to use the tools which have been so carefully born and adjusted during the last 15 years.

Next year's student government will have "one-up" on its predecessors in another area too. Most of the major office holders will be on the campus this summer to aid in the completion of student government's adjustment to the trimester and to lay the groundwork for many of the plans which will be put before the student body next fall.

It's Exam Time

Spring has sprung and fall has fell, finals are here and brother it's hell. A little out of context perhaps, but nevertheless true.

Here you sit pouring over those last few books that at the last minute the prof decided would add just that little bit to the knowledge you already should have obtained. Over in the corner, in the proximity of the wastepaper basket, is approximately two packs of typing paper, the remnants of one or two papers that somehow never seemed to materialize. Lying at various places in the room are broken pencils with the erasers having been viciously chewed off some 10,000 words past.

As can be expected, the ash trays are filled to overflowing with cigarette butts, two No-Doz boxes and a couple of candy wrappers. On top of the bed lies what seems to be about half of the library's books, magazines and what have you, the only thing that has occupied the rack since who remembers when.

The top of the dresser, where your picture of that someone special used to be, is filled with at least two or three dozen Coke bottles, as for the picture, it's long gone, it was put away along with its human likeness as something to be considered only after the maze is completed.

The radio is on and probably has been for quite some while, you can't remember, it's gotten to be just one more noise. You can remember when it said something about "Sunny and fair with the high about "80" but that is something that you have conditioned out of your existence for the time being.

All of a sudden the alarm rings waking you from a partial sonambic dream, your roommate half slides half falls out of the sack, mumbles something about only one more week and you realize that another day is about to begin. The date, well it doesn't really matter, it is however only one more week till finals are over and rest and tranquility.

Expresses Gratitude

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the following persons for their assistance to the 1962-63 Elections Bureau.

Without their assistance it would not have been possible to conduct elections efficiently or properly.

Deep gratitude and thanks go to Mrs. Darleen Giles and Mr. Dee Williams of the Registrar's Office, Mrs. Betty Clemons, Dr. G. Tulley and Dr. Howard Stoker, the University Test Service; Miss Jane Adams, Longmire Building; the Maintenance Dept. (Carpenter Shop, Labor and Transportation, and the Motor Shop), Building Services, Reid Montgomery, Director of Student Activities and the Student Publications Lab.

Also, to the Sophomore Council, Freshman Flunkies, the Apo service fraternity, and many others go sincere thanks for their help.

Last, but far from least, my thanks to the "Flambeau" for its assistance in providing to the student body needed information in news and editorial comment, all of which promoted a greater interest in campus political activity than we have ever seen before.

Working together all of the above individuals and groups have provided invaluable assistance to our student body. Thank you again.

Quality Needed, Too

Supposedly the trimester will save building costs by making better use of existing facilities. This is not the case. Here again, even if a financial saving were derived, it is still not worth the sacrifice in quality education. Several million dollars may be saved on university building programs, but in the long run, the cost will be much greater.

Today's students will be tomorrow's leaders, doctors, scientists, engineers, and so on. These jobs all require a sound education. Persons "educated" under the trimester will tend more toward errors due to the poor quality of their education and to the habits of rushing carelessly through their work, which the trimester enforces upon students.

For example, a scientist who studied under the trimester, running a countdown on a missile may ignore some small item that could easily destroy the missile being tested and cost millions of dollars in research. With careful study habits to carry into his work, he would be less likely to be careless in his work.

A university is a place for serious and deep learning balanced by a practical education in simply living and dealing with people in study, in work, in recreational things, in doing the everyday things that people do—the education in being a person. The trimester fails in both categories. Budgeting one's time often consists of figuring out how to spend minimum time in a given subject in order to avoid not having time on other subjects.

It has been pointed out that the course loads carried and grade averages made have not changed significantly during the Fall Trimester, 1962. Therefore, it is said, these figures do not bear out student accusations that the trimester robs them of adequate time for effective study. It is said statistics may be construed to prove almost anything, but can these figures measure human difficulty? Do they measure the anxiety, the ulcers, the tranquillizers taken, the hours spent at a counsellor's or psychiatrist's office trying to arrange a way of living that would be the best compromise between filling a person's basic needs, including a REASONABLE amount of extracurricular, cultural, and recreational needs and the shallow but constant cramming that is the brainchild of the trimester.

As if it weren't bad enough that the students are badgered by lack of time, the faculty at FSU is put into a time shortage perhaps even more severe. Professors, who have to teach classes and pursue research are unable to do justice to their work. Many professors say they have insufficient time to prepare properly the lessons they wish to present to their students. Often it happens that professors are late to class in order to give time to their other duties. Any experienced student can attest that in many courses the quality of the professor's performance is an important link in the process of learning. Since the trimester makes a professor's position awkward, it will in this way reduce his value as a conveyer of knowledge. This is another blow at the learning process that the trimester inflicts.

There is an edict issued by the Board of Control saying that professors may not teach more than two and a half trimesters. This is causing some departments trouble in finding professors to teach during the third trimester. This situation further reduces the ability of the University to function during the summer trimester as it should according to the proponents of the system. In fact, some professors will be teaching during the full summer trimester in addition to the fall and spring trimesters. if the policy limiting professors to two and a half trimesters is followed, the summer trimester could be no more than an old summer session of course seven or eight weeks long. Hiring additional professors might be considered, but the small number of students planning to attend the summer trimester make this venture unlikely.

Honors Work Available During Summer Months

shmen with high academic re- s during their first trimester at are eligible to join the Honors ram in the Division of Basic es.

dents who have completed no than 19 semester hours may cipate in the Honors Program ing in the summer or fall tri- sters.

advantages of the Honors Pro- for freshmen include the avail- ty of special honors sections in w courses with limited enroll- ment, increased faculty-student relationships, and extra-curricular programs. Faculty honors advisers also have small counseling loads.

For the University as a whole, the Honors Program in the Division of Basic Studies, the College of Arts and Sciences, the School fo Music and the School of Education all serve to put the emphasis on good scholarship. These programs recognize and encourage high quality education for all students and faculty on campus.

Most honors students are enrolled in the Basic Division Honors Program at the beginning of their freshman year. Others, with 14-19 semester hours of credit, may be admitted if they have achieved an overall average 3.5 or better in their academic subjects at the University. Grades in physical education and ROTC are not included in this requirement. Students with an overall academic average of 3.2 to 3.5 may also qualify for the Honors Program if they had outstanding high school records (3.5 academic grade point average or a Florida Twelfth Grade Test score of 450 or a C.E.E.B. score of 1100).

Interested students should contact the Honors Program office, 121 History, as soon as possible before the end of the present trimester.

Questions about the program may be directed to the Director of Honors Paul J. Piccard of the Government Department faculty.

At Physics Colloquim

Laser Developments Discussed

"Recent Developments in Lasers" was the topic of a Physics Colloquium at FSU yesterday.

The speaker was Dr. Oliver Heavens of the Univerity of London, who is at FSU as visiting lecturer.

Lasers are the devices by which light waves are concentrated to produce an intense narrow beam which may be of use in space communication. The first successful use of lasers was in 1960.

Dr. Heavens, who will be here through today, has been visiting the campus under auspices of the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics.

Dr. Earle K. Plyler, head of the Department of Physics at FSU, was in charge of arrangements for the visit. An expert in optics, the visiting British scientist has been doing work at Royal Holloway College of the University of London on lasers and on thin films. He spent the 1959-60 year on leave at Columbia University working with Charles A. Townes on lasers.

IFPC Appeals

Dear Students:

As the trimester draws to a close, so does the Inter-Fraternity Pledge Council's "Project Books." You, the students, are needed to make this project a success.

The IFPC has had its last meeting, so "Project Books" has been put in the hands of a committee headed by vice president Jim Oliver. The collection of the books -- which are to be donated to the W.T. Edwards Tuberculosis Hospital -- will be made both before and after final exams. Books of any kind will be accepted, and you may put them in any of the solid-colored boxes around campus bearing "Project Books" posters.

I realize that you are constantly plagued by politicians, pledge dinners, and fund-raising projects of all kinds, but this will not inconvenience you in any way.

Simply drop any books which you desire to be rid of into the boxes, and in so doing you will be serving a dual purpose. First you will be getting rid of unused books; and second -- and most important -- you will be helping someone less fortunate than yourself.

Sincerely,
Joel M. DeVolentine
President, IFPC

FSU Conducts Summer French Programs

Florida State University will conduct a program for 44 secondary teachers in French from June 23 through August 16 in an effort to greatly imporve the teaching of French in Florida high schools and in the secondary schools of neighboring states.

In a report made in 1962 it was found that French has become the second most popular language in the high schools and that enrollment in this languagehas increased 23.8 cent from 1959 to 1960.

At registration, over twice as many student registered for second year French at FSU than were expected, yet many of these students had to be placed back in first year French due to poor preparation on the high school level.

The objectives of the French Institute are to greatly improve the competency of the participants in listening comprehension, speaking, reading, and writing of French; to improve knowledge of the intellectual, social educational and political aspects of modern France; to instruct in the usage of new methods of teaching and teaching aids; to give a mastery of the audio-lingual approach; to improve language analysis abilities and to increase self confidence necessary in the teaching of any subject.

The Institute will select 40 participants from public secondary teachers in French and four from private secondary schools. The participants will be divided into two general sections according to the level of their audio-lingual skills, for the civilization and language analysis classes.

There will be no grades issued for the Institute, as it was found by most of the faculty members teaching in the Converse College for Miami NDEA Institutes during the past three years that this type of Institute is most efficient and rewarding when grade systems are not used.

Participants will be required to have a BA degree or its equivalent, a minimum of two years of college French or the equivalent and teaching experience in French on the secondary level.

Those attending the Institute will be required to remain on campus six days a week for the whole period except one or two long week-ends. Classes, drill sessions, compulsory laboratory attendance and group activities would be distributed over the weekly schedules. A tight schedule is necessary due to the amount of material to be covered and the participants possible exodus for the homefront.

French Civilization and Language Analysis courses will be taught twice daily and will conducted according to the ability of the class. French Civilization will be held entirely in French.

The Language Analysis course will be taught in French for the upper division and in English for the lower group. It will consist of an extensive language practice course where every effort will be made to re-educate the thinking procedure of the students... to think of a structure not because there is a grammar rule for it, but because it happens to be the way people speak in France.

Threeeveningsa week, the participants will attend an hour of supervised Laboratory. Tuesday evenings there will be a French movie for the members of the Institute. Seven French films will be shown with the newsreels of the week in French.

Informal get-togethers, excursions or picnic singing sessions will be scheduled on Thursday or Saturday afternoons.

All of the Institute members would be required to live in the "Maison Lafayette," a brand new air-conditioned sorority house which will be rented for the duration of the program. Meals will be served in the large private dining room of the house in the company of the French Informants and of most of the Institute faculty.

A block of nine undergraduate credits will be offered for successful completion of the entire program. Six graduate credits may be granted after a special examination for students regularly enrolled in the Graduate School.

Director of the Institute is Dr. Jean Charron of the Modern Languages Dept. The Institute will be staffed with a number of native speakers of French and with distinguished specialists in French culture, in applied linguistics to the teaching of French, in methods and demonstration of language teaching.

No tuition or activity fees of any kind will be charged. Participants will purchase necessary books and supplies and pay their own room and board for the eight weeks, at an estimated cost of $250. In accordance with the National Education Defense Act of 1958, each public school teacher may receive, upon application and acceptance, a stipend of $75 per week, plus $15 for each dependent. Private school teachers may participate in the Institute without payment of tuition or fees, but are not eligible to receive stipends or dependency allowances.

ONE LOOK AND POOF!

. . cries Heurtebise to Orphee, when Le Treteau de Paris presents Jean Cocteau's "Orphee" tonight at 8:30 p.m. "L'Apollon de Bellac," by Jean Giraudoux is a second feature on the program.

French Plays Run Tonight In Westcott

By PAT FREEMAN
Asst. News Editor

French students, from the 101 through 999 level, have learned a new sentence which reads: "Que vous etes beau, monsieur... que vous etes beau!"

Contrary to popular opinion, this is not a French prayer for success during final exams, but is a sentence from one of the two one-act plays to be presented by the French touring company, Le Treteau de Paris, tonight at 8:30 in Westcott Auditorium.

"Orphee," by Jean Cocteau and "L'Apollon de Bellac," by Jean Giraudoux run the theatrical gamut from tragedy to farce, and Jean de Rigault, head of the troupe of actors, said playgoers would not be handicapped in the least by a language barrier.

"The Theatre is the Theatre," he said, "... and if the production is well-acted and well-directed, and if the sets are well-designed... communication is established between the spectators and actors, and language is no longer a barrier."

Tickets, $1 for students, faculty and the public, are still available at the Westcott Ticket Office, in Room 306 of the A Bldg. and at Mendelssohn's Department Store.

In "L'Apollon de Bellac," Giraudoux has produced a spoof on the legendary French talent for a bureaucracy, as well as providing a recipe for "euphoria-spreading."

Agnes, the over-timid young creature who learns the phrase "que vous etes beau" means real dividends in the long run, encounters red tape obstacles right and left in the Bureau of Inventions, only to wind up her adventures and misadventures by hooking none other than Monsieur Le President. This causes no little consternation on the part of the President's secretary and fiance.

The play is "a fable to show that love is a creative art of the imagination," as Giraudoux writes. To this Agnes might have only one comment to add: "Que vous etes beau, Monsieur Giraudoux... que vous etes beau," (which means "My, but you are handsome, Monsieur).

As for "Orphee," by Cocteau, well: a beatnik horse who beats out poetry for the benefit of Orphee, who's a poet-laureate candidate just married to an ex-Bacchantite named Eurydice... what can one expect?

Certainly not Heurtebise, who runs around in the air, wears a pane of glass on his back, and who sends Orphee through mirrors after Madame Death and her two assistants.

Senior Ceremonies Held

Senior Class President Duncan Moore opened Class Night ceremonies Tuesday night in Westcott auditorium with a reminder to graduating seniors of the duty they are about to take on as alumni.

"Alumni of any university serve as the backbone of that university," said Moore, who added that the job of the graduating seniors as alumni is to remain loyal and to work for FSU after graduation.

These remarks followed the opening processional with music supplied by organist Robert Fritz, and the singing of the "Hymn to the Garnet and Gold," led by Joanne Smaltz.

Beverly Anne Calvert, Senior Class social chairman, gave the class history and reminded seniors of such milestones in their college careers as their first registration, rat court, rush and their first football game.

Following the class history, Robin Loretta Leager read the class poem.

On the musical portion of the program, Walter C. Britt sang the hymn. Walter Pittman wielded percussion instruments.

FSU President Gordon Blackwell, presented the Hall of Fame awards. Named to the FSU Hall of Fame were: James Galt Allee, Gene D. Brown, Diane Iris Goodwin, George M. Harriet, Jr., Barbara Lynn Hepp, Catherine (Kitty) Miller Riesenberg, Barbara Ann Norman, Barbara Lou Rich, Robert T. Self, and Nancy Anne Sindon.

The Outstanding Senior Woman Award was presented by Dr. Daisy Parker to Catherine Miller Riesenberg and the Outstanding Senior Man award was given to Ken van Assenderp by Dr. Claude R. Flory.

Gene McDowell was then presented with the James Liteky Memorial Award, an award presented annually to the senior athlete most exemplifying the character of James Liteky, former FSU athlete.

Next on the program, Jean Ferlita presented the class gift to Dr. Gordon Blackwell. The gift consisted of the balance of funds in the Senior Class treasury, extimated in excess of $500 to be applied toward the purchase of a grand piano for the banquet ballroom of the proposed student union.

Dr. R.R. Oglesby, Dean of Students, announced the permanent class officers: president, Ken van Assenderp; vice president, Gene Brown; secretary, Catherine Miller Riesenberg; treasurer, Jeanie Ferlita.

Senate will meet in Special Session Friday at 4:15 p.m. to confirm President Smith's Cabinet Appointments. All senators are urged to attend this important meeting.

African School Joins FSU Study

Florida State University has invited Rhodes University in Grahamstown to collaborate with it in further study of the planet Jupiter.

Successful experiments have been carried out by the physics dept. of Rhodes University in forging a link with the planet.

George Gruber, a senior research assistant in the physics dept., who has been in charge of these experiments, said the extension of the research to American and a private laboratory in England would mean a continuous observation of Jupiter for 18 hours a day.

Rhodes established the first link with Jupiter last June when static noise from the planet was received on apparatus set up by Gruber in a hut a few miles out of Grahamstown.

Gruber said they were still trying to determine the causes of this radiation from Jupiter.

IFPC Pledge Council Asks For Old Books

All used books will be collected by the Inter-Fraternity Pledge Council on April 19 to conclude "Project Books."

If you have any used books that are good reading material, please donate them. These books may consist of novels, short stories, or documentaries which you feel would be interesting reading for bed-ridden patients at W.T. Edwards' Tuberculosis Hospital in Tallahassee.

Books should be placed in the solid-colored boxes found in the dorms, religious centers, scholarship houses, and sorority houses bearing the "Project Books" poster.

The IFPC is a newly organized council of all social fraternity pledges in good standing with their respective fraternities. Each pledge class is permitted to send two delegates to the organization: the president and one delegate selected at large.

The purpose of the IFPC is to train campus leaders to promote pledge class cooperation, to encourage scholarship, and to serve the university and the community.

The officers for this trimester are Joel DeVolentine, president; Jim Oliver, vice president; Guy Sanderson, secretary; Bob Stoner, treasurer; David Leever, social chairman; and Charlton Hines, project chairman. IFPC adviser is Hal Smith.

Besides their second trimester project of the book drive, IFPC will sponsor a school-wide dance in the fall. Also community and school service projects will be undertaken and a scholarship fund will be begun.

The decision to form the nuclear command was reported today after Secretary of State Dean Rusk addressed the NATO council in Paris on the current status of the proposed force.

WASHINGTON--The threat of a new steel-price crisis has apparently caused President Kennedy to postpone until tomorrow afternoon his departure from Washington for a brief Florida vacation. Government officials report the President deeply concerned over the price increase on six steel products by Wheeling Steel Corporation. The administration is alert to the possibility of Wheeling's action snowballing into a wave of general price boosts by the steel industry.

WASHINGTON--The House today upset an action by its Appropriations committee and voted to use 45 million dollars in new funds to boost the economy in areas of heavy unemployment. The money was voted for financing the accelerated public works program. The House vote of 228 to 184 came today on a one billion, 400 million dollar omnibus appropriation bill which now goes to the Senate.

The Senate has written a civil rights amendment into the administration's youth employment bill. The amendment--opposed by a 71 to 15 vote--bans exclusion of anyone from the program on the basis of race, creed or color. The ban applies to both the conservation camp and local public service programs in the bill.

Honor Society Elects Officers

At a recent meeting of FSU's chapter of Sigma Pi Sigma, National Physics Honor Society, the following members were elected as officers: Norman Magee, president; Jim Boyce, vice president; Dick Pasto, secretary; and Norbet Thonnard, treasurer.

Norman Magee is an honor student and a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Kappa Phi honoraries. Jim Boyce, who is from Mexico, is majoring in both physics and math. Dick Pasto is a graduate student presently working on his master's degree in physics. Norbert Thonnard, a student assistant in the physics department since high school, was the recipient of the Bausch and Lomb Science Award for outstanding science achievement in high school.

Correction

Students living off-campus will pay the same fees as part-time students only if attending for the three (3) week period, not for the seven week term as stated in yesterday's Flambeau. Students who will attend a seven week term and who plan to live off campus will not pay the same fees as part time students.

FSU Seminars Serve As Model

Florida State University s seminar system, which has attracted scientists from all over the world to discuss special problems with graduate and undergraduate students and faculty, may become the model for one in Stuttgart, Germany.

Dr. Theodor Forster, director of a research laboratory of physical chemistry and electrochemistry at Technische Hochschule in Stuttgart, has completed six months here as a visiting professor of quantum chemistry in the Institute of Molecular Biophysics.

One of the things which impressed the scientist, who is internationally known as a spectroscopist, was the graduate seminar program which has attracted scientists from major universities in this country and abroad.

He plans to use the FSU program as an example to speed up a program of the sort in Stuttgart. "Personal exchange of ideas and the interaction between persons is of vast aid in the creation of new ideas," he said.

It was to exchange ideas with Dr. Michael Kasha, director of the Institute and a fellow researcher in the field of spectroscopy, that Forster came to FSU last fall on Kasha's invitation.

Dr. Forster, described by Dr. Kasha and by Dr. Earle K. Plyler, head of the Physics Department, as "the outstanding physical chemist in Germany today," has developed a theory of the transfer of absorbed energy between molecules represented in his "continuum model" while Dr. Kasha has developed another called the "exciton theory."

Forster's theory describes a "step-by-step" process, while Kasha's describes a "collective excitation" process. Forster hoped to find a mathematical meeting ground of the two theories and did so while at FSU. This will result in an important paper which he plans to publish soon.

Forster's most famous publication is "Fluorescence of Organic Compounds," a book published in 1951 and now sold out. He conducted several seminars at FSU before leaving a few days ago for Germany.

His field and that of Kasha's, spectroscopy, is a study of what occurs to light when passing through matter. Each substance produces a spectrum which provides its own identification and might be likened to a fingerprint. By finding these fingerprints in the spectroscope scientists can identify various molecules and atoms and can test many theories about the electronic structure of molecules.

In addition to the seminar program Dr. Forster had priase for the Strozier Library, whose hours are far longer, he said, than his own institution's.

Dr. and Mrs. Forster and their two sons, Eberhard, 17, and Dietrich, 15, came to Tallahassee for the assignment. The older son had to return to Germany to complete examinations for his final year at the Gymnasium (corresponding with the sophomore year in college), but Dietrich got a taste of an American high school while here.

In Germany Dietrich had to stay with his age group, regardless of his grasp of a subject, but in Florida High, the university school, he was allowed, like some other advanced students, to take a college course. Dietrich studied freshman calculus and made an A in the course.

Dr. and Mrs. Forster praised the University School's music program and attended many concerts where they heard their son play a violin.

The Forsters found Tallahassee a delightful place and although they covered the Florida peninsula in their travels North Florida became their favorite part. Many hours on the week ends were spent in the St. Marks Wildlife Refuge, which they described as one of the loveliest spots they had ever seen. They also enjoyed the beaches at Panacea.

FATE Students Attend Meeting

Plans for a National Student Federal Aid to Educational (FATE) Conference to be held in Washington on April 25, 26 were announced today by the 17-member Steering Committee for the Conference.

Conference Co-Chairman, Tim Ryles of Troy State College, and Pat Clary, American University, estimated that 500-1,000 students from all over the United States would attend the Conference. "The 17 organizations sponsoring the FATE Conference," Ryles and Clary declared, "include most of the outstanding student organizations in the country.

This Conference will draw together student opinion already expressed by many of the sponsoring organizations concerning the great problems of financing education today and the role that the Federal Government sould play. It is completely non-partisan," Ryles stressed, "and both Young Democrats and Young Republicans have been invited to participate."

The Conference will begin on Thursday night, April 25, and continue through Friday night, April 26. The schedule will include three workshop sessions, addresses by prominent educators, Congressional leaders, and HEW officials.

Theater Tryouts Are Scheduled

"Dark of the Moon," FSU Theatre's last 1962-63 production, which will be presented during the Third Trimester, June 5-9, has announced that tryouts will be held Sunday, April 28 at 2 p.m. and Monday, April 29 at 7 p.m.

Sam Baker, graduate assistant in the Speech Dept. who directed last year's award-winning production "Look Homeward, Angel," will be director of the folk tragedy written by Howard Richardson and William Berney.

The play relates the legendary ill-fated love affair of one Miss Barbara Allen, a flirtatious mountain gal, and a Witch Boy who desires to be human.... (poor fellow)

Interwoven into the plot are superstitions long held by the mountain people, mixed well with a fanatical religious fervor, and seen struggling valiantly against a background of a wicked species of siren witches from the Witch Boy's past. Numerous folk ballads of North Carolina and the Blue Ridge Mountain area will be used in the production.

"Dark of the Moon," an outgrowth of an upsurging interest in folk drama in North Carolina and Iowa, was a Broadway hit in 1945, but has been produced rarely in college theatres due to difficulties in staging. Hal Poe will design and construct the settings for the play, and Abbie Mitchell will design costumes.

Baker announced that any students who will be enrolled for either the Third Trimester or for Trimester IIIA may audition for any of the parts. The cast consists of 12 women and 13 men in speaking roles, with some singing and dancing required.

Anyone interested in playing instruments for ballad or square dance music should contact Baker in 115 History Bldg. immediately, or should call extension 2002 as soon as possible.

All students planning to audition for parts should pick up scripts, which are available in 115 History, and should attend both tryout periods.

Shorter Work Week Seen For Students

Many of today's college students look forward to the day when the 37-hour work week will be shortened.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, in a 114 page report recently published lists the advantages and disadvantages of shortening the nationwide work week.

According to the report, this shortening would "tend to defeat America's efforts to achieve a higher rate of economic growth." The report has stated that reducing the work week would reduce investments, research and employment, and would tend to curb productivity and push up prices.

However, a shorter work week does have its advantages in social benefits. More time could be alloted for education, job training, community activities and recreation.

In general, the report shows that Americans have a choice between working less and having more time for activities or producing more which would lead to more consumption of goods and more investment of funds.

Rotary Foundation Offers Fellowships

The Rotary Foundation, dedicated to further understanding and friendly relations between peoples of different nations, annually awards Rotary Foundation Fellowships to young men for a year's graduate study abroad.

This study provides them with an opportunity to interpret their home country, and fosters an understanding of their home country. The applicant must submit his application by April 15 to the Rotary Club nearest his permanent home.

An applicant should be an ambassador of good will and a scholar, and is required to have a friendly personality and the ability to speak in public. He must have high scholastic ability and hold a BA degree by the time the Fellowship is to begin. It is also necessary that te young man, single and between the ages of 20 and 28, be able to read, write and speak the language of the country, be interested in world affairs and be a citizen of the country of his permanent residence.

On the application should be included a list of five universities, not more than three of which may be in the same free country, at which the applicant would like to study.

The amount of the award covers round trip transportation to the university city, full tuition, registration fees, essential books and study materials, room and board and incidental living costs and limitied educational travel expenses within the country of study.

Fellowships start approximately one year after the award is made. For further information, contact the Rotary Club nearest your home.

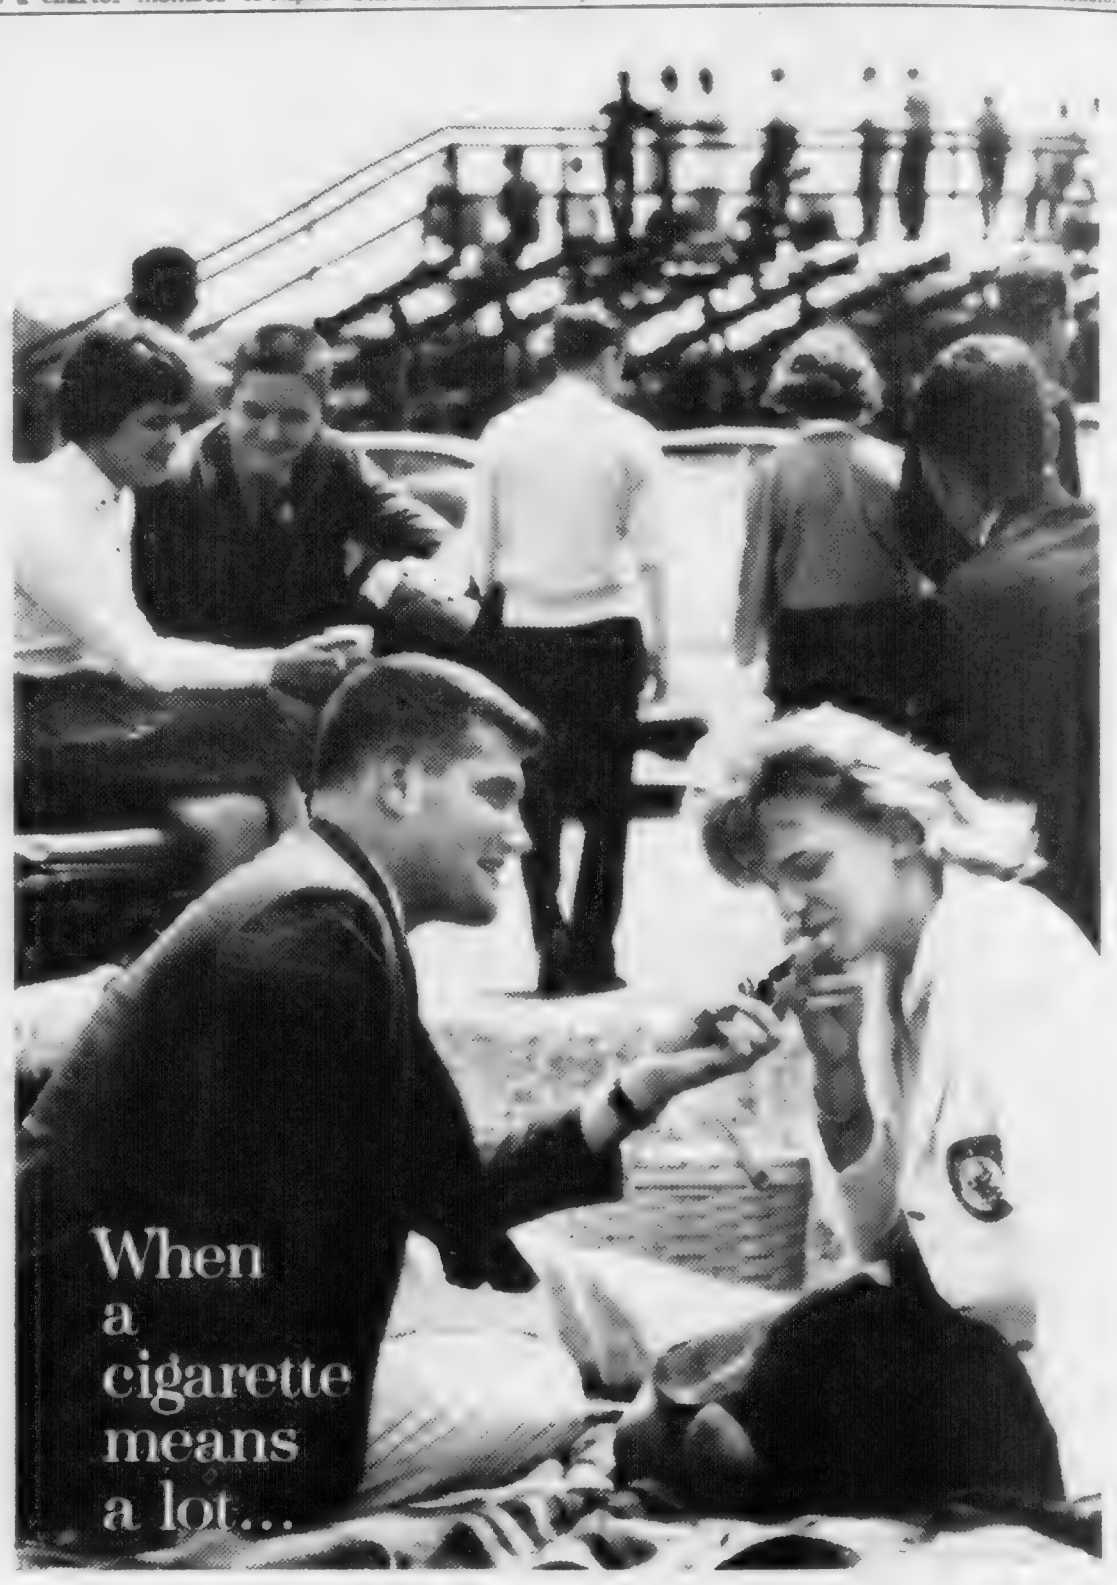
Cops Delta Kappa Gamma Award

Swearingen's Achievement Excels



Dr. Mildred Swearingen, professor of education administration, supervision and curriculum at FSU, has received the annual achievement award of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary teachers' society.

Presented at the biennial convention of the Society in Winter Park, the certificate award is for achievement within the teaching profession. She is a charter member of Alpha Kappa chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

Dr. Swearingen joined the FSU faculty in 1949. Prior to that she served as classroom teacher, principal and educational supervisor in the Polk County schools and as consultant in elementary education with the State Department of Education. She holds the Ph.D. degree from Ohio State University.

In Delta Kappa Gamma she has been chapter president, parliamentarian and chairman of committees, including yearbook and program. She has also served in a statewide capacity as secretary of Mu State and chairman of the program committee.

Dr. Swearingen is the author of a textbook, "Supervision of Instruction: Foundations and Dimension Classical mythology in a rather different style? Perhaps, yet since the plays are being sponsored under the auspices of the Modern Languages Dept. and the Interdepartmental Program in Humanities, it must be okay... and who knows what Orphee and Eurydice were really like?

The author provides excitement in the rivalry and jealously of Orphee held by the priestess of the Bacchantes, has the horse revealed as a sinister character, allows beautiful Eurydice to be poisoned under the nose of Heurtebise (her guardian angel) and even has Orphee literally losing his head over the confusing business.

Veterans Get Rehabilitation

The enactment of PL 87-815 made vocational rehabflitation training available for the first time to veterans who incurred disability as a result of service in the armed forces during any period of service in the armed forces during any period of service covered by the Universal Military Training and Service Act.

The periods of service included are: (1) July 26, 1947 to June 26, 1950, and (2) February 1, 1955 to the present. If compensation is being received from the government because of a disability incurred during either of these period, one may apply for vocational rehabilitation by obtaining VA Form 22-1900 from Mrs. Toni Neff, Veteran's Advisor, 102B Westcott, and sending it to the Veterans' Administration, P.O.Box 1437, St. Petersburg, Florida.

Applicants will be provided vocational counseling to ascertain what training they may need to overcome any handicapping effects of their disabilities, and to assist them in making a choice of a future occupation. The Veterans Administration will pay for books and tuition and subsistence allowance during the period of training which may be needed for this purpose.

Training will not be provided under this Act for veterans whose disabilities are rated at less than 30% unless they show clearly that that disability causes a pronounced employment handicap.

All-Florida Champs

Marksmen Maul Gators

The Army ROTC Rifle Team won over the University of Florida, Miami and Stetson to become the 1963 All Florida Champions in the All Florida Invitational Match held in Gainesville on March 30, 1963.

The climb to the top was not easy for the team finishing the first trimester with only a six and six record after losing three of the first four matches.

The University of Miami defeated the Seminole sharp shooters in its first match and was followed by the University of Georgia doing the same. Some success came to the Florida State University team as they defeated Georgia State the following week; however, it was short lived as they fell to Decatur High School in the next match. This loss was followed by a win over Stetson University and losses to the University of Alabama and Georgia Tech.

The team had by now gained that which it lacked most -- experience- and handed defeats to Georgia State, Stetson and Spring Hill before Florida Southern gave them their sixth defeat. The last match of the first trimester was against Auburn and FSU team won.

With the start of the second trimester, the team defeated Auburn for the second time, then had its first and second teams place 2nd and 5th out of twenty-seven entries in the All Tampa Invitational Match. The University of Florida and Gordon Military gave them their first two defeats of the second trimester.

The Florida State University team then went on to defeat Decatur High School, Stetson University (twice), the University of Miami. Mercer, (twice) and Air Force ROTC, but was stopped by the University of Florida. The Army ROTC team then went on to defeat Spring Hill twice, Florida Southern and Marion Institute twice before it was stopped by a team from East Tennessee State. Its final match of the season saw the team in the All Florida Invitational where it finally defeated the University of Florida. Miami was handed its second defeat and Stetson its fifth.

Team members include Charles E. Holmes of Jacksonville, John O. Reinhardt of Darien, Connecticut, James H. Moore of Tallahassee, Peter M. Goldman of Orlando, L... E. Padgett, Jr. of Plant City, La... D. Johnson of Topeka, Kansas, ... R. Warren of Clearwater, Wal... B. Shafer of Lakeland, Fran... Scholze of Sarasota, Glen H. Sch... ey of North Miami and Samuel St... ssy, Jr. of Jacksonville.

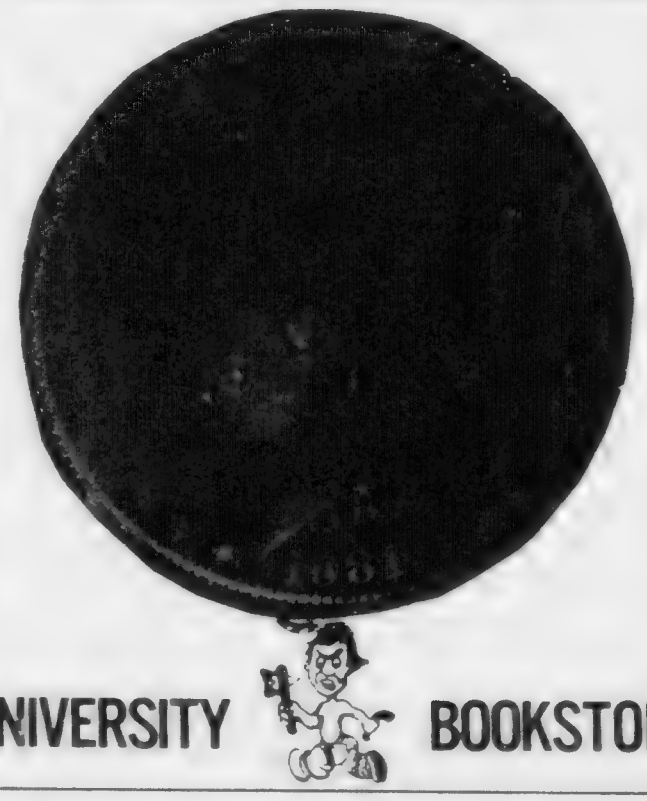
Phi Delts Are Tops In Frat Intramurals

By JOHN WOOD

The Fraternity Intramural season has drawn to a close with Phi Delta Theta sitting atop the pack with wins in track and the overall Intramural Trophy.

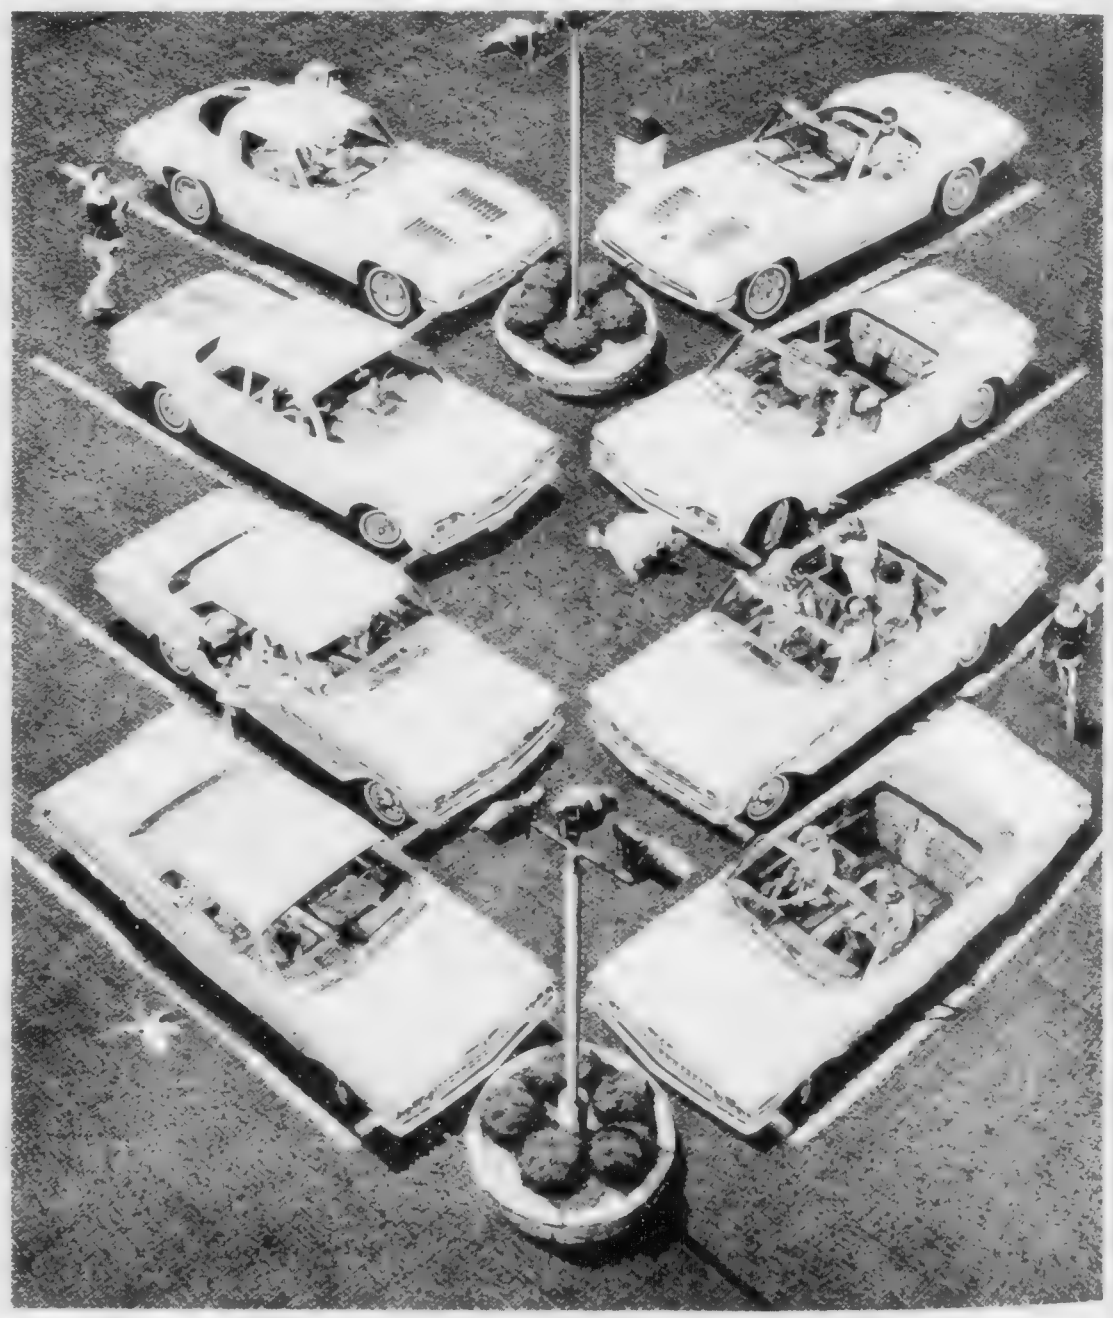
Delta Tau Delta and Kappa Sigma placed second and third, respectively, in both track and overall.

The Overall Intramural Trophy is awarded to the fraternity compiling the most points by the end of the school year. Points are awarded to the fraternities position in each of the six sports.



The Phi Delts amassed a top score of 866 to elude the Delts who earned 810 points. Kappa Sig had 721 tallies while Sigma Chi was fourth with 649 markers.

Phi Kappa Tau ran fifth with 629 points, only 10 over the ATO's who compiled 619 tallies. Theta Chi and Kappa Alpha rounded out the participants with 616 and 600 points, respectively.



In action in the fall trimester, ATO won the softball trophy over KA and the ever present Phi Delts. The basketball action was topped by the Phi Delts who bumped the Delts and Kappa Sigs.

Spring Trimester action saw the Phi Tau's nudge the Delts and Phi Delts for the rag tag title. Kappa Sig and Theta Chi had to settle for a first place deadlock in the wrestling event. Those darn Phi Delts were third.

500th Phd. To Be Given

Florida State University will pass milestone with commencement exercises next Saturday afternoon with awarding of the 500th doctor's degree.

Thirty-three doctorates will be awarded during commencement exercises at 2 p.m. in Campbell Stadium among the approximately 100 degrees conferred. Commencement speaker will Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges, a former governor of North Carolina.

Florida State College for Women awarded the first master's degrees in 1908 and since that time 4208 have been given. It was not until 1952, five years after FSCW had become a coeducational university, however, that the first Ph.D. was given. It went to Morris Gutbezahl of New York City, a chemist.

As it looks now the 500th degree also will go to a chemist, Ronald Allen Harlan, 25, who joined the faculty of the University of Arkansas in January as assistant professor of chemistry after completing his course work at FSU.

Harlan did his research in nuclear chemistry under the direction of Dr. Raymond K. Sheline. He is one of some 15 students at FSU who have done their research with a 12 million volt tandem van de Graaff accelerator here.

Harlan received his B.S. degree in 1958 from Northwestern State College at Natchitoches, La., and enrolled for graduate study at FSU under a Nuclear Science Fellowship. At the University of Arkansas Harlan presently is working on an Atomic Energy Commission contract. He is continuing a collaboration with the Sheline research group on campus and expects to be in Tallahassee next week to perform an experiment on the tandem accelerator, one of a dozen such machines in the world.

Although degrees are awarded at the end of each of the trimesters on the present plan of year round operation, there is only commencement ceremony, at the end of the second trimester in April.

FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell will confer the degrees

DR. REID H. MONTGOMERY

1963 Yearbook Dedication

Tally Ho Honors Reid Montgomery

The 1963 Tally Ho has been dedicated to Dr. Reid H. Montgomery.

The first paragraph of the dedication will read as follows:

"This dedication to Dr. Reid Hood Montgomery, Director of Student Activities, emphasized a purpose of every yearbook. This purpose being to honor the one person most concerned with students' inquiries and development.

Through his position as professor of English composition, Director of Student Activities, executive secretary and faculty member of the Board of Publications, and as a willing advisor to countless students, Dr. Montgomery has shown his own dedication to the student body."

Montgomery has contributed much to student publications and has served as a willing advisor for all student activities. He will be the director of the Student Union upon its completion and has spent a great deal of his time this year in planning the functions of the Union.

Les Jongleurs Honorary Holds Award Convocation

Ken Richart, president, acted as master of ceremonies for the evening's program.

The Madge G. Schwartz Award for the most outstanding undergraduate in theatre and oral interpretation went to Rhett Bryson, a junior. The award is in memory of Mrs. Schwartz, who was an ardent patron of the University Theatre for many years. Criteria for selection are: significant contributions in the past year, for scholarship, and potential for future contributions.

Acting awards for outstanding performances during the 1962-63 season went to undergraduate Pat McCoy as Lady Percy and to graduate Sammy Kilman as Falstaff in "Henry IV, Part I;" two undergraduates, Bobbie Lou Kaminis as Marsinah and Jerry Walter as the Wazir in "Kismet;" undergraduate Chris McGlasson as Berta Musar and graduate Al Smelko as Munda in "The Long Night;" two undergraduates, Louise Beddingfield as Mrs. Malloy and Rhett Bryson as Barnaby, and graduate Sam Baker as Cornelius in "The Matchmaker."

John Bracewell, who has worked with sound and music on every University Theatre production for the past two years, was named "Best Backstage Worker" for this year by Charles L. Reimer, University Theatre technical director.

Jim Martin received an award for excellence in theatre house management, and Mrs. Harlan Shaw was named "Best Theatre Patron" for the season.

Officers for the 1963-64 year were announced: Judy Harrison, president; Linda Markgraf, vice-president; and Louise Beddingfield, secretary-treasurer.

16 Delegates Go To SUSGA

Florida State University will send 16 students and four faculty and staff advisors to the Southern University Student Government Association convention at Louisana State University in Baton Rouge April 25-27.

Each student attending the SUSGA convention will have a definite assignment to the various area meetings. Student Body President Johnny Smith will be chairman of the delegation.

Those attending will be Dr. R.R. Oglesby, Dr. Reid Montgomery, Mr. Hal Smith and Mrs. Kathryn Vernon from the faculty and staff.

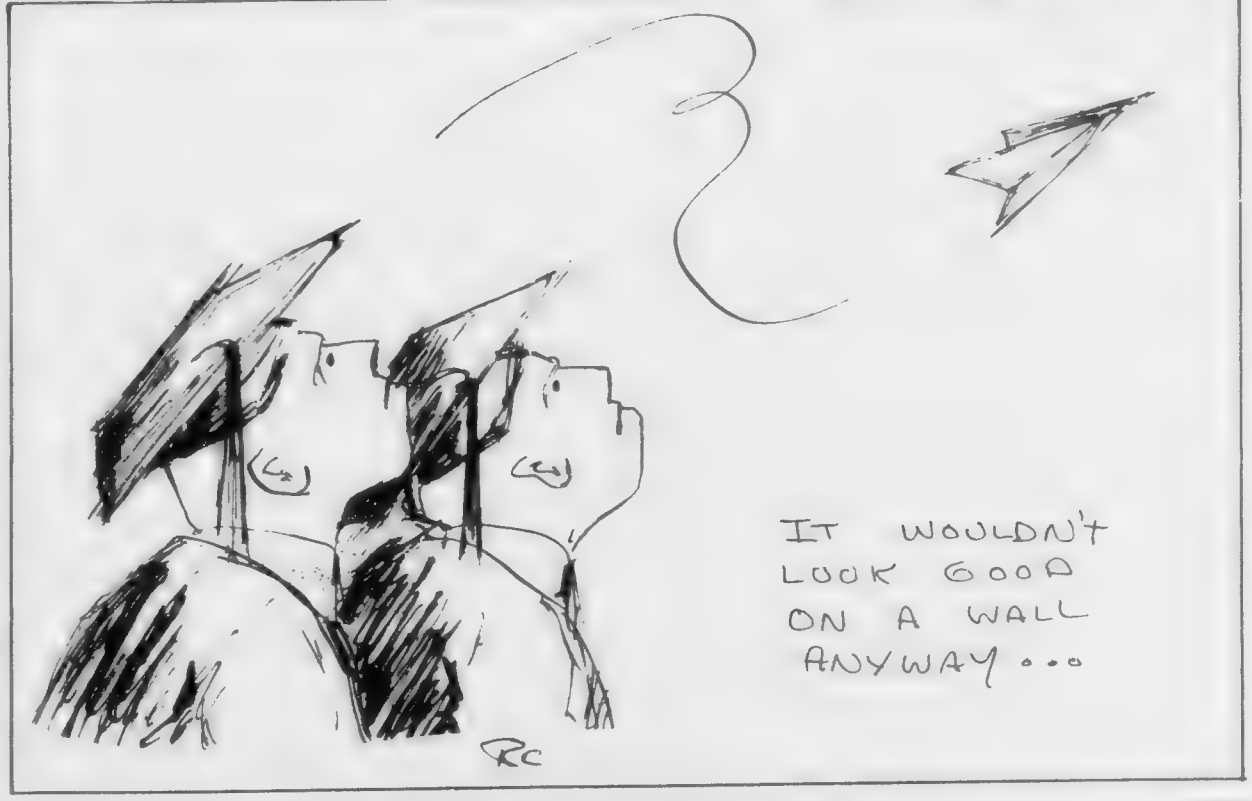
Summer Evaluation Bureau Set Up By President Smith

An executive Evaluation Bureau has been formed by Student Government to function in the summer third trimester.

The Bureau will consist of five students of senior classification who have been directly associated with student government and student activities during their four years at Florida State University.



They shall be responsible for evaluating and analyzing the past three student government administrations to determine their weak and strong aspects and to make general policy suggestions for next year's operations.

"It is hoped that the 1963-64 Student Government administration can profit from the knowledge accumulated through the actions of this Bureau," commented student body president Johnny Smith. "We hope to determine the areas of need and to prepare for many of the problems faced by past administrations before they materialize."

The membership of the Bureau shall be: Dick Hume, Lyman Fletcher, Ben Sharp, Bill Grant, and Frank Milwee.

Information concerning United States Government Grants for university lecturing and postdoctoral research in Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru and Uruguay in 1963-64 and in Mexico for 1963-64 may now be examined in the office of Dr. George Lensen.

Great University Long In Coming

The dream of a "Great University" at Tallahassee, Florida, was first espoused by President Robert Manning Strozier in February, 1958. This slogan has been adopted by the general populace and it has become a banner for all who aspire to wield influence. But unfortunately, April 12, 1963, this "Great University" does not exist.

Many reasons for Florida State University's failure to yet achieve the distinction it so ardently courts are apparent. Others are submerged and ill defined, -- but nonetheless present.

The Legislature is the easiest for the man in the street to blame. It is simple to say that "they are bad men" and deposit the responsibility for all of FSU's failings on their doorstep. In fact, much of the responsibility lies with this body for they have often failed to recognize the seriousness of educational needs.

In the 1961 session, the state worshipped at the altar of status quo. Taxes could not go up, they said. Governor Farris Bryant had promised this and no one dared move against the newly-elected Governor. As a result, the Universities now lag further behind and the coffers of the state are bare. Emergency appropriations are vital even to retain present mediocre quality.

The situation is grave financially. But finances are not the sole woes inflicting the present University system.

Politics play an ever-increasing part in the operation of the University system. The presence of real outside influences, often extreme in extent, particularly such groups as the Johns Investigating Committee, weighs heavily on the back of the university officials and looms over the shoulder of all who seek the truth. When outside pressures, be they in the legislature, the John Birch Society, or the Daughters of the American Revolution, seek to foster their own private brand of "the truth" upon a university, the search for knowledge is stymied. Only with the removal of these elements, from undue influence and with the harnasses on education loosened, will the university have the freedom to move to their goals of greatness.

But the weakness in this university is not solely external. We can use internal bolstering also.

The person of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell dominates the administration. This is excellent.

The President of this University is a shrewd politician as well as an able administrator. He has managed this university well.

The men he has surrounded himself with are an accurate test of his judgement. Young men with great insight, capacity, and ability have been chosen to build for the future. Men of the quality of vice president John Champion, Dean Werner Baum, and Dr. Lawrence Chalmers have been picked for highly responsible positions.

Younger, more progressive ideas are permeating administrative action. The future looks encouraging.

The faculty, however, holds little promise of greatness. Some of the present faculty members are excellent. But the trimester system is driving them away.

The system is so constructed as to foster academic mediocrity. It encourages those faculty members who get by on only a set routine and a "canned" course. The good professors, the ones who are on the lookout for new substance and new material fr their course, are penalized. Thinking by faculty members is reduced -- there is not time for it. Rote repetition is the product of such a system. It will continue to be until the professional load is reduced.

The problem of faculty salaries is an increasing one. Faced with low salaries by national standards, the good professors will look elsewhere. The University and the State will be the losers.

Three years ago, FSU was fortunate to have a forceful President -- Carl Butler. Under his administration the pool and the universiy union were planned. Administration of University Budget was achieved and Student Enterprises was instituted. Student Body Presidents since have been tending shop.

Student Government is woefully lacking in new ideas and fortitude to carry them out. Past Student Body President Ken van Assenderp says many new things were instituted this year but he can not tell anyone about them. If these plans were laid, they are not visible. Naught was accomplished of real significance that can be appraised.

Student Body President Johnny Smith promises great things. But promises are easy to make. It will take continued devoted effort to accomplish needed projects.

Student Government vitally needs to look beyond Longmire Building and produce meaningful results that the student body can profit by and evaluate.

Greatness is a hard commodity to purchase. It will be long in coming, unless drastic action is implemented in many areas.

HONOR COURT

Any students who will be in attendance during the complete trimester III are eligible to serve on Honor Court as temporary justices for the summer session.

Anyone interested is urged to contact Chief Justice Kelley Reid by phone at 224-6057 or ext. 3004 between 4 and 5 p.m. on Monday or Wednesday, or a brief letter stating your name and address for the remainder of this trimester may be written and placed at the Main Desk in Longmire.

Selections will be made before the final week of this trimester is over.

Any student who desires to seek a position either as a defense counselor or as a member of the prosecution staff may notify Kelley Reid, Chief Justice of the Honor Court, at the Honor Court Office, room 404 Longmire Bldg., extension 3004, or may submit a written statement with name, address, and phone number.

Office hours for the remainder of the second trimester will be from 4 to 5 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Exams Bring Nostalgia

The rapid approach of final exams brings to mind an age-old tradition that surrounded those golden days at the end of each semester way back when.

Back then, a certain holiday-like grimness would settle over the campus, and there would be a kind of loud silence as everyone practiced being studious. Books were carried everywhere, and each student would circulate about the campus looking studious.

For instance, he might begin by going to the Mecca for breakfast and look studious along with his eggs. Then he might saunter studiously over to the library for some real thorough studiousness. These library sessions were particularly dramatic, often involving hair-pulling and teeth-gnashing.

After about twelve and one-half minutes in the library, he would stop for a study break and go over to the student center. There he would drink gallons of coffee and take fifty stay-awake pills, despite the fact that he had fifteen hours of sleep the night before. After four hours and twenty minutes of pepping up, he would hit the books again, this time under a tree on Landis Green from whence he could see every female entering or leaving Magnolia, Landis, Cawthon, the library, the Seminole Club, and the Women's Gym.

After about thirty minutes of concentrated study, he might then set aside his books and saunter over to the Sweet Shop for lunch--and so the days would pass.

During the exams themselves, certain unwritten codes of conduct prevailed. No man came to the tests with less than two days' growth of beard. No woman dared come to an exam with her hair combed. Chain-smoking was an absolute necessity, and you were an oddball for sure if you didn't blow at least one cloud into your neighbor's face. The most dramatic part of a final used to be the weird music of desperate fingers on unshaven jaws, and loud sighs of grim determination.

Certain styles of dress were definitely in vogue. Men wore carefully tailored and stomped-on dungarees with carefully tailored, ripped-and-bled-upon old football jerseys. Some of the most unlikely specimens seemed to have played high school ball. I'm still trying to find out which high school has mauve and magenta as its colors, and once employed the talents of a 120-pound end with horn-rimmed glasses and a clubbed foot. Women wore carefully tailored, "sloppy old things" and spent long hours in front of electric fans, wind-blowing their hair in just the right manner.

I am writing this in the past tense because I am afraid that odious villain, the trimester, has sounded the death-knell for the pageantry of final exams. For one thing, finals will follow Easter so closely that the women students will barely have time to make themselves sloppy after primping for Easter Sunday. Campus physicians predict at least thirty zipper deaths during the quick change from Easter to finals.

And so another old custom bites the dust--victim to the acid cancer of progress. Ye gads, where will it end?

Will It Be Too Late?

By KEN PEALE
(Last of a Series)

Illness struck our campus more severely than usual this year, and was shamefully dismissed as "coincidence." Granted, the University was hit by a flu epidemic, but note also that many students have been spending less time getting their bodies' requirements of sleep, due to the trimester's faster pace.

It is now a common thing to see students in the library asleep. It is proven that persons who skimp on sleep are less efficient and have a lower resistance to disease. Thus, when the flu germs came to FSU, the found here many more potential victims than they normally would have.

The fees charged in one trimester for housing and registration are not changed from the sums charged for one semester for these items. This is true even though the trimester is two weeks shorter and the quality of the courses at this University has suffered. Thus, the students are paying the same money for less.

If higher revenue was desired for services rendered, why weren't the fees simply raised and the semester left in effect? If effect, housing and registration fees have gone up twelve percent. For what?

If FSU should return to the semester system, it is sincerely hoped that no attempt to raise the fees will be made. Such an attempt might be based upon the fact that the University would be shifting to a longer session of classes and residence. This would be extremely unfair since, as pointed out, the fees were not reduced when FSU shifted to a shorter session.

In the face of the fallacies inherent in the trimester, persons, some of whom are in responsible positions, have said, "It is too early to judge the trimester." How soon will it be before we hear them say, "It is too late to judge. If the trimester is really so bad, it should have been protested as soon as it came into effect."?

The protests are being made now before it is too late, but they are being brushed aside as "premature" or labeled "target practice." The longer the trimester persists, the greater the damage it will do. It will thwart FSU's bid for greatness unless those who can rid us of it take action NOW!

The Florida Legislature meets this month. It will not meet again for two years. The legislators must be persuaded to act against the waste of Florida's educational resource. (They have ultimate control of the universities. Recall they ordered the universities onto "year-round operation.")

The legislators will probably take silence to mean approval of the trimester. If we the students tacitly accept this inferior system, we will share the guilt of ruining Florida's university system.

Impassiveness will not win us good education. Those who exhort silence are exhorting blind acceptance. It is to be feared that some of these, but HOPEFULLY NOT ALL OF THEM, might plead that, "It's too early to tell," if a totalitarian power were to take control of this nation whether it would be good or not.

They might also say, "It's too early to tell" how good or bad it would be if a nuclear war were to begin. "We'd have to wait and see what happens after more bombs fall." Then they would get what they deserve -- annihilation.

Perhaps the semester is not the best system, but since it is better then the trimester for the reasons discussed in this article, it should be reinstated in Florida's universities. If then a TRULY BETTER system is developed, by all means, it should be used.

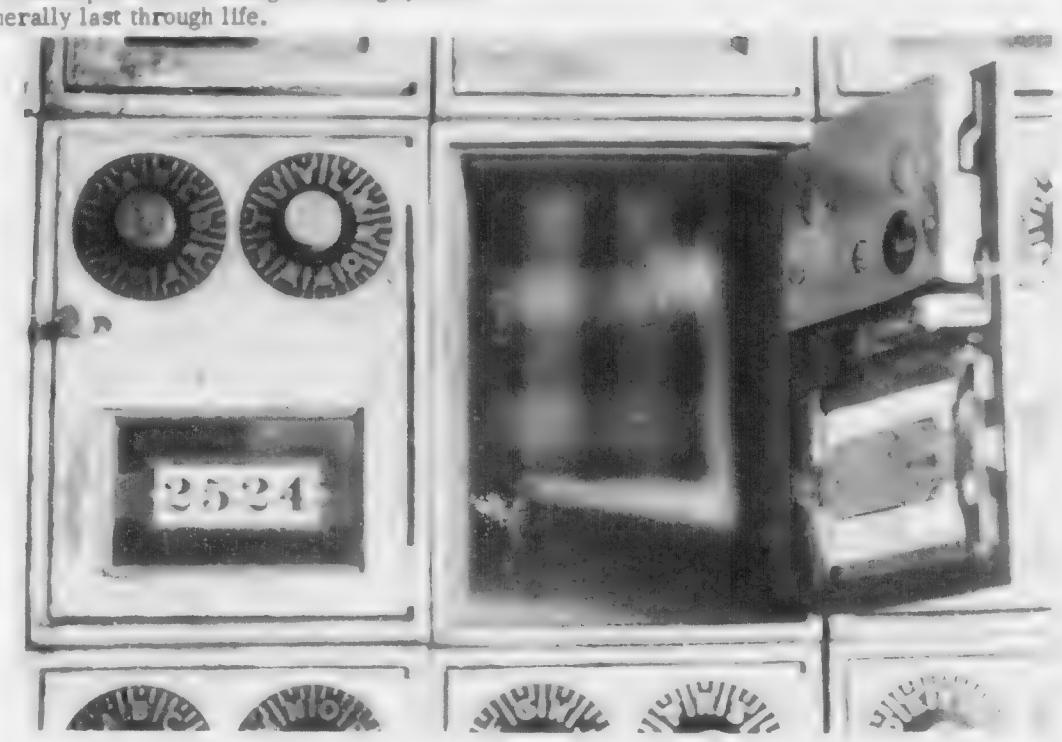
Graduates Face The Future W

Today's Seniors have witnessed great changes in the physical structure of the campus. In their time the center of the campus has shifted from Landis Green to the Student Center. The next four years may witness even greater changes to our skyline. With the advent of the Physics Building (pictured above), another residence hall and the Student Union, the campus will be on the road to even more significant alterations.

Alumnae of only ten years ago wouldn't recognize this scene as being from the FSU campus. So great has been our progress that 'change' has become the rule and adaption to progress an FSU tradition.

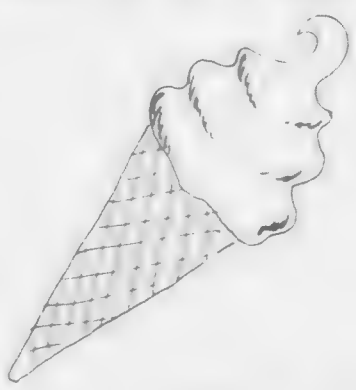
Friendships formed during the college years generally last through life.



Graduating Seniors

Next week another thousand students of Florida State University will step out into the world to make their and FSU's mark.

FSU has been the focal point in the lives of these people for their past four years.



The saying "As the twig is bent, so grows the tree" holds true for man also.

The honor or dishonor, the strengths and weaknesses, which have been cultivated and developed here at FSU will continue to surround and determine the happiness or misery, the successes and failures of these graduates, just as they will reflect back upon their alma mater.

After four years of familiarity with the boxes in the Student Center Post Office FSU graduates will receive their mail elsewhere. Our graduates will scatter themselves to the four winds and the likelihood exists of meeting up with old classmates in the center of Africa as well in the center of the United States.

NEW YORK — UN Secretary-Genral U Thant has called for a new 14-nation conference on Laos, where fighting is threatening a resumption of civil war.

WASHINGTON — For the first time since World War II, the Senate has ordered its doors closed to the public and newsmen for a debate. President Kennedy has sent Congress his formal proposal for creation of a Domestic Peace Corps that would cost 5 million dollars in the first year and would involve 1,000 full-time volunteers.

WASHINGTON — The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral George Anderson, announced today that the Navy has abandoned hope for the nuclear-powered submarine "Thresher." The Navy has started a tremendous effort to find out why the "Thresher" went down yesterday with 129 men some 220 miles off Boston.

CAIRO--A reliable source in Cairo reports Egypt test fired at least two rockets last week in the Suez Canal area. The source was unable to give details on the type of rocket tested. This is the first indication that rocket pads have been set up in the Suez area.

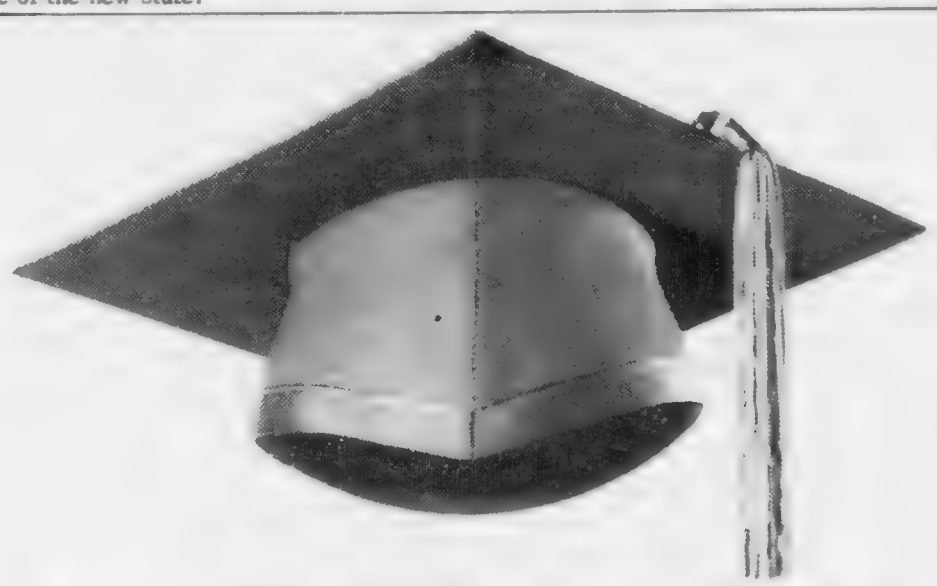
CAIRO--Egypt, Iraq and Syria have agreed to join into one single nation--to be called the United Arab Republic. The new alliance would have one flag and one central government to handle foreign affairs; Egypt's vice president Aly Sabry says Cairo will be the capital of the new nation. Sabry's announcement of the alliance today made no mention of the chief executive of the new state.

Randal On 'Myth And Reality

American people may be the most myth-ridden of all the people in the world, stated Dr. William Randel in speaking on "Myth and Reality."

Concluding the American Studies Program series of lectures, Randel asserted that there is potential danger and harm in some of the current American myths. Before continuing, he defined a myth as a widely shared belief which has been accepted without any test for its validity.

Potentially the most dangerous of our current myths, Randel told an audience made up of students, is the myth of individual survival. This belief's main tenet is that young people don't die, and it results in youth's apathy toward the international arms race.



Sheilding the American people fror current statistics concerning possible civilian casualties in a nuclear war, this myth is the basis of public complacency over nuclear disarmament. Not allowing us to face this reality, we assume that the human race will survive forever.

Another popular myth is that sincere efforts to apply Christian principles to social problems in un-American or, more currently, Communist-inspired. Myths such as these are so deep-rooted in the American people's minds that we often fail to see how ridiculous they really are.

Myths survive because they are often the only consolation we have in the face of the many ugly real in our present world. Declining opportunity to conclude optimis ally, Randel stated that we somehow survive our mythic wo

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. And the best way to get it is through Air Force ROTC—because the Air Force prefers to commission its officers directly upon graduation. But if you couldn't fit AFROTC into your schedule, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School.

OTS offers college men and women an opportunity to assume great responsibility. When you complete the three-month course, you'll be commissioned a second lieutenant, and become a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but the same may not be true next year. So if you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information from the Professor of Air Science.

Seminole Batsmen Bomb Valdosta

Florida State's big bats could be heard all over campus Tuesday afternoon, as the Seminoles bombarded a hapless Valdosta State squad 14-0.

The big guns at the plate were catcher Buddy Teagle and Gary Shmielewski. Teagle hit a homer in the first inning to start off the Seminole attack and drive in another RBI. Shmielewski belted a four sacker in the seventh.

On the mound for the Seminoles were five hurlers, Echols, Kull, Williamson, Dirks and Seward. The win was credited to Echols who pitched the first six scoreless innings. The rest of the pitching staff was used for experience's sake.

FSU's Frosh Nine lost the game of their schedule Wednesday to Chipola JC by a score of 3-1. With the loss, the little Seminoles posted a final record for the season of 2-8.

The deciding factor in the game was Jud Stephenson's single in the seventh which brought home two Chipola runs.

The winning pitcher was Applewhite the loser, Whiteside.

Yanks, Dodgers To Win Pennant

Every year about this time when the air is thick with flying baseballs, the thoughts of the experts inevitably turn prematurely to the burning question of "Who's going to win the pennant?"

I do not claim to be an expert, but here's my thoughts on this years pennant race. The American league will see a three-way contest between the ever present Yankees, the Tigers, and the Angels. Other strong teams will be the Orioles, Indians, and Twins.

The National league will be scrambled, but the Dodgers, Giants and Redlegs will re-fight last year's race. The New York Mets will also have a fight on their hands for the cellar spot.

"WHERE HAVE ALL THE STUDENTS GONE?"

Registration crowds appeared to be much smaller than usual though over 4,000 students were processed.

1095 Students Get Degrees

The United States is endangering its technological leadership by not devoting enough attention to civilian research and the development, Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges told the 1095 cnadidates for degrees in FSU's spring commencement exercises April 20.

FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws on the speaker, who has been a member of President Kennedy's cabinet from its beginning.

The 65-year-old public official also served six years as governor of North Carolina, and has a long career in business before assuming his present office.

Hodges told his audience the Commerce Dept. is initiating a new program, involving grants and contracts to universities, industry research associations and others, for investigation of technical problems affecting productivity of basic industries.

A second aspect of the program will create "an industrial extension service similar to the agricultural extension service which has done so much to increase the productivity of American agriculture," he said. This program, he added, "will be worked out with universities, industry and local and state governments to speed up the utilization by industry of the available technology."

Florida, he said, is to be commended for what has been invested in higher education in the past decade. "It is important that you keep your sights high and that you judge your achievements by national standards of excellence in higher education," he added.

"It is no longer enough to consider how FSU measures up against other universities in Florida or in the South. Southern universities must be as good as the best in the nation or they will be inadequate to meet the needs of the students and the people of our Southern region in an increasingly complex technological age."

Among degrees conferred by Dr. Blackwell at the afternoon ceremony were 33 doctorates. The 500 mark in doctorates was surpassed, with Ronald A. Harlan, (Ph.D. in nuclear chemistry) receiving the 500th doctorate awarded in the 11 years FSU has been conferring them.

Bachelor's degrees were conferred upon 914 candidates, with 148 receiving master's degrees.

The commencement ceremonies, with the entire faculty attending in cap and gown, was held in Campbell Stadium. Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb directed the University Band in playing the processional. The opening prayer was by the Rev. Paul M. Minus, Jr., university chaplain.

Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell held a reception in their home for candidates, their families and friends.

4309 Register For Summer

egistrar Dr. Murray Kenna announced today that as of noon Saturday, the last regular day of registration, 4,309 students had completed registration for the third trimester.

Kenna said that 3,281 undergraduates and 1,028 graduates were reported enrolled for Trimester III. Of these, 1,647 are undergraduate men, 1,634 are undergraduate women; and on the graduate level there are 756 men and 272 women. The registrar added that late registration will continue through Friday, and the total number of students enrolled for the summer will be definitely stated until those registering late have been added. Transfers from other colleges and universities number 127, and there are 40 freshmen and 12 special students who underwent orientation. Last year's figures for the 1962 Summer Session totaled 4,043 students, with 2,283 men and 1,760 women attending.

All class buildings are in use at the present time, and classes will be dropped only at the discretion of the dean of the school involved.

Miss Edith McCollum of student housing has reported that Dorman and Florida Halls will remain open for the entire third trimester, while Landis and Gilchrist will be open for Trimester III-A and only Landis will serve for those coming during Trimester III-B.

Kellum Hall will be open for men, and Theta Chi and Kappa Sigma fraternities will house 40 Greeks for the summer.

Eleven sororities will house 337 women, and each house is more than two-thirds full. The sororities open for the summer are Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Delta Zeta, Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Sigma Kappa.

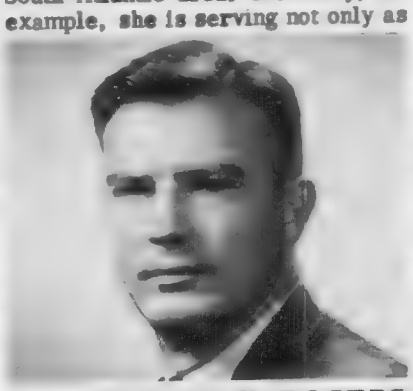
Hoffman, Rogers Receive Citations

Dr. Dorothy L. Hoffman, professor of modern languages and member of the faculty at FSU since 1927, was selected by fellow faculty members as Distinguished Professor, 1963-64.

Her selection as Distinguished Professor was announced at spring commencement exercises along with the selection of Dr. William W. Rogers of the History Department by a faculty-student committee as the junior faculty member to receive the Coyle E. Moore Jr. Award for excellence in teaching.

DR. DOROTHY HOFFMAN



A citation designating Dr. Hoffman as Distinguished Professor was read by Dean of the Faculties Werner A. Baum.

"Dr. Hoffman, after achieving election to Phi Beta Kappa as a junior and highest honors for the B. A. degree in Romance Languages at the University of Illinois, also received the M. A. degree and the Ph. D. degree from that distinguished mid-western university," the citation said.

"Starting as an Instructor at FSCW in 1927, she progressed through the academic ranks to a full Professorship in 1946. Her insatiable quest for knowledge inspired post-doctoral summer studies in Mexico, Guatemala, Peru, France, Italy and Spain. Her scholarship is reflected in a number of articles.

"At one time or another during her career she has achieved almost every officership or post of responsibility, appointive or elective, within the power of her associates to bestow in Modern Languages, in Arts and Sciences, and on University-wide levels.

"Her energy and devotion to service have consistently transcended campus boundaries to embrace church, social and professional activities in Tallahassee as well as throughout Florida and the South Atlantic area. Currently, for example, she is serving not only as a member of the Faculty Senate but as Chairman of the Faculty Professional Relations Committee."

DR. WILLIAM W. ROGERS

The Coyle E. Moore, Jr. Award of $500 is given annually to an instructor or assistant professor for five or more years who has demonstrated excellence in teaching, not only in the classroom but through discussion and conversation outside.

The recipient, W. W. Rogers, assistant professor of history received his B. S. and M. S. degrees from Auburn University and his Ph. D. from University of North Carolina, recently completed a history of Thomas County, Georgia.

DeLoach Wins Hawaiian Award

Robert De Loach, who received his master of science degree at FSU April 20, has been awarded one of the 100 fellowships offered students in the United States for 21 months of study in the East-West Center, University of Hawaii.

De Loach will go to Honolulu in September on the all-expense fellowship to study toward a Ph. D. degree. Part of the assignment will be for travel in a part of Asia he has yet to select.

De Loach did his undergraduate work at FSU and received a bachelor's degree in mathematics. In 1961-62 he pursued his graduate studies under an FSU fellowship and in the summer of 1962 had a research appointment at the Yerkes Laboratory of Primate Biology. During the current year he has been on an assistantship in the FSU Institute for Social Research.

New Infirmary To Be Built

A bill authorizing the Board of Control to construct and equip a new infirmary at FSU was introduced by Rep. Richard Mitchell of Leon County.

To become effective July 1, the bill calls for an appropriation of $250,000 from the general fund, the remainder to come from proceeds of revenue certificates and from surplus infirmary funds.

Another bill introduced by Mitchell calls for transfer of $300,000 from the FSU incidental trust fund to the working capital fund.

Just Takes Time

This summer will be the telling factor in Florida's operation under the trimester system.

Until now, the trimester has been much like an abbreviated semester system, and FSU students have felt the pressure of packing 16 weeks' work into 14 weeks' time. Like it or not, however, they have met the challenge, and rumors of wholesale dropouts have not been realized.

This session, though, is different. It is during the summer, when students are accustomed to long holidays and no studies that the trimester system experiences difficulty. In many cases, too, students are unable to attend all three sessions because they must work to finance their education.

It could be that dividing the third trimester into two parts will postpone the achievement of true year-round operation, since fewer are likely to attend the second half. This division cannot be avoided, however, if Florida State University is to continue its fine summer programs for teachers and high school students.

The third trimester this time may be little more than a large summer session. Registration figures show that 4309 students registered during the regular period. A total of 4043 students attended the 1962 summer session.

Many activities that are attempting to operate on a year-round basis will have serious problems this summer. Student Government, publications, Greeks--all will feel the severe pinch of limited staffs and activities. No major Aritst Series productions have been scheduled for the trimester and, although a University lecture, movies and other events have been planned, social life seems destined to play a very minor part in the summer schedule.

Many, however, will benefit from the summer trimester, and will be able to graduate months earlier. This really is the main virtue of the system; and within a few years' time, as many more students take advantage of the plan in order to graduate earlier, perhaps the third trimester will cease to be known as a summer session.

The students, as well as University facilities, then will be in year-round operation.

Today's News Roundup

Flambeau News Services

(Washington)--The Supreme Court upheld an injunction against a strike threatened by four railroad brotherhoods to enforce an award by the National Railroad Adjustment Board to a fireman on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. Justice Stewart delivered the 6-3 decision.

The dispute arose over the firing in 1956 of B. G. Humphries on the ground that he assaulted two other L & N employes who were on duty. Eventually the adjustment board ordered Humphries reinstated with back pay. The railroad insisted the fireman's outside earnings during the time he was not working for L & N should be deducted from the money award.

The four unions set a strike for February, over the money issue, but the U. S. District Court in Louisville banned it by an injunction. The District Court said a suit under the Railway Labor Act was the exclusive means of enforcing such an award.

(Tallahassee)--The State Senate Finance and Taxation Committee is to take up today proposals to tax newspaper and broadcasting advertising, and is to discuss the possibility of taxing pleasure boats. Sen. Tom Whitaker of Tampa is the sponsor of the bill that would tax newspaper and broadcasting advertising. He said that advertising is the product of these industries and that he sees no justification for exempting them from taxes. The bill to tax boats would exempt them from tangible personal property taxes and impose a registration fee similar to auto license taxes. This bill was introduced by Sen. John Mathews of Jacksonville.

(Tallahassee)--Legislators will meet tonight to study the multi-million dollar expansion plans for higher education. The House Committee on Higher Education invited its corresponding Senate group to confer jointly with Board of Control Chairman Baya Harrison and Dr. Ralph McDonald, head of the Space Era Study, and other state officials.

Why Downgrade Greeks?

The fraternity system at Florida State University in the past few years has come under fire either directly or indirectly from various individuals or organizations at one time or another because they felt that the existence of fraternal groups of a social nature is detrimental to the best interest of the University.

Just recently a national magazine published an article which portrayed an extreme view of the typical fraternity man's life on a state-supported campus. Attacks upon the fraternity system such as this have done immense harm and reek with hypocricy.

Here at this university the Greeks are strong, but a minority and a small one at that. They hold a vast majority of the elected offices and are capable of exerting a strong influence on the course of events; at the same time they are accused of all types of discrimination and petty snobbery causing ill will between Greeks and non-Greeks.

The case against the Greeks has been made and substantiated on evidence based on specifics, various types of false logic, and emotional appeal. But, an appraisal of the situation as a whole, ignoring the specifics, reveals some rather startling contradictions to generally held concepts.

The charge of discrimination is true and will remain true. Any organization that limits its membership must discriminate in one form or another against some persons in order to be limited in size. Up to the past year many fraternities had discriminatory clauses in their constitutions based on religion and/or race. Today almost all have removed these clauses.

Admittedly, there are certain procedures that have to be followed which accomplish the same purpose as an outright discriminatory clause, but legally there is no racial discrimination anymore. However, the fact remains that people are going to choose their friends as they please and can't be forced into accepting as social companions those not wanted. As long as the "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness" of others isn't unduly hindered, there is no reason to deny an organization existence.

All things considered, fraternities don't deny any persons on this campus any of their constitutio rights. The "right" to join a so group is non-existent.

Why do Greeks occupy such a l proportion of student governm offices? Not because fraterni have prevented independents f running, but because they organized and interested. If the dependents organized, they c easily control student governm

The past president of the stud body is an independent and served well.

The lines of advancement are c to Greek and independent alike. W the two party system on campus candidate who is most likely t will get the nomination, not a cert fraternity man because it is "turn" to hold office.

Insofar as social activities are cerned, complaints are voiced the university "subsidizes" frat nities in that school sponso dances and parties are few compar to those available to the Gree thus indirectly "forcing" some s dents to join fraternities in order enjoy a normal amount of organiz social activity. Is it the dut university to entertain its stude

As long as the fraternity syst makes a positive contribution should be allowed to remain flourish; if not, out it should go l anything else. It is very easy to o look the more subtle contributi and these are the most import Faults exist on both sides and ea can learn from the other. Where does your confidence lie?

Liberals Seek Reform

Social reform is one aspect of liberal thinking that deserves never to be under-stressed. Despite the great advances that have been made in our economic structure, advances still viewed as conservative by some, there are many aspects of our society that still need to be viewed in a liberal non-dogmatic way.

It is to the credit of the radical-minded men and women that we have as much social reform as we have now: the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of women, the regulation of working conditions, and many others. Nineteenth Century reform movements set the pace for many decades, even into the early years of our own century.

In the 50's and 60's the two greatest movements, the ones that will probably have the most significance in the immediate future, are the Civil Rights and Peace movements. In the shadow of these popular movements lie some other reforms that have not yet reached a broad and sympathetic public. The legalization of narcotics with federal control, the licensing of prostitutes and their improvement in social status, the end of discrimination towards homosexuals, are but a few of the many reforms that currently lack much popular support. The abolishment of capital punishment might also be mentioned, although it does have much backing.

Our present society provides us with many examples of social, economic, and religious contradictions. Without realizing it, many of us believe in and follow meaningless rituals and regulations that should have not part in the life of advanced and civilized peoples. It is not the special claim of the socialists, or any other reform movement, to back these more radical changes in the body social.

We do support many drastic measures, but we do not advocate these changes alone. Many groups have turned their attentions to the improvement of the social status of narcotic addicts, prostitutes and homosexuals, to mention but a few, and it is the continuing hope of all radicals and liberals, as well as any reformists, that the day is fast approaching when these "outcast" members of our society will enjoy a life free from the persecutions of superstitious and ignorant men and their committees.

ST. PETERSBURG SALES EXECUTIVE CLUB AWARD . . .is being presented here to Douglas Shelby, a junior. The $500 award goes to a student in the School of Business interested in a career in selling, and is offered on the basis of scholarship and need. Shelby works part time as director of promotional activities for the Tallahassee Parkway Merchants Association. The award is being presented by Dean Charles A. Rovetta, with Dr. Royal Ray looking on.

Recreation Announced

Eleven book reviews, five canoe trips, four deep sea fishing trips and two trips to the Stephen Foster Memorial at White Springs are on the recreation schedule for Trimester 3.

One of the trips to Foster Memorial is coming up right away, according to Miss Marie Williams, director of social activities. Buses will load up on Sunday and take students to the 11th Annual Stephen Foster Folk Festival.

The Festival is running from May 3-5 and the visitors from Tallahassee will be able to take in, among other things, the principal program on the final day, at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The first book review, on Wednesday, will be on "Selected Writings of Truman Capote" by Prof. Claude Flory of the English Dept. It will be in the student lounge of Longmire at 5 p.m. following coffee at 4:30 p.m.

The canoe trips will be down the Wacissa, Ochlocknee and Wakulla rivers and the fishing trips will be on chartered boats in the Gulf.

20 Graduate With Honors

Twenty finishing seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences were graduated with honors in FSU's Spring commencement exercises.

Graduation with honors means completion of an honors program for which outstanding students are selected. The students are required to complete a thesis or similar project under the direction of a professor.

The honors graduates, their major subject and major professor include: Leigh Koffman Johnson (English, Hardin Goodman); Nancy Anne Sindon (History, George Lensen); Margaret Alice Weatherly (English, Hardin Goodman); Patricia Ann Lawrence(Art, Ann Kirn); Judith Blick Allen (Art, Ann Kirn); Catherine Jessica Conduitte (History, Calvin J. Billman); Jacquelin Delileh Krause (Art, George F. Holschuh).

Donna Gene McAllister (Psychology, E. Laurence Chalmers); Richard Ben Wand, Jr. (English, Hardin Goodman); Frederick Spence Guerin (Art, Charles Wright); Stanley Citron (Sociology, Lewis M. Killian); Jimmie Lindsay Langford (English, Hardin Goodman); James A. Devito (International Affairs, Robert C. Bone); Horace Benton Gray, Jr. (Chemistry, Russell H. Johnsen).

Seniors Notice

Seniors planning to graduate August 10, 1963, must make application for degree and pay a diploma fee of $5 before May 10.

The applications may be made in the Registrar's Office Room 102B, Westcott Bldg.

A GENUINE FORMAL BUTTON-DOWN?

Oh yes, and genuine even without this [EAGLE SHIRTMAKERS SINCE 1867] label

MANY of you like our button-downs so much that you can hardly bear to wear anything else even on special evenings; now there is no reason why you should. And since we already make button-downs in 386 fabrics, patterns, and colors it would have been unthoughtful of us not to make it an even 387 with this button-cuff button-down of fine broadcloth.* You can find it at the best men's shops although not always under our label (many stores like our shirts so much they sell them under their own names). If you'd like to know which in your vicinity please write us: Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

*Notice it bulges gracefully at the collar just like the other 386. One time a man, new to our button-downs, wrote to say that the collar didn't lie flat. When we told Helen Mohr, in Collars, about it she said that she was relieved.

Presbyterian Director Given Surprise Banquet

Director of the Presbyterian Student Center at FSU, Miss Miriam Wilson, was surprised recently with a testimonial banquet in honor of her completion of work toward a Ph. D. degree by over 100 friends and wellwishers.

One friend came all the way from Michigan for the occasion, Balint Bazsonyi, a young Hungarian pianist who fled his homeland in 1956, who was sponsored by Miss Wilson and the Westminster Fellowship, and studied at FSU under the late Prof. Ernst von Dohnanyi, came from the Interlochen Arts Academy where he is a member of the faculty.

Vazsonyi performed Beethoven's Sonata G major, Op. 14, No. 2; Schumann's Arabesque, Op. 18, and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 12 as a "command performance" for Miss Wilson.

The Rev. Lawrence Stell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at St. Petersburg, was master of ceremonies at the banquet. Letters and telegrams of congratulation which have been pouring in from former students and friends as far away as Brazil, the Congo, Belgium and Italy were read.

An address delivered by the Rev. R. Davis Thomas, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, was called "When Saint Comes Marching In" in reference to Miss Wilson's nickname of "saint."

Miss Wilson was the first person to receive a graduate degree without any date of birth on her graduate record. When she first filled out the form she put in the date 1776. She was called and told the records were important, so the "Saint" put in 1886. FSU finally gave up, and in the place where the date is supposed to be recorded, there is: "Born-yes."

The director is a native of Waynesboro, Va., and got her bachelor's degree from William and Mary College, where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Since 1939, she has been in Tallahassee and for 10 years she has taken one or two courses a semester.

The Rev. Maurice L. Steinberg presented Miss Wilson with a gift from the assembled friends--a silver julep cup filled with new $20 bills.

'Don Pasquale' Cast Named

The Florida State University Opera Guild announced today the cast for its forthcoming production of Donizetti's comic opera "Don Pasquale."

The title role will be sung by John Sharp; Doctor Malatesta by Douglas Therrell; Ernesto by Joseph Napoli; and Norina by Barbara Collins.

"Don Pasquale," one of the most delightful examples of opera buffa, was first performed in 1843 at the Theatre des Italiens in Paris and since that time has remained as one of the standard works of the operatic repertoire. The plot hinges upon two eternally popular themes of the Italian comic theater: that of the anxiety of the relatives of a rich man as to the dispositions he may make in his will, and that of an elderly bachelor who suddenly decides to plunge into matrimony who is given to regret it later.

The situation lends itself to a witty and humorous treatment which Donizetti, master of the cantabile style, has set to some of the most beautiful melodies written for the operatic stage.

Rich Graduates First In Program

Ruth Anne Rich became the first graduate in the School of Music's new Honors Program, when she received a bachelor of music degree at spring commencement.

Miss Rich has been a piano student of Dr. Edward Kilenyi. Two years ago she won the nationwide student competition sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. She also has won the Marie Morrisey Keith competition and the national Young Artist Contest.

She completed her college work with a grade average of 3.88, just short of straight A. Among her many concert appearances was one during the winter as a soloist with the University Symphony.

Bartlett Book Among 'Best'

A display of the 16 winning books in the 11th annual Southern Books Competition is up in the Strozier Library, and they include one book written by an FSU author.

"Great Surveys of the American West" by Dr. Richard A. Bartlett of the History Dept. published by the University of Oklahoma Press is one of the winners and five of the other winning books also were published by the UO Press.

The books were selected by a panel of judges as the "best designed" 1962 publications among 97 titles submitted by 23 publishers and printers in an area extending from Virginia to Arizona. The competition is sponsored by the Southeastern Library Association.

The best-designed book of all was published by Ashantilly Press of Darien, Ga., operated by William G. Haynes, a brother of Miss Frances Haynes who retired last year as reference librarian at FSU. The book is "Johnny Leber and The Confederate Major" by Alexander A. Lawrence.

The University of Oklahoma Press had six winners and the University of Texas Press five.

. . .provide one of the many scenes from the past as FSU students visit the Stephen Foster Folk Festival Sunday.

Stephen Foster Trip Is Sunday

Students will have an excellent opportunity to experience the "good ole days" of bygone years by signing up in room 19 of Longmire to attend the Stephen Foster Folk Festival Sunday.

Buses leave at 10:30 a.m. and return at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, with transportation costing $1 and food approximated at $1.75 for a lunch in the Colonial Hotel.

Folk singers and entertainers will vie with the Stephen Foster Memorial for students' interest as performers from all over the South participate in the annual festivities.

The trip is being sponsored by the Activities Committee, which also sponsors weekly book reviews, dances and movies.

The first speaker for the book reviews will be Dr. Claude Flory, who will lecture on Frost at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Longmire Student Lounge, following a reception to be held at 4:30 p.m.

A campus dance will be held Saturday at 9 p.m. in the Student Center with Rick Powell's orchestra providing music for all. Fourteen dances have been scheduled for the summer.

The two new Eastman Kodak 16 mm movie projectors which were ordered in March and were scheduled to arrive by April 25 have not come yet. Students bought the projectors by paying a 25 cent admission charge to all campus movies. Jay Spradlin, in charge of campus movies, expects the new projectors to arrive at any time now.

The campus movie scheduled for tonight and tomorrow night will be "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," starring Elizabeth Taylor and Paul Newman. The story concerns a young woman who wants a child, and her alcoholic husband who drinks to forget the insecurities of his failure in life.

Off-Campus
New Program Set To Find Housing

By PAT FREEMAN

Old-timers at FSU who vainly (though persistently) tried to obtain off-campus housing arrangements will well remember the obscure bulletin boards buried away in the busy corridors of Bryan Hall which served somewhat vaguely as a listing for available housing off-campus.

Miss Edith McCollum housing director announced that changes have been made, not only in the location of the Off-Campus Office, but in the overall program for housing students outside the ivy walls of FSU.

Unimposing though it may be, the new Off-Campus Office at 112 Wildwood Drive is one of the most active centers on campus.

During the month of April alone, over 350 students consulted housing personnel, looking for listings on FSU approved housing opportunities.

Dr. Hugh Adams, assistant director of housing, reported that due to students increasing in numbers more rapidly than the university could provide adequate dorm facilities, over 3,000 students had to be housed off-campus last fall. . .of these 183 were women undergraduates.

Before last fall, no undergraduate women could live outside university boundaries, with the exception of sorority and scholarship students, unless living with close relatives in Tallahassee. Last fall, however, marked a new policy of supervised housing for women off-campus.

Over 177 listings had been registered by phone calls, 19 listings had been placed by landlords at the office, and information on costs for furnished and unfurnished rooms, apartments, houses and trailers had been systematically recorded and placed according to location, in the April report submitted by Ira Valentine, supervisor of off-campus housing.

Before any listings are approved a team of FSU housing inspectors checks the condition of the vacancy carefully, then submits recommendations for improvements to the landlord if the listing fails to meet standards, or returns to place the listing on the approved housing bulletin immediately.

The advantages for both landlords and students are increased by the policy of inspecting each listing previous to approval as university housing, Valentine said.

The inspector is concerned with the desirability of the listing as a potential home for a student, and obtains knowledge useful in special cases, as found in housing for handicapped students. The landlord learns comparative prices offered by others and is informed of the minimum standards necessary for university approval.

Although the office refers students to housing, the final contract is made by the landlord and the student, with both parties bearing legal responsibilities for the bargains made.

Although 172 women have already requested off-campus housing for the fall trimester, 1963, many landlords refuse to rent to women roomers due to "girls' untidiness and poor housekeeping," according to Adams and Valentine.

The men also present special problems of discipline and rowdiness according to the housing staff.

Adams added the complaint from landlords that no one wanted the responsibility of supervising women students housed off-campus, and that many refuse to rent rooms to freshmen at FSU for reasons of immaturity.

Stern, Treigle Featured In Summer Artist Series

Highlighting this summer's FSU Artist Series will be performances by Isaac Stern, violinist, and Norman Treigle, opera star.

Hailed as the greatest American violin virtuosó, Stern will appear here in concert on May 27 and 28. In addition to recording for Columbia records, he plays well over 100 concerts per season, and appears annually with almost every major orchestra in this country and abroad.

Although Stern was born in Russia in 1920, he was less than a year old when his parents brought him to San Francisco. Because of the incessant practicing of a neighbor, he was inspired to take up the violin at the age of eight, and when he was 15, he made his local debut.

Following a successful New York debut in 1937, his steadily upward climb was followed by critics all over the world. In addition to several around-the-world concert tours, which have included trips to Russia, Stern has appeared in several movies.

Student Leaders Attend Annual SUSGA Convention

By MAX COURTNEY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"By the end of the Convention it was a well-known fact that the FSU delegation played the dominant role at the convention. I was extremely pleased with both the attitudes and actions of every member of our delegation," Student Body President Connie Smith appraised FSU's participation in the tenth annual Southern University Student Government Association (SUSGA) convention which was held April 25-27 in Baton Rouge, La.

The conference examined and analyzed the common problems of Student Government on the member campuses.

During the convention proper there were three main panel sessions, each in turn divided into several smaller sessions. The discussion topics included, "Role of Student Government," "Student Legislatures," "Women's Student Government," "Student Government and Administration Relations," and many more. The FSU student government officers were assigned to panels on the basis of experience in the SGA and the appropriateness of the session.

The entertainment for the three day period featured, Peter Nero, the Four Saints, Dick Curtis and the Journeymen.

Smith went on to explain that there are 51 member schools from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Tennessee.

Students Welcome

An invitation is extended to all interested in Christian Science to attend a reception at the Christian Science Organization House, 535 West College Ave. Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m.

10th House To Be Opened By Scholarship Foundation

The 10th scholarship house of the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation and first to be established by a state-wide service club, will be opened this fall, according to Dr. Mode L. Stone, president of the SSRF.

The latest house, underwritten by District Four of Pilot Club International, was inspected recently by Mrs. Margaret Enns of Winter Haven, governor of the classified service organization.

The Pilot house brings the number of students who can be accommodated in the total program at FSU to some 200. This is the fourth house for women and it is expected to accommodate about 20 young women who score above 400 on the Florida Twelfth Grade Test and meet other criteria of character and financial need. High school students meeting these qualifications must be willing to share the household duties involved in the effective functioning of the housing unit.

In the houses for women, the resident counselor is usually a graduate student working toward an advanced degree. She serves in an advisory capacity, as the coeds are actually in charge of the house management which includes buying and preparing the food and keeping the house.

Nominees for the program are invited in the spring of the senior year for a weekend at one of the houses. The residents then vote on the ones they think best suited for cooperative living. After interviews by SSRF officials, the selection committee makes the final decision of those accepted.

Camp To Give Recital Monday

Pianist John Camp, studying under the direction of the studio of Edward Kilenyi, will give a special recital Sunday evening at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

Camp will open the program with a selection from Haydn entitled "Fantasie," and will follow with "Sonata in A-flat Major," Opus 110 by Beethoven; "Variations on a Theme of Paganini," Opus 35, Book 1, by Brahms; Schumann's "Novelletten, Opus 21," consisting of Number 1 in F Major and Number 2, in D Major; Liszt's "Transcendental Etudes," Etude III, "Paysage," in F Major and Etude V, "Feux follets," in B-flat Major; and "Waltzer," by Brahms-Dohnanyi.

Off To Good Start

For the more than 3,000 FSU students who live off campus during most of the school year, the recent establishment of a service designed to give them individual attention should be a welcome improvement.

Previously, townspeople who had living accommodations to be rented could post information in the main hall of the Housing Office, and students browsed until they found what appealed to them and their pocketbooks. Often the abodes were substandard, but the two essentials being low price and proximity to campus, other features were overlooked. Leaky roofs, beat-up furniture and clogged drains took a back seat, when money and legwork were involved.

That the Off-Campus Housing Office will not accept just any standards should prove to the students' definite advantage. Although they realize the problems the students have, the staff members will not list any accommodations on the boards until they have been inspected and rated--and many are rejected.

A major problem is the scarcity of available accommodations within walking distance of the campus, and the housing officials are seeking its solution by attempting to get more owners near campus to open their spare rooms for rental by university students.

It is sad but true that they sometimes are thwarted in their efforts by students' reputations for immaturity and destructiveness. One student's carelessness in taking care of property he has rented may close a living space permanently to students. The bad housekeeping habits and the unnecessary rowdiness of a small number of student-rentors make homeowners unwilling to subject their property and their ears to the further onslaughts from irresponsible students. The unfortunate result is that students who do not fit this black image are made to suffer, and are unable to rent suitable living quarters.

The newly-instituted Off-Campus Housing Office, in working with these and other problems, often has to act as mediator between students and landlords, when difficulties arise. Its purpose is to locate acceptable housing for students, and both parties must be satisfied, and kept that way.

Ultimate goal of the Housing Office is to be able to provide approved housing for all University students. If this can be done--and it will take several years to effect such a comprehensive program--the University will be better able to require of homeowners that their accommodations meet acceptable standards.

If the first month's results are any indication of the usefulness of the program, then the new department could appropriately be described as "one of the largest real estate listing agencies in Tallahassee." The entire staff is to be commended for getting off to such an excellent start in providing a much-needed service to students. It is to be hoped that this facility will continue to fulfill present expectations.

Campus Void Is Solved

As three A, as this period in history is coming to be know, slithers and crawls into the annals of the tri-monster scrapbook, we find the once happy campus of FSU barren and desolate, void of the typical gay carefree, and rowdy, boisterous college student. In place of the noise and gaiety we find the traditional night before Christmas scene, months before it appears on the calendar, "Noa a creature was stirring, not even a mouse."

Friends, collegians, Florida State Universitarians, lend me your collective ears. Contrary to popular belief, you will not turn into pumpkins until 12:00, that's a full hour after the female populace has to be snuggled snug in their beds with visions of purity dancing ever present in their pretty little heads. Granted, late minutes are bad enough; but being a pumpkin, well that's inconceivable. Just imagine having a pumpkin for a roommate, or worse yet, a sorority sister, just imagine, a plain ordinary every-day vegetable.

Casting away the world of storybooks, have you ever looked at it from a grownup, mature college students level? This is definitely a problem, the void campus not the pumpkin. Say someone from one of the great northern universities like Miami was to stop by our intellectual home just to see what it was like. It would be surprising, if not downright depressing to find nothing on campus at night but a few dozen water sprinklers and a maintenance man who forgot where he put them. That just isn't the right kind of image to convey, in the words of some immortal undergraduate of times gone by, "That just doesn't pack it."

With valiant effort to spare this fine institution of higher learning from devastating comments, I have spent time and energy and feel that I have finally come up with the one answer that will save us. For this I don't want worldly fame or even tangible objects as reward, but please remember my name, I'm going to run for student body president next year.

Mu solution is extremely simple and easy to follow. Let me explain. With 4,309 students in summer school which will last six months, we can afford to have twenty-four students roam the campus every night to make it look active. This of course means stationing a few at some of the local establishments. I feel that two each in the Swee Shop, University Inn, Mecca and the Corner will be appropriate. The Student Center should have at least four since it's Florida State's very own and we can't let our own kin down.

So far we have accounted for twelve of our "Fill the Campus committee," the other twelve could reasonably dispersed throughout the campus doing something typical of the traditional image. Two could take turns throwing each other in Westcott pool, a couple could paint the SAE lion, a couple watching TV in one of the girl's, women's, dorms, a couple sprawled out on Landon Green, two playing tennis and another couple playing smaky mout

COULD THIS BE WHY THE FOUR FRESHMEN CAN'T FINISH SCHOOL?

Yes. But there's nothing wrong with their addition. Four master vocalists, plus four swinging instrumentalists, plus four on stage-off the cuff comedians total Four Freshmen. Honest. And this fantastic triple threat versatility is why college audiences refuse to let the Freshmen finish school.

In "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, you'll hear them at their versatile best, in a recording made during an unforgettable performance at Long Beach City College. The packed house called it great, and so will you.

FSU Hosts International Thirst Conference

Rats have thrived for 30 days and man for six on "recycled" water of the sort which will be used for space travel, a speaker told an international Conference on Thirst in the Regulation of Body Water at FSU.

Dr. Julius Sendroy Jr., of the U.S. Naval Medical Research Institute, outlined two principal methods he said have been developed at his research center for separating potable drinking water from urine.

Although five years ago there was no known method, distilled and carbon-treated recycled water has been fed in the laboratory to 12 young male rats who thrived as well as six rats given ordinary water, he said.

Autopsies showed no ill effects even though the rats drank daily about 5.8 times as much per body weight as would be required for human consumption.

One method of recycling uses distillation with acid or oxidant at boiling temperature, resulting in recovery of about 85 per cent of the initial volume, Sendroy stated. A second method which he called "freeze drying or lyophilization," provides almost complete recovery of the urine and results in a purer drinking water.

One of the most promising procedures was developed at General Electric Company, where a process was developed which is "essentially that of a vacuum distillation with the vapors led through a catalyst at high temperature to pyrolyze volatile impurities," according to Sendroy.

This method, while not producing as chemically pure a water as the lyophilization process, "has been developed to the point of production of a small operational unit which has been used in an experiment wherein it was the sole source of water supply for a human being for six days," he said. "So far as could be ascertained by the physical condition of the subject, no untoward results were incurred."

One drawback to this method is the high temperature (about 1200 degrees Centigrade) required for catalytic combustion. "The lyophilization method, on the other hand, is much slower but produces water of a higher quality than any other process yet advanced," Sendroy added.

There is no answer to the question, "How much water does man need to survive?" according to another speaker, Dr. Austin Henschel, of the Occupational Health Research and Training Facility, U. S. Public Health Service. Different amounts are required as environmental conditions, the level of physical work, age and health of the subject vary.

"From studies which have been made, it can be concluded that physically fit men doing moderately hard physical work in a temperate environment cannot maintain a satisfactory state of body hydration on 900 cubic centimeters per day.

"Dehydration up to 2 or 2.5 liters results in no serious alterations in physiological functions but deficits of more than that amount cannot be tolerated," Henschel reported. "This is in keeping with research findings for men exposed to hot environments."

The conference on thirst in the regulation of body water, first international conference of the sort held, runs through today. Scientists are attending from 16 states and four foreign countries.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 2

Last week we discussed England, the first stop on the tour of Europe that every American college student is going to make this summer. Today we will take up your next stop—France, the Pearl of the Pacific, as it is generally called.

To get from England to France, one greases one's body and swims the English Channel. Similarly, to get from France to Spain, one greases one's body and slides down the Pyrenees. And, of course, to get from France to Switzerland, one greases one's body and wriggles through the Simplon Tunnel. Thus, as you can see, the most important single item to take to Europe is a valise full of grease.

No, I am wrong. The most important thing to take to Europe is a valise full of Marlboro Cigarettes—or at least as many as your regulations will allow. And if you discover you should run out of Marlboros in Europe, do not despair. Your familiar red and white Marlboro package is as unrepresented in Europe as it is in all fifty of the United States. And it is the same cigarette you find at home—the same pure white filter, the same zestful, mellow blend of tobaccos preceding the filter. This gem of the tobacconist's art, this prodigy of cigarette engineering, was achieved by Marlboro's well-known research team—Fred Softpack and Walter Fliptop—and I, for one, am grateful.

But I digress. We were speaking of France—or the Serpent of the Nile, as it is popularly termed.

Let us first briefly sum up the history of France. The nation was discovered in 1066 by Madame Guillotine. There followed 1,000 years of costly wars with Schleswig-Holstein, the Cleveland Indians, and Jean Jacques Rousseau. Stability finally came to the troubled land with the coronation of Marshal Foch, who married Lorraine Alsace and had three children: Flopsy, Mopsy, and Charlemagne. This later became known as the Petit Trianon.

Marshal Foch—or the Boy Orator of the Platte, as he was affectionately called—was succeeded by Napoleon, who introduced shortness to France. Until Napoleon the French were the tallest nation in Europe. After Napoleon most Frenchmen were able to walk comfortably under card tables. This later became known as the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

Napoleon, after his defeat by Credit Mobilier, was exiled to Elba, where he made the famous statement, "Able was I ere I saw Elba." This sentence reads the same whether you spell it forward or backward. You can also spell Marlboro backward—Orobiram. Do not, however, try to smoke Marlboro backward because that undoes all the pleasure of the finest cigarette made.

After Napoleon's death the French people fell into a great fit of melancholy, known as the Louisiana Purchase. For over a century everyone sat around moping and refusing his food. This torpor was not lifted until Eiffel built his famous tower, which made everybody giggle so hard that today France is the gayest country in Europe.

Each night the colorful natives gather at sidewalk cafes and shout "Oo-la-la!" as Maurice Chevalier promenades down the Champs Elysees swinging his malacca cane. Then, tired but happy, everyone goes to the Louvre for bowls of onion soup.

The principal industry of France is cashing travellers checks.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about France. Next week we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—Spain.

Goldinger First Member

Wise Owl Club Begun Here

A staff member was saved from a possibly blinding injury because he was wearing newly required safety glasses when a flask he was heating exploded in his hands and flying bits of glass struck his safety lenses with enough force to gouge out part of it.

John Goldinger, supervisor of laboratories for the Chemistry Dept. has become the first member of a new Wise Owl Club at FSU, sponsored by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Membership in the Wise Owl Club is awarded only to those employees who have saved their sight through wearing eye protective equipment at the time of on-the-job accidents that damage or destroy the sight of industrial workers each year.

A Wise Owl membership card was presented Goldinger at a ceremony by Mrs. Farris Bryant, a member of the board of directors of the Florida Society for the Prevention of Blindness. In addition, FSU received a charter for a Wise Owl chapter on campus.

Florida Supreme Court Justice B. K. Roberts, also a board member, presented the charter to FSU Vice President John E. Champion, and said "much credit goes to FSU for its pioneering and leadership in vision conservation, and we are proud that the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness has given formal recognition to your endeavor, by issuing a Wise Owl Charter and membership in their safety program."

In announcing the award, Mrs. E. C. Crawford, executive director of the Florida Society, said: "We certainly commend Dr. James Ferris, chairman of the Faculty Safety Committee, and others who supported a mandatory eye safety program for students in the Chemistry Dept."

James E. O'Neill, director of industrial service for the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, said that so far as he is able to determine, FSU is the first state university in the country to adopt a mandatory eye safety program for those in the Chemistry Dept.

Under the eye safety program, all undergraduates, graduate students, teaching assistants, staff, and instructors are required to wear standard safety glasses while working in a laboratory or shop of any type.

Other aspects of the program include first aid kits, face shields, eyewashing cups and fire blankets. Working with the Chemistry Dept. has been W. H. Watson, FSU's safety coordinator.

Presentation of the award to Goldinger and the charter to FSU was made in a ceremony in the office of President Gordon Blackwell. Among those attending were A. W. Brown, chairman of the Florida Industrial Commission, and Dr. E. Frieden, chairman of the Chemistry Dept.

FSU Sculptor Takes First

"Caryatid," a six-foot wooden sculpture by George F. Holschuh of FSU's Department of Art has won first prize in the Sixth Annual All-Florida Show of Associated Florida Sculptors.

The sculpture is one of 32 pieces selected from over 120 entries for the annual show. The works will be on exhibition at the Lowe Art Gallery of the University of Miami at Coral Gables through May 26.

Second prize went to Johann Ellsfeld of the University of Florida for a melted aluminum sculpture and third prize went to Ralph Hurst of FSU's Department of Art Education for a carved alabaster figure.

Chemistry Professors Edit, Write For Series

The first four books in a 15-book eries called "The General Chemstry Monograph Series," edited by r. Russell H. Johnsen of FSU, are eing published this month.

The four books, being published by e W. A. Benjamin Publishing Co., clude one by an FSU author, Dr. erner Herz. It is entitled "The hape of Carbon Compounds."

Johnsen, professor of chemistry here, said the books, being issued both in clothbound and paperback editions, are supplementary textbooks for exceptional students. The series is described by the publisher as "new paperbacks for freshmen."

Two later books in the series also will be by FSU writers: Dr. Earl Frieden, chairman of the chemistry dept. and Dr. Gregory Choppin of the chemistry dept.

After 39 Years

FSU's Bursar Retires

Florida State University's bursar is retiring after 39 years of active service.

Working under the title of chief clerk, Miss Sue Pitchford joined the staff in June, 1924 under John G. Kellem, FSCW business manager.

Thirty-eight years of her service have been spent in Westcott Bldg. Her office one year was located in the History Bldg., in 1936 when Westcott wing was rebuilt. When the student accounts office was started her title became supervisor of student accounts and since 1959 she has held the title of bursar.

A native of Jensen Beach, she graduated from FSCW in 1923 with a degree in Sociology. Dr. Raymond F. Bellamy, professor emeritus, was her major professor. While attending FSCW she served as business manager of the Flambeau and class secretary. A member of Sigma Kappa social sorority, she has served on the organization's advisory board for a number of years.

Miss Pitchford will continue to make her home in Tallahassee after retirement. She plans to spend some time in travel and indulge her favorite hobby, fishing.

Smoke Signals Sets Deadline

The deadline for the next issue of "Smoke Signals," FSU's general interest magazine, will be May 8 at 5 p.m. for students wishing to submit articles for publication.

Written materials should be typewritten, preferably double spaced, and may consist of short stories, essays, articles, poems or jokes.

All art work should not be in color, and must be ready for reproduction when submitted with the exception of cartoons, which may be presented as "roughs."

All materials must be accompanied with accurate return address and be turned in prior to the deadline date of the issue in which it is to appear. Articles may be placed in any of the contribution boxes on campus marked "Smoke Signals Contribution Box."

Any further questions about "Smoke Signals" may be directed to 410 Longmire, extension 2367.

FSU Baseball, Track, Golf Top Full Sports Weekend

Two baseball games, two golf matches, and a track meet are on tap for Seminole sports activity this weekend.

Danny Litwhiler's baseball team will take on arch rival Florida at Gainesville for single games today and tomorrow. Al Becaccio, sporting a 7-0 record, and Allen Thomas, at 5-2, will be the probably starting pitchers.

The Seminoles have just returned from an extended road trip through the Carolinas where they took four out of seven games to make Coach Litwhiler's record 15-6. Al Becaccio's pitching and the hitting of Mike Augustine (468) highlighted the Seminole attack.

FSU's next home game will be Monday, May 13, when the baseball nine take on Georgia Southern. Game time will be 3:30 p.m.

The golf team will make its first appearance since April 5 when they participate in the Southeastern Inter-collegiate Golf Tourney in Athens, Georgia, today and tomorrow. Dave Philo and Doug Davis will be Coach Chuck Rey's big hopes in improving the linker's record.

On the track scene, Florida State will be one of several teams entered in the Florida AAU meet tomorrow in Gainesville. The cindermen recently sent two of their members, Al Williams and Bill Griswald to the Drake Relays in DeMoines, Iowa. Williams, competing against four of the top ten shotputters in the country, took a second in his event. Griswald finished fourth in the hop-skip-and-jump.

The FSU netters were rained out of a scheduled match with Miami, Tuesday. It will be rescheduled for later in the year. The tennis team took second place in the First Annual Florida Invitational Tennis Championship in Coral Gables. Miami took first place in the tourney so the rescheduled match could prove to be the opportunity Coach Ed Cubbon's players need for revenge.

Girl Netters End Season

The Florida State University women's tennis team, the Racquettes, will end their regular season play with a match against Mississippi State College for Women tomorrow. Play will begin at 9 a.m. on the courts behind the women's gym.

Six of the club members played in the Women's Southern Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament in Columbus, Mississippi, April 25 through the 27. Netters from seven colleges, Loyoly, Millsaps, Judson, Louisiana State, The University of Mississippi, and Mississippi State College for Women are entered in the tournament.

Four of the Racquettes survived the first round of singles play while two of the FSU doubles teams reached the semifinals.

Director Resigns

Paul J. Hemphill, Jr., has resigned his position as Sports Publicity Director for Florida State University. He will take the job of Sports Editor for the Augusta Chronical in Augusta, Georgia. He will leave immediately for his new assignment.

'Don Pasquale' Opens

"Don Pasquale," a comic opera in three acts by Gaetano Donizetti, will be the next Opera Guild presentation, scheduled for May 17-18.

The production will represent the work of about 100 members in the musical, technical and administrative phases of the work entailed in staging an opera.

Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild, has announced that the FSU production will be in English, and that tickets for "Don Pasquale" will go on sale May 13 at the Westcott Ticket Office, with all seats reserved. Music will be provided by the Opera Orchestra, to be conducted by Robert Sedore.

"Don Pasquale" tells the humorous story of a rich old bachelor who suddenly decides he wants to get married, two enchanting young lovers, and a witty doctor friend. Don Pasquale, the amorous old man, will be sung by John Sharp; his friend, a physician called Dr. Malatesta, will be performed by Douglas Therrell; and his nephew, Ernesto, will be sung by Joseph Napoli. Norino, beautiful and beloved lady of Ernesto, will be performed by Barbara Collins.

Set in Rome at the beginning of the 19th century, the scenes take place in the richly furnished halls of Don Pasquale's home and gardens.

One of the best known arias in the opera was added by Donizetti almost as an after-thought. The tale is related that during the rehearsals of the opera just before the premiere of "Don Pasquale," both the composer and the principals felt that the little extra something which every production needs to succeed was somehow lacking.

Rummaging around in a pile of his manuscripts, Donizetti came up with an aria for his tenor to sing to Norina in one of the garden scenes. The discovery was "Com' e' gentil," (Soft, beams the light) a love song which utilizes mandolinlike effects from the chorus.

The wit and humor of the music, the composition of which is said to have occupied Donizetti no more than eleven days, was a huge factor in the opera's popularity. It was first performed in Paris in 1843 at the Theatre des Italiens. Its first New York production was in 1846, in English, and in Italian in 1849.

Walter Sullivan

'Times' News Editor To Lecture Here

Walter Sullivan, science news editor of the "New York Times," will be the University Lecture Series speaker Tuesday evening, May 14. The lecture, on the subject "Is There Intelligent Life Beyond the Earth?" will be at 8:30 in Opperman Music Hall.

A regular front-page byliner of "The Times," Mr. Sullivan also co-ordinates the science news reporting of the rest of "The Times" science staff. He is noted for his own coverage of the International Geophysical Year, for which he won the coveted George Polk Memorial Award. His major adventures included being cast away on a deserted Pacific isle, crossing the Gobi Desert, witnessing the siege and capture of Shanghai by the Communists, and an exploration of Antarctica.

"Assault on the Unknown," a story of world-wide scientific adventure, and "Quest for a Continent," a definitive work on Antarctica, are two of his major literary accomplishments. Sullivan's ability to explain these often highly technical happenings in plain, simple, every-day language has made him one of the most sought-after speakers on these topics.

He has also covered the Korean war, has witnessed numerous launchings at Cape Canaveral, and has taught a course on geo-physics and space research at the American Museum-Hayden Planetarium in New York.

Sullivan has been on the New York Times' staff since 1940. A native of New York City, he received the B. A. degree from Yale in 1940. From 1948 through 1950 he served as foreign correspondent for "The Times" in the Far East and was United Nations' correspondent in 1951-1952. He has served as chief writer since 1960.

The University Lecture Series is free and open to the public.

Students To Face Obstacle Course

By PAT FREEMAN
News Editor

Students who have become habitual commuters along the sidewalks which lead from the vicinity of the Business Bldg. to the Student Center and Post Office, then across Woodward St. to the Geology, Math, Education and Science buildings and the men's dorms will have to follow a substantial detour in the near future when construction on the new Student Union begins.

The obstacle course which would be hazardous not only to students during construction, but to workers and traffic as well, will be carefully blocked off from all possible points in the following manner.

A fence will be erected along Call St. from the School of Business to Woodward St. Next, a barricade will be constructed on the sidewalk leading from the School of Business to the Post Office. Another fence will be erected 12 feet west and parallel to the new food service building. This fence will extend from the Post Office to the sidewalk just south of Palmetto Drive, and a third fence will be placed on the south or construction side of the sidewalk running east and west of the present Student Center.

Students must walk down Call St. to Woodward, then go through the Student Center parking lot to the sidewalk running east and west of the Student Center. This sidewalk can be used only from the west, for it will be cut off at the Business Bldg. Students may also use the entrance to the Student Center at the Trophy Room from the west and the south.

For those students with no head for technical (and confusing) directions or instructions, a second entrance to the Student Center will be provided by replacing a north window with a double door in the northeast corner of the cafeteria. This door will give access to the cafeteria from the parking lot located north of the building.

Students may also reach the Book Store and the Post Office from this door by walking through the cafeteria. The door will be a permanent improvement, as it will serve as a north entrance to the relocated Post Office when it moves into the cafeteria next year.

Since all students must walk down Call St., the present western barricade will be moved to Woodward St. At this time, it will be most important that the planned new access route to the campus from the street south of the tennis courts be available. Call St. will become a pedestrian street within the campus boundaries.

Frost's Poem Reviewed Tomorrow

The poetry of Robert Frost, beloved American poet who died earlier this year at the age of 88, will be the subject of the first book review of the trimester tomorrow at 5 p.m. in Longmire Student Lounge.

Dr. Claude Flory of the English Dept. will be the speaker for the occasion, which will follow a coffee informal at 4:30 p.m. Dr. Robert Lawton, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, will introduce the speaker.

Flory, who has been a member of the faculty since 1954, received his doctor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1935 and conducted post-doctoral research at

Please Cooperate

If the contract for construction of the new University Union is awarded on the basis of bid opening Thursday, the western part of campus soon will resemble an obstacle course.

Fenced off from the south and east ends, the Student Center cafeteria, bookstore and post office will be accessible only from the Trophy Room entrance and through a door to be cut on the north side of the cafeteria. It's a sure bet that many grumblings will be heard because of the inconvenience of walking all the way around the building to get in.

Adding to the confusion will be the fact that construction regulations will require blocking of the sidewalk leading from the School of Business to the post office. This is a favorite shortcut for students in their long jaunts from east campus to the Education, Geology, Math-Meteorology Buildings and points west. The new route, along Call Street to Woodward, will be somewhat longer and will add minutes to the time required to traverse the campus. The closing of Call Street to traffic will alleviate the situation in part, but there's no doubt that students still will find the construction work a major inconvenience.

Since the barricades will be set up for the safety of the students, however, it is to be hoped that students will cooperate by staying out of the blocked-off area. It seems that, looking forward to one of the South's most beautiful Student Union complexes, students can find it easier to be patient with the inconveniences.

Aid Creative Youths

(Reprinted from the Pensacola News)

A study by the University of California, financed by the Carnegie Foundation and urged on by Board Chairman Charles Thomas of Monsanto Chemical, outlined three or four keys to the creative spirit which will make certain youths outstanding in future years. The research study dealt primarily with creative students in art, science, literature, math and architecture.

Among the most important clue-keys, the report pointed out, are independence, flexibility, eagerness to meet new experiences, an ability to understand himself and thereby develop his specific resources while controlling his weaknesses.

John Gardner, president of the Carnegie Foundation, enlarged on these ideas in the Monsanto magazine recently, pointing out the creative ones exhibit their independence by ignoring the strictures of group pressures.

They do not rest their actions on phrases like "everybody's doing it," or "what will people say?" Gardner continued. Also they do not accept something as an unquestioned fact merely because most people appear to believe it.

The California study report shows that a really creative person usually shuts his mind to nothing. He readily absorbs the past, does not try to prove creativity by rejecting everything which has gone before.

Scattered Houses Are 'Eyesores'

After some progress in removing eyesores and antiques from our campus, special interests have won out over the good of the University and cluttering the campus seems to be in style.

FSU has always had one of the better looking and more impressive campuses. With the Social Welfare and Nursery buildings gone, there were few buildings that really looked out of place but all this has changed. Homes from Mabry [illegible] are being scattered over the [illegible] in a haphazard fashion.

Not only are these houses [illegible] by forcing married stude[illegible] their families to move but th[illegible] evidently being placed anyw[illegible] campus there is space. [illegible] the wants of departments or [illegible] groups in the University are [illegible] allowed to override the g[illegible] the whole and create a jun[illegible] of the campus.

At these times one sees the f[illegible] of student government or clas[illegible] cers. The appearance of [illegible] versity is one of its most vit[illegible] tures. Visitors, alumni and [illegible] tial students receive their fi[illegible] often last impression of the U[illegible] sity from its appearance. [illegible] student government (or [illegible] beau, for that matter) were [illegible] cerned with more than [illegible] sports and yes-ing the Admin[illegible] tion they would not acquie[illegible] this butchery.

A campus as attractive as [illegible] should not be disfigured [illegible] seemingly random placing of b[illegible] ings. If this is to continue the[illegible] be no need to hire an archite[illegible] the addition to the Psychology B[illegible] ing, just cover it with clapboa[illegible] it will look at home.

FSU's Schwarz Visits Georgia

Dr. Guenter Schwarz of the Physics Dept. has served as a visiting lecturer Monday and today at Shorter College in Rome, Georgia.

He was visiting under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program, now in its sixth year, is supported by the National Science Foundation.

Schwarz gave lectures, held informal meetings with students and assisted faculty members with curriculum and research problems during his stay.

Dr. Horace B. Reed, Jr., head of the Shorter College Physics Dept., was in charge of arrangements for Schwarz's visit.

Botanists Write Manual On North Florida Trees

"An aboreal tapestry of exceeding interest and beauty" is the subject of a book written by two FSU botanists and just published by the University of Florida Press, "Trees of Northern Florida."

The authors, Dr. Herman Kurz, professor emeritus of botany, and Dr. Robert K. Godfrey, professor of botany and acting head of the Dept. of Biological Sciences, describe 190 species and varieties of trees in the 311-page manual. Dr. Kenneth A. Wagner collaborated in field studies.

The book is the first complete summary and description of the tree species of northern Florida, described as that section of the state above a line drawn through the Ocala National Forest and Gulf Hammock.

In the foreword, Dr. H. Harold Hume, provost emeritus of agriculture of the U of F, says: "'Trees of Northern Florida' opens the door to an understanding of the trees of the region and will increase the beauty and value of them for those who read it. It is entitled to wide usage as a source of knowledge of the trees of a great section of the state."

One feature of the book is the illustrations which portray the leaves and some other features of trees in their many variations and not just the norm.

Dr. Kurz, who retired from the FSU faculty in 1956 after 34 years, is best known for his book, "Florida Dunes and Scrub." He is the author of some 30 titles, all the result of field botany.

Dr. Godfrey, taxonomist who has been a member of the staff since 1954, at one time served as a plant explorer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture Plant Introduction Section in Turkey and the Union of South Africa. While at FSU he has developed an herbarium which now has more than 77,000 specimens.

Faculty Leaves To Do Research

Activities as diverse as studying Chinese and serving as industrial consultants, attending international symposia and helping the College Entrance Examination Board revise its testing program will occupy faculty members during part of Trimester III.

Many faculty members will have half of the third trimester away from their normal classroom duties, while others plan to utilize the free time to pursue research.

Dr. Karl Wildermuth, a theoretical physicist, will do research at the Max-Planck Institute in Munich, Germany, and at other research centers. He will return to the USA briefly, from June 17 to June 21, to chair the Gordon Research Conference on Nuclear Chemistry in New London, N. H.

Prof. Colin Barrow, a fellow physicist, is returning to his native England in May and June to establish a subsidiary site for radio-observation of the planet Jupiter. While in England he will attend the British Astronomical Association and Royal Astronomical Society meetings and visit some universities and radio-observatories. In July he will return to Tallahassee to participate in the main phase of Jupiter observations, using antenna near the campus of FSU.

Activities nearer at home will occupy Dr. William W. Rogers of the History Dept., who has just received the Coyle E. Moore Jr. Award. He'll do research on the second half of a History of Thomas County, Georgia.

On leave during the trimester, Dr. Relis B. Brown of the Biological Sciences Dept. will serve as a consultant to the CEEB which tests high school seniors for college admission. He'll work in Princeton, N. J. and New York, N. Y.

FSU GRADUATE, WILLIAM T. HOLD, . . . has been awarded a fellowship of $2400 for graduate studies in the University of Wisconsin on the basis of his record as an insurance student at FSU.

Selected as the outstanding senior insurance student, Hold (left) was presented the award by Dr. James E. Dillinger, chairman of Risk and Insurance in FSU's School of Business.

Hold and his wife will leave in August for Madison, where he will enter the master in business administration program at the Graduate School of the University of Wisconsin.

Four Professors Write Textbook

A new 397-page textbook, "Good Schools For Young Children" co-authored by four members of the FSU faculty, attempts to relate teaching practice to developmental factors in the young child.

Sub-titled, "A Guide for Working with Three-, Four- and Five-year-olds," the book is published by Macmillan Company of New York. Its authors are Dr. Sarah Lou Hammond, professor and head of early childhood education, School of Education; Dr. Ruth J. Dales, professor of home and family life, School of Home Economics; Miss Dora Sikes Skipper, associate professor of education; and Dr. Ralph L. Witherspoon, professor and director, Institute of Human Development.

"All persons who guide the development of young children need an understanding of the child, his world, and the forces which [illegible] him, as well as the basic prin[illegible] on which decisions are made re[illegible] ing instruction and practice," the authors in a prefatory cha[illegible]

Play Cast Announced

Leading lady in the upcoming University Theatre production, "Dark of the Moon," will be Annette Hannon, Director Sam Baker announced today.

Hannon, a junior majoring in Spanish, made her acting debut recently as a newspaper reporter in Valency's "The Long Night," performed at FSU last trimester.

"Dark of the Moon," a play set in the mysterious Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina, will feature Hannon as Barbara Allen, heroine of many a folk song.

Playing opposite her will be Eddie Reid as John the Witch Boy. Reid, a senior, last year won a Les Jongleurs Award for his role of Eugene Gant in "Look Homeward, Angel."

Other members of the cast are Kent Wood as Preacher Haggler; Judy Hildebrand, the Dark Witch; Ellen Whigham, the Fair Witch; Louise Beddingfield as Ma Allen; Ken Richart, Pa Allen; Ingrid Tierese as Mrs. Summey; Kim Reimer, Floyd Allen; Jimmy Rayfield as the Conjur Man; and Betsy Stafford as the Conjur Women.

Nelson Wins Dietetic Award

Mis Carol Nelson, an FSU junior, has been awarded the Economics Laboratory, Inc. $300 gift scholarship for 1963.

This scholarship is awarded annually by the Southeastern Hospital Association of Dietitians to an outstanding student planning to enter the field of hospital dietetics. Miss Nelson was selected from applicants throughout the thirteen Southern states on the basis of interest in the field of dietetics, scholastic ability, college activities and character.

FSU Meteorologist Charles Jordan To Begin Tropical Weather Study

Associations between the warmth of the sea surface in the tropics and the character of weather patterns will be the subject of a three-year study that an FSU meteorologist is beginning under a $58,398 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Dr. Charles L. Jordan said the tropics have been assumed to be the site of fairly steady exchange of heat between the ocean and atmosphere, but that the transport of this heat out of the tropics has been considered quite variable, depending on atmospheric flow patterns. Sometimes this occurs in the form of violent tropical storms.

The possibility exists, however, that the rate of exchange between the ocean and atmosphere is quite variable and is important in influencing weather patterns in tropical and subtropical areas. Changes in the weather patterns may in turn influence the warmth of the sea surface.

In some cases "feedback" may exist, tending to intensify certain patterns and maintain them for weeks or even months. Search for interrelationships of this type, he said, will form a major part of the study.

Jordan said the study will make use of air and water temperatures, wind direction and speed and moisture observations reported on routine weather observations from ships, as well as less frequent observations of the vertical distribution of temperature beneath the sea surface and observations of temperature and moisture of the air at upper levels, up to about 60,000 feet.

The study will begin with an investigation of a region in the equatorial central Pacific Ocean, where in 1957 abnormally heavy rains persisted for several months in a region where rainfall is usually very light. Another topic to be studied involves the effect of areas of cool water resulting from the action of large typhoons in the western Pacific Ocean on subsequent weather systems.

It is anticipatied that during the second and third years of the study, research data from the Atlantic Ocean, and possibly the Indian Ocean, will be used.

The scientist, formerly with the National Hurricane Research Project, has been on the FSU faculty since 1957. Since 1960 he has done research for the Navy on the use of radar data from hurricanes and has made several flights with hurricane hunter planes based at Jacksonville.

Two graduate and two undergraduate students will assist in the study. The budget includes provisions for a visiting professor of meteorology or oceanography for ten months. Many of the calculations will be made on FSU's IBM 709 computer located in the basement of the Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg.

International College Begun

Fall, 1962, saw the opening of the new international experimental college in Copenhagen, Denmark, under the direction of Aage Rosendal Nielsen, founder and for twelve years director of the Scandinavian Seminar.

Revolting against the compartmentalization of knowledge which results from modern specialization, the school strives to encourage the student's ability to synthesize opinions and beliefs from the facts which he learns. Its primary objective is to act as a catalyst to the evolution of education.

To implement its convictions, the program divides the semester into three phases, each phase consisting of a five-week study program, followed by a week of evaluation during which there are no classes. This first semester, more than twenty persons, with a student-faculty ratio of one to one, spent their time discussing the organization and curriculum of their college.

A close student-faculty relationship is maintained, ideally with a ratio of eight to one. Both students and faculty are to undergo an internship program. During this time, the professor conducts his own course(s) and himself attends at least two other courses.

All classes, such as creativity, applied liberal arts, New World Renaissance, relativity, and film-making, which were offered this semester, are open to both students and faculty. Both undergraduate and graduate schools are included in this experimental college.

Drop Two To Gators

Florida State Baseball Suffers Lost Weeken

The Florida Gators combined tight pitching and some clutch hitting to hand the Florida State Seminoles 3-1 and 6-3 losses in games played over the weekend at Gainesville.

The two standouts for Florida were Ray Rollyson, a sophomore, who pitched his second straight win in the first contest and Earl Montgomery who singles, doubled, and tripled to account for two big runs in the second game.

Al Beccaccio was the starter and loser for the Seminoles in Friday's game. Beccaccio, who had a 7-0 record, gave up only five hits, but four of them came in a disasterous fourth inning.

Carol Lanoux led off the Gator fourth with a single. Earl Montgomery walked, Tom Moore singled, Randy Morcroft singled, scoring two runs. Bernie Haskins walked and Ed Braddy followed with a single to score the final Florida tally.

Tom Moore had the only other Florida hit, a single in the sixth inning.

FSU got its only run in the sixth inning. Jim Loftin singles and was forced at second by Jim Reed. Rollyson threw wildly to first in an abortive pickoff attempt which sent Reed to second. Mike Augustine then followed with an RBI producing single for the Seminole's only run.

The Semioles, who got a total of six hits off Rollyson, had one more scoring opportunity in the ninth. FSU put two runners on base but the threat was quickly erased with a quick game - ending doubleplay which, incidently, was bitterly protested by Coach Danny Litwhiler.

Rollyson, in winning his second, has yet to give up an earned run.

The Seminoles looked as if they were out to even the score in the Saturday contest as they took an early one run lead on two singles and an error by second baseman Carol Lanoux.

The Gators came right back scoring three runs on three successive singles and a bases-clearing triple to take a 3-1 lead in their half of the second.

Mike Augustine banged a single to start things off in the Semiole third. Gary Nichols then whalloped a home run to knot the score at 3-3.

Florida, however, was not to be denied. Carol Lanoux walked and rode home on Montgomery's double. Montgomery moved to third on an error by the center fielder and scored on a sacrifice fly by Tome Moore, making the score 5-3.

From then on it was all Florida's Charlie Anderson. The junior right-hander settled down and retired the Semioles in order until Buddy Teagle's single off Moore's glove in the sixth. Anderson struck out eight and walked only two in winning his fifth without a loss.

The Gators scored their final run off FSU's Marty Howell in the seventh when Montgomery's triple scored Al Lopez from first base.

Allen Thomas was the starter and loser for the Semioles going six innings giving up seven hits, five runs, striking out one and walking two to make his record 6-2. Howell came on to pitch the last two innings giving up one run on one hit and one base on balls.

Only Five To Go

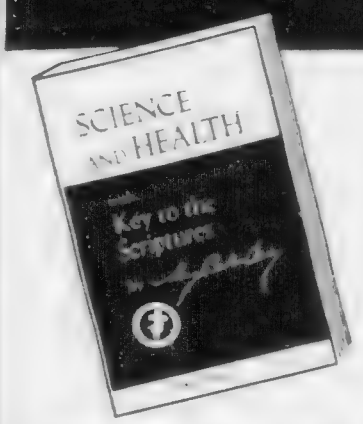
Even though the FSU baseball team suffered twin setbacks at the hands of the Florida Gators over the weekend, Coach Danny Litwhiler's charges are still one of the highly ranked teams in the country and not without reason.

With pro prospects such as shortstop Woody Woodward and Buddy Teagle leading the way, the Seminoles have, as an independent baseball power, consistently beaten the top teams in the Southeast.

Last year the Seminoles were ranked in the top five of the country and were semifinalists in the collegiate world series. There is a distinct possibility that they may repeat this feat.

Of course we are sure that this is old stuff to many of the students here at FSU, but we are writing this column to those who may not have taken advantage of the exciting brand of baseball played by the FSU nine.

Although it is too late to take advantage of our track and tennis teams' play, the baseball team still has five remaining home dates.



FSU will play Georgia Southern at home May 13. We at the Flambeau will try to give the reader more coverage both before and after the games, but we would strongly recommend that the student body not miss the opportunity to view topflight baseball.

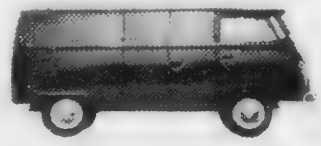
Engine. Brakes.

This power package is for you if you give your truck a hard time. All the time. If you're always loading it to capacity. And then asking it to perform as if it were empty.

The engine is our new air-cooled "1500" (displacement is 1,500 cc. or 91.10 cu. in.). It's 25% larger and it produces 25% more horsepower than any other Volkswagen engine ever.

That's why a '63 VW Truck with the "1500" engine can outspeed, outclimb, outdo any other VW Truck on the road today.

Yet gas consumption is as low as ever. 24 mpg was, and is, our average.



The brakes (linings and cylinders) are extra-large. We wouldn't sell the "1500" without them.

If you're the kind who's kind to his truck, you may not want the "1500."

We have an air-cooled engine for you anyway: the "1200" that's been making VWs go since 1960. It's standard equipment.

There are 20 other new features inside our '63 truck. But the outside looks pretty much like last year's model. So does the price.

You might say that the face and the figure are both familiar.

Professor's Opera To Be Revived

The New York City Opera, whose 1956 production of "Susannah" resulted in the New York Music Critics Circle Award for its composer, Carlisle Floyd, has again revived the faculty member's production.

The opera, which provides a Tennessee mountain setting for the old story of Susannah and the Elders, has been placed on the spring season schedule. It was presented in City Center last Friday night, and is scheduled again tomorrow night.

Floyd went to New York to direct staging of the opera, which was presented with Lee Venora playing the part of Susannah and Norman Treigle playing the part of Blitch, the preacher. Julius Rudel conducted the orchestra. The opera was last presented in New York in 1960.

The critic for the New York Herald Tribune, Louis Snyder, noted that "Susannah," has had several revivals and as a repertory piece "still draws a large and responsive audience."

Harriett Johnson of the New York Post said the opera was "more powerfully entertaining than ever" and added: "To see it is a must, especially for those who doubt that American opera can hold its own in music and drama with repertory items of the past. Actually it does more than this by simultaneously contributing its unique American individuality as well.'

Howard Klein of the New York Times said: "From the opening, it looks like a nice folk story, but from the revival scene in Act 2 the tragic elements lurch to the powerful conclusion. The listener is swept along . . .If some still don't know this work, the advice is not to miss it."

"Susannah" had its world premiere in Westcott Auditorium in 1955 and a year later was produced in New York. It was after this production that Floyd was given the New York Music Critics Circle Award for the best new opera in 1956. In 1959 he was named one of the Ten Outstanding Young Men by the National Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"Susannah" also has been performed in several other cities of this country, and it was performed at the Brussels Worlds Fair in 1958. It is tentatively scheduled in San Antonio next October to open the 25th anniversary celebration of the San Antonio Symphony.

Other Floyd operas which also have been produced by the New York City Opera are "Wuthering Heights" and "The Passion of Jonathan Wade," a Reconstruction Era opera with a setting in Columbia, S. C., which was produced in 1962.

Carr Named Chairman

Dr. James F. Carr Jr., director of financial aid, has been named chairman of the newly organized Southern Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Carr was selected for the post at the organizational meeting of the Association which was held at Emory University in Atlanta in conjunction University in Atlanta in conjunction with the regional meeting of the College Entrance Examination Board.

States represented in SASFAA include Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia.

The proposed constitution indicates the purpose of the organization to be: the promotion of professional competency and association of student financial aid administrators and the assistance of educational institutions, foundations, government agencies and private and community organizations to promote and develop effective programs pertinent to student financial aids.

A member of the FSU faculty since 1946, Dr. Carr is currently serving as a member of the advisory committee on the National Student Financial Aid Program.

Flory Opens Series With Frost Review

BY DICK SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Claude R. Flory of the English Dept. gave a short talk and read selected poems of the late Robert Frost Wednesday, initiating the Book Review Series of trimester III.

The informal talk, sponsored by the Activities Committee, was introduced by Dr. Robert Lawton, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Lawton expressed the hope that this series of book reviews would inaugurate a new tradition at FSU for summer students.

Flory gave a brief sketch of the life of Robert Frost,"...who had received more than 40 honorary degrees from U. S. universities and also from the universities of Cambridge and Oxford (England)." Frost entered Dartmouth College, remained there for one semester, and left. He later attended Harvard for two years.

Frost, often associated with New England, actually was born in San Francisco in 1874. His father was of New England stock; his mother of Scotch descent. When Frost's father died, his mother and Robert, then 10 years old, moved to Lawrence, Mass.

Flory explained that it was Frost who achieved what Walt Whitman once stated was the criterion for a poet—that a country should absorb as much of the poet as the poet had absorbed of the country. Frost received the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in the years 1924, 1931 and 1937. He was also commemorated by the U. S. Congress on his 75th and 85th birthdays.

Robert Frost has become the favorite American poet," the speaker said. Frost wrote in a human, realistic speech, in"...talk which was also song."

In discussing Frost's tendency to set most of his poems in New England, Flory said that Frost know the whole world well, so he (Frost) could see the whole world in the microcosm of a New England farm. Frost bought a farm in Derry, N.H., in 1900. He lived there for 12 years until he and his wife visited England.

One of Frost's earliest poems was set in South America, and in his later works he became less "localized." The "distant in time and place came to have attention in Frost's later work," Flory explained.

In examining the content of Frost's poems, the lecturer said that Frost "invites metaphoical extension." He went on to say that Frost's poems are parables, that they are symbolic "but not in a puzzling sense." Flory said that Frost himself protested against over-emphasizing the symbolic in his poetry.

He also stated that a central theme of Frost's poetry was the search for eternal meanings, and that this lifted his poetry from the "local."

Smith Wins HonorAward

Dr. Sara Louise Smith, professor and head of the Health Education Dept., has received the Honor Fellow Award of the American Association for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation.

The award, one of the highest the Association can bestow to AAHPER members who "epitomize the highest professional accomplishments of the profession," was given at the organization's 78th anniversary meeting in Minneapolis. She was one of five persons so honored.

The AAHPER is a department of the National Education Association and currently has a membership of about 35,000. The convention this week attracted about 4,000 teachers, administrators, students, and sports leaders from all over the United States.

Born and reared in Georgia, Smith is a graduate of Georgia State College for Women, received her MA from Teachers College, Columbia University, and her Ed. D. from New York University.

She became director of the Florida School-Community Health Education Project for the Florida State Department of Education in 1946. She has been with FSU since 1951.

Fla. Economics Is Book Topic

Seven faculty members are represented in a new volume, "Essays on Florida's Economic Development," copies of which have been provided members of the Legislature.

The introductory essay is by Dr. George Macesich, FSU associate professor of economics and director of the Council on Economic Development, which sponsored the volume's publication. His essay is entitled, "Factors Promoting Economic Development."

Two other members of the economics' faculty have essays in the publication. They are: Dr. William P. Dillingham, who wrote "Borrowing to Finance Construction of Facilities at State Universities" and Dr. Marshall R. Colberg, head of the department, "Economics of Area Development."

Other essays were contributed by Dean of the Faculties Werner Baum and James Mahoney, instructor in business, "The Role of University Research in Economic Development;" Dr. Steven Knezevich, head of the Educational Administration, Supervision and Curriculum Dept., "The Role of Public Education in Florida's Economic Development," and Dr. J. R. Stevens, head of the Marketing Dept., "The Role of Private Business Research in the Economic Development of Florida."

Knowledge For College

The Knowledge for College Test will be given to all first trimester freshmen women and to all undergraduate women who have never before attended FSU and who are presently living in foundation houses and in resident halls.

The required exam will be given Thursday, May 23 at 5:15 p.m. in the Longmire Auditorium on the second floor.

Banish Obnoxious Football Alumni

The South is known for many things, including race riots, cotton, and Henry Gibson of Fairhope, Alabama, but only in the last decade has its football alumnus achieved true maturity among his peers in other sections of the country.

The rest of the United States has been plagued for many years by world wars, polio, and other petty distasteful matters, but now the various alumni groups that conduct a constant domestic type guerilla warfare among themselves threaten to wreck the tranquility that surrounds the remaining Americans who are amusing themselves by fighting the Cold War. What is even more ridiculous is the fact that the cause of it all is the affection of a few athletes in the twilight of adolescence who are potential All-Americans.

"The South shall rise again!" Unfortunately, the degree of obnoxiousness of some southern football boosters has beaten the South to it. Whether big-time football and its accoutrements are justified is moot, but listening to a loudmouth alumnus is equivalent to eating your Easter eggs on Christmas Eve. However, during the balmy summer months the monsters are dormant, and the rest of the football fans enjoy a well-deserved respite. Consequently, there is no better time to inform the innocent as to the nature of this beast and his modus operandi.

These creatures inhabit hotel rooms, street corners, grandstands, and cocktail parties. They can easily be identified at a safe distance by their pleated pants, and by a triangular piece of felt which has various printed matter inscribed upon it, is dangled from a slim tubular stick, and is usually waved in everyone else's face or kept slung like a rifle over the shoulder. However, the important thing is how he preys upon the innocent and forces them to submit to his desires.

The most common method of attack used is called the frontal assault or bash. In this particular movement the alumnus halts for a split second in front of his victim to convey the pseudo impression of recognition. This is the crucial point in the attack. If he thinks he can overcome you he charges; if not, he turns and ignores you completely much like a rhinoceros during a hot day in Africa. Once the charge is begun there is no escape save force-feeding him a knuckle sandwich.

Initial contact is established by his grasping your right hand and shaking it vigorously amid gutteral utterances of glad tidings, good wishes, and other verbal mouthwash which seemingly leaps from the well-defined cracks between his gnashing bicuspids. The kill is made when he gasses his victim in clouds of tobacco smoke mixed with the scent of a critical case of halitosis. The victim, now helplessly cripped by nausea, is done for.

How long will these attacks be allowed to continue? Will the innocent suffer indefinitely? There is only one solution--stop making alumni and kill off those that exist today. Act now! Help Stamp Out Obnoxious Football Boosters!

Subsidize Medicine?

This is the first of a series of articles dealing with the problems of socialized medicine. "The Case for Socialized Medicine" by R. W. Tucker, published by the Call Association, is the main work upon which this series is based.

Rising medical costs are among many of the most pressing arguments that favor a government-supported medical plan. Few would deny that medical costs are skyrocketing. Two reasons can be given for this: 1) the progress in technology has led to the development of much expensive equipment, and the addition of many extra people to hospital payrolls and doctor's staffs; 2) automation, based on the economic rule that as a nation industrializes the relative cost of goods will decline while services will cost more, has produced the crisis in medicine which depends upon services, whereby costs continue to go higher and higher.

No one can see an end to the present trend in higher medical costs, we ought to ask ourselves not if medicine should be subsidized, but how? One way that hospitals have cut down on costs is by exploiting their workers. The hospital strikes in 1959 in New York and elsewhere showed that some employees were paid so little that they were on public relief while working.

Where does the medical industry get the money it needs for research and for charity? The March of Dimes, fund drives and all philanthropic sources add up to about 5% of the medical bill. The government has largely replaced drug industries and universities in giving some money for research. $400 million was spent this way in 1959, while $550 million was spent on get well cards and the like. Congress revealed that some drug companies were making as much as 7000% on their products, another reason medical costs are so high.

Insurance plans, labor plans, the "Blue" plans, etc., cover about 1/4 of the total bill, and only 1/3 of the bill of those who are insured. Doctors used to overcharge the rich and undercharge the poor, but with the rising costs this becomes impractical--the rich soon realize they are being exploited.

Still the tremendous national medical bill is paid for mostly by private citizens, about 76% to be accurate. It is easy to see that as costs mount some other source of money must be found, private individuals cannot be expected to pay more and more of their incomes into the national medical bill if for no other reason than that most people just can't afford it.

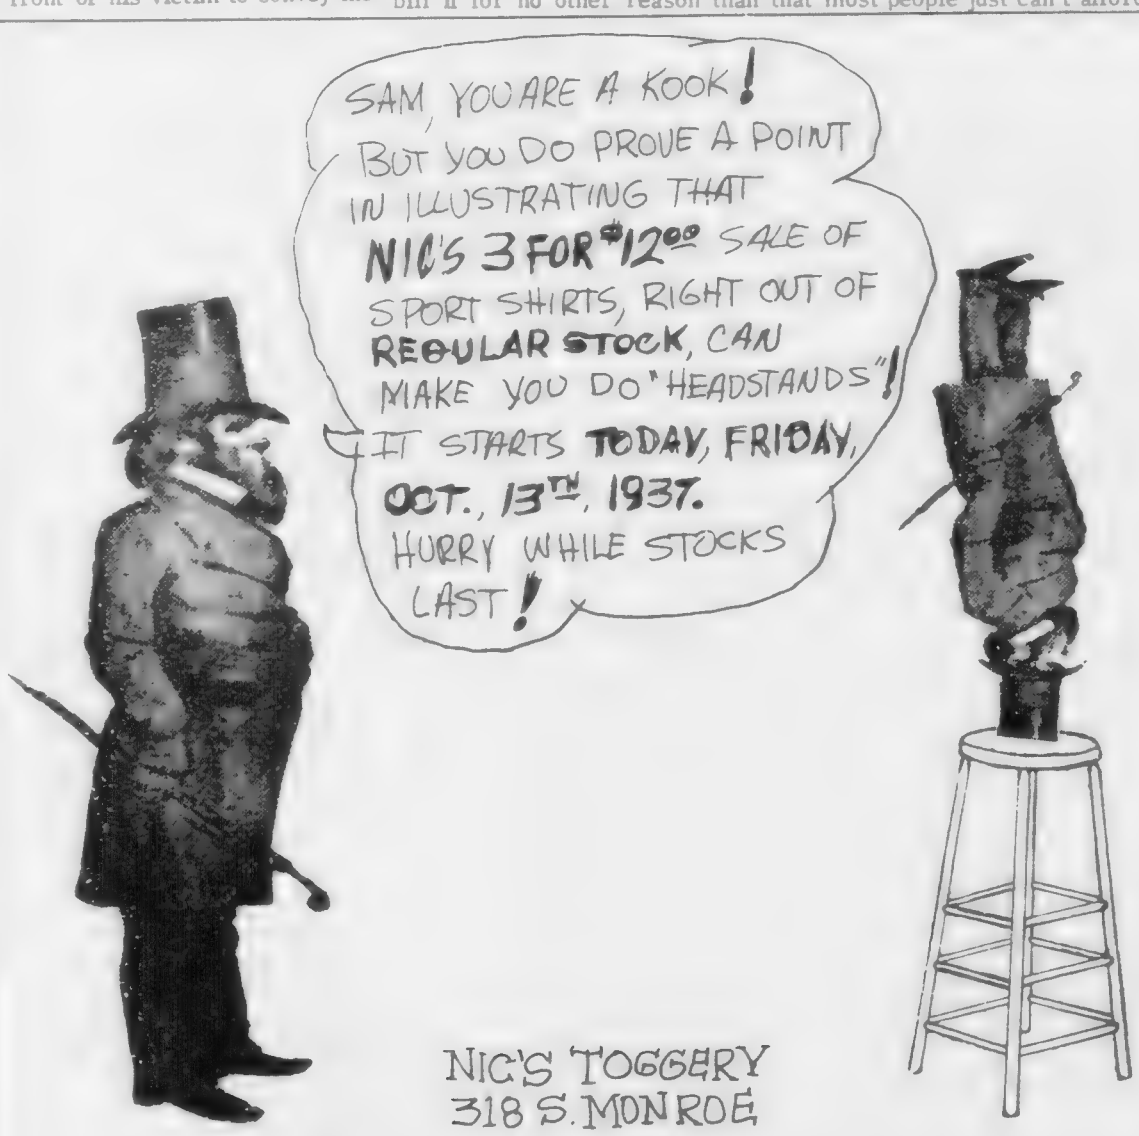
Registration Is 'Inferno'

Every trimester, instructors and students must go through the jading experience known as registration. Being a member of APO, I worked, along with my brothers, at registration about two weeks ago. We were those young men who wore the arm bands with the Greek letters Alpha Phi Omega, sold ball-point pens, gave out free information, and offered psychiatric help for only five cents. In other words, it was our pleasure to help the best we could the poor individuals who entered Dante's door with the harsh inscription above: "Abandon all hope ye who enter here."

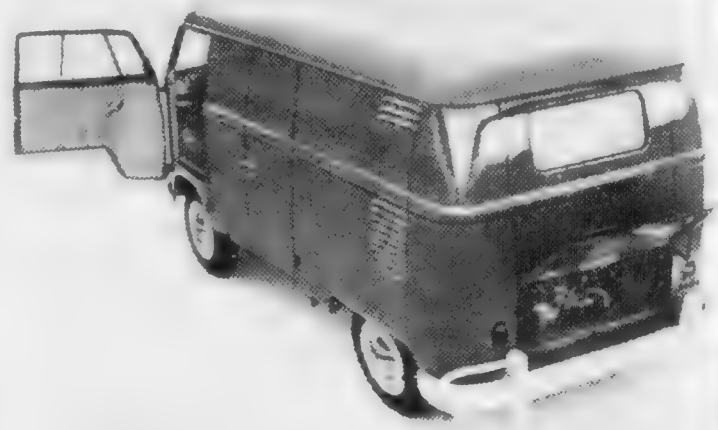
As I sat under the psychiatric sign, I would enjoy watching some students filling out their cards and others looking for social welfare in one corner and speech in another. The greatest joy (besides actually giving aid) was observing the many different facial expressions, which ranged from the unbelievable, seraphic joy of some to the enigmatic, disheartening pain of others, who, if they had not been kept from pulling on their hair, would have appeared to have undergone a metamorphosis.

Many times I felt like Virgil guiding the newcomers through the Inferno. May I relate some of these ex[p]iences?

For instance, I was sitti[n]g quietly once when a girl walk[e]d to me. I look up, and, beh[o]ld was Beatrice! She asked if [s]he have some psychiatric help. [I] completely by surprise, I [s]



She smiled and said, "W[ell] do you need to know?"



I took a pad and pencil in h[er] said: "Name, student number, number, classification, year birth, place of birth, sex, and phone number, please." Smiling slowly gave me each item. I lo[ok] up at her but quickly back a[t] pad. "A-a-a-a it appears," I still looking at the pad, "that have a bad case of registration-I think I would recommend someth relaxing like bowling." Lookin[g] her, I feebly smiled and point[ed] my shoulder.

"Thank you," she said slowl[y] her warm hand placed a nic[k]mine. She then gracefully wal[k] in the direction of bowling. turned to a brother for some chiatric treatments.

After my recuperation I was [n]to meet anyone or anything. T[he]

More room. More brrmmmmm!

This '63 Volkswagen is the most.

It has more legroom in the cab and more power in the engine than any other VW Truck in 13 years.

There's more room to stretch your legs because the interior headlight mouldings have been flattened out. And a new adjustable driver's seat has been added. Just put the seat in reverse and slide it back until your legs feel comfortable.

Alongside is a new oversize passenger seat, big enough for one well-upholstered rider. It's standard equipment.

Back in the engine room is our new air-cooled "1500" (displacement is 1,500 cc. or 91.10 cu. in.). It's 25% larger and it develops 25% more horsepower than any other VW engine ever.

That's why this '63 truck can outspeed, outclimb, outdo any other VW Truck on the road.

The engine—plus the larger brakes it requires—is optional at extra cost. If you don't take it, you get our "1200" engine as standard equipment. That's the power plant that we've never stopped improving on.

Either way you get an engine that averages 24 mpg, that can't freeze or boil, that's mounted in back for extra traction in snow, mud, sand.

What more could you want? Hmmmmmm?

Van de Graaff Accelerator Produces New Findings

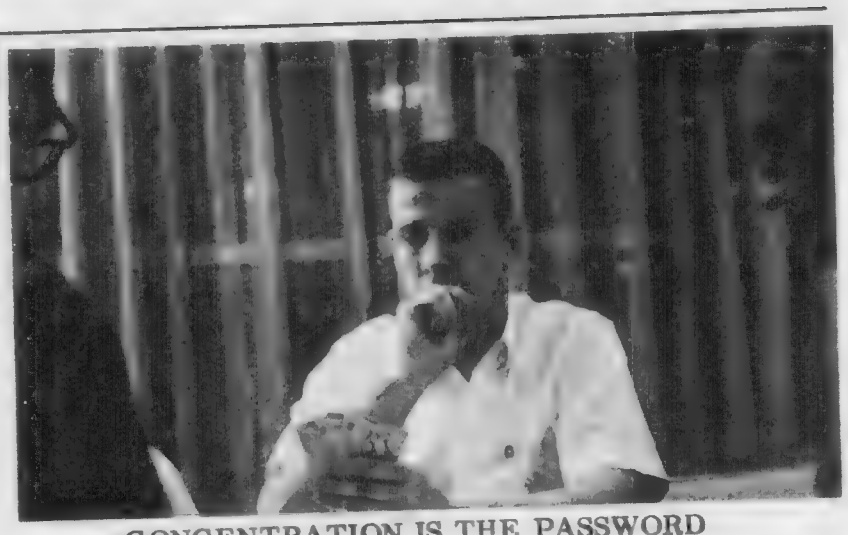
The first doctoral study in chemistry made with the Van de Graaff electron accelerator has produced findings in basic science which may have application in a new field of industrial chemistry.

This field, according to Dr. Russell H. Johnsen, professor of chemistry and director of the electron accelerator program, is the new one of process radiation, in which ionizing radiation is used to produce new materials or products.

He said doctoral student Wayne Sieck, who received his Ph. D. degree April 20, made one of many studies in basic chemistry which have a bearing on process chemistry. His study was on the effects or irradiating the methane molecule.

When the electron from the accelerator collides with a molecule at high speed, chemical bonds are ruptured and a multitude of highly energetic fragments are produced, Johnsen said. Sieck has constructed a kind of "family tree" relating the final products or irradiation to their ancestors produced in the initial collision.

Much development in industry is now under way to further process radiation, which utilizes machine radiation or isotopes in place of conventional energy sources in the creation of industrial materials, Johnsen said.



Price Named Chairman

Dr. Hartley Price, professor of physical education and gymnastic coach, has been appointed chairman of awards of the National Association of College Gymnastic Coaches.

There are six areas under the chairmanship: the Helms Hall of Fame for Gymnastics; Wheaties All-American; Coach of the Year; statistics and meet results; Honor Coach's Award; and research and professional liason.

The coach of 11 national champion gym teams, five of them at FSU, and 12 individual champions or Olympic team members, Dr. Price was elected to the Helms Hall of Fame himself in 1959.

He has served two professorships on a Fulbright grant. His first, in 1958 was in India, and the second in Colombia in 1961.

Institute Director Speaks For Government Series

The director of the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University of North Carolina, Dr. Frederico Gil, outlined the policies of the U.S. toward Latin America from the beginning of the 20th century to the present, in the seventh of FSU's Government Lecture Series.

Gil's topic was "Latin America: Social Revolution and U.S. Foreign Policy."

Gil stated that, at the turn of the century, the U.S. position was that of noninterference. The attitude was that Latin American countries should rely on private capital to carry on the economic burden and that government aid should be limited.

The U.S. failed to realize that private investment sources were inadequate in meeting the immediate needs for reform necessary for social and economical progress in the countries.

President Kennedy demonstrated a change of attitude in the Alliance for Progress. Gil also reported that in the Alliance, the U. S., in partnership with Latin America, is embarking in a bold stop which will show the world that a social revolution can take place without violence.

Library Adds Specialist

A science information retrieval specialist, Dr. Gerald Jahoda, has been added to the faculty of its Library School.

Dr. Jahoda, presently director of the Technical Information Center, Esso-Standard Oil, Linden, N. J. will assume his duties as professor of science information in the School of Library Science on July 1.

At FSU, he will direct research in training in science information, according to Dr. Louis Shores, dean of the Library School. This will include liason with Florida industry, with the science departments on the FSU campus, with the computer center and with other industrial organizations, Shores said.

Beginning with trimester III-B, Jahoda will teach a course in information retrieval systems and it is planned that he will develop other new courses needed to prepare science information specialists who will serve the space age in Florida.

The training is part of the program of the Library School for training science information specialists for technical and scientific information centers throughout the state.

Dr. Jahoda has conducted research on information retrieval systems, both computerized and manual. He has worked with the National Science Foundation on abstracting and indexing and during the past year he has taught a course in abstracting and indexing methods at Rutgers University School of Library Science.

Dr. Gerald Jahoda is FSU's newest Faculty Member.

FSU Hosts Music Camps

Some 1,000 junior and senior high school students are expected to attend the four Summer Music Camps which will be held this summer on campus, Dean Karl O. Kuersteiner of the School of Music announced today.

Current enrollment figures show an increase over last year, according to Dr. Gene Simons, associate director of the camps. The five-week music camp, to be held June 23 through July 27, is expected to reach as many at 400 students.

Sponsored by the FSU School of Music through Florida Institute of Continuing University Studies, the pre-college sessions attract students from Florida, Georgia and Alabama with several campers coming from such distant states as Michigan, Louisiana, Missouri, Arkansas, New Jersey, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Tennessee, North and South Carolina and New York.

The Youth Symphony Workshop, now in its third year, will be held July 28 through August 3. Alfredo Antonini, musical director of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the Tampa Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, will be guest conductor. Some 85 high school students are expected to attend.

The Marching Band Leadership Camp will be in its third year also this summer. Dr. Manley Whitcomb, professor and director of bands, is instructional coordinator for the camps. It will take place Aug. 4 through 9, with an expected enrollment of 80. This camp is for the purpose of training band di[rec]tors, drum majors, head majore[tt]es and row leaders for their [re]spective duties.

The Twirling Camp anticipates an enrollment of 450 girls from [ma]ny states, principally the Southe[as]t. There will be two sessions [of] Twirling Camp: one, July 28-[Aug.] 3, and two, Aug. 4-9.

The four camps, held annually on the FSU campus, have each [had] successive growth in the number of students attending each year, Simons said. Applications are still being accepted for Music Camp, Twirling Camps, and Marching Band Leadership Camp. The Youth Symphony Workshop participants are selected from nominations by conductors of youth and of community orchestras.

Seminar Offers Courses Abroad

The Scandinavian Seminar, a unique program providing American undergraduates and graduates with a year's living and learning experience in one of the Scandinavian countries, will enter its 15th year with the 1963-64 academic year.

Cost for tuition, room and board for the nine months, language materials and transportation from New York to Copenhagen, is $1700.

came--the poor girl. She was all wet, and her hair was hanging in her face. She must have missed Charon's ferry and had to swim the Acheron. She asked for psychiatric help. Although she looked as if she needed it, I replied: "I'm sorry but the doctor is not in at the moment."

She then asked me where social welfare was, and I pointed off into a corner. As she slipped me a quarter, I told her information was free. She replied: "A-a-a keep it; maybe you can buy me a soda sometime." As she walked away, I just sat there puzzled.

Then I saw Dido, Cleopatra, and Helen approaching. Three were just too much for me. I quickly removed myself from the booth and left it to brothers Aeneas, Antony, and Paris. They had had more experience than I. Unseen, I slipped out the back door. It was like waking from a dream. Oh, what a joy it was to see the light of Phoebus again!

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO FALCON

EVERYTHING!
AND YET...

Early this year we put a 164-hp V-8 in a new kind of Falcon called the Sprint, and entered the stiffest winter road test we could find . . . the 2,500-mile Monte Carlo Rallye. We didn't know what would happen . . . but happen it did.

First, no one dreamed all the Rallye cars would have to experience the worst winter in decades. Snow, below zero temperatures, and the most demanding terrain in Europe took their toll. Two thirds of the 296 cars that started, failed to reach Monaco.

A lot of experts told us that the Falcon V-8's, untried as they were, could not hope to finish the Rallye with the best of weather. But not only did two Falcon Sprints finish, they placed first and second in their class. But there were more surprises (for everyone) in store. Against all competition, regardless of class, the lead Sprint went on to take first in the final six performance legs.

We honestly didn't know the Falcon Sprint would do this well. But it showed us a Falcon with our new 164-hp V-8 is a car that can perform with the best of them. So a lot has happened to Falcon, and yet . . .

A six-cylinder Falcon has just finished the Mobil Economy Run and finished first in its class. It had to take a lot of punishment, too . . . 2,500 miles from Los Angeles to Detroit over mountains, deserts, and long stretches of superhighways. But the nickel-nursing ways of the all-time Economy Champ took all comers in its class.

So you see something has happened to the Falcon. It can be what you want it to be . . . a V-8 that travels in the same circle as Europe's performance kings . . . or a Six that can travel cross-country on a budget. There's something to put into your compact.

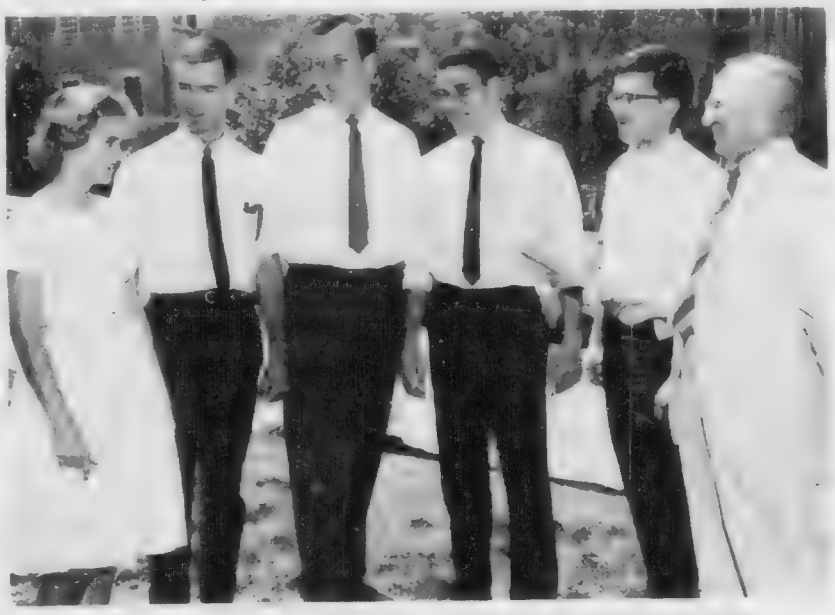
Science Engineering Students Study Under New Program

Enterprising students in the Engineering Sciences Dept. are receiving space age training and experience through a new Cooperative Educational Program.

The COOP Program, according to Dr. J. M. Plant, assistant professor of engineering science, "provides job experiences during a work period which greatly enrich the academic courses upon the student's return to the campus. In addition, this industrial experience helps the student in deciding his area of specialization upon graduation."

Among the southeastern agencies participating in the program with FSU are the National Aeronautics and Space Administration division in Huntsville, Ala., and at Cape Canaveral; Minneapolis-Honeywell in St. Petersburg; and the U. S. Navy Ordinance Unit in Key West. Several other companies in the southeast are expected soon to enter the program

The interest shown by these companies, said Plant, is due in part to the fact that, "from the standpoint of the employer, the program will produce a graduate who, upon completion of his degree, already will have two to two and a half years of industrial experience."



Currently, six students have completed 14 weeks of employment, and resumed their studies in engineering science during the third trimester, which began April 27, while eight others have closed their books to work during the next four months.

In order to allow a student to adjust his work-study schedule to best advantage, students are assigned in pairs to a specific industrial firm. While one student is working, the other is pursuing his academic work on the campus. At the end of a trimester, these swap places and the process of alternating study and work continues until graduation.

A student will return to the same employer each work cycle but is rotated through various phases of the industrial process, thus giving him a wide range of work experiences.

Not only is the student receiving training in skill and responsibility, but the financial rewards are such that a student may earn a good portion of his undergraduate college expenses. Salaries at present vary from $300 to $400 a month.

Following each trimester of employment, a COOP member submits a report of his activities during the 14 weeks. In addition, each student is rated on the job by his immediate supervisor in a similar manner to the rating given by the instructor on the campus. These reports are reviewed with the student by both the employer and the COOP Director.

One-Second Balk Rule Nixed By Commissioner

NEW YORK (AP)---Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick and the two major league presidents amended the balk rule by eliminating the one-second stop for a pitcher Tuesday.

National League umpires had called 96 balks in games through Monday, an all-time high. Only nine had been called in the American. The contrast had reached the ridiculous stage.

Aware that the All-Star game and the World Series would present supreme problems if the differences were not settled, Warren Giles of the National League and Joe Cronin of the American League answered the call of Frick to a summit conference.

In effect, the one-second stop is dead, at least for this season. Officially, the top brass agreed to eliminate the necessity of stopping for "at least one second."

The rules committee, headed by Charles Segar, secretary of baseball, does not plan to meet until December. As a result, the new interpretation will prevail at least until that time.

"The pitcher still must stop," said Frick after the meeting with Giles, Cronin and Segar. "The umpires definitely will continue to call balks if the pitchers don't come to a stop. This will apply to the All-Star game and the World Series.

National League umpires had been following the letter of the law and insisting on the strict one-second stop. American Leaguers had been advised by Cronin merely to enforce a stop. Although Giles advised his umpires to be more liberal in their interpretation a week ago, National League umpires have been calling as many as ever.

Asked if he thought the meeting would reduce the number of balks in his league, Giles said: "Not too much until the pitchers learn to stop. There still can be a difference of opinion as to what constitutes a stop.

"I don't like to see so many balks. But I can't tell the umpires not to call them if they see them."

Cronin said he did not expect to see any increase in the number of balks called in the American League. "We are advising our umpires to be on the alert, as usual," he said. "Our main concern all along has been to guard against the quick pitch."

Giles said the balk-watching resulted from a change in the balk rule to cover a move by Cincinnati's Joey Jay. Although the change of last winter had nothing to do with the one-second rule that had been in effect since 1950, it made the umpires balk-conscious.

"Walter Alston, Dodger manager, and two others came to me last year and said, 'If all the pitchers don't have to stop, I'm not going to make mine do it.' I told the umpires, 'Let's enforce the rule.' They all had plenty of warning in Spring training."

The rule books list 13 ways which a pitcher can be charged with a balk with a runner or runners on base. One reads: "If the pitcher delivers the ball from set position without coming to a stop of one full second."

Frick announced: "The balk rule is an essential part of baseball. Without the protection which this rule affords the batsman and the baserunner, the whole nature of the game would be changed.

Both major league presidents are agreed that the rule is necessary and must be enforced. Umpires have been and are instructed that if a pitcher indulges in a preliminary motion he must come to a set position and stop before starting his delivery of the ball to the batter.

Seminoles Not Affected

"I never approved of the excess balk calling and I am glad they seem to have things straightened out."

This was the reply of Coach Danny Litwhiler to a Flambeau query as to his reaction to the rules change on the part of the major leagues.

"Even though the major league rules apply to us, there has not been a rash of balks called in the college ranks. In fact we haven't had a balk called against us all season," he added.

Litwhiler did emphasize that he was definitely in favor of making the pitcher come to a stop before delivering the ball.

SPORTS

It has recently come to our attention that the publicity surrounding granting of athletic scholarships to young high school students has reminiscent of the commotion caused by the signing of a "bonus by a professional organization.

The articles make it appear that the only reason for the stud enrollment is to help FSU's athletic program. Usually no ment made of the scholastic end of the prospective applicant's college c

While it may be a fact of life that some schools give money to a s simply to have a good basketball or football team (a fact which w not ready to admit for FSU) it would prove to the benefit of the if someone could prevail on the writer of these articles to cut d this "Florida State outbid 20 other schools for John Doe's ser type of publicity.

* * * * * * * *

We are glad to see the controversial balk rule ammended by missioner Ford Frick and the League Presidents Warren Gile Joe Cronin.

The rule of coming to a complete stop for one second before deliv the pitched ball was being too rigidly enforced by the National umpires.

Baseball fans have long been confused enough by the balk rule, leagues were not following the rule in regard to the one-second and it was to the detriment of baseball everywhere that the N League umpires were abusing their perogative.

MARION IRISH RESIGNS

Series To Open With Isaac Stern

The Artist Series will begin its summer program with violinist Isaac Stern who will present two different programs on Monday and Tuesday nights, May 27-28.

The recitals will be at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Tickets are now on sale in Westcott and are priced at $3.50 each for the public.

The program on Monday night will include: Beethoven's "Sonata in A Minor, Op. 23"; "Sonata No. 3, Op. 25" by Enesco; Bach's "Chaconne"; "Romance, Op. 23" by Szymanowski and "Un Poco Triste" and "Burleske," both by Josef Suk.

On Tuesday night, selections on the program will include: "Sonata, Op. 12, No. 1," by Beethoven; "Sonata in D Major, Op. 94" by Serge Prokofieff; Bach's "Sonata No. 1 in G Minor for Solo Violin"; A Kreisler arrangement of "Rondo" by Mozart and "Divertimento" by Stravinsky.

An American-trained artist, Stern was brought to San Francisco when he was six months old from his family's native Russia. He began studying with teachers from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music at the age of ten.

In 1949 and 1951, Stern concertized in Latin America and Israel, playing 17 times each summer in Israel alone. For the past six seasons, he has made extensive European tours during which he gave more than 40 concerts in nine countries.

The summers of 1950, 1951 and 1952 he was one of the distinguished musicians invited to appear with Pablo Casals in the Festivals of Prades and Perpignan.

Norman Treigle, leading bass-baritone of the New York City Opera, will be the final presentation of the current Artist Series season Aug. 5.

With an operatic repertoire of more than 50 roles, he has been highly praised as the creator of the role of the Rev. Olin Blitch in the New York City Opera production of FSU faculty member Carlisle Floyd's opera, "Susannah."

He also created the role of Judge Townsend in the recent premiere of Floyd's "The Passion of Jonathan Wade" with great critical acclaim. Floyd, professor of music at FSU, will be accompanist for Treigle's Artist Series performance at FSU.

Atlanta Alumni Meet Tonight

The Greater Atlanta FSU Alumni Club will hold its annual business meeting tonight, with FSU director of Alumni Affairs T. A. Waits as speaker.

The meeting will be preceded by a Dutch treat dinner at 7 p.m. with the business meeting beginning at 8 p.m. at Davis Brothers Cafeteria, 820 West Peachtree Street. Waits will speak on "Our Alma Mater."

One of the items on the agenda will be the 1963 Greater FSU Fund, and the club's support of its objective--the Student Scholarship-Loan Program at FSU, according to Floyd D. Jordan, president of the Greater Atlanta FSU Alumni Club.

Construction Bids On Union Filed

Coble Construction Co. of Orlando offered the apparent low bid on construction of the University Union complex, scheduled for completion in Sept., 1964, submitting a bid of $1,982,300.

The office of the Board of Control's architect estimated construction would begin around June 1 on the new two million dollar, four building complex which will house an auditorium, a recreation center, a food center and a student activities building. All the buildings with the exception of the auditorium, will be connected with covered walks.

Dr. Reid H. Montgomery, director of the University Union, said that it will function as a "community center for the campus, serving students, faculty, staff, alumni and guests."

It is planned that considerable emphasis will be given to student committee participation in both program planning and administration of the Union, Montgomery said.

Also it is planned according to Dr. Montgomery that the Union serve as a hospitality center for the college, providing a facility for parents and alumni and for adult conferences sponsored by the university.

The union auditorium will seat 400 persons. There will be 12 bowling lanes and 10 billiards tables in the recreation center. The food center will house a cafeteria with seating capacity for 600 and a snack bar.

On the second floor there will be three large and three small dining-meeting rooms.

These three large dining areas, when opened together for a banquet, will accommodate over 1,000 guests. The president's dining room will also be located there.

A student store, a barber shop, a beauty shop, and an information-ticket office will be housed on the first floor of the student activities building.

The second floor will have a lounge, browsing library, music listening rooms, meeting rooms, and administration offices. Student government and student publications offices, honor court and student senate will be on the third floor.

The present student center will be re-designed to house an enlarged post office and bookstore.

Scholarships Available

The Florida State Board of Optometry is accepting applications for four-year state-supported scholarships that pay $1,000 each year.

Applicants must have been citizens of Florida for not less than five years and have attended an accredited college or university for two or more years and should have a minimum of 60 semester hours in subjects meeting entrance requirements of a college of optometry. Mathematics and the basic sciences are of prime importance.

Interested applicants should apply to Dr. Albert H. Rodriguez, Secretary-Treasurer, Florida State Board of Optometry, 202 North Howard Avenue, Tampa 6, Florida. The scholarships will be awarded in July.

Science Editor Speaks Tonight

"Is There Intelligent Life Beyond the Earth?" will be the subject of a lecture tonight, by Walter Sullivan, science news editor of the New York Times.

The University Lecture Series address will be at 8:30 in Opperman Auditorium. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Significant of Sullivan's writing style is his ability to explain technical advancements in scientific fields in the layman's language. This characteristic has made him popular as a lecturer.

His coverage of the International Geophysical Year resulted in a book, "Assault On the Unknown," published in 1961 by McGraw-Hill. He is also the author of "Quest for a Continent," the story of the four final American expeditions to the Antarctic, and "White Land of Adventure," a junior book. He received the George Polk Memorial Award in journalism for his coverage of IGY.

Sullivan is scheduled to arrive in Tallahassee at 4:45 p.m. today, according to Dr. Gib DeBusk, director of the lecture series.

Senate Accepts New Board Plan

The Board of Regents Plan presented by Senator Jack Mathews last Friday met uncontested Senate approval.

The board would provide for an increase of two members. The constitutional amendment would also extend the present four-year terms to a staggered nine-year term.

The bill, presented by Jack Mathews of Jacksonville, met no opposition and was sent to the House. This Board of Regents would replace the former Board of Control.

Senator Mathews explained that this bill would keep the budget control with the Legislature and remove from the Budget Commission any rights to make changes of legislative appropriations.

Bus Schedule

For those students who wish to save on shoe leather rather than take advantage of Tallahassee's sunny weather on their way to classes, FSU provides on-campus bus transportation.

The University bus makes a complete circuit of the campus every forty minutes, Monday through Friday, and departs from Bryan Hall ten minutes before each class.

The campus bus leaves Kellum Hall twenty minutes before each class to return to the east side of the campus, Monday through Friday, also.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

Nine Old Men

Who will be controlling the policies and regulations of Florida's institutions of higher education if the bill to establish a Board of Regents is passed by the Legislature?

The bill, which already has gotten the approval of the Senate, and was treated favorably by the House committee, would create the Board of Regents of nine members with staggered nine-year terms, to replace the present seven-member Board of Control.

The change in name is fine. "Control" is a strong term--and a dangerous one--to use in connection with academic institutions, and the word itself conjures up black images.

But nine-year terms? Come now--a lot of things can happen in nine years; not even the U. S. president can serve that long.

It is one thing to favor a continuous policy toward education, out of the reach of political maneuverers, but it is quite another to turn the job of setting university policies into the hands of nine men who are not elected, but appointed.

Men prominent enough to be chosen for this Board have been around a while; they are no longer young. Before their terms have ended, they may be more than willing to retire from their responsibilities to the state. And many capable men would hesitate to commit nine years of their lives to such a time-consuming position.

Why not shorten the term to, say, staggered six-year terms, and trust to Florida's governors to be more concerned with education than with politics in filling the Board of Regents?

Six years is enough time to learn all about the university system--and to put this knowledge to use. At the same time, members selected for their alert and intelligent approach to the problems of higher education will not finish their terms as doddering old men.

The nine-year terms probably will result in resignations for reasons such as poor health and lack of time. If this happens, the purpose in lengthening terms to provide continuity of goal will be defeated.

The Legislature probably will find that a more reasonable time limit will bring more capable men and, in the long run, better results.

Are These 'States' Rights' ?

Many of the relatively recent events taking place in this country provide the lay-observer with some interesting opportunities for reflection. This column will deal with some of the observations and implications made and inferred by this layman concerning a few current developments in Mississippi and Alabama.

The beginning of the most recently publicized wave of anti-segregation activity is considered by many to be the application, registration, and attendance at Ole Miss by one James Meredith, Negro.

So what happens? A popular arch-segregationist who happens to be governor charges in and temporarily assumes the duties of university registrar--which are to keep this man from attending this state university on the basis of the color of his skin. Since then Ole Miss has been "integrated," (Hah!), the now world-famous governor finds himself facing a Federal suit, and U. S. taxpayers find themselves some $5 million poorer. It would seem reasonable to me that Negro majorities would have the right to elect Negro public officials. It did not seem so to the local white populace--particularly to those with usable power (political, economic, or both).

In Greenwood, Mississippi, there recently was a voter-registration drive put on by the county's Negro population. Those who are holding the Negro down in this situation do so because (they say) this "right" is among their "states' rights." That is, the majority rules--unless it is black.

The issues of most current interest center in Alabama--particularly around Birmingham. A rash of "freedom marches" has seen a rash of atrocities, including the rifle-ambush of a lone "freedom marcher" on an Alabama highway. This latter incident seems to [illegible] triggered the events which are occurring.

An integrated group of "freedom marchers," taking as its purpose to complete the march of the dead man, successfully marched through the southern strongholds of Tennessee and Georgia--only to be dragged into waiting squad cars when they crossed the Alabama line. State authorities were quoted as saying something like, ". . .a segregated group would be most welcome here as tourists, but an integrated group is only here to cause trouble."

The current Birmingham movement then exploded. The general theme of the movement is "[illegible] segregation," but it seems to center around the issues of equal voting rights, equal educational opportunities for Negroes, and the abolition of economic discrimination and "selective" law enforcement.

I believe--as the Reverend Martin Luther King states--that the movement is a non-violent one. Admittedly, violence is occuring; and it will probably get worse. Roadblocks are put up and the hero Birmingham Police under the direction of Eugene (Bull) Connor dash to the scene.

A good sized crowd of white onlookers comes to "watch the niggers." The Negroes are "parading without a permit," so Connor does what any red-blooded American police chief would do: he orders fire hoses packing 50-100 pounds of pressure turned on the demonstrators. The demonstration begins to break up; so, to ensure the "preservation of law and order," Connor instructs the men to release police dogs upon the fleeing crowd. (When upon he remarks to his now sizeable white gallery, "Look at those niggers run!) They run; some are bitten; some 700 are rounded up and thrown into jail.

The demonstrations are getting worse. The jails are filled beyond capacity. Some Negroes are fighting back despite warnings from their fellows. To be sure, "big government" will step in. To be sure we shall be subjected to more "states' rights" talk.

Question: Are these defenses of the status quo among the "states' rights" certain "conservatives" demand that our "sovereign states" must tenaciously hold? It seems [illegible]

Let's Welcome Foreign Students

How many foreign students do you know? This one question is loaded with potential that very few students at FSU realize is there. Did you know that there are approximately 64,000 foreign students from 150 different countries enrolled at 1,000 colleges and universities in the United States?

Why are they here? Their primary purpose is to further their education, but at the same time they are indirectly linked with the ideological struggle between East and West. When the numerous ramifications of the foreign student program are considered, it is obvious that its potential effect on the future foreign policy of the U. S. could be quite significant.

For many years there have been certain organizations and foundations that do nothing but see to it that these visitors are successfully launched on their academic endeavors. However, once established upon their respective campuses it is up to the students to make sure that they feel at ease and that they are part of the student body. It is indeed unfortunate when the foreign students end up grouped together and somewhat isolated from the rest of the student body. It is here that misconceptions begin to be formed.

Here at FSU foreign students are accepted to a much higher degree than at some other universities in this region, but there is room for improvement. Maybe the racial prejudice that most of the student body has been taught and brought up in has something to do with the problem. There are many other factors, but they are rather small when judged against the importance of student attitude.

Exactly what can be done to improve the situation? Perhaps the easiest thing would be to let natural curiosity lead the way. Americans are inquisitive by nature, and a few spontaneous questions followed by an equal number of frank answers by the foreign student will certainly lead to an interesting and educational relationship. Where else do you have such a splendid chance to make friends with people who are scattered over the entire world?

The sad truth is that many foreign students never have a chance to really get to know Americans and their way of life. All too often they are treated with an air of indifference, obsequitiousness, or downright (racial) discrimination. It seems that there is a definite possiblity that if more interest and attention were paid to the foreign students who have come to the U. S. there might not be such a tremendous need for the Peace Corps and foreign aid in the future. Right here in our own backyard is a potential cornucopia of goodwill. The inverse is also quite possible.

The FSU student owes it to his country and to himself to get to know as many foreign students as possible and make them feel at home. Don't take the path of least resistance and ignore them. Explain our social customs, point out the good and bad aspects of our society, and invite them to become an integral part of your daily life. Some of these studefits have traveled halfway around the world to study at FSU. The least FSU can do is take one step forward and say "hello."

Just one step forward on the part of this student body could possibly change the destiny of millions of Africans, Asians, or South Americans. We can't afford not to take that step.

Broadway Play To Be Subject Of Book Review

current Broadway play in which former drama student at FSU has a role, "A Man For All Seasons," by Robert Bolt, will be the subject of this week's book review tomorrow.

Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag, director of University Theatre, will be the reviewer of the play which is about Sir Thomas More during the time of Henry VIII. Faye Dunaway, former FSU student, has a role in the play which opened on Broadway in 1961.

The book review will be at 5 p.m. in the Student Lounge of Longmire. The speaker will be introduced by Richard Fallon of the FSU Speech Department.

Dorlag, who has been a member of the Speech Dept. faculty since 1958, holds his Ph. D. degree from the University of Wisconsin. He has been guest director of the Wisconsin Players and for seven years was director of Theatre at Southeast Missouri State College.

Seven Seas University To Give Scholarships

Ten scholarships of $1,000 each will be awarded to undergraduate students who meet the qualifications of the University of the Seven Seas.

These grants are designed for students whose major area of study involves a significant emphasis in overseas relations. This emphasis may be in Political Science, Economics, Religion, Philosophy, Literature, the Arts, or other areas which lend themselves to international study.

The University of the Seven Seas, a new institution of higher education, will conduct its classes aboard the "M. S. Seven Seas" of the Europe-Canada Line, for which Holland-America Line is general passenger agent, beginning October 22 when the ship put to sea from New York on the first semester of its academic operation.

Emphasis is placed on study of the following areas as the ship moves from country to country around the world: the Mediterranean, Southeast Asia, and Latin America. Classes will be held on regular schedules under the direction of a faculty of international experts drawn from many colleges and universities in the United States and overseas.

In port, field trips are scheduled to enable students to inspect institutions and facilities in their major academic fields as well at to see the points of significant interest.

Classes for the second semester will begin in February, 1964.

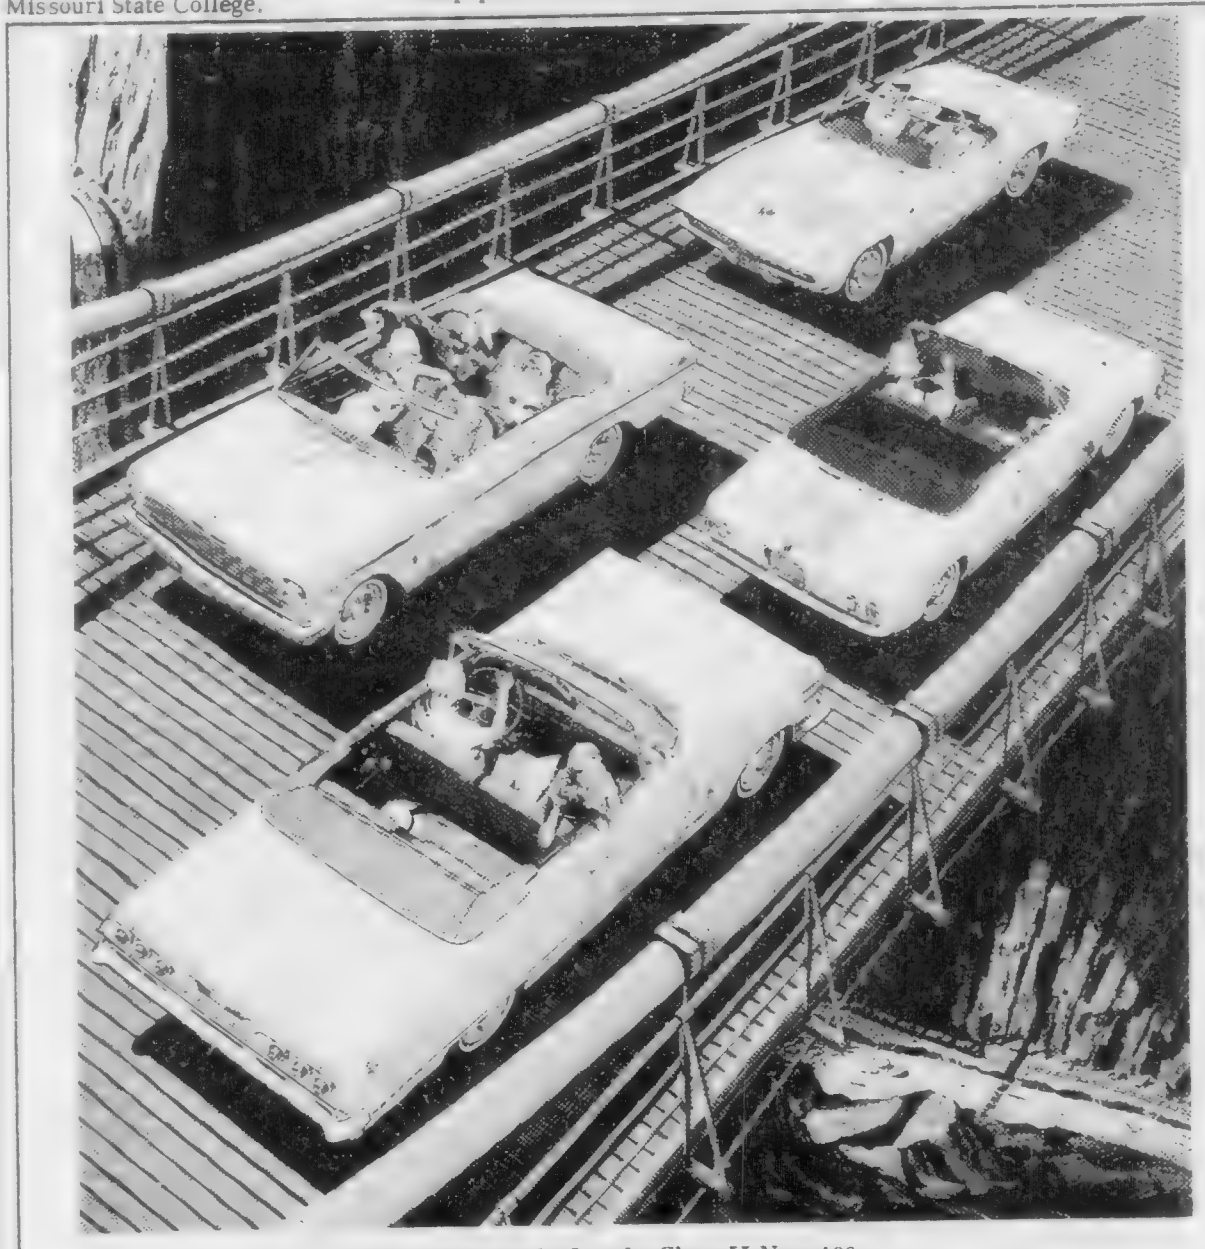
It is also necessary for me to ... words about Marlboro Cigarettes because they pay ... this column, and they are inclined to pout if I ignore their product. In truth, it is no chore for me to sing the ... Marlboro Cigarettes, for I am one who fairly swoons with delight when I come upon a cigarette which gives you the ... taste of good tobaccos plus the pure white Selectrate ... Marlboro is the only smoke I have found that fulfills ... requirements. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The ... you without stint or diminution. You, even as I, ... these statements to be happily true when once you light a Marlboro. Marlboros come to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box, and are made only by the makers of Marlboro.

But I digress. Let us return to bull fighting. Bulls are by nature bellicose creatures who will keep fighting till the cows ... Then they like to put on pipe and slippers and ... the "Farm and Home Hour." However, the Spaniards will not allow the bulls any surcease. They keep attacking the bull and making veronicas—a corn meal pancake filled with ... meat. Bulls, being vegetarians, reject the veronicas ... believe you me, the fur starts to fly!



To be perfectly honest, many Spaniards have grown weary of the incessant struggle and have left their homeland. Columbus, for example, took off in three little ships—the Patti, the Maxene, and the Laverne—and discovered Ohio. Magellan later discovered Columbus. Balboa also sailed to the New World, but he was silent on a peak in Darien, so it is difficult to know what he discovered.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about Spain. So now, as the setting sun casts its rosy fingers over El Greco, let us take our reluctant leave of Spain—or Perfidious Albion, as it is jocularly called. Aloha, Spain or Perfidious Albion, aloha!

Summer's coming, get going!

If this isn't a great time to get yourself a new Chevrolet—well, we just don't know when is. Why, you'd almost have to be anti-summer not to let one of these four convertibles get to you. Or any of Chevrolet's sedans, wagons, sport coupes and sport sedans, for that matter.

And there are a lot of other buy-now reasons besides the season. Like the care-free feeling you get on a long vacation trip in a brand-new car. And it's a smart time to trade, what with your Chevrolet dealer all stocked up for a busy summer. Chances are, he has just the model and color you want—be it Chevrolet, Chevy II, Corvair or Corvette—ready to go right now.

So maybe now you're all wound up? Then spring into summer at your Chevrolet dealer's.

'Don Pasquale', Opera Or No ?

By RICHARD PEINE
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Don Pasquale" is not opera in the sense that most people ascribe to opera--namely, difficult to understand, dull, dry, sung in a foreign language and just a little bit weird for all but "the old aristocrats."

"Don Pasquale" is opera in the sense that its text is set to music and is sung to orchestral accompaniment. Chances are anyone who enjoys Broadway musicals and comedies will love this comic opera.

Tickets to this English version of "Don Pasquale" are on sale now at Westcott Ticket Office at $1 for students and $2 for non-students. Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. this Friday and Saturday in Westcott Auditorium.

The plot of "Don Pasquale" hinges on two eternally popular themes of the Italian comic theatre, that of the anxiety of the relatives of a rich man as to the dispositions he may have made in his will, and that of an elderly bachelor who suddenly decides to plunge into matrimony, and is given reason to regret it later.

Old Pasquale is upset over his nephew Ernesto's desire to marry Norina, an attractive young widow, and his refusal to marry as his uncle wished. Subsequently, Pasquale plans to punish Ernesto by getting married himself and excluding his nephew from his inheritance.

The news is particularly unwelcome to Ernesto since he will have to give up his one true love. But Pasquale's close friend Doctor Malatesta decides that he can teach his friend a lesson and get the couple together at the same time.

Together he and Norina hatch out a plot by which Norina is passed off on Pasquale as the very wife for a man like him,(Pasquale) having never met Norina.

A mock marriage ceremony follows, which is almost broken up when the pining Ernesto accidentally walks in.

Norina, however, quickly turns the tables by displaying a shrewish temper and a passion for domestic extravagance that frightens the old gentleman out of his wits. Pasquale immediately regrets his marriage, but he is bound unless he can catch his "delightful" wife up to some shennanagins.

Eventually he finds himself in a position to be free providing he allows Ernesto to marry as he chooses. Pasquale is so pleased that he is easily persuaded into letting events come to their natural consequence.

Secretary Gives Statement On Role Of Government

By BOB RACKLEFF
Flambeau Staff Writer

Because of apathy many students show toward student government on the FSU campus, secretary of state John E. Jones has released a statement of the roles and benefits of this organization.

Much of this apathy, stated Jones, is due to the lack of information concerning the aims of student government. Much of the information gathered was derived from the recent conference on the role of student government held by the Southern Universities' Student Government Association at LSU.

The primary goal of student government is educational, giving students the opportunity to work with others toward a common goal. Also, SG leads all organizations to a common benefit for the university at large.

The welfare of the student body is the primary function of student government. Within this function, individual benefits are in a secondary position.

In the context of the main functions of the university--the acquisition and application of knowledge--the student government association provides the opportunity for the application of acquired knowledge.

Student government plays an effective role on the university campus for several reasons, Jones said. It is the "most effective means of communications between students; it plays an effective role in the determination of administrative policy; and it is the best co-ordinator between various student organizations and agencies," he added.

The role of student government has many different aspects, each of which relate to different situations. Jones added, however, that the first responsibility is to determine this role, since the appropriate role of student government changes often with time.

Jones concluded his statement by saying that the student government organization functions where there is cooperation toward a common goal and everyone does his part.

New Publication Issued By FSU

The first issue of "The Articulator," a new publication whose purpose is to provide up-to-date information for Florida's high schools concerning various phases of the university such as the Honors Program, trimester system, admissions, financial aid and anything else about which a high school senior might be interested was recently published at FSU.

The magazine, whose editor is Dr. Harold Massey, Director of Counseling, is primarily for high school principals and guidance counselors. It is published quarterly and consists of several articles written by various FSU faculty members.

The May issue contains several pertinent articles on the procedures necessary to help needy, talented high school students attend college, the dates for summer pre-orientation sessions, the Honors Program and its merits, and a Question and Answer article on admission problems.

An especially provocative article on FSU freshmen pointed out that "sex does not play a substantial role in University academic achievement."

The Counseling Center in 302 Westcott in this way serves as a liaison between the colleges and high schools and, as Dr. Massey commented, "We hope to solve the continuing problem of informing prospective students about the university as there are so many new things happening.

Why does the Volkswagen have 4 forward speeds?

The VW has 4 forward speeds because 3 wouldn't be enough and 5 would be one too many.

The 4 forward speeds let you get the most out of the engine without straining it.

And without swallowing up a lot of gas.

1st gear gets you off to a running start.

And 4th gear is actually overdrive; it lets the engine relax (and live longer) when you're on the highway.

Just to make it easy, all 4 gears are synchromesh. You can shift up, down and sideways without crunching.

But maybe more than anything else, shifting helps relieve the boredom.

As one VW owner said, "You feel you have something to do with driving again."

Shifting gears may even turn into a new national sport.

Lots of people are paying fancy prices for 4-speed stick shifts, just to get in on the fun.

On the VW, one of the world's smoothest transmissions is standard equipment.

So even if you don't fall in love with the idea at first, at least you're not paying extra for the privilege.

Seminoles Resume Action Against Georgian

Florida State's baseball team moves into the final leg of its season this week with five games against three Georgia teams.

The Seminoles entertain Georgia Southern today at the FSU home field (game time 3:30 p.m.). Shortstop Bill Griffin (.371) and second baseman Jackie Hammond (.348) are the two top hitters for Georgia Southern. Pierce Blanchard and David Beel are the leading pitchers with 7-2 and 3-2 marks respectively.

Centerfielder Mike Augustine is currently leading the Seminole batters with a .455 average. Augustine so far has rapped 46 hits in 101 times at bat.

MIKE AUGUSTINE

Al Beccaccio and Allen Thomas head the FSU pitching staff. Working 70 innings, Beccaccio has compiled a 1.16 earned run average and a 7-1 won-lost record. Thomas has pitched 64 2/3 innings, winning seven and losing two with an earned run mark of 2.92.

The last encounter between Florida State and Georgia Southern resulted in a 10-8 Seminole victory. This does not include yesterday's game, the results of which were not available at presstime.

After today's game, Coach Danny Litwhiler's squad will travel to Atlanta for a Thursday meeting with the Georgia Tech nine.

Tech, although sporting a poor 7-17 record, is, according to Litwhiler, "a respectable team and should not be regarded lightly."

The Seminoles will then move to Athens for two games against the University of Georgia, Friday and Saturday.

Georgia to date has a 14-10 mark, good enough for third place in the Southeastern Conference's eastern division.

"At this point in the season, Georgia probably has one of the top teams in the country," said Litwhiler. "They are definitely one of the best."

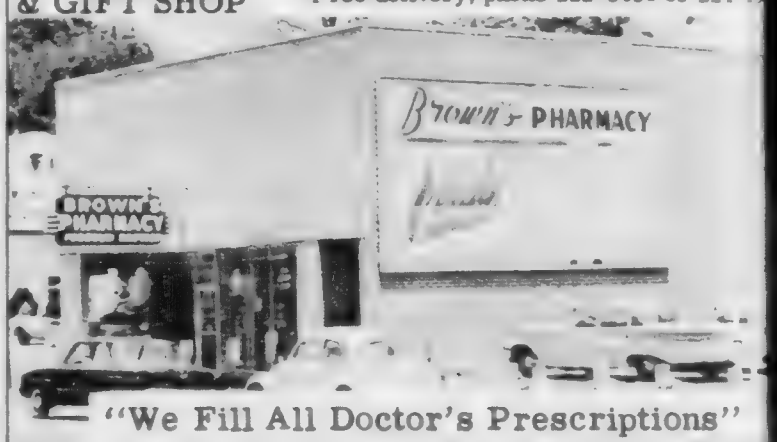
A&M Takes SIAC Title



Bob Harris took firsts in the 100-yard dash, the 220-yard run, and was a member of two winning relay teams as the Florida A & M Rattlers easily swept the annual SIAC championships Saturday in Atlanta.

Florida A & M also gained wins in the 880-yard run with Cecil Austin tying a Morehouse runner at 1:58.0 Al Austin bettered the old record in the javelin throw by eight feet with a throw of 202 feet, 10 inches.

The Rattler 440-yard relay team won in 43 seconds while the mile relay took a first with a time of 3:22.5. Frank Murry scored Florida A & M's final win with a victory in the mile run.

Harris was awarded the Cleze Abbot Award for the meet's most outstanding participant. He also received the Pepsi Cola Award for the top individual point maker.

FSU Chooses Academic Team

Senior Bruce Darsey has been named captain of the Florida State University first athletic-scholarship football team for 1962.

Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha also announced the appointment of Jeff Savage to the position of full-time faculty advisor to athletes.

The athletic-scholarship team included the top 22 scholastic average football players. The first team composed of five seniors, three juniors, two sophomores, and one freshman, had 3.0 or better averages.

"We think this is something new," said Savage. "We tell boys education is something of value for them in the future. Now this is something tangible, something for them to work for now. We think it is an incentive."

Each player will receive an award similar to the trophy that will go in the FSU trophy case. A player named captain five times will retire his trophy.

Savage formerly coached football at Ashe Centre High School in Ashe, North Carolina. He has been on the Florida State coaching staff for three years.

He will supervise tutors for athletics, study sessions, advise, serve as liaison man between academic personnel and athletes, and keep parents informed on their son's work.

IT'S AS EASY AS PADDING

..says John Sharp (Col. Blimp) to Joe Napoli (Ernesto) to prepare for Don Pasquale production tonight.

'Pasquale' To Open Tonight

By PAT FREEMAN
News Editor

The comic opera "Don Pasquale" will open in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 tonight, with songs of humor in abundance for students who normally associate opera with "The Broken Light" and "Water These Roots" series which are apparently so popular among TV-radio watchers during weekday afternoons.

"Don Pasquale," although far from being a soap opera, offers a new experience to students who have never before attended a student production of this kind, and promises an entertaining evening to the rare veteran opera-goers on campus.

Pasquale attempts to thwart his nephew's earnest wishes to marry a beautiful young widow, who is anything but the type of wife Pasquale would choose for his nephew Ernesto. This information is hardly appreciated by Ernesto, who is really in love with the widow.

The story mounts to a traditional climax when lover and beloved find Pasquale is marrying the widow, or so it seems. Pasquale, having married, soon discovers his bride to be less of a bargain and more of a shrewsome haggler than he had thought it possible for a woman to be.

The Opera Guild has kept over 100 persons actively engaged in preparing for the performances tonight and tomorrow night, although only four major roles appear in the show.

John Sharp will sing the title role Don Pasquale; Ernesto, Pasquale's nephew, will be sung by Joe Napoli; Barbara Collins will have the role of the leading lady; Dr. Malatesta will be Douglas Therrell, who involves the other characters in a madcap plot as Pasquale's friendly physician.

Tickets are selling at $1 for all students, and $2 for the public.

Student Government To Take Over Bank

Student Government will assume the operation of the Student Bank when the service is moved from the second floor of Westcott to the Day Students Lounge in Longmire.

Executive Assistant to the Student Body President, Frank Milwee released a statement today announcing that in the early part of June the student bank will be transferred from the University Comptroller's office to Longmire until the new Student Union complex is completed, where it will be operated under the direction of Student Government.

Milwee reported that "in late April, the University Administration was forced by the urgent need of additional space in Westcott to plan the discontinuation of the depository service with the end of this fiscal year, June 30, 1963.

"Student Government officers, being fully in sympathy with the reasoning behind the administration's decision, immediately began investigating the possibility of continuing to offer the service to students under the direction of SG."

In addition to the continuation of old services, several new features will be offered by the Student Government Depository. Plans are being made to remain open longer hours and to keep the bank open on Saturday until noon.

Officers of SG wish to operate the bank as similar to professional banking systems as possible, and will provide safety deposit boxes and a cashier's checking service for students.

To aid in defraying the costs of continuing and expanding the operations of the students' bank, a nominal service fee will be charged.

Milwee stated that although Student Government doesn't anticipate breaking even on the operation for a number of years, "SG considers the service to the students will make the expenditure more than worthwhile."

Professional personnel will be employed, and the bank will be supervised by the director of student activities.

According to Milwee, present thinking indicated that policy will be determined by a Board of Directors composed of students and faculty similar to the present Board of Publications.

"Since it is necessary to charge a fee, the student patron will be a customer and the banking atmosphere will be as professional as possible," Milwee added.

Concluding his statement, Milwee stressed that the life of the service depends on students using the services provided by the University for their benefit.

emporary Buildings ind New Homes

By DICK SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. John E. Champion, Vice-President for Administration, said ednesday that the wood buildings om Dale Mabry Heights, now being ed on various parts of the campus, re moved to make way for the nstruction of new dorms.

he Vice-President emphasized at the buildings are temporary and ll be removed as soon as permanent structures are available. tudents formerly living in these tructures were not "displaced," ampion stated, because "the uses had to be removed anyway." he university has assisted many these students in finding new resences.

he reason these houses are now campus is due to the urgent need space, the Vice-President exained. There are now six buildgs situated about the FSU campus. Both the Building Committee and resident Blackwell are quite conrned that the beauty of FSU should be impaired," Champion said, nd they have gone to great pains see that these buildings are as onspicuous as possible."

The buildings serve varied educational purposes. The Biology Dept. uses one to store optic cores, the Oceanographic Institute also uses them, as does the Language Institute.

Last trimester one of the buildings was employed as a classroom for visiting Brazilian students.

During the summer, eight more temporary houses will be placed on the campus on sites where they will least reduce the attractiveness of FSU.

No Campus Movie

There will be no campus movies shown tonight or tomorrow night due to the "Don Pasquale" opera being performed in Westcott. Friday and Saturday of next week "No Time for Sergeants," starring Andy Griffith and Nick Adams will be shown.

Philosophy Club To Meet Today

A future faculty member, Dr. Dwight Van de Vate, will be the guest speaker this afternoon at 4:15 in the Library Lecture Hall at the Philosophy Club's meeting.

Van de Vate, who will become an assistant professor of philosophy at FSU in the Fall, will speak on "Is Existence A Predicate?"

He has been teaching in the Philosophy Dept. at the University of Mississippi since 1955, and has been chairman of the department for the past year.

Van de Vate received his doctor's degree from Yale University, and is a specialist in Post-Kantian Idealism.

Officers for the next year will be elected during the meeting, and plans for the establishment of a Philosophy Honorary on campus will be discussed.

FSU's Fallon Assembles Troupe

Richard Fallon of FSU has assembled an acting company from over a dozen states for 57 performances of five plays in the Asolo Theatre Comedy Festival at Sarasota, July 12-Aug. 24.

Fallon, director of the troupe, announced that members will meet June 9 for a month of rehearsals at FSU, and then will move to the 18th century Italian opera house at the Ringling Museum of Art, which is jointly sponsoring the Festival with FSU.

Plays to be produced are Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew;" Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac;" Sheridan's "The Rivals;" Moliere's "School for Wives;" and Goldoni's "The Mistress of the Inn."

Several members of the troupe in addition to the professional and highly experienced players to be featured will be students and faculty members of FSU.

Louise Beddingfield, a sophomore, is a newcomer to the group. Her roles at FSU include Mrs. Malloy in "The Matchmaker," and Maw Allen in "Dark of the Moon."

John Bracewell received his bachelor of music education degree at FSU, and is presently a candidate for a master's degree in music. He recently won the Les Jongleurs' technical theatre award and will be soundmaster of the company.

Sammy Kilman, a graduate student, received the Les Jongleurs' awards for best actor and outstanding performance, and will be returning to Asolo.

Dr. William H. Shaw of FSU's University Theatre, and his wife Marjorie, will be working as Festival costumer and seamstress, respectively.

Working on a doctorate, Al Smelko played the role of Josef Munda in the world premiere of Valency's "The Long Night" at FSU.

Watch Haiti

Hispaniola, the West Indies island shared by Haiti and the Dominican Republic, is being torn apart.

For all purposes, it might as well have been broken and separated into two islands--indeed, things would be a whole lot easier if it were. For Hispaniola, ideologically, is fast approaching the status of Berlin.

Haiti in its present turmoil is fertile ground for further encroachment in the Western Hemisphere by the Communists, and reports already have filtered through of African Communists being secretly brought into the backward island nation. Haitian President Francois Duvalier, whose constitutional term of office ended last Wednesday, has shown his contempt for democracy by staging (with the aid of the Tonton Macoute, the gestapo he created) an election to extend his term of office for six more years. And now he sits in his palace-fortress in Port au Prince, surrounded by his terrorist supporters, and thumbing his nose at the free world.

One can see in the voodoo-practicing Duvalier a budding Castro, who sits in his island stronghold and throws mud at the United States for an "attempt to create panic" in ordering all Americans to leave Haiti. While the U. S. sits on its hands, the Soviets join "Papa Doc" in making political propaganda of the U. S. stand.

Any movement by this nation to get rid of Duvalier could be construed--and accurately--as an overt act of aggression against the weaker country. Offensive action, then, is definitely out of the question, both for the consequences it would bring and because it would betray some of America's cherished principles.

Nor is the Dominican Republic the real answer. In every way stronger than its neighbor, the Dominican Republic in case of war could smear the Haitian forces--and would be glad to do it, for there is no love between the two nations. Despite Dominican president Juan Bosch's determination to get rid of Duvalier and establish democracy for the entire island, however, he has thus far been wise enough to reject military invasion.

Perhaps the only practicable solution lies in the ousting of Duvalier by Haitian exiles and underground, led by Louis Dejoie, who fought and lost in the presidential election of 1957. With luck (and substantial help), Dejoie should be able to unify the exiles and firmly grasp the reins of the Haitian government.

A good friend of Dominican President Bosch, Dejoie is pledged to democracy and the welfare of his countrymen--and opposed to Communism. Perhaps his star is rising, not setting, on the horizon.

He Belongs To Us

Astronaut Gordon Cooper, sixth American to make the historic spin around the earth, is watched, envied and loved by the world.

As this is being written, the shiny Faith 7 capsule is in its 18th orbit and shooting for 22. When it is read, Cooper should already have completed his flight and been picked up from the Pacific.

To the volume that has been written on this well-chronicled event, one thing can be added: the comment of a Buenos Aires newspaper--"Astronaut Cooper is no longer an American, he belongs to all of us."

America can share her pride--there's enough for the whole earth.

Blue Cross, Shield 'Inadequate'

In Part 1 of this series I presented R. W. Tucker's ("The Case for Socialized Medicine") arguments concerning the crisis in medical costs. Part 2 will deal with "The Failure of the Blue Plans."

These plans, Blue Cross and Shield, were instrumental in the failure of Truman's plans to introduce socialized medicine in the late 40's. The AMA was against them for years, but supported them in 1949 in order to prevent Truman's full socialized medicine. Now about 127,000,000 Americans have some health plan, mostly a Blue Shield or Cross plan.

However, they too are caught in the medical cost rise. Many people cannot afford to pay the premiums. Some 50,000,000 Americans have no health insurance. These include those who are "poor risks"--the poor and the old--the ones who need medical aid cost reduction the most! As Tucker points out, "Blue plans pay on the average only one-third the medical costs of their members' means," thus, "the higher your costs are, the smaller the share they'll pay."

They won't pay dentists, and usually psychiatric care is not paid. Those who are covered by collective bargaining insurance lose it while changing jobs, or when laid off, "just when they need it most because they no longer have a steady income."

Medical ideals are sometimes abandoned when insured patients are involved--doctors will sometimes raise their rates for them. The AMA says fee schedules are not democratic and what a Blue Plan says it will pay and what the doctor's bill really is may be quite different.

Many people must go to hospitals when it is not necessary because their insurance is only good for in-patient care, thus adding to the hospital bed shortage, and higher rates for Blue plans. According to the consumer's Price Index, between 1951 and 1959 all consumers costs went up 12%, medical costs 36%, hospitalization costs 66%, and group rates (Blue Cross) 83%.

The Blue plans were aimed at labor, and many union people receive it as a result of collective bargaining. Nelson Cruikshank of the AFL (Washington) has always called plans "the next best thi socialized medicine." As costs labor has been forced into the cal field. The UMW has bui own chain of hospitals, the Detroit are organizing a sumer-run cooperative me plan. . ."NYC unionists, USW the Longshoremen, and "doze other unions," find themse either in or almost in the me field---the Blue Cross and Shield have been thus far inade

"You Want A Hot Line To The Capitol Too?"

Susie Mourns Bygone Days

Susie Summer-Session dropped fair dead into her Soda Shoppe bench which was already overloaded with the star-spangled staff of the "Flambeau" and moaned her woes and perils of being a III-A-er.

Sighed Susie, "Sweating nigh to death, class in the History Bldg. attic, test in all subjects tomorrow, 12,000 pages of outside reading, John Birch meeting, and this damned sign on my forehead is running like an education major, oh for the bygone days of semester or even long trimester."

The motley crew exclaimed on her patriotism of wearing the "Welcome Foreign Students" in such a conspicuous place--oohing and aahing over her cleverness. Susie said "Nay not clever"--she didn't have a permit to parade with placards and remembered her rat days. She hoped she would not be apprehended.

Susie cowered in her corner as three Opperman odds strolled in, kicked her heartily, and gaily went on their merry way--content in their devoted defense of beards and Advanced Music Camp. She quickly patched up the deepest wounds and lit her Tiparillo, to the horror of the Westcott secretary table to her port side. Puffing pleasantly, she managed to retrieve her entire beach and re-establish housekeeping.

She pulled out her banered "SUSGA GO HOME" sign and revelled in her memories of the abolished gymnastics team, Coma, Nelly Brewbarf, hunger strikes, pig-trails, freshmen potlanches, Leslie Powell, class officers, and one-party election days.

Tears, not crocodile, mingled with the ink dripping from her forehead--and Susie began to mourn for the old Social Welfare Bldg., Amphitheatre movies, West Hall, and panty raids--worst of all the days of the daring young man on the trampoline on Landis Green--and the SRO days of the Soda Sheppe.

Freedom: Who Decides

A popularly used characterization of individual freedom comes to us from the pen of John Stuart Mill: "My freedom to swing my arm e where my neighbor's nose begins." Suppose this is true.

Where, then, does my neighbor's nose begin? Certainly a "value judgment" is involved here. Namely, someone has to decide--under cert circumstances--where my neighbor's nose does begin. Who decides? he decides, my freedom to swing my arm will be limited. This may may not be agreeable with me. If I decide, my neighbor's nose-placem freedom will be limited. This may or may not be agreeable with h

It is most often the case that the right to make this decision is posses by neither my neighbor nor by me. That is, a "majority" of individu having no stake in the issue is empowered to make this decision for and is equipped with some means to see that its decision is obeyed. N that this "majority" need not be a majority.

Let us consult an illustrative example (fictional):

Suppose that Professor Stiengreb of a nearby university has a class 30 students studying modern literature (on a voluntary basis). Not all modern Literature is "nice." Stiengreb the instructor is swinging arm, since he may choose the material which is to be studied. Clea (to me at least) the professor's neighbor is his class.

Where does his neighbor's nose begin? Who decides? If Stiengreb cides, there is the possibility that he may choose material which offensive to his class. If the class decides, there is the possibility an inadequate sampling of modern literature will result. However think that an equitable arrangement can be worked out--of, for, and the parties involved.

I contend that this "collective bargaining" (which is so welcome some cases and so unwelcome in others) would not yield the final decis This is because there may be others who feel consideration of th noses has been omitted.

It is not inconceivable to me that some influential group under leadership of some Great Protector might conscientiously feel that best interests of Professor Stiengreb and his students are not be served by their mutual decision. They would be empowered to act, e though they are not involved--and they would act.

Here is the point: If A wants X and B wants Y, the parties involv might agree upon something between X and Y. What right has C to hap along and give them both H?

FSU Gets NSF Grant

grant of $244,700 has been given FSU by the National Science Foundation to build and equip a fourth or on the Nuclear Research Bldg. Raymond K. Sheline, professor hemistry and physics and chairn of the Nuclear Science Advisory mmittee at FSU, said that NSF had cated in awarding the grant that was in recognition of the quality FSU's nuclear program and the tical need for additional space. e grant was announced simulously by Sheline, Dr. John Fol-' dean of the Graduate School, y Owens, executive assistant to ger and Sheline, and by Rep. Fuqua in Washington.

The building was started after an appropriation by the 1957 Legislature. It houses a $1,000,000 tandem Van de Graaff accelerator, one of about 12 such machines in the world, and also has a smaller Van de Graaff accelerator for additional research.

The fourth floor will add 4,800 feet of space and will provide room for an expanded program in radiation chemistry and radiation biology.

Of the total grant, $244,100 will be allotted for building costs and the remainder is scheduled for purchasing equipment. A third floor, recently completed and occupied, was financed by state appropriations.

Knowledge For College

The Knowledge for College test will be given to all first trimester freshman women and to all undergraduate women who have never before attended FSU, and who are presently living in foundation houses or in resident halls.

The exam will be given Thursday, May 23, at 5:15 p.m. in the Longmire Auditorium on the second floor.

'Dark Of The Moon' Director Speaks

By SHEILA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered who a certain play is chosen at FSU's University Theatre? Is it picked just at random (which is probably the case) or sometimes is there a delightful story surrounding it?

Well, one short interview with Sam Baker, who is presently directing "Dark of the Moon," revealed a charming association of the play with his childhood and at long last, a dream come true. "When I was about 10 years old. . ." And here continues Sam's story.

Georgia Simmons, a good friend and classmate of Sam's aunt who lived in his hometown of Zebulon, Ga., was a schoolteacher. But after traveling to New York, she became fascinated with the theatre and, quitting the teaching profession, entered the realm of the character actress, which is usually a role of an old woman (hag or witch).

In "Dark of the Moon" Georgia played the conjure woman and knowing how Sam loved the theatre too--in fact, he's been connected with it in some way ever since childhood--she sent him the program of "Dark of the Moon" with all the original Broadway cast. Ever since then Sam has found the story very appealing and has hoped to be connected with its production in some way.

Then Sam (now 12 years old) went to New York and saw Georgia in a play. Later she commented to him that "I am the only real witch in New York; all I have to do is take out my false teeth and let my hair down!" Georgia, presently in her 70's, has an excellent list of plays to her credit, including "Boontown" with Clark Gable; "Grapes of Wrath;" "The Rose Tattoo;" "All the Way Home," which won a Pulitzer Prize; and "Cleopatra" (she was in Rome recently when it was being filmed.

Back to Sam. Last year his chance came when Dr. Arthur Dorlag, director of the University Theatre, asked him to direct one of this year's plays, compiling a list of the ones he would like to direct. Naturally, Sam placed "Dark of the Moon" at the top of his list--never dreaming Dorlag might choose it.

Besides its connection with his childhood, why does this play especially attract Baker? Well, perhaps it is sentimentality but the first play Sam ever directed was a folk drama too. "Dark of the Moon" in embracing music and dance combines all the elements possible in the drama.

Presently Baker is working toward his doctorate in speech, emphasizing--of course--theatre. What are his future plans? Well, "I may go to New York--just for the experience" and then he plans to stay in educational theatre--directing and acting "when I get a chance."

He is qualified to teach speech and English also. Last year Baker directed "Look Homeward, Angel" and played the part of Cornelius in "The Matchmaker."

Sisco Attends Convention

Tom Sisco of FSU was the only Florida college student chosen as a delegate to the National Young Republican Convention, at a statewide convention in Melbourne last weekend.

Sisco, state college chairman of the Young Republicans, last year was succeeded in office by Tom Brightman of Rollins, as officers were elected.

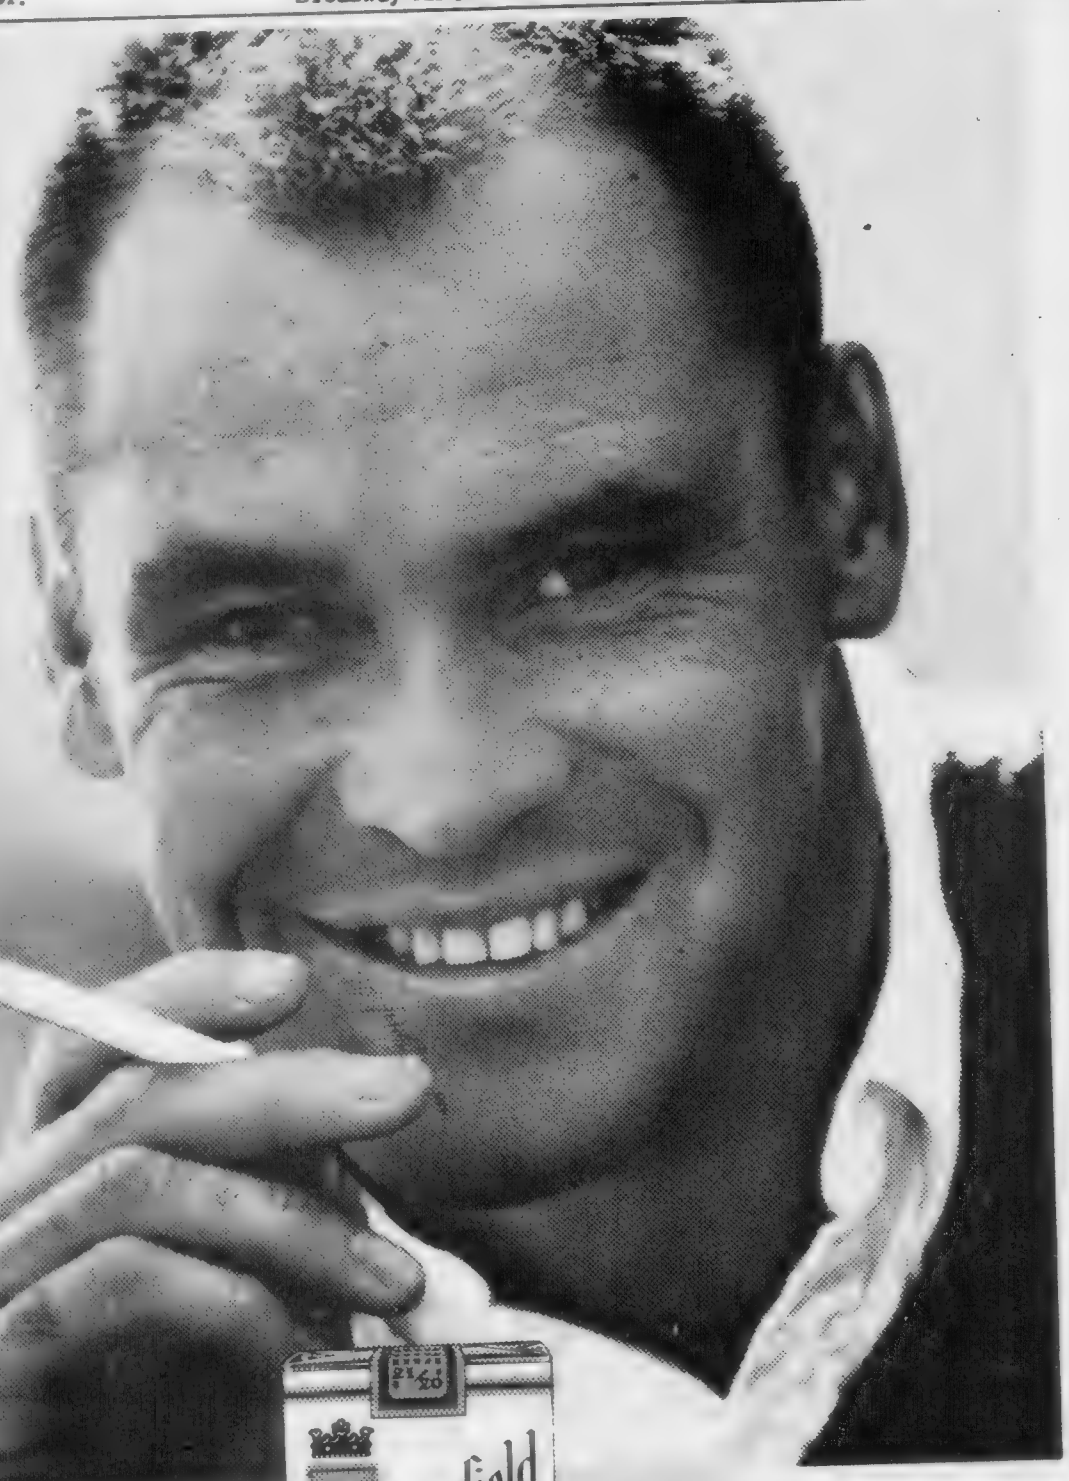
Sisco will be spearheading a campaign in this area to back Buz Lukens, president of the Washington, D. C. Young Republicans Club, in his bid for national chairman. Lukens, a conservative, was a member of Delta Chi fraternity at Ohio State University.

Florida has 13 votes in the national convention.

The next meeting of the FSU chapter of the Young Republicans Club will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium.

Special Microscope Loaned To FSU

A special $2700 microscope, for use in the field of cancer research, has been loaned to the Cellular Physiology Laboratory of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics by the Florida Division of the American Cancer Society.



The presentation of the instrument was made at an informal ceremony in Tallahassee. Those in attendance were Dr. Ronald C. Rustad, Institute Professor; Dr. David H. Cormack, research associate; Dr. W. W. Schildecker, member of the Cancer Society's state Cytology Subcommittee and director of the Tumor Clinic, Halifax District Hospital, Daytona Beach; Mrs. C. W. Ketchum, president of the Society's Leon County Unit; and F. Page Seibert, Jr., of Daytona Beach, who represented his family through which the grant was issued.

This new microscope, according to Rustad, is already proving a valuable aid to Cormack, who is from the Chester Beatty Cancer Research Institute of London, England. He is assisting in the special research and using the instrument to study and report on how nutrients enter cells by pinocytosis (drinking by cells, as opposed to phagocytosis, eating by cells.)

Schildecker and Mrs. Ketchum, in presenting the microscope in behalf of the American Cancer Society, provided a silver name plaque which reads: "Property of the American Cancer Society, Florida Division. Contributed for the cause of cancer research by Mr. and Mrs. F. Page Seibert, Sr., Daytona Beach, Florida."

In commenting on the contribution, Seibert said the transaction had been made as part of a fund derived from the sale of two hundred shares of Liberty National Life Insurance Stock. The stock was consigned to the American Cancer Society as a gift in memory of the late L. H. Stone and K. Einar Seaholm who had been close friends of the family.

Summer Enrollment Up Since Registration

The latest registration total for Trimester III is 4949, which is 52% of the enrollment in the winter trimester.

Juniors outnumber all other classes having 1214 enrolled. Next are the sophomores with 846, seniors 852, and freshmen 705. The remainder, 1183, are graduate or special students.

There has been an increase of 640 students since the last regular day of registration when the total was 4309. The 1962 Summer Session saw 4043 registered.

Halls remaining open for the entire trimester are Dorman, Florida, and Kellum while Landis and Gilchrist will be open only for III-A.

Sororities and fraternities open for the summer are Theta Chi and Kappa Sigma fraternities, and Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Delta Zeta, Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Sigma Kappa sororities. Each house is more than 2/3 full.

Dillenberger Speaks For Religion Series

Dr. John Dillenberger, the third and final lecturer in FSU's Religion in Life series, will speak here on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Dillenberger's main topic at each of his three lectures will be "The Future of the Church."

The first two lectures will be on Tuesday at 4 p.m. and at 8 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. The final lecture will be on Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Wesley Foundation Lounge.

Dillenberger is an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ. He is recognized by theological experts as having one of the most creative minds among Protestant theologians in this country.

His two most superior works are "Protestant Thought and Natural Science," and "Protestant Christianity," which was written in collaboration with Claude Welsch. This book has been accepted widely as an authoritative account of the history of the Protestant Church.

Dillenberger is Dean of Graduate Studies and Professor of Historical Theology at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

How Ford economy won for Tiny Lund at Daytona

The Daytona 500 is one of America's toughest stock car events. It measures the toughness, stability, over-all performance and economy characteristics of the cars that take up its challenge in a way that compresses years of driving punishment into 500 blazing miles. This year mechanical failures claimed over 50 per cent of the cars that entered. That's why Tiny Lund's victory in a Ford (with four other Fords right behind him) is a remarkable testimony to sheer engineering excellence.

Lund attributed his victory in part to the "missing pit stop." He made one less pit stop for fuel than his competition—proving that Ford economy can pay off in some fairly unlikely situations!

Economy and the winner of the Daytona 500 might sound like odd bedfellows at first. Yet economy is basic in every car we make . . . yes, even the Thunderbird is an economy car in its own way. Here's what we mean . . .

Economy is the measure of service and satisfaction the customer receives in relation to the price he pays for it. It does not mean, however, austerity . . . you have taught us this. Americans want—and we try hard to give them—cars that are comfortable to ride in, fun to drive, and powerful enough to get out of their own way. Not many Americans want to settle for basic transportation. You see this in our sales figures—more than half of our 1963 sales are coming from the top of each model line. We're selling convertibles, hardtops, the jazzy cars . . . the bucket-seat, high-performance, luxury editions are going like hot cakes.

Yet for all the fun that people are demanding in their cars, they still are very conscious of the element of thrift—of avoiding unnecessary expense. This is the kind of economy we build into every car from the compact Falcon to the luxurious Thunderbird.

There's a special economy, for instance, in Ford's freedom from service. Every car and virtually every wagon can travel 36,000 miles before it needs a major chassis lubrication. Other routine service has been reduced, too—because these Fords are simply built better—and of better materials—than ever before.

In its own elegant way, even the Thunderbird gives you economy. It will travel 100,000 miles or 3 years before you have to lubricate the chassis. Thunderbirds have a way of becoming classics—as a look at their remarkably high resale value will quickly tell you. This, too, is economy.

Once, long ago—before the arrival of the Income Tax—a wealthy lady was asked to comment on the solid gold plumbing of her latest villa at Newport. "So thrifty, my dear," said the dowager . . . "it will never, ever rust."

Economy then, is many things to many people. Whatever economy means to you, you're pretty sure to find it in a Ford.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Dorlag Gives Play Review

Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag, director of the University Theatre and member of the Speech Dept. faculty, lectured on the play "A Man for All Seasons" by Robert Bolt Wednesday at the second Book Review series for Trimester III.

The drama, which is currently playing on Broadway, opened in 1961 and is now in its final weeks.

Dorlag gave a brief summary of the historical setting of the drama which takes place in the England of King Henry VIII, and evolves around Henry's problems with the papacy in securing a divorce from his wife Catherine. The king finally establishes the Church of England and divorces Catherine in order to marry Anne Boleyn.

The protagonist of the play, Sir Thomas Moore, is a man of prestige and influence. Henry VIII felt that Moore must condone the legitimacy of the marriage. Moore refuses to take an oath which he does not believe in and is therefore jailed and later beheaded.

According to Dorlag, Bolt's style (although influenced by the epic theatre) is strictly his own. Dorlag also stated that even though the story moves all over England, the transitions are very smooth.

Sir Thomas Moore stands for the integrity of man and ". . .stands for the possible hero in us all," said Dorlag.

FSU Hosts Summer Guidance Institute

Guidance of gifted high school students will be the subject of the fourth annual summer institute on Guidance at FSU June 17-Aug. 9.

The program at FSU is one of 55 being held over the nation. This is the second post-master's institute of its kind to be held on campus.

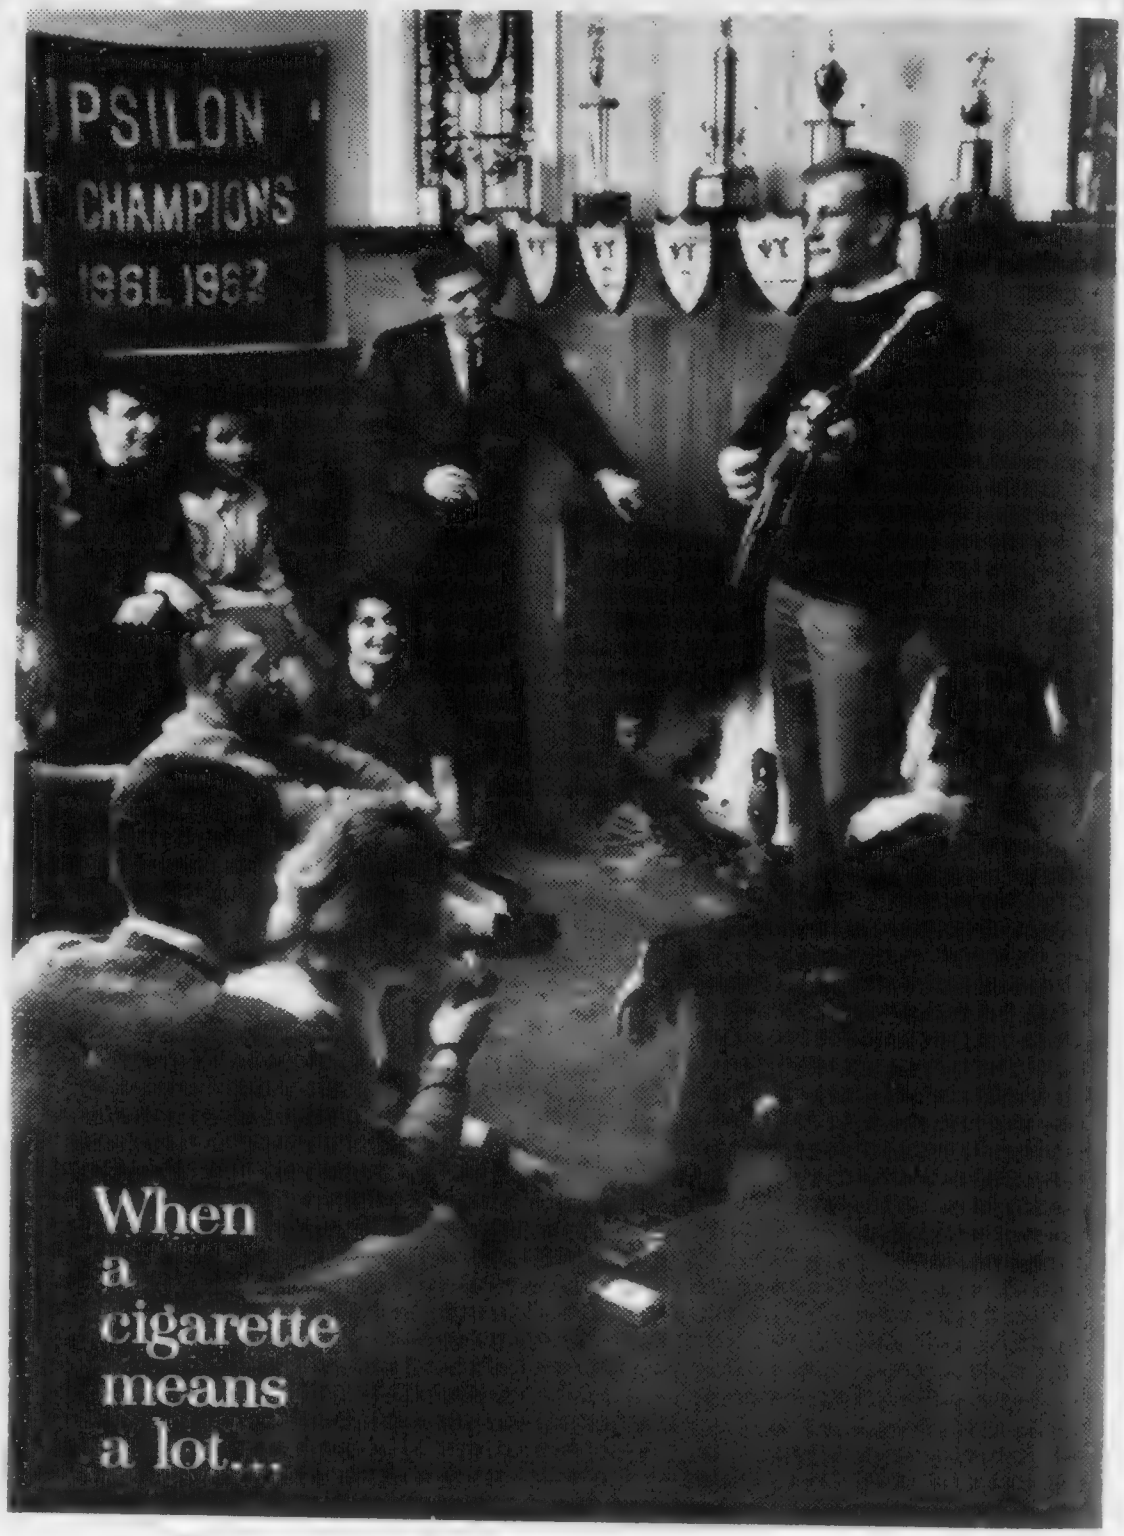
This institute will be for 30 secondary school teachers who are certified guidance counselors, and who have been admitted to the FSU graduate school.

The summer institute is part of a national program administered by the United States office of Education under the National Defense Education Act.

A grant of $24,456 to cover operating expenses has been received. Teachers attending will receive a stipend of $75 per week plus $15 per week for each dependent.

Staff for this year's institute will be Dr. William Hopke, professor of education at FSU; Dr. L. E. Guese, assistant principal, Clayton High School, Clayton, Mo.; James A. Peterson, Boston, Mass.; and Jack Orsburn of Kent State University, Ohio.

Consultants for the institute will be, Dr. Frank Sievers of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; Dr. Werner Metz, director of guidance and psychological services, Brevard county; Dr. Willis E. Dugan, professor and director of counseling, University of Minnesota.



The main part of the program at FSU will be a guidance lab in which counselors work with two or three high school students in individual sessions. These interviews will be under the supervision of FSU faculty members.

Students will be selected from surrounding high schools and will be advised in vocational and educational interests.

To aid both the counselor and the faculty advisor, the lab provides tape recorders, microphones, two-way mirrors and many other innovations.

During the guidance sessions lab will be open only to author personnel.

Dr. Cottingham, institute direc expresses the hope that this tute will be the most profitable to date in the further traini guidance counselors.

Club Members Investigate The 'Gentle Art Of Judo'

By RICHARD PEINE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Students interested in learning judo may attend the Florida State Judo Club's informal workouts in the Tully Gym wrestling room Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 p.m. and Saturdays at 10 a.m.

Very few people understand what judo actually is. It is frequently confused with "catch as can catch" wrestling or with ju-jitsu. Judo is entirely different.

In this sport great stress is placed on emotional, intellectual and moral development. It is also a body building sport. Judo men feel that "a strong mind and a strong body go hand in hand."

Contestants are divided into several grades according to ability and are matched by skill rather than by weight as in Western wrestling.

Students are classified according to their progress, which is indicated by belt color. The three levels of novice wear white belts. Upon completion of a prescribed program, novices are examined. If successful, they receive the brown belt consisting of three more degrees.

On completion of these sic exacting steps the rating of instructor is awarded along with the black belt.

The outstanding world expert is the Japanese Kyuzo Mifune who is six feet one tall, weighs 110 pounds and is over 80 years old.

The FSU group has several brown belters and a black belter. One of the men has worked out with fifth and seventh degree Japanese black belt holders and has thus gained valuable training.

Power Hitting Par Excellence

Tribe Scalps Southern 10 - 6, 7 - 0

Florida State unleashed a mighty display of power hitting with six extra base blows in two games as the Seminoles trampled Georgia Southern 10-6 and 7-0 Monday and Tuesday afternoons at Seminole Field.

Al Beccaccio was the pitching and hitting star of the Monday contest picking up two hits, a single, and a homerun. He also boosted his pitching record to 8-1, striking out four and limiting the Georgians to eight hits.

The game was delayed 45 minutes due to inclement weather.

The Seminoles started their scoring in the first inning. Jim Reed singled and was advanced to third on Mike Augustine's sacrifice bunt. Gary Nichols was safe on an error which scored Reed from third. Shortstop Woody Woodward then chased Nichols home with a long double.

Georgia Southern scored three runs in its half of the second. Sandy Wells, Charles Tarplay and Denny Kline hit back-to-back singles to load the bases. Beccaccio then walked pitcher Pierce Blanchard to force in one run. Tommy Jones' single brought home Tarpley and Kline scored on an error by Woodward.

FSU evened the score in the bottom of the third when Mike Augustine smashed a homerun to make it 3-3. After an out, Woodward walked, advanced to third on Dave Dahlen's single, and scored on George Roundtree's fielder's choice.

The Seminoles ran the score to 5-3 in the fourth when Beccaccio belted a solo homer.

Tarpley put Georgia Southern back in the ball game in the top of the fifth with a three run homer. Florida State quickly made up the deficit in its half of the inning, however, scoring three runs on a home run by Dahlen, successive singles by Roundtree and Jim Loftin, and Beccaccio's two run-scoring single.

FSU ended the scoring with two insurance runs in the sixth. Dahlen singled and rode home on Roundtree's tremendous home run, the fifth of the day.

Roundtree and Dahlen were the leading hitters for the Seminoles with two hits in five times at bat with three RBI's and three hits in five times at bat with 1 RBI, respectively. Seeley with two for five and Tarpley with two for four and three RBI's were the big men in the Georgian attack.

Blanchard went four and two-thirds innings for Georgian Southern, absorbing his second loss against seven victories. He gave up eleven hits, eight runs, struck out two and walked three.

Crouch came on in the fifth and pitched the last three innings giving up two runs on four hits, striking out one, and walking one.

* * * * *

The start of Tuesday's meeting was a repeat of the rain and bad weather of the first game. Again the weather forced a 45 minute postponement and showers continued intermittently for the first five innings.

The Seminoles struck quickly once play got under way. Second baseman Jim Reed singled. Mike Augustine then attempted to sacrifice Reed to second, but Georgian pitcher Dave Bell threw wildly to first and Reed, off and running with the pitch, scored all the way from first. Augustine moved to third.

First baseman Gary Nichols then whalloped a triple to deep centerfield scoring Augustine. Nichols was in turn driven home by Roundtree who rapped a double to right making the score 3-0.

In the third inning Nichols walked, took second on Woodward's single and raced home on a pair of fielder's choices.

Florida State picked up its final three tallies in the seventh. Catcher Ken Suarez drew a base on balls and pitcher Allen Thomas moved him to second as he also walked.

Both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Georgia Southern reliefer E. G. Maybohn. He then walked Jim Reed to load the bases with Seminoles.

Mike Augustine lofted a deep fly to center to score Suarez. Another wild pitch allowed Thomas to race home and Woodward followed with a single to bring in Reed for the final run.

Seminole pitcher Allen Thomas recorded the win for Florida State with a classy four hitter. Georgia Southern managed hits in the first, fifth, seventh, and eighth innings, but these were quickly erased.

Thomas brought his record to 8-2. He walked three and struck out three.

Dave Bell, who pitched the first five innings for Georgia Southern, was charged with the defeat. He gave up four runs on four hits, three strikeouts, and two bases on balls. Bell is now 4-2 on the season.

Maybohn worked the last three innings for Southern issuing one hit, three bases on balls and no strikeouts.

Florida State's victory was the third of the season over Georgia Southern and boosted the Seminole nine to an all-over 17-8 record. Georgia Southern is now 17-10 on the season.

The Seminoles took on Georgia Tech in Atlanta yesterday, but the results were not available at press-time. FSU will end its road games with two contests against the University of Georgia today and tomorrow.

asha Named Fellow Of Arts And Sciences Academy

By NANCY ZLATIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

r. Michael Kasha, professor of emistry and director of the In-tute of Molecular Biophysics, has en named a Fellow of the Ameri- Academy of Arts and Sciences. he Academy was formed during American Revolution as an or-nization of men of "genius and rning" from the biological and sical sciences, the social arts sciences and humanities. Kasha was selected for membership from the field of biophysics and biochemistry at the May membership meeting of the organization.

Kasha became a member of the FSU faculty 11 years ago, against the advice of many of his colleagues. They felt that Florida's undeveloped university system would hinder his progress and research. Kasha feels that his career "has not suffered because of it."

He is internationally recognized for his scientific publications and his participation in international symposia on molecular physics, spectroscopy, cell research, photobiology and neurosciences.

Kasha finds that the "aesthetic atmosphere of Florida is stimulating and encouraging in developing a desire for knowledge." He, himself, spends much of his spare time outdoors, enjoying nature. For the past 10 years he has been "taming Florida's jungles" by cutting down trees and planting ornamental trees and shrubs in their place.

"Research is a measure of knowledge," Kasha said. The important thing about doing research is that in the process a person develops both a technique and a curiosity which stimulate him to expand his learning in many different fields.

Kasha stated that a limited curiosity is what prevents people from developing their innate capabilities. "I was born kind of stupid," Kasha said, "but I had the ambition to know something about everything."

Years ago, while looking through a school catalogue from the University of Michigan, Kasha made a list of everything unfamiliar to him. His intense curiosity made him look up everything on that list.

"If a university is really mature and alert, it will be a fountainhead of new ideas." Kasha added that this state "is reluctant to accept a university at its full range of operation." Students with individuality are restricted in an atmosphere with "censorship and resentment of originality." This type of attitude is preventing Florida from developing a mature university system.

"The future here is far greater than even the most progressive citizen or legislator may imagine," Kasha said. FSU is attracting many important people and creative students. "All that is needed is support in developing the full utilities of the University."

Grads Participate In Study

Over 150 graduate students selected at random from the graduate school ay FSU are participating in the first study of its kind on how graduates pay for their education.

The National Opinion Research Center of the University of Chicago is now conducting a survey on how American graduate students finance their education.

The results of the survey, which is supported by the National Science Foundation, will be used in determining federal policy toward graduate scholarships and fellowships.

The survey will be based on questionnaires, completed by 25,000 graduate students in 37 fields at 130 institutions.

It will be concerned with the sources and amounts of stipends received by students, their academic workload and degree programs, how much is earned from outside employment, and career plans.

Peter H. Rossi, Director of NORC, said the Foundation authorized the study because of growing concern over how the nation is losing its talented people.

This will be the first study on this subject to combine large-scale coverage with depth. A preliminary report will be released in the fall, followed by a detailed report.

Dillenberger To Speak Today And Tomorrow

r. John Dillenberger, one of the emost Protestant theologians in country, will deliver three lec-es here today and tomorrow in the rd and final of FSU's Religion in e series.

he first lecture at 4 p.m. in the rary Lecture Hall, will be on he Future of the Church--In Re-on to the Academic Disciplines." illenberger will speak in regard the work of the University and how church is related to the task of University in the matter of faith elf.

The Future of the Church--In Re-ion to Matters of Faith" is the ic of the second lecture at 6 p.m., . in the Library Lecture Hall. illenberger will discuss what the church is doing in our society today and where the church is going from the present.

At 6:30 p.m. tomorrow, Dillenberger will talk on "The Future of the Church--In Relation to Dimensions of Contemporary Culture" at the Wesley Foundation Lounge. This will be his third and final lecture and will deal with the part the church plays in regard to art, philosophy and the other contemporary arts.

Since there is much criticism of religious institutions today, Dillenberger will comment on whether it has any relevance to present times.

Dillenberger received his B. A. degree from Elmhurst College, his B. D. from Union Theological Seminary, and his Ph. D. from Columbia University.

Retiring From FSU

Kellogg To Go Into Research

For more than 30 years Prof. Winthrop N. Kellogg, an FSU psychologist, has been conducting experiments on the perceptual and learning abilities of animals.

He's closing up his laboratory at FSU during the next few days and retiring, but Kellogg will continue to do research, for the first time studying animals with which he has never experimented before, sealions and seals.

His most recent work has been on porpoises. The ability of porpoises to identify their prey a long distance off in the dark sea long has fascinated scientists.

Kellogg in 1952 advanced the idea that porpoises, like bats, have an ability to bounce the echo from a series of clicks they make while swimming against distant objects and thereby gauge their distance and shape.

A large pool was constructed at FSU's Alligator Harbor Marine Laboratory and inside the pool was constructed a system of pathways with adjustable barriers. Two porpoises, Betty and Albert, were put in the pool.

Before they finally were freed, Betty and Albert had amply demonstrated to Kellogg that porpoises did indeed possess a sensitive echo-ranging ability which enabled them to pass through openings and avoid obstructions they could not see in their swift movements.

In addition to many scientific papers on the subject (he's had more than 120 papers published during a scientific career going back into the 'twenties) Kellogg summarized his work and that of other researchers on porpoises in "Porpoises and Sonar," a book published by University of Chicago Press in 1961.

His work with sonar in animals (animal sonar works in the same way as does that used by the Navy) now will be carried to seals and sealions. Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, a physicist at Stanford Research Institute, Calif., recently discovered that these animals also possess echo-ranging ability and Kellogg wants to find out more about them.

He'll work with Poulter on a research program at Menlo Park in Calif., directing studies in sealion sonar and also in the echo-ranging ability he has bound blind persons sometimes develop.

Experiments made by Kellogg at FSU have shown totally blind persons have been able to distinguish distance, shape and even texture of objects several feet away by bouncing slight noises against the objects and listening for the echo.

Kellogg will begin his research program in California in the fall, and is of the opinion there's a great deal of work remaining in the study of sonar ability in animals.

Phones Needed

A coed awakes in the early hours of the morning, only to find herself locked inside a dark and desolate classroom building, far from her dorm, and far from the medical help she needs.

Judiciary might consider the case a minor one, under circumstances of sickness or of medicine causing drowsiness, but instances are not rare on campus where students are late merely due to ignorance of the time.

Perhaps there is something which can be done to alleviate unawareness of "Father Time". . .as is being observed in the Library, for example. Bells sound at 10:45 each night in order to warn coeds that they have exactly 15 minutes to make it back to the dorm without being late.

If similar bells or class bells were rung in the classrooms at 10:45 on weeknights, students who had become involved in studies or whose watches had stopped might have a better opportunity of returning to their dorms on time.

Another solution would be to install public pay telephones in classroom buildings just inside the entrance, as most offices which have telephones are locked each night.

Here the student would encounter difficulty only if she had forgotten her change purse, or spent her last dime during a study break.

Steps should be taken, however, to ensure students' being able to secure help immediately.

In case of emergencies, provisions for instant communications with the campus police and infirmary should be available in any building on campus.

Whose Money?

(Reprinted from the St. Petersburg Times)

Speaker Mallory E. Horne indifferently admits that he has spent $12,500 in public funds to promote the so-called "states' rights" amendments to the U.S. Constitution. He calls this a "legislative expense" and says he didn't need any authorization to make the expenditure.

Mr. Horne represents Leon County, in which live approxiamtely 1.5 per cent of Florida's population.

Mr. Horne--as being Speaker of the House testifies--is a power in the controlling rural bloc of legislators, whose constituencies altogether number about one out of every five Floridians.

One of the three "states' rights" amendments would prevent the U.S. Supreme Court from intervening to give Florida's urban majority fair representation in the Legislature.

And whose money is Mr. Horne spending to promote this enterprise? Yours and mine, of course. At least 80 cents out of every dollar of it comes from the people against whose interests this project is aimed.

Need any more be said?

Federal, States' Rights Clash

"Big government" has stuck its ever-present foot in Alabama's front door and there is more states' rights talk in the air. Why all the fuss?

Our Constitution guarantees the individuals in this country "certain inalienable rights" which are taken collectively to characterize what we call individual freedom or individual rights. Certainly we would agree that some additional regulations are necessary to complement those implied by the Constitution, else the right to murder -- for example -- might be considered an individual right. The Constitution and its complement of laws, then, may be considered as criteria for individual freedom.

The rub enters the consideration when we realize that the "constitutional complements" to which we refer are not necessarily all of national scope and application. I.e., There exist many overlapping sets of constitutional complements which apply to a particular state, county, or city.

Assuming that the Federal Constitution never conflicts with any of its local complements, there is no problem. The individual rights characterized by the Constitution and those guaranteed by local complements coincide, and there can be no distinction between states' rights and what are often called "civil rights."

Clearly this assumption is untenable; witness the present Alabama spectacle.

Equally clearly, the denial of assumption must be assum true: that the Federal does at times conflict with its complements. When this co develops in a particular situ which standard applies? Constitution (or its authorize terpretation by the "nine ol take precedence over a state for example--or not?

Is the United States a nation it a loose confederation ereign" states?

In answer to the first quest is my opinion that many who b for states' rights really desire to protect the right to apply a d standard. If they agree with the eral Constitution on a point, th wish to apply its ruling; if not would claim sovereignty and their own ruling. Is this cr

In answer to the second quest would quote Walter Lippmann:

"The nation is defied by a government attempting to n the Federal law. The United S government cannot submit to n cation by Alabama."

Flambeau Forum

'Flambeau' Is Chided

To the Editor:

We are concerned with the lack of original and local controversy in the Summer "Flambeau." While Ross Barnett (Registrar-Governor), the AMA, and Ford Frick still interest us, Walter Cronkite, Drew Pearson and Peanuts keep us currently informed, as well as the prolific writers of the Tallahassee "Democrat." Reiteration of well-known views by your columnists and your near verbatim copy of articles from said "Democrat" are becoming unbearable.

In the masthead, you have All-American 1956-'57-'59 printed for posterity's sake. We, being proud of these past accomplishments, sincerely hope that "All-Tallahassee Democrat 1963" isn't added to this.

It is easy to use the well-written "publicity release" of the Public Relations Dept.--but to readers of the "Flambeau," it is unfair that you print their releases on such articles as Dr. Irish's resignation. Surely a personal interview with such a distinguished member of our collegiate community would be more in keeping with the purposes of the "Flambeau."

To help you in expanding and keeping the readership of struggling summer students, we offer our opinion on the recent pedestal e - tablished for our part-time scholar-athletes. Academic achievement in this area should be promoted and publicized after its long absence for embarrassing or unstated reasons. Scholastic indulgence on the part of our some-time conquering warriors should serve adequately to achieve the ideal point average.

Their private tutoring and very personal attention are luxuries not afforded any other campus group--and so should be abolished. They have to meet entrance requirements as we non-athletes do--and so are as adequately prepared for individual academic accomplishment as we, the masses. The masses do not have a supervisor to serve as liaison between academic personnel and them. The masses are not reported on to parents, scholastically, by anything but an IBM machine--the athlete is pampered as if he were at camp for the first time and taken under the wing of a sympathetic counselor who writes Mama and Daddy that Sonny is bearing up as if he were a grown man.

There is nothing spectacular about 11 out of 50 making 3.0--other than its publication. There is no reason why, with all this personal mumbo-jumbo, a majority doesn't make at least 3.0. As for trophies, well and good--but why not give every five-time member of the Dean's List one--we are sure the masses can be as appreciative of gold cups as the elite element.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Seminoles Split With Ga. Tech Take Two From U. Of Georgia

FSU wound up its last road trip of the season on a successful note as the Seminoles took three out of four games against their all-Georgia opponents over the weekend.

The Seminoles split a pair of games with Georgia Tech, Thursday, FSU taking the first 10-5 while dropping the second 5-4.

FSU got off to a slow start in the first game. Tech's Ron Schard held the Tribe scoreless for the first two innings but the Tribe erupted for five big runs in the third.

Tech narrowed the score to 5-4 but the Seminoles put the contest on ice with a four run seventh. All four runs scored on two doubles, two wild pitches, and three errors.

Gary Nichols, Jim Reed, and George Roundtree were the top Tribe batters, collecting two hits apiece. Monte McBryde also contributed a pinch-hit double, good for two RBI's in the seventh inning.

Mickey Carmack and Dick Emerson hit home runs for Georgia Tech in a losing cause.

The second game saw the Yellowjackets take an early 3-2 lead and hold off the determined Seminole batters the rest of the way.

In the eighth inning, Tech's Butch Harris singled, took second on a walk to Hall and scored on Bill Selby's single for what proved to be the winning run.

The Seminoles got back on the winning side with a 9-6 victory over the University of Georgia, Friday.

Al Beccaccio became the first player in Seminole history to win nine games in a season as he held the Bulldogs to six runs on five hits.

Working with a blister on his pitching hand from the fourth inning on, Beccaccio gave up eight bases on balls but struck out seven.

In the Saturday contest, FSU overcame a four run lead as they again defeated the University of Georgia 4-3.

Georgia's Charles Bagby checked the Seminoles for seven innings but the Tribe's batsmen finally solved the righthander's slants and smashed seven hits in the last two innings.

Georgia took an early three run lead with one in the first and two more in the third.

Singles by Ken Suarez, Buddy Teagle, and Jim Reed loaded the bases for the Seminoles in the eighth. Dave Dahlen then drove in two runs with a single.

After Billy Williamsen's home run tied the score in the bottom of the ninth at 3-3, Jim Loftin singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Teagle's single.

Winning pitcher was sophomore Marty Howell, who relieved Allen Thomas in the seventh, faced six batters giving up no hits or runs, pitching five innings and giving up five Seminole runs.

Sports' Loss

One of America's greatest football players died Saturday morning, name was Ernie Davis.

While his name might not have been widely known in the South, in section of the country he was the best. Every Saturday afternoon we w all gather around the radio to find out how Ernie and the Orangemen Syracuse University were doing.

I had the good fortune of meeting Ernie at Syracuse when I was a sen in high school. I was a shy kid in the midst of a group of simply gig football players trying to get a story for our journalism class. H didn't know me from Adam, but he took time out and gave me a per interview. I will never forget the kindness he showed me, a comp stranger.

Whatever Ernie Davis may have been, he was first and forem nice guy.

Artist Series Feature

Isaac Stern To Appear On Campus Next Week

World-renowned violinist Isaac Stern will be featured in the debut of Trimester III's Artist Series on Monday and Tuesday.

The recitals begin at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium, and tickets are available at Westcott Ticket Office. Students with ID's may pick up their tickets at no cost, and the price for the public is $3.50, and $2 for dates.

Isaac Stern

Monday night's program will include Beethoven's "Sonata in A Minor, Op. 23;" "Sonata No. 3, Op. 25," by Enesco; "Chaconne," by Bach; "Romance, Op. 23," by Szymanowski and Josef Suk's "Burleske" and "Un Poco Triste."

Selected for Tuesday night's performance are "Sonata Op. 12, No. 1," by Beethoven; "Sonata in D Major, Op. 94" by Serge Prokofieff; Bach's "Sonata No. 1 in GMinor for Solo Violin;" a Kreisler arrangement of "Rondo" by Mozart and Stravinsky's "Divertimento."

Stern, who was trained in America, began studying with teachers from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music at the ripe old age of ten.

For the past six seasons, Stern has made extensive European tours. . .during which he has given more than 40 concerts in nine countries.

In 1949 and 1951, he presented concerts in Latin America and Israel, playing 17 times in Israel alone.

The summers of 1950-52, Stern was one of the distinguished musicians invited to appear with Pablo Casals (on campus last Fall) in the Festivals of Prades and Perpignan.

Having toured around the world on demands from nearly every country, Stern has been labelled by top critics as "one of the world's master violinists."

In addition to his concert activities, however, Stern is perhaps remembered by many as the man who saved Carnegie Hall from destruction.

McGill Paints Acid Picture Of South--Dr. Ivan Johnson

By SHEILA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"I was not happy with the book, but wouldn't have missed reading it" was the comment offered by Dr. Ivan Johnson on Ralph McGill's "The South and the Southerner" during this week's book review.

As background on McGill, Johnson, head of the art education dept., said the author has been termed liberal, was educated outside of the South and is presently a publisher and columnist for the Atlanta Constitution.

McGill has also received the Pulitzer Prize for journalism, yet saw "the need for understanding between human beings of various color."

Johnson, who is the author of two art textbooks and a contributor to the New York Times, said although one expects the title to reveal the content of the book, it does not present a sociological picture but rather a "series of anecdotes--treating racism, poverty, individualism, and the politics of the South." Thus, McGill is an "illustrator."

The book is written as though it were a biography, an editorial, and an objective picture of "southern" life.

The "one profit economy" of the South didn't see radical changes until after the Great Depression, and some industries "paid as little as 25¢ an hour yet expected a ten hour day" during the 1920's.

Johnson felt that the "weak part of the book" was on education and oddly enough, McGill considered Georgia and North Carolina leaders in education and praised the recent governors of Tennessee, North Carolina, and Florida.

McGill thought that the "concern for separate but equal schools represents the guilt of the South."

Though McGill sometimes paints an "acid picture," Johnson feels that the picture the average southerner still has (the one of "magnolias and moonlight")--is outdated, and that "southern problems" are not typically southern but are elsewhere in the country, too. They are just emphasized more in the South.

According to Johnson, McGill gives the reader a "fragmented dimension," for the book lacks unity yet has a good story-telling quality. However, he still prefers McGill as a columnist.

Carothers, Piccard Speak At FSO Academic Awards Assembly

Dr. Milton W. Carothers, professor of higher education, was one guest speaker who was almost usurped of his speech recently.

Carothers, who arrived a little late during the program, was greeted enthusiastically by Dr. Paul Piccard, head of the Honors Program and associate professor of the Government Dept., who had been called upon at the last moment to substitute for Carothers.

All's well that ends well, however. Members of the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation, Inc., which recently acquired its 11th scholarship house for students of high academic ability and financial need enjoyed not one, but two speakers during the course of the Academic Awards Convocation.

Awards were presented to students of the Foundation Scholarship Organization who had the highest quality point average in each of the scholarship houses by Miss Agnes Johnson, field representative of the Florida Education Association.

Students having the highest quality point averages in their houses were Maureen O'Neill, FEA Scholarship House; Lana Murray, J. Velma Keen House; Linda Phillips, Selby for Women House; Dan Barwick, Rotary Scholarship House; John Korp and John Levings of the Selby for Men House; Ron McFarland, 402 Copeland Scholarship House; and Bob Darling of the Selby for Men House #2.

Students having a 4.0 average for the trimester were presented with a check by Dr. J. Stanley Marshall, 1st Vice President of the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation. Receiving checks were Lana Murray, Maureen O'Neill and Dan Barwick.

Also on the program was the presentation of an academic trophy and plaque to the house with highest quality point average. The trophy was awarded to the J. Velma Keen Scholarship House, with the Florida Education Association Scholarship house having the second highest average.

'Subversive' Label

Kept universities, such as state universities supported by Legislative appropriations, often bring the wrath of the Powers That Be down on themselves for their vigorous defense of academic freedom.

Attacks on this very important freedom by outsiders usually are "well meant," aimed at protecting the nation's future by properly indoctrinating its pre-citizens. Good, but misguided, intentions do not justify, however, restricting basic individual rights in the name of patriotic duty.

The Senate Higher Education Committee of the Florida Legislature Wednesday killed a bill which would have required state universities to label Communist-leaning authors and lecturers. The bill was sponsored by Sen. Charley Johns of Starke, chairman of the legislative investigating committee which probed subversive infiltration of state universities, notably the University of South Florida in Tampa.

It is quite proper that professed Communist leaders, whenever they speak on campus, be identified in this way. The main idea in hearing such a lecturer is that students be allowed to weigh for themselves the arguments given for this ideology, and sift the truths from the half-truths and outright lies. We should not fear to allow our belief in democracy to be challenged; faith is made stronger by trial.

But the bill would include authors and lecturers who are members of three or more Communist-front organizations, and would ensnare many an innocent victim who would be improperly and quite unjustly tagged. The further removal from University library shelves of publications by these Communist-labeled authors or lecturers would have produced an effect exactly opposite from what was intended--for it is human nature to be interested in seeing what is to wrong with "banned" books.

Inevitably, this policy would have degenerated into largescale witch-hunting, and would have resulted either in loss of freedom or in a decision by the universities to throw out the censors. Defeat of the bill by the Senate committee postponed this decision.

But the committee's reasons for killing the bill, however justified they may be, do not come to grips with the issue. The practice would indeed be unworkable and costly, and would require the Board of Control to use a power that it could invoke without legislation; but the real issue is, as Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary of the BOC, said, that the state would be treading on thin ice in labeling as Communists those authors and lecturers who are members of Communist-front organizations.

Another part of the bill tramples freedom of the press so violently underfoot that it is hard to imagine anyone sponsoring the measure in the name of freedom. The bill would have required the Board of Control to supervise and approve the editorial staffs of student newspapers.

Student newspapers have a reputation of fighting valiantly for free expression, although as a kept press they are sometimes subject to heavy pressures. Such a measure would make the newspapers mere machines for dispensing varying doses of propaganda, and would reduce the qualifications of editorial staffs from its present standard of capability to a matter of politics.

Are those who accuse student newspapers of being "subversive" really serious, or are they whining because they've been stung and welcome the chance to threaten retaliation?

Extremists Temper Democracy

The editorial page of the "Flambeau" has served admirably as a battleground for the verbal fisticuffs between socialism and ultra-conservatism. The arguments have been forceful, but sincere and informative. Ironically our present governmental system permits political polar extremes to clash head on in a medium whose freedom is one of the basic tenets of our political theory.

The left and the right of the political spectrum are allowed to advocate the stretching and twisting of the established system to fit their beliefs as long as they don't advocate overthrowing the government by force. All of this political debate is made possible by the very system which the extremists want to drastically change or abolish. A moment's reflection reveals that the present system must be pretty sound to withstand such attacks if it is going to survive.

The free enterprise system as we know it today is one of the economic wonders of the world. The political framework within which this system operates is known throughout the free world as a uniquely responsive form of government. Why throw it away? It's working fine now; why chance fouling up the closest thing to a perfect large scale democracy that civilization has ever known in order to tailor it to accommodate the convictions of a few panacea-peddling extremists?

Socialism is the termite that undermines the fibers of responsiblity that strengthen the backbone of American individualism, the concept upon which this nation was founded. The government is the servant of the people, not a paternalistic sugar-daddy that gives something to everyone for nothing. A man is responsible for his family in sickness and in health, in prosperity and adversity.

Socialism is a creeping paralysis which affects the sense of responsibility. The real taxes that s... extracts in payment for ... rendered come from the m... ambitious men. Competition, ... curity and social welfare, is the ... mark of the United States.

'Time' Views Criticized

"The individual in America," was the theme of "Time" magazine's 40th anniversary issue of May 10, 1963, but "Time's" views are more anti-individual than one might expect.

In support of their own narrow view of "individualism," the editors snipe at three of the nation's foremost individuals. C. Wright Mills is "narrow," Vance Packard is "sociology's cheap popularizer," and Erich Fromm becomes "a Marxist culture quack." These pejorative value judgments are no doubt due to their inability, as individuals, to agree with "Time" and its simpleminded view of individuals.

If individualism is to mean anything, it must be the right of every human being to express himself as a free agent in a free society. While the editors of "Time" may feel that the ordinary man needs "the Caesars, Catherines, Napoleons, Gandhis, De Gaulles," and parenthetically the Neros, Hitlers and Stalins, to move and manipulate him, it would seem that a cooperative and democratically socially planned state would be more conducive to the development of individual personality and rights. "Time" may well believe that "the leader may impose his will by force, but more often he must do it by cunning and patience. . ." but this type of Machiavellian individualism hardly allows freedom for anyone but the "Ruler" and his clique.

The last insult is the characterization of Lincoln as the "Renaissance Prince' and the Burchhardteam individualism ascribed to him. It may not trouble "Time" editors that "Honest Abe' suspended civil liberties and habeas corpus and cast his opposition into prison, but his actions certainly did not protect the "individualism" of those whom he attacked. Granted Lincoln's special circumstances, we should still view his actions as "necessary evils" rather than as lofty examples of the "American way."

In the last analysis, "Time's" "Great Man" theory of individualism, which tramples the majority of the human race underfoot, is as outmoded as the 19th Century social philosophies that produced it and the "20th' Century conservative politicians who still (shudder) advocate it.

Susie Meets Nobleman

By SAM McCALL

Susie Summer-Session pulled herself out of steamhole 19-E thankful that she had not fallen into an anonymous hole and limped slowly toward Longmire and the safety of the Soda Shoppe. No sooner had she stepped into the crosswalk in front of Jennie Murphree (which somehow had managed to retain its name) than she was upended by a high-powered auto.

Disengaging her mangled appendages from the gilded grill, she scrambled after her scattered plunder, only to be met by a pair of pointed patent-leather tennis shoes and a gruff voice inquiring as to her knowledge of whose car she had hit. Timidly raising her eyes, she encountered the frame of a beardless aristocrat with a Marlboro tattoo and a coat of arms and immediately she shrunk back to the ground, extending her arms to her fore.

She was jerked to a crawling position by a gloved hand, dragged around the limousine and shown the official seal tucked in the rear window with the signature of the security officer verifying unrestricted campus parking. "This is one of the many in the King's fleet; I suggest you get fully acquainted with them all--this is a warning--the next time you may be appointed as a cabinet member."

Happy to be alive and not in student government, Susie plodded on to the Soda Shoppe, where only a few Socialists, a rat-bitten psych major, Jackie Robinson and the remnants of the Tweed Ring had weathered the air-conditioner. She pulled out her libretto for southern drawl, tripped a stray education major and fell fast asleep--only to wake up in the early hours of the morning frozen stiff and far away from her dormitory, socialized medical aid, and the safety of police, with only an old gold coffee pot to talk with.

Prof To Attend Conference

Dr. E. P. Miles Jr., professor of mathematics and director of the computing center at FSU, will be a participant in a National Conference on Automated Methods of Scientific Information at the Airlie Foundation, Warrenton, Va., May 27-29.

The conference is sponsored by the National Science Foundation, the American Council on Library Resources and the Library of Congress. Miles has for the past six months served as chairman of the Task Force on Scientific Information Retrieval of the Florida Space Era Education Study. For the past year he has served on an FSU committee studying implications of automatic data processing for practice of and training in librarianship.

He also was recently named chairman of an editorial subcommittee, by the Interim Advisory Committee on Computers and Computer of SREB, to prepare a brochure of guidelines for university computing center organization and operations to be published and distributed by Southern Regional Education Board to colleges and universities of the South.

"We Fill All Doctor's Prescriptions"

Organist Jenkins To Give Recital

The recipient of a full scholarship to Washington University in Missouri will present a special recital tomorrow night at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

Graduate music student Ronald Jenkins, organist from the studio of Dr. Ramona C. Beard, associate professor of music, is presently working on his master of music degree in music history and literature under Dr. John F. Spratt, assistant professor of music.

The program will consist of "Toccata and Pastorale," by Pachelbel; "Dorian Toccata," by Bach; "Dialogue sur les Mixtures," "Chant de Paix" and "Te Deum," by Langlais; and Sonata on "The 94th Psalm" by Reubke.

A member of the University Singers and Collegium Musicum, Jenkins will begin work on his doctor's degree at Washington University this fall.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Beals To Go To Conference

Emily Beals, a junior, will be the Florida representative at the national conference of the Methodist Student Movement June 16-22 at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Miss Beals is state president of the Methodist Student Movement, which numbers 8,000 members at Florida colleges and universities.

Her appointment as state delegate was announced by Miss Eulalie Ginn of Lakeland, director of student and adult work for the Florida Methodist Conference.

The national organization includes members of Wesley Foundation and similar Methodist student centers.

Lost Something? Check In Longmire

By ELLEN THOMPSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Have you ever found yourself in a frenzy because you have left your glasses or notebook in a classroom, or worse yet, you don't know where you've left what?

Well, the best way to find those glasses or that notebook (after you've come out of the frenzy and back into reality) is to go to the Lost and Found Dept. in the Director's Office on the Main Floor of Longmire.

According to Miss Jane Adams, Director of Longmire, many things are found that are never claimed. She also realizes that many things are lost that are never found.

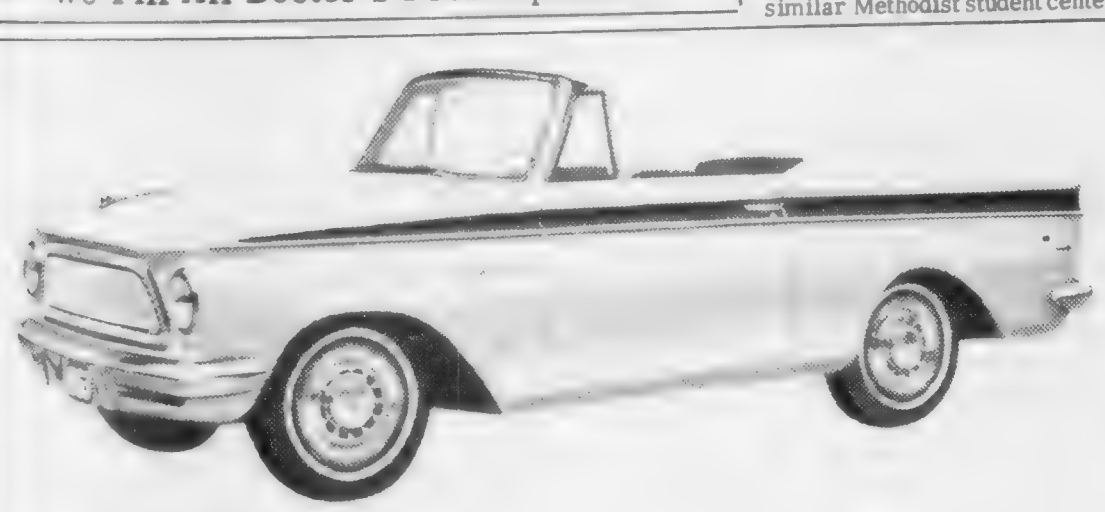
As an article which has been found comes into the office, its description is put on file, along with the date it was received, where it was found and the name (if there is one) of the person to whom it belongs.

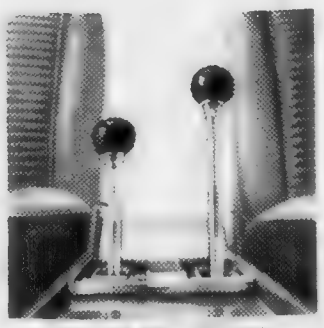
People whose names are on articles are notified by letter that their prized possession has been found and that they are to use the letter as a claim check when they come for the article.

Items which don't have names are tagged with a number. There is a descriptive card in the files telling who found it, who received it in the office, the date it was found and the number assigned to the article.

If something has been lost, the student puts his name and the description of the article in the "Lost and Found" book, and the office does its best to trace it.

However, there are a great number of articles which are never claimed. "If more people would put their names in things, they would have them returned much easier," Miss Adams said.





For the many odds and ends never claimed, a sale is held about every two years. Approximately 75 pairs of glasses were recently sent to a society where they could be used by needy people. Many similar items are sent to various organizations and societies.

Few things have not been turned in to the office. There have been numerous umbrellas, glasses, odd pieces of costume jewelry, pipes, contact lenses, shoes, socks and even false teeth.

Purses found are usually claimed, as well as a few suitcases that have been found around campus.

Most articles are lost in classrooms and in the library. The campus Security Office finds various things, such as bicycles, which if never claimed, are sold through Lost and Found.

Miss Adams feels that "if more people would use the service, they would find many of their misplaced things. Also, if people are prompt in bringing in found articles, they can be checked in the books, and this would facilitate finding the owners faster."

FSU Wins Como Award

Florida State University received the Perry Como Award in the American Foundation for the Blind 1963 Radio & Television Contest at an awards luncheon in the Hotel Americana in New York recently.

The winning entry FSU submitted was a half-hour television documentary entitled "Soon there will be 74."

FSU also won an award for a radio show, "A Glimpse Ahead," which received the AFB-Douglas Fairbanks award during the same contest.

Prof Speaks In Miami

Dr. David L. Levine of the School of Social Welfare was guest speaker at the Fourth Annaul Senior Citizens Conference at the Greater Miami Jewish Community Center recently.

Set on the conference theme, "Making the Most of Your Later Years," Dr. Levine's address set the tone for eight afternoon workshops which were devoted to problems of employment, financial security, teachings of a life's experience, family relationships, physical condition, social life, building an active membership and leadership training.

The conference brought together several hundred older adults from the Center's four branches to discuss problems of concern to them, according to Ira J. Steinmetz, supervisor of the County Senior Citizens Department of GMJCC. One of the main purposes of the worship was to uncover areas of unmet needs of the older adult.

Bromberg Is Music Winner

A Florida State University piano student, Bonnie Bromberg, has been selected as one of the two winners of the 1963 Brevard Music Center Young Artist Auditions and will be a soloist with the Festival Orchestra this summer at the Brevard Music Center.

Miss Bromberg, a 19-year-old senior, recently won the statewide student contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs and then the southeastern regional contest at Spartanburg, S. C. She is a student of Prof. Edward Kilenyi.

The piano student has made solo appearances with the Ft. Lauderdale Symphony Orchestra and the Miami Beach Civic Orchestra.

Two years ago another student of Kilenyi, Ruth Anne Rich won the Brevard award. Miss Rich received her bachelor's degree at FSU on April 20.

Seems that everybody wants to drive our station wagon.

Why? Is it the three 5-foot seats?

They hold the regular driver plus 9 junior drivers.

Or 7 more adults.

Is it because the back seats are removable? Or because the side doors open 4 feet wide?

Slide a seat out and you can slide in a mode-up crib.

Take both seats out and you've got room for a full-length bed.

Is it because the Volkswagen, with more usable space than the biggest conventional wagon, is a good 4 feet shorter?

It fits neatly into parking spots the big boys have to pass by.

Is it the legendary Volkswagen mileage? The rear-engine traction?

Is it the sunroof?

It's also a moonroof.

A rainroof, too. When the sky looks threatening, just slide the roof shut. It's windproof. Waterproof.

Is it the 23 windows to look out of?

Your guess is as good as ours.

Why not come in and see why. For yourself.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble, and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a tolerant newspaper even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I read the annual odes to the Manchester Guardian Fowl in dairy from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The annual outpouring of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

It's a rare and lucky columnist

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. A fine group of men, as anyone who has ever met their wives would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you, the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose.

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

FSU's Criminologist Fox Speaks On Delinquency

...workers dealing with young ...ents must be persons who can ...ate to the young people, in the ... well-known Florida crim...ologist Vernon Fox, who said re...tly that they should leave to aca... discussion the "conceptual ...mework" of delinquency.

... Fox, who is head of the De...rtment of Corrections and Crim...logy here at FSU, spoke on "Clin...l Syndromes and Delinquency ...els" at the National Conference ... Social Welfare, held in Cleveland. ... his address, Fox emphasized the ...k of time and professional per...nel necessary to a control ...gram which deals in terms of ...nical syndromes and delinquency ...s.

... added that the effectiveness of ...ent day programs depends on the ...acity of the caseworkers to con...ctively relate to most delin...s, both emotionally and in...lectually, with the purpose of pro...ting within the delinquent ...positive social attitudes, self-...fficiency in interpersonal re...ions, and a cooperative relation...p with authority."

Fox went on to explain that there are various "legal labels of delinquency" by which the group terms individuals "criminal," "insane," or "delinquent," and there are psychiatric and psychological explanations of "syndromes" indicative of an individual's attempts to cover up his anxieties and insecurity, caused by his conflict and confusion regarding social norms.

For all practical purposes, however, these considerations are best left to research people. The caseworker is confronted with an individual who feels rejected and alone, comes from a poor environment, and cannot hold his own in society.

The fact that there are psychological aspects to the problem does not contribute greatly to its solution.

The practical application of this knowledge is the separation of relating and non-relating workers, thus eliminating those who often do more damage than good.

"The right man may be trained to work with delinquents better," Fox said. "The wrong man trained is still the wrong man."

Home Management House Gives Homelike Experience

By NANCY ZLATIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Six senior coeds took one last inspection tour of their spotless kitchen and prepared to move out of the brown house east of the A Bldg. Monday, after ten and a half days of home management experience.

The students, all having different majors in the School of Home Economics, ranging from child development to food and nutrition, feel that the experience of living in the house and sharing the responsibilities of management has been invaluable to them.

"I think that it has been fun as well as being good training for us," said Susan Patchin, one of the six students. "It was good to get back in a homelike atmosphere."

Living in the Home Management house and performing the delegated duties of the roles of manager, housekeeper and laundress is a requirement of all senior home economic majors.

This experience is aimed at training the students to have "greater ability to make decisions which utilize resources well and to carry out decisions independently and purposefully."

Organization is of prime importance in carrying out the assigned duties. Each student does her part in maintaining order. There is no bickering over who will wash the dishes or carry the garbage out.

Each woman has a turn in the position of manager. In this role, she plans and prices seven meals. She is on a strict budget--none of the "steak tonight, lobster tomorrow" business.

Although their training at the Home Management house is over, the coeds were reluctant to leave.

Preparing breakfast by 7 a.m. each morning, being fully dressed with no hair rollers allowed in sight, was not so bad after all.

"We don't want to leave," said Carolyn Crusoe. . .

"They're pushing us out!" Berni Ganci added.

FSU To Host Music Workshop

This summer's Youth Symphony Workshop to be held at FSU will have special significance for 21 musically talented high school students, thanks to the efforts of four Pinellas County organizations.

The Pinellas County Youth Symphony, the St. Petersburg Junior League, the Clearwater Junior Service League and the Pinellas County Music Educator's Association have raised approximately $1000 in order to send these youths to the workshop.

The musicians will be on campus beginning July 28 for a week of intensive study and rehearsal under the baton of Alfredo Antonini, musical director of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the Tampa Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

Specialists of the School of Music faculty will also be conducting special sessions and sectional rehearsals. A grand climax will be the formal concert to be given Friday, Aug. 3.

Traditions Relived

FSU's "Dear Old Westcott Fountain"

By BOB RACKLEFF
Flambeau Staff Writer

Probably the most conspicuous and well-used traditional landmark on campus is Westcott fountain.

Located directly in front of Westcott Bldg. it is also one of the least known about features on campus.

With a little questioning of administration personnel, faculty members, and students, and a lot of walking in the renowned Tallahassee rains, this "Flambeau" reporter found some interesting information about this nebulous monument to FSU tradition.

According to the metal plaque found on its east side, the fountain was built by the FSCW classes of 1915 and 1917. Designed by the college's architect, W. Edwards, it cost a little over $2000 to construct.

Even back in FSCW days, the fountain was a center of many boisterous student activities, Mr. J. G. Kellum, retired FSCW business manager, recalled.

One of the competitions in the traditional rivalry between the "Evens" and the "Odds" was to congregate in front of Westcott, and, at a given signal, each team would try to place its colors on the highest and most prominent part of the fountain.

One of the most distinctive features about the fountain was a number of large goldfish which inhabited it, and which were reputed by many to be the largest and most colorful they'd ever seen. However, shortly after old FSCW became coeducational, the goldfish were taken out.

Since then the fountain has remained a center of traditional activities. During the school year, pool parties are held by fraternities and sororities for recently-pinned couples, new officers, and anyone else who happens to be in the vicinity.

Campus police estimated that the busiest season for pool parties is the last month of classes, when exams and graduation are near.

Also part of Westcott fountain tradition are numerous and usually harmless pranks. Constantly harassing maintenance crews are various strategically placed detergents, dyes, and animals.

Lt. J. T. Lewis of the campus police related a rather unusual and humorous prank which happened to the fountain last year. One morning a toilet appeared on top of the fountain, evidently placed there by an irate student. On the toilet appeared a sign exhorting, "Flush the trimester!" Although the means of communication might be questioned, that sentiment is shared by many.

Because of the hazardous abuttments on the fountain, there is a danger of injuries during pool parties. Mr. Ray Green, assistant business manager, disclosed that in the new student union complex will be a large rectangular reflection pool.

Groups Study Church Role

Can the Church accept criticism? Is the Church's relation to the culture a two-way affair? If it is a two-way thing, the Church must listen as well as speak.

"Often the Church has refused to listen to voices calling for renewal and relevance." "If Religion has no word for us in this time, it would have no word at all worth listening to." Statements such as these are coming from representatives of the various Protestant churches in their attempt to come to grips with what it means to be the Church in the modern world.

In searching for the Word that it may speak to the human situation, the Church finds itself driven to ask what the Church is doing and saying in our society.

Stimulated by Will Herberg's lectures on Religion in American Culture last fall, students have begun to ask whether the Word of the Church has too often been simply a reiteration of conventional niceties derived from middle-class life. Has the Church given its support to values and ideas that may or may not have Christian foundations? If this is so, then before the Church tries to speak to modern men and their dilemma, it must look to itself with a critical eye.

Such will be the intention of a united effort of the Protestant denominations this third trimester. Taking a new direction, the various religious groups on the campus will seek together in light of their differences the criticism which the Church must accept in order for it to speak relevantly.

Each Wednesday night of the trimester a supper meeting followed by a lecture, discussion and worship will be held. The focus of the study will be Peter Berger's "The Noise of Solemn Assemblies," a critique of the Church written for the National Student Christian Federation. All interested students are invited to participate.

Foster Commands Air Squadron

The Paul Suttle Squadron of the Arnold Air Society held elections of officers and planned its projects for the coming year last Tuesday.

Officers for next year are: Stephen Foster, squadron commander; James Webster, executive officer; Kit Kottrell, operations officer; James Alexander, administration officer; Tim Sparkman, controller; and John McClelland, information officer.

An honorary service organization for advanced AFROTC cadets, the main mission of the Arnold Air Society is to further the purpose, tradition, and concepts of the US Air Force, and to aid in the development of the Air Force Officer.

Bulletin

NCAA Director Walter Byers, has ruled that the University of Florida Gators will not be allowed to participate in the District 3 playoffs. This clears the way for FSU to accept the playoff birth.

Florida Coach Dave Fuller was informed by letter yesterday that his team would not be allowed to play because Auburn University already had been invited and an NCAA ruling forbids two teams in the same conference from playing in the same tournament.

Florida State is not a member of the Southeast Conference and therefore is eligible for tourney play.

Campus Movie

The campus movie will feature "No Time for Sargeants," starring Andy Griffith. Nick Adams, and Myron McCormick tonight and tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium.

Based on a play by Ira Levin, from the novel by Mac Hyman, the story tells of the time a blissfully naive Georgia hillbilly is drafted into the Air Force. His love for humanity and his simple-minded desire to be helpful make a shambles for the military organization.

Sports Note

The University of Florida invades FSU for two baseball games today and tomorrow. Game time is set for 2 p.m. for both contests. The Gators defeated Danny Litwhiler's Seminoles twice in previous games played earlier in the season in Gainesville.

Foreign Officer On Campus Today

Foreign Service Officer, Robert N. Allen, will be on campus today to meet with the faculty and student body to discuss current information concerning careers in the United States Foreign Service.

Allen will be available to meet with students in Room 201, Longmire Bldg. during two group meetings at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Allen joined the Foreign Service in 1952 and has served as Vice Consul at Liverpool, Second Secretary of Embassy at Santo Domingo, and in Washington as an International Relations Officer.

The next annual Foreign Service Officer written examination will be held Sept. 7, 1963. Candidates for the one day examination must be at least 21 and under 31 years of age on July 1, 1963. Those 20 years of age may apply if they are college graduates or if they have completed their junior year. All candidates must have been citizens of the U. S. for at least nine years.

Candidates successful in the one day examination will subsequently be examined orally by panels which will meet at regional points throughout the U. S.

Newly appointed Foreign Service Officers may be assigned for a first tour of duty either in the Department of State's headquarters in Washington, D. C. or at one of the 300 American embassies, legations or consulates abroad. Starting salaries range from $5,910 to $7,335, plus allowances, leave and other benefits.

The Foreign Service requires officers with training in public and business administration, executive management, economics and related subjects as well as those whose major courses of study include political science, history, language and area studies, geography and international affairs.

Applications to take the Sept. 7 examination may be obtained by writing to the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C. The completed application form must be received by the Board of Examiners not later than July 22, 1963.

FSU Insurance Plan Has Top Participation In Survey

Secretary of Internal Affairs Luther Kramer, has announced that FSU is 20% higher in voluntary student insurance participation than any other university which took part in a survey on students' use of university insurance plans.

The survey, conducted recently by Hugh Stewart, agent of records for Student Insurance at the University of Alabama, shows that 64% of FSU students are members of the FSU Student Insurance Plan.

In some instances, FSU had over 20% higher than some of the universities surveyed. Schools in Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi were included in the research.

Stewart has been in Tallahassee for the past few days, hoping to find methods of improving the present program at the University of Alabama, and discussing FSU's insurance program with Mr. Tom Overstreet, who is in charge of the student insurance program, under the auspices of Student Government.

The Student Government Insurance Plan will be offered at the same price of $13 per student, but with increased benefits next year.

Hospital room and board will increase from $10 to $12, miscellaneous expenses will go from $100 to $120, and surgical benefits will be $225 instead of this year's $200.

John G. Kellum, right, former business manager for FSCW shows his scrapbook to President Gordon W. Blackwell. The book, which records the history of FSCW and FSU will be presented to the library.

While Skin Diving

B. Howard Drowns At Wakulla Springs

Bentz B. Howard, a research associate for the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, was drowned around 4 p.m. Sunday at Wakulla Springs.

According to unconfirmed reports, Howard had been diving with a face mask and flippers, but was not using an air tank or further scuba equipment, when someone noticed he was at the bottom of the springs, and evidently unconscious.

Howard came to FSU in Sept. of 1957 as an instructor in chemistry. In 1959, he served as director of a Summer Science Camp held at FSU for talented high school students.

Born in 1931, Howard obtained a bachelor's degree at Washington and Lee University in Virginia, and received his Master's degree from Princeton University. He was working on a Ph. D. in Physical Chemistry, and was a member of Sigma Xi, Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Eta Sigma honoraries.

Howard is survived by his wife, Pat Clift, who is a former FSU faculty member in the Speech Dept., and by Emily, their four-year-old daughter.

FSCW, FSU Scrapbook Turned Over To Library

For more than half a century John G. Kellum has been filing away facts about FSCW and FSU, part of them in his head and part in a scrapbook.

Now the 91-year-old business manager of FSCW for 38 years has given the scrapbook to the university and President Gordon W. Blackwell said it will be turned over to the Library.

Containing newspaper clippings, letters, programs, photographs and other material, the scrapbook is devoted not only to college and university matters and personnel but to affairs of state government and the community.

In 1901 and 1903 Kellum was elected assistant chief clerk of the House and in 1905 he was elected clerk and served in that capacity in every legislative session from 1905 until 1917, when he gave up the job. Through his administration as clerk he also served as secretary of the Board of Control, and in 1907 he took over the job of treasurer and business manager of FSCW.

Cheng To Attend Physics Institute

Roger J. Cheng, a graduate student physics and meteorology and research assistant in a study of the Martian atmosphere, has been selected one of 30 persons to attend the Summer Institute in Planetary Physics at University of California at Los Angeles.

Cheng, a graduate of the University of China in Nationalist China, will have his travel expense paid to and from the institute July 29-Sept. 6 and will receive a stipend of $60 a week. Studies will cover such subjects as the physics of radiation belts and the structure of planetary atmosphere.

He is a research assistant in FSU's Institute for Space Biosciences working with Dr. Seymour Hess, head of the department of Meteorology, in a Martian atmosphere study.

Last summer Cheng was selected as one of 62 students, including two from Florida, to attend the Summer Institute in Space Physics at Columbia University.

Outdoor Band Concerts To Start Wednesday

The FSU band will begin a series of outdoor concerts in the School of Music amphitheatre, tomorrow evening.

The public is invited to the concert by the 44-member band, directed by Robert T. Braunagel. The program will be at 8:15 p.m. in the outdoor theatre.

The program will open with Wagner's "Under the Double Eagle" and Bach's "Sinfonia No. 9 in F minor." Robert Fritz, featured as soloist in the third number on the program, will play the first movement of the Hummel Trumpet Concerto. A senior studying with Braunagel, Fritz is a candidate for a bachelor's degree in music with a major in trumpet.

The University Band, made up of students attending trimester III-A, will then play "The Southerner," a march by Russell Alexander. Other numbers on the program include "State Fair Suite" by Charles Carter; a Floyd Werle arrangement of "Corrida" by Domenico Savino; and a group of Cole Porter Songs arranged by Russell Bennett.

Other Starlight Serenade Programs are scheduled for June 5 and June 12.

'Rufus Jones Speaks' To Be Review Topic

An anthology of the writings of Rufus Jones, minister-author once described by the London Times as the "greatest spiritual philosopher living in America since William James," will be the subject of tomorrow's book review by N. Orwin Rush.

Director of Libraries, Rush will review the book, "Rufus Jones Speaks to Our Time," edited by Harry Emerson Fosdick, at 5 p.m. in the Student Lounge of Longmire. The public is invited.

Rush is author of "A Bibliography of the Published Writings of Rufus M. Jones," which includes a brief account of the life of the Quaker leader who is the author of 57 books and numberous articles and editorials. In addition, he edited "Rufus Jones' Selected Stories of Native Maine Humor."

A member of the FSU faculty since 1958, Rush formerly served as director of libraries at the University of Wyoming. In 1952-53 he held a Fulbright award for research in Great Britain and last fall did research at the Naval Museum in Madrid and the Archives of the Indies in Seville.

The Money Problem

After watching the seemingly endless stalling by both houses of Florida's Legislature during the present session, a spectator is likely to have been severely jarred by the swift action of the past weekend.

A House approval, by a vote of 66-52, of a compromise spending bill of $987,000,000--a record amount and 187,000,000 more than Florida expects to receive on existing income sources--is expected to be followed by easy Senate passage of the bill this week.

Passage of the bill was effected only after the Senate had approved a constitutional amendment plan which would call for a bond program for construction at state universities. The amendment would have to be submitted to the people in a special election sometime in the fall in order to obtain the funds. The bond program would be paid for by $22,000,000 from an existing tax. The bill's fate in the House still is questionable.

Under the House-approved General Appropriations bill, FSU would be entitled to $23,442,356 in the next biennium, slightly more than the Budget Commission had recommended. Just how much would be shuttled to FSU for construction from the bond program, if approved, is yet to be decided. But it is certain that this university would receive substantially more for building funds than would now be available.

Even with the bond program, new taxes amounting to close to $100,000,000 will have to be found. That is the biggest job for the Legislature this week.

It is unfortunate that the Legislature cannot balance the state's biennial budget without new taxation, but this fact in itself is evidence of Florida's growing pains. The state, to keep up with its rapid growth, must match with expanded services. Even so, Governor Farris Bryant is certain to pare down some parts of the spending bill.

There is talk of extending the Legislative session, so that any vetoes by the governor might be considered and possibly overrided. It would be interesting to see what the results, if any, of such an extension would be.

LM

We Agree. . .

FSU students who have been following the progress of the Johns Committee should read the editorial which appeared in the Monday issue of the "Tampa Tribune."

Entitled "Put It In Uniform," the editorial points to the recent approval by the House Appropriations Committee (by a vote of 11-6) of the $155,000 budget passed by the Senate to continue the Legislative Investigations Committee for another two years, and urges that the name of the committee be changed to describe its actual activities. "Tribune" editors suggested the new moniker--"the Legislative Police Bureau on Homosexuality, reflecting what has become its principal function. Or, if a broader field of pursuit is desired, the Legislative Bureau for the Suppression of Sin."

The "Legislative Investigations Committee's" present practice of enforcing the law is unconstitutional; democracy's checks and balances principle provides for the Lesislature to make the laws, not enforce them.

We agree with the editors of the "Tribune", and we further suggest that special police uniforms be designed for the committee, if it intends to continue enforcing the laws of the state.

Better yet, we suggest that the $155,000 budget be killed on the House floor and reappropriated to a constitutionally legal operation.

Science Complex To Go Up On Former Cow Pasture Site

A complex of multi-storied buildings functionally designed for space-age research is springing up on a corner of the FSU campus which formerly was a cow pasture.

The five-story Institute of Molecular Biophysics Bldg., a million-dollar structure completed last fall, is the latest addition to the Science Center, but 19 buildings are planned in all.

Near the IMB will be a seven-story Physics Bldg., scheduled for construction within a few months. It will connect with the Nuclear Research Bldg., which soon will get a fourth floor as a result of a $244,700 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Among structures already in use for periods ranging from two to nine years are the Geology Bldg., Florida Geological Survey Bldg. and Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg. Large Chemistry and Biology buildings are planned for the next few years. Both will connect with IMB.

Other new buildings, the total of new construction costing an estimated $25 million, include structures for Engineering Science, the Inst[itute] for Space Biosciences, the Inst[itute] of Oceanography and a S[cience] [L]rary.

The Science Center, in a recta[ngle] bounded on the north by Tenne[ssee] Street (U. S. Highway 90) and the east by Woodward, is on [land] which during the Florida S[tate] College for Women days was pl[anted] in Bermuda and carpetgra[ss] occupied by the college herd of J[er]sey and Guernsey cows.

J. P. (Pasco) Love, 73-year-[old] retired superintendent of [the] farm for 35 years, said the 2[00] acre farm occupied this site [from] 1917 to 1934, when a 900-[acre] was acquired two miles [from] campus. The cow pasture part [of] ever, remained largely a va[cant] meadow until recent years.

Extending from the vicinity of Strozier Library westward [to] Call to the University School, [the] old farm had not only pastures [but] many fields of corn, sugarcane [and] vegetables, along with a poultry [farm] with 2000 chickens.

In contrast with that time, [the] pasture is sprouting modern Science Center buildings [where] dreds of students, along with [staff] members and visiting resea[rch] specialists, are tackling p[roblems] ranging from the structure [of the] atomic nucleus to the structure [of] the DNA molecule.

Typical of the activities are t[hose] of the Institute of Molecular [Bio]physics, launched in 1960 with the [help] of a $3,000,000 five-year grant f[rom] the Atomic Energy Commiss[ion]. Since last fall IMB has been loc[ated] in its permanent home, a buil[ding] with 50,000 square feet of fl[oor] space.

IMB uses a unique approach to [pro]blems in the field of health-rel[ated] studies by bringing together sc[ien]tists from several disciplines, p[ar]ticularly from biology and ch[em]istry, to study life at the sm[all] structural level, that of [the] molecule.

Some of the ablest scientists [from] half a dozen departments on c[am]pus are assembled for the researc[h] building, paid for in part from a gr[ant] by the National Institutes of Heal[th] provides laboratory space for [its] research workers and it [has] about a $1,000,000 in equip[ment].

The Institute in its three ye[ars] attracted scores of visiting resea[rch] specialists, many of them [from] abroad. Some have stayed only a [few] or two, while others have been [here] for from a few months to a full sc[hool] year.

Dr. J. N. Murrell, a theoreti[cal] chemist from England, whe[re he] holds a lectureship at the Univ[ersity] of Sheffield, returned to his h[ome] land last week after five mont[hs] research here. Murrell, wh[o has] worked in this country with [Dr.] R. S. Mulliken and J. R. Platt [at] the University of Chicago, w[as in]vited to FSU to put to laborator[y] some of the theoretical work h[e has] done in spectroscopy.

The young scientist before c[oming] to FSU was awarded the Ma[rlow] Medal which is given annually t[o a] British subject under 30 who sho[ws] the most promise in chemistry [as] indicated by his published wo[rk].

Another foreign scientist, Dr [J.] Stuy of the Philips Laboratori[es] The Netherlands, will compl[ete a] year's research here in Aug[ust]. A microbiologist, he is making st[udies] with DNA, the molecular carr[ier] hereditary characteristics.

Stuy, originally of Dutch Indon[esia] is attempting to trace the mecha[nism] by which only four known organi[sms] all bacteria, have been able to ab[sorb] added DNA, the "chromosome" heredity. Discovery of a set of [con]ditions which would allow a "tra[ns]plant" of heredity would be mo[men]tous.

Final Exam Schedule

Classes will end Friday, June 14, at 10:00 p.m. Examinations will begin at 10:00 a.m., Saturday, June 15, and end at 12:00 noon, Tuesday, June 18. Examination periods are of two hours duration.

Examinations will be given in the classroom where the sections of courses normally meet.

Example: If your class normally meets from 8:00-9:05 a.m. daily, the final examination will be given (as indicated below) on Saturday, June 15, 1:30-3:30 p.m.

Course	Time of Examination
M.T.W.Th.F. 8:00-9:05	Saturday, June 15, 1:30-3:30 p.m.
M.T.W.Th.F. 9:20-10:25	Saturday, June 15, 4:00-6:00 p.m.
M.T.W.Th.F. 10:40-11:45	Monday, June 17, 7:30-9:30 a.m.
M.T.W.Th.F. 12:00-1:05	Monday, June 17, 10:00 a.m.-12 noon.
M.T.W.Th.F. 1:20-2:25	Monday, June 17, 1:30-3:30 p.m.
M.T.W.Th.F. 2:40-3:45	Tuesday, June 18, 10:00 a.m.-12 noon.
M.T.W.Th.F. 4:00-5:05	Tuesday, June 18, 7:30-9:30 a.m.
M.T.W.Th.F. 7:30-8:55 p.m.	Monday, June 17, 4:00-6:00 p.m.
Saturday Morning Classes	Saturday, June 15, 10:00 a.m.-12 noon.

Courses meeting less than 5 times per week will have examinations according to sequence time.

Courses having laboratory periods will schedule examinations according to the time of the lecture period(s).

Students are not permitted to change sections for examinations. In unavoidable circumstances where a student must be absent from an examination, the student may request permission from his academic dean to take the examination late. No examination is to be given early in such cases.

Pre-Law Society

e pre-law society will meet Longmire Auditorium this ening at 8 p.m. to view two ms.

he first, entitled "The Sup- me Court," traces the history the Court to the present, em- asizing the original structure purpose. The second film, tled "Basic Courtroom ocedure," covers a brief se- ence of trail happenings.

Champion To Speak

Dr. John E. Champion, vice-president for administration, will be the speaker at the annual installation banquet of the Escambia County FSU Alumni Club Thursday.

New club officers will be installed at the meeting, according to Ralph W. Hanks, president. The event will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Scenic Hills Country Club, and will be preceeded by an informal social hour.

Delinquency Institute To Be Held Here

For the sixth summer, FSU will hold a Delinquency Control Institute with four weeks of seminar-type discussions of delinquency problems beginning June 18.

Primarily for law enforcement officers, juvenile court people and others dealing directly with youthful offenders, the Institute will be under the direction of Dr. Vernon Fox, professor and head of the Criminology and Corrections Dept.

During the first week Donal E. J. MacNamara, dean of the New York Institute of Criminology, will be the principal visiting speaker. MacNamara, who is well known in the field of corrections, will discuss theoretical background, research and prediction in delinquency control.

The Institute, which runs through July 13, will emphasize techniques in working with delinquents, functions of child guidance clinics and community treatment services and the public relations of agencies working with delinquent youth.

Among other guest consultants on the four-week program, during which the 20 or more attending may earn four hours of college credit, is Philip Green, director of the Division of Juvenile Delinquence Services of the U. S. Children's Bureau, Washington.

The Institute is being administered by the Division of General Extension of the Florida Institute for Continuing University Studies.

Aviator Team To Visit FSU

The naval aviator procurement team from Jacksonville, headed by Lt. U. W. King, will be on campus through this week to interview, advise, and counsel qualified men who want to earn an officer's commission and fly with the fleet.

The team's trailer will be located directly in front of the Student Center.

The aviation written exam will be administered at a time and place convenient to the student so as not to interfere with school activities. Anyone interested may take this exam by contacting one of the team members.

Students interested in the non-pilot Naval Aviation Officer Candidate (flight) Program are also encouraged to contact one of the team members.

Students with 20/200 vision correctable to 20/20 vision may now apply for the Naval Aviation Officer Candidate Program.

A flight in the navy's T-34 trainer will be available for all interested men who qualify on the written exam.

Gators Win One

Seminoles Scalp U. of F. Twice

By ERIK COLLINS

Flambeau Sports Editor

FSU took the Friday contest by a score of 6-2. On Saturday, the Tribe split a pair taking the first 5-1 and dropping the second 3-1.

The double win dispelled the charges that the College World Series committee had errored by picking Florida State instead of the University of Florida. It also made up for the double loss suffered by FSU earlier in the season in Gainesville.

In the game played Friday, Al Beccaccio brought his record to 10-1 and avenged an earlier setback to the same Gators as he limited Florida Coach Dave Fuller's charges to five hits and two runs. Beccaccio also had a good day at the plate collecting two hits in four times at bat.

FSU scored the first runs of the series in the first inning. Lead-off man Jim Reed doubled to left and was scored by Mike Augustine's single. After two outs, Augustine took second on a passed ball and scored on Dave Dahlen's single.

The Seminoles again in the second. Beccaccio singled to left and advanced all the way to third on Reed's hit-and-run poke through the middle. Augustine then drove home his second run with a single.

FSU ended its scoring in the fourth. Left fielder Billy Williamson singled and rode home on Beccaccio's triple. Gary Nichols then smashed a double to score Beccaccio and shortstop Woody Woodward followed with the second double of the inning to drive home the final tally.

The Gators, limited to no hits until the sixth, finally came alive in the seventh. Randy Morcroft singled, catcher Dave Porter walked to send him to second, and Ed Braddy loaded the bases with a single.

Ron Creese pinch-hitting for McMillan hit into a double play that scored Morcroft from third. Beccaccio then weakened and walked the next two men to again load the bases. He got out of trouble, however, as he struck the dangerous Earl Montgomery on a three and two pitch.

Florida picked up its final tally in the ninth. Creese walked, moved to second, and scored on second baseman Carol Lanoux's single.

Ray Rollyson took the loss for Florida going five innings and giving up all six of the Tribe's runs. Niel McMillan and Jim Elliot finished up for the Gators with two and three inning relief jobs respectively.

Top hitter for the Gators was Lanoux with two hits in four times at bat.

* * * * *

The first half of Saturday's game turned into a tight pitching duel until Florida's defense fell apart in the eighth inning permitting the Seminoles to score five runs for a 5-1 victory.

Tribe pitcher Allen Thomas and Gator hurler Charles Anderson matched pitch for pitch until the eighth. Thomas was wild at times but managed to work himself out of every tight spot but one.

Florida scored the first run of the game in their half of the fourth. Catcher Dave Porter doubled, a long drive that Billy Williamson, the Seminole's left fielder, got a glove on but could not hold. After Thomas got the next two batters, Al Lopez smashed a single to left in front of the charging Williamson to score Porter.

Florida State scored its five runs in a wild eighth inning. Jim Reed walked and was sacrificed to second by Mike Augustine. Augustine was safe at first when pitcher Anderson waited too long to throw him out. Gary Nichols then hit into a fielder's choice but all hands were safe when Lanoux fumbled the throw at second.

With the bases loaded, Coach Dave Fuller decided it was time for a change. He replaced Anderson with Jim Biggart.

Biggart promptly wild pitched both Reed and Augustine home in the process of walking shortstop Woodward. This left Nichols at third and Woodward at first.

Third baseman Dave Dahlen made the first out of the inning hitting a pop fly to Lanoux at second. Right fielder Monty McBryde followed with an infield grounder which was fumbled, Nichols scoring from third with the third Seminole tally of the inning.

Catcher Buddy Teagle then drove a long single to left. The Gators, slightly unnerved by this time, made two errors on the play. When the dust had cleared, Teagle was perched on third base and both Woodward and McBryde had scored.

Biggert finally settled down to retire the next two Seminoles in order. Teagle's single was the subject of bitter dispute by both left fielder Montgomery and Florida Coach Dave Fuller, both of whom claimed it was a foul ball.

Both teams were plagued with shoddy fielding. FSU committee three errors and Florida five.

* * * * *

Seminole luck finally ran out in the third game.

FSU started the scoring in the first inning. Jim Reed walked and advanced to second on a fielder's choice. Woodward then singled to left to drive in Reed.

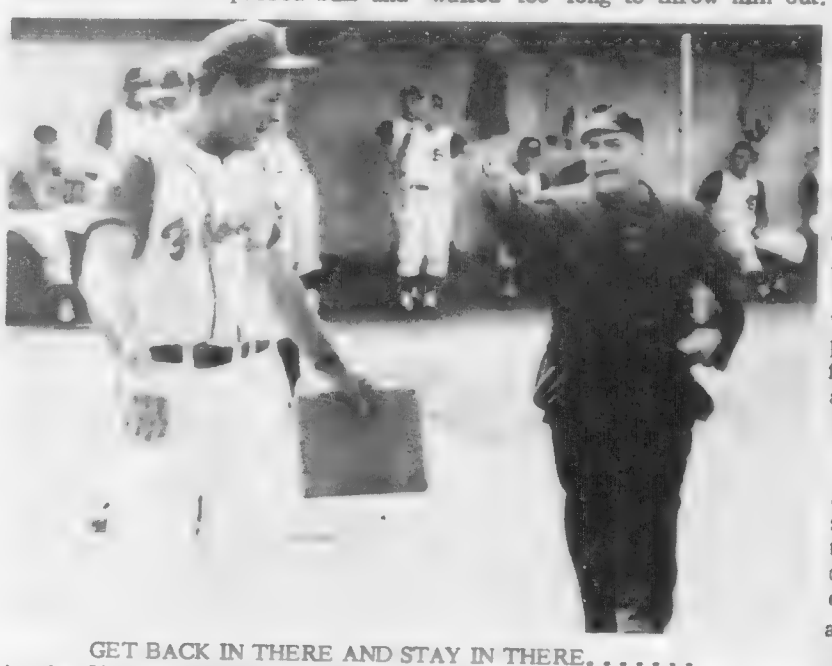
Tribe pitcher Marty Howell pitched shutout ball for three innings but was constantly in trouble due to his own lack of control.

The Gators tied the game in the fourth. First baseman Bob [illegible] walked and advanced to [illegible] third baseman Dave Dahlen [illegible] base error of Bob [illegible] grounder.

Florida got the go-ahead run [illegible] fifth. Montgomery walked [illegible] vanced to second on Wood[illegible] error. Centerfielder Bernie [illegible] then sacrificed and was safe [illegible] when Howell threw late.

Howell, understandably [illegible] walked Bob Coleman to fo[illegible] Montgomery with the winning [illegible] The Seminoles did manage to [illegible] of the inning without further d[illegible] on an alert home-to-first [illegible] play.

The Gators scored an ins[illegible] tally in the sixth on Danny Eg[illegible] single, two walks, and Tom Mc[illegible] sacrifice fly to right.



Eggert was the winning pitch[illegible] Florida, pitching the last six[illegible] ings. He allowed the Seminole[illegible] one hit and struck out four [illegible] innings he worked.

Marty Howell was the loser f[illegible] Seminoles. He pitched two-hi[illegible] for seven innings but wal[illegible] Gators while striking out [illegible]. H[illegible] was charged with all three Fl[illegible] runs.

This brings FSU's season m[illegible] 22-10. Florida, playing its [illegible] games of the season, finished [illegible] a 28-8 record.

TRIBE CENTERFIELDER MIKE AUGUSTINE. . . . beats out a sacrifice bunt in the eighth inning. Florida pitcher Charles Anderson fielded the bunt but threw too late to get Augustine. Gator second baseman Carol Lanoux (No. 4) covered first on the play.

GET BACK IN THERE AND STAY IN THERE. . . . . is what Umpire Walter Schenck seemed to be saying to Florida Coach Dave Fuller. Fuller was complaining about the call on Buddy Teagle's long single near the foul pole in the eighth inning.

Projector Gets First Run At Campus Movie Tonight

By SHEILA APPLEBY

"We don't get one everyday and we want people to appreciate it" sums up Miss Marie Williams" attitude toward the new projector "with all the trimmings" purchased from Eastman Kodak by the students of FSU.

There will be a special program at 7:30 tonight at which a number of people representing the administration and Student Government will appear onstage prior to the showing of "Quo Vadis."

Since one pays for the film according to the number of times it is shown, the cost of showing the movie has decreased from "20¢ in 1956 when only four movies were shown in five places on five different nights' to 4¢ per person.

In a questionnaire sent to 24 different colleges concerning campus movies, approximately one half charged admission, usually 35¢, with an average attendance of 559. For the whole first semester in 1956 the attendance was 2500; whereas there was more than that in one showing this past year, for example "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

There is no other college in the U.S. which has a larger attendance at campus movies than FSU.

According to Miss Williams, "people are amazed we can bring to our campus great and significant movies."

To select movies, a diversified list of available films is received, then several informal surveys with a large number of FSU students participating are conducted, and in this manner Miss Williams "weeds out" possible selections.

Though a new Student Union is under way, Miss Williams said that "because of the seating capacity of Westcott and because the projectors will have been paid by student admissions, the administration has agreed that Westcott movie programs will be continued as a part of the Student Union program."

Rush Reviews 'Rufus Jones'

"He had the conviction that the soul is more like God than anything in the universe," said Mr. Orwin Rush during his review of "Rufus Jones Speaks to Our Times,' by Rufus Jones.

Jones was raised, according to Rush, "in a house where religion was an air of family breed," and was a typical small town boy brought up in a staunch Quaker atmosphere.

Having done much religious and mystical writing, Jones "found religion real, adventurous, and exciting." Even as a boy, he felt that when reading biblical stories, "the deeds of the characters were more a part of him than movie actors."

Jones is noted primarily for his many diversified writings. He has written histories, religious philosophies, inspirational books and books for youth. His work most relevant to college students is, "The Trail of Life in College.'

In his book, much thought is given to questions of religious mysticism and Jones' answers are "expressed in a clear and precise way."

Rush quoted Jones as saying, "It is impossible to be a person without being a member of society. We do not know any ideals that have not sprung out of the past."

In the content of his book, Jones has also stated that "If we are to be effective peacemakers we must be more than propagandists. . . .it is good will and kindness that invades, conquers, and builds. Prayer is its own reward; it is an end in itself."

Rush, FSU's Director of Libraries, holds a long and distinguished career in Library Science. He has compiled a bibliography of the writings of Rufus Jones, and has edited, "Rufus Jones' Selected Stories of Native Maine Humor."

New Honorary Chapter Formed

Tully Gym, equipment is pro- for badminton, basketball, ten- volleyball, softball, soccer, table tennis, track, and horseshoes.

The Tully equipment center is open from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Also open to students at Tully are gymnastic equipment, a wrestling room, and a weight lifting room.

Table tennis and badminton equipment is available at Montgomery Gym, which is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. In addition, for students who want to beat the heat, the indoor swimming pool is open for recreational swimming from 6:30 to 7:30 each weekday evening.

The field house behind Montgomery provides equipment for tennis, golf, volleyball, basketball, and softball, and is open each weekday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. However, student use for much of this equipment is limited since much of it is used during the day for various PE classes.

In order for students to check out equipment, ID cards must be presented. Normally, equipment must be returned by 12 a.m. the day after it is checked out, except for weekends, when it may be held out over the weekend.

Coed To Perform In Texas Revue

An FSU graduate student, Anne O. Huston, is one of 30 chosen in talent auditions for the Campus Revue at "Six Flags Over Texas," it has been announced.

The Campus Revue goes into rehearsal tomorrow, and opens at the 115-acre family amusement center midway between Fort Worth and Dallas in mid-June.

Anne auditioned first when the "Six Flags" talent scouts were in Florida, and she was called back for the final auditions to sing again before the judges. A soprano, Anne prefers music from shows and Broadway musicals. Anne majored in English, and wants to be an airline stewardess when her education is complete.

The 21-year-old singer has been a soloist with FSU's University Singers, and has performed for civic, social and church organizations as well.

The 1962 edition of the Campus Revue played to some 300,000 spectators at the "Six Flags" show last summer, and this year the Amphitheatre was enlarged to accommodate an even greater audience.

20 Teachers To Attend FSU Radiation Institute

It has been announced that 20 teachers have been selected to attend the fourth Summer Institute in Radiation Biology at FSU, June 17-Aug. 10.

In addition to a weekly stipend of $75 and dependency allowance, each participant will receive some $1500 worth of radiological equipment to set up small laboratories in their own high schools.

Dr. Sherwood M. Reichard, director of the institute, said that coursework will cover radiation science and radiation biology, and will be taught by faculty members with supplementary lectures and seminars by non-faculty scientists.

Funds for this institute have been provided by grants from the National Science Foundation and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Those selected to attend include: Florida-Thomas A. Strickland, Miss Frances M. Abbott, Lee R. Summerlin, Donald K. McCubbin, Richard Bennett; Louisiana-Henry A. Hazlitt, J. Gene Williams; New Jersey-Martin W. Rudy; North Carolina-Jacey J. Bell, James W. Wilke; Ohio-Joseph L. Snider; Rhode Island-Brother Anthony L. Scotto, FSC; Tennessee-William O. West; Texas-George L. Ganze, Mrs. Anna L. Casey, James C. Kee, George P. Ivy, Lloyd S. Patterson; West Virginia-Miss Mary F. O'Conner.

APO Initiates

The active chapter of Alpha Phi Omega has initiated its first Trimester III pledge class.

New pledges are: Roger McDonald, Marvin Davis, Carl Duncan, Henry Johnson, Brian Campbell and Clinton Terry.

Officers of the pledge class are Ty Casoria, president; George Bowman, vice president; and Mike Sanders, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

Active Barry Cobb was pledge master and was assisted by Ron Morales.

The actives defeated the pledges in a traditional football game recently.

Seniors And Graduates

Mr. Harold Stewart, special agent of Provident Mutual Life, will be in Room 8 of Longmire today to interview any seniors and graduate students interested in insurance as a vocation.

Interviews will be by appointment only, and qualifications are: a bachelor of science degree in the insurance or business field; upper two-thirds of the class; no age limit.

Training will be required to start in management or sales with a starting salary guaranteed.

Chivalry Is Southern Heritage

Today the South is in the midst of a gigantic social struggle that is being carefully monitored by the nations of the world. Albany, Little Rock, Oxford, and now Birmingham have informed the rest of the earth that the Southern way of life, our heritage, is dying in the streets of Birmingham trampled by the feet of hundreds of "modern" negroes seeking fair and equitable treatment in the eyes of the law.

Is our Southern Heritage dying, or is it already dead? What does it mean to the college student of the sixties? Sooner or later these two questions cross the mind of every student at Florida State who was raised north of Ocala and South of Cincinnati. Unfortunately many students toss the question aside, escorted by a deluge of adjectives such as fantasy, outdated, decadent, backward, etc. The sad truth is that most never realize what the Southern way of life is.

It is not Bull O'Conner directing a firehose, nor is it Harper Lee writing a novel. Neither is it agrarian, hospitable, black, white nor antebellum. These are only bushes in the forest of our heritage. The real meaning behind it all is remote but modern, ancient but applicable, and idealistic yet real.

The key, the one word above all that describes our heritage, is chivalry--valor, nobleness, fairness, courtesy, respect for authority.

Chivalry came across the Atlantic via English gentlemen and their counterparts on the continent who settled in the New World. Many of the ex-landed gentry of the Old World matriculated to the South and established an agrarian economy much like that in Europe, but based on slave labor. Then came the cotton gin, the "flying shuttle," and the industrial revolution which meant King Cotton and idle time and money for plantation owners. Out of this situation developed the Old South and chivalry honed to a fine point.

Chivalry was the guiding light of social conduct, the measure of values, and the code of honor. The concept is just as meaningful today stripped of the crinolines and carriages of the past. The principles embodied in chivalry are just as applicable today as they were hundreds of years ago! A chivalrous man stands the same in rags or armor, britches or button-downs.

The South has fought honorably and lost; its lands have been ravished by the economic scum of the North. From the reconstruction days come the bitter, malevolent attitudes that haunt our social structure today. From the bones of the shattered skeleton of the Old South was constructed the make-shift economy that shackeled the progress and recovery of the region to abnormal situations such as world wars and cheap (black and white) labor--enforced by the threat of violence and economic oppression. The South retrieved its pride from the honorable mud of Appomattox and did the best it could while the U.S. bungled its first foreign aid program.

Yet the so-called "modern liberal" of college age doubts the relevance of it all. Communism and Martin Luther King aren't irrelevant to the concept of chivalry. Since when did the dignity of the individual become irrelevant to situations involving human beings and a matter of color. Respect for authority is the basic fiber around which the whole concept of chivalry is woven. Sometimes Joe College could use a little more of this basic fiber in weaving his thoughts into attitudes and concepts.

The tallest tree in the forest of our Southern Heritage is the oak of chivalry. There are scores of others that need trimming or felling, but it takes a long time for a tree to grow. We know from past experience. Be proud of your heritage, and be worthy of your forefathers. Find out what chivalry means to you.

Night At The Movies

"Two, please," I said to the sweet young thing in the tiny, glass-walled room adjoining the lobby. As she punched the little button that barfs up the cute little pieces of cardboard, I was struck squarely between the eyes by a larger piece of cardboard which was inconspicuously placed at eye level. The words on the cardboard said something about refusing something-or-other to somebody.

When I asked her how long she expected that larger piece of cardboard would stay there, the glass walls fogged as the silky blonde hair on the back of her petite red neck stood on end. "Fouh evuh!!" she replied calmly, sending the large piece of cardboard skittering out of the little glass room.

I turned around to see a young man with dark glasses and a goatee pick up the cardboard and write something on it. Then he scotch-taped it to a pencil and held his handiwork aloft. "Unfair," it said.

Then a small crowd of students from the Other University came walking down the street. (I could tell they were students because the night air was pinkened with the glow of other angry necks dotting both sides of the street.)

One of them stepped clamly to the window and said, "One please." Doors slammed, women fainted, dogs barked, lead doors were fitted to their hinges, wooden bars were put all around the glass room, big guns were rolled into place, and everyone on the other side of the great glass wall stared menacingly outside.

The air crackled and popped with the sound of cardboard unfurling and scotch tape tearing. Suddenly there were signs everywhere.

"Equal rights," "Discrimination," "Unfair," "Tired of 'Tarzan and the She Wolf'," "Tired of 'Drag Strip Queen'," "Tired of 'Return of Dracula'," they said.

From out of the Red, White, and Blue Bookstore across the street came a dozen or so clean cut young men with immaculate black T-shirts and dungarees. They had signs, too. "All agitators are Communists," "America for Americans," "Yankee go home," they said.

Then a great sign unfurled over the heads of the students from the Other University. "All who say all agitators are Communists are Communists," it said.

Soon the movie was over and everybody went home to get more cardboard.

Anybody want two tickets?

Complacency Is Dangerous

To the Editor:

My purpose in writing this article is to express my views on a certain situation which seems especially relevant to the present day situation of our society. This is a situation which concerns every American no matter what his or her station in life may be. My criticisms will be directed to certain facets of our society and population, whose actions and inactions I view as dangerous to our American way of life.

I hope to point out that complacency by the majority of American citizens and the radical views of vocal minorities are detrimental to the ideals of democracy which we all cherish.

On one point we can be certain, and that is that we know just where our vocal minorities stand, for they are easily heard in the lull of complacency within our society. These vocal minorities, whether right wing or left wing, are vehement and unchanging as far as their political platforms are concerned. Because of the fact that they are very vocal minorities, one may conclude that they are the spokesmen for the majority of the American people.

I contend that this is not the case and should not be the case. It is my impression that the majority of American people are apathetic as far as politics and its inherent impact on the lives of all Americans are concerned. The "what's the use" and "you can't beat city hall" attitudes seem to prevail. This is mirrored in the fact that our voting turnouts are small in comparison to that of some other democratic countries, but yet we cherish the right to vote as one of the basic rights of democracy.

From all indications, it seems that the American people want all the rights and privileges of a democracy without taking any of the responsibilities that go hand in hand with it. This situation is very convenient for radicals of all sorts, for it gives them the chance to take the initiative. Complacency and ignorance provide the necessary atmosphere in which the vocal minority thrives.

It seems that the "silent generation" of college students has become the "silent generation' of adults. Teachers and professors seem to take no part in the controversial issues of our time except for a few remarks brought out in the course of a lecture while in the security of their classrooms. The "Organization Man' trained in our institutions of higher learning is so bent in the quest for his material security that he has no time to contribute to the welfare of his fellow man.

Our professional people rarely provide the leadership which we need to carry out the ideals of a democratic state. Our religious leaders have done little to promote ideals which they preach. It seems that no one individual wants to get involved in controversial issues for fear of reprisal by his peers, which in turn results in the vicious circle of smug complacency.

The majority of our population must voice their opinions and accept the responsibilities of our democracy. Complacency is not a luxury which our country can afford, for there is too much at stake for all concerned.

Your Choice

To the Editor:

Recently students from FAMU have been picketing the downtown theaters. Each time that they try to gain admission they are systematically refused. One of the purposes of these pickets is economic in nature. If they are successful in preventing enough customers from attending the movies, they will be hitting where it hurts the most--the pocketbook. Since our society is largely motivated by the profit motive, these tactics have been successful in many cities.

If you are in sympathy with what these students are risking physical harm and arrest for, you can aid them by simply refusing to patronize any of the downtown theaters. It is your choice-help or hinder.

Romney Being 'Pushed'

The big question since Rockefeller got hitched again has been: who the liberal press start pushing in his place?

It isn't hard to figure out that it won't be Goldwater. . .that was verified by the history of Republicanism since Alf Landon. The liberals always say that only a "me-too' candidate has a chance, and the "me-tooer" has always been nominated, thus setting up the "I won, tails you lose" situation in which the American public is denied the opportunity to make a clear-cut choice between a liberal and a conservative.

The liberals will have a go at it again this year, and it looks as if Romney will be the man. Please clip this column and file it away until next year and see. In the "Democrat' recently was a cartoon showing Rocky smitten by cupid's arrow with a chortling opponent standing over him. Who, you ask, Goldwater? For after all, he and Rocky were the two front-runners? Hell no, Romney.

On the opposite page is a story entitled, "Romney Seen as Vote Getter." This story praises Romney, a man who carried his state by about [illegible] votes and failed to carry a single running mate with him, as not one of those nasty old Republicans so much as an independent who therefore has a change at attracting liberal Democratic votes. The story points makes Goldwater seem reluctant to run, while breezily overlooking the fact that Romney said unequivocally that he was not going to run.

Next we will see the spectacle of the poll-takers, and Romney, on the basis of a handful of polled individuals, will be catapulted into the "most popular" spot. They will show that Romney is more popular among Democrats, conveniently overlooking the fact that most Democrats are going to vote for a Republican anyhoo.

These super press productions are of the same type which depicted Mao as an "agrarian reformer," and prompted the joke about Fidel Castro that he got his job through the "New York Times." [illegible]

Another sign you should by all means watch for is the splurge of Romney biographies which will rocket to the best seller lists, depicting him as a two-fisted titan of no-nonsense economy, etc., etc. And of course, be sure to watch for the magazine articles in "Time," "Life," "Look," "Saturday Evening Post," and so on.

I'm an embittered Goldwater supporter, you say? Perhaps, but wait and see if it isn't true.

Behind The White Door

Faculty Club Serves FSU Profs

By ADELINE PETERSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered what the faculty does behind that intriguing white door covered by the red awning on the south side of the Suwannee Room?

Actually they may be doing many things. A faculty member might be taking his wife and children out to lunch, he might be having a conference with some colleagues, or just looking for a cup of coffee in solitude, away from the hustle and bustle of students.

As Miss Marie Williams of the Student Activities Office put it, the Faculty Club had been "a dream for a long time."

On Feb. 1 of 1961 the dream was realized. Since that time the club has been increasing its membership annually and now stands as one of the most popular eating places on campus for faculty members.

Two club patrons pause in their day's work for coffee and conversation in the Faculty Club, located on the south side of Suwannee Room.

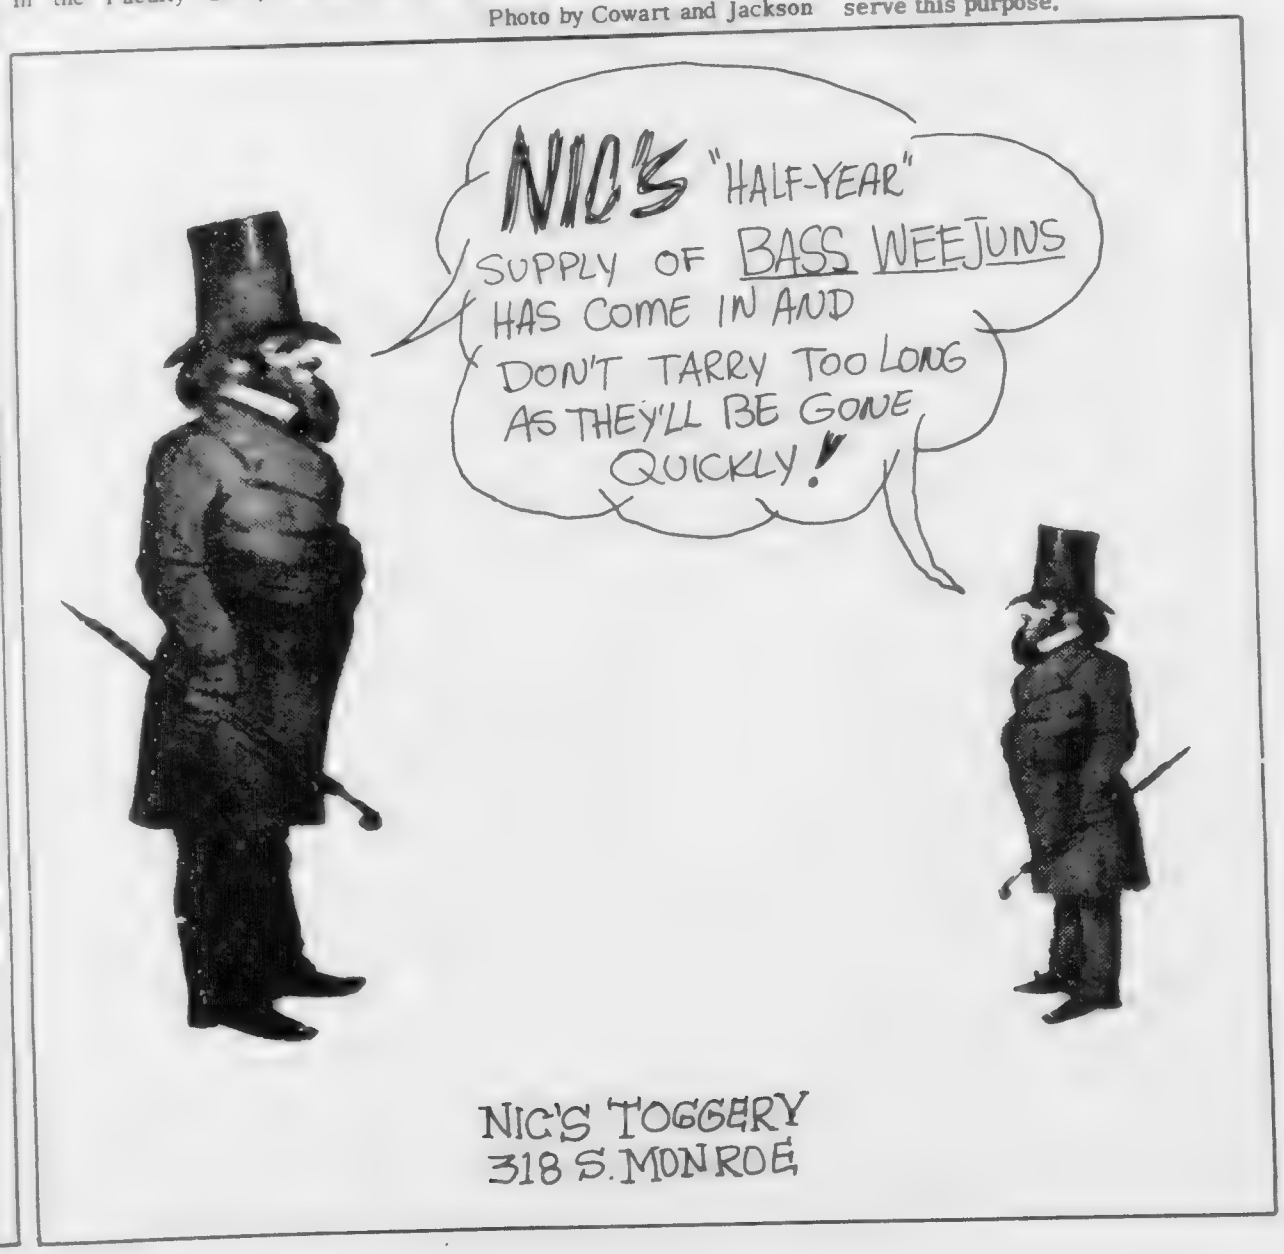
The club has recently elected officers and a new board. The new board is composed of Dr. Ray Green, Dr. Ivan Johnson and Dr. Homer Black. The newly elected officers are: Dr. Wiley Houseright, President; Dr. Daisy Parker, Vice President; Miss Marie Williams, Secretary; Dr. Thomas Lewis, Treasurer.

The membership is limited to faculty, staff, the Board of Control, backers, Geologic Surveyors, and Career Administrators. Of course the members are allowed visitors. The club is open Monday through Friday from eight to five, and also on special occasions.

When the club was in its early stages of being designed it was "a place where even the rats would not live," according to Miss Williams.

However, upon entering the club now one would hardly believe that it had been at one time a dingy basement.



Today the club would remind one of a dimly lit exclusive restaurant. The walls are covered with a beige straw matting and the ceiling is bright turquoise.

The furniture provides gentle contrast with apricot and white chairs. Lining the walls are many elegant paintings supplied by the Art Dept.

Besides the main dining room, there is also a small room which is primarily used for conferences, and a waiting room just inside the door. The food is served in cafeteria style and is supplied by Morrisons.

The Faculty Club may also be rented by students for special occasions at a very small fee. It is often used by sororities, fraternities, honoraries and clubs, as well as by the faculty for receptions and banquets.

Someday the faculty hopes to enlarge the club and its facilities. "In a campus of this size there is a great need for the faculty to have a better opportunity to get to know each other," contended Miss Williams. "A larger faculty club would better serve this purpose."

Florida State Opens Defense Of District 3 Baseball Tourney

Florida State opened its defense of the District 3 NCAA Baseball Tournament yesterday in Gastonia, N.C. Results were not available at presstime.

The Seminoles were scheduled to take on Auburn University in the first game at 10:30 a.m. Wake Forest and West Virginia followed at 1:30 p.m. At 6 p.m., the losers of the afternoon contests met with the loser of this game being eliminated from the tourney.

Bulletin

Florida State defeated the University of Auburn 4-3 in the first game of the semi-finals of the District 3 Tournament. Billy Williamson hit a homerun in the seventh inning to decide the contest. Al Beccaccio was the winning pitcher.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

At 8 p.m. the two winners met, the winner moving to the finals on tomorrow and the loser playing the winner of the third game today.

The winner of today's semi-finals will meet the Thursday's double winner tomorrow in the final.

Florida State has won two district titles in its last six tries. The Tribe was chosen as the at-large representative.

West Virginia won the Southern Conference title. The Mountaineers compiled an over-all 29-1 record, the most impressive of the tournament teams.

Auburn recorded a 17-8 season mark in taking the Southeastern Conference title. Wake Forest won the Atlantic Coast Conference title winning 25 and losing nine.

The Seminoles have appeared seven times in the last eight years as the at-large representative. In 1957 and again last year the Tribe advanced to the semi-finals of the College World Series.

In six previous appearances, FSU has compiled a 13-13 record in NCAA tournament play.

This year the Seminole nine won 22 and lost 10 in regular season play. The only double loss came at the hands of Florida.

Victims included Auburn, Clemson, Florida Southern, Miami, Furman, Valdosta State, North Carolina, Duke, Georgia Tech, Georgia, and Florida.

Three school records were broken this year. Centerfielder Mike Augustine batted .430 and garnered 58 hits, both new records.

Al Beccaccio became the first pitcher to win nine or more games compiling a 10-1 mark. Shortstop Woody Woodward broke his own school record for assists with 117.

Williams Stars In AAU Meet

The Tallahassee Athletic Club, led by the record breaking performance of Al Williams, won the Georgia AAU meet in Atlanta earlier this week.

The Tallahassee Athletic Club is made up primarily of Florida State students.

Al Williams

Williams, who set a new Southeastern shotput record with a heave of 59 feet 10 inches, also took a first in the discus with a throw of 160-feet.

Other TAC wins came in the mile relay and the 440-yard relay.

The mile team was composed of Doug Ferry, Tom Houston, Craig Johnson, and Jerry McDaniel. The 440-yard team consisted of Al Caito, C. Johnson, Hutch Johnson, and McDaniel.

SPORTS

In all the shouting about the University of Florida being unfair out of the District 3 Tournament it seems to be conveniently forgotten just why the Gators didn't make it.

An NCAA rule states that two teams from the same conference cannot participate in the same tournament. Thus Florida could not be invited as Auburn, Southeast Conference champion, has already clinched a tourney spot.

What may be of note is that Florida State, while losing three games to the Gators, defeated conference champion Auburn in four out of five tries.

What the boys in Gatorland need to do is win their own conference and not complain when another school receives a legitimate invitation.

The Seminoles have four potential All-Americans going into District 3 competition.

Catcher Buddy Teagle was a first-team selection last year. He has a below par .276 batting average, Teagle smashed 3 home runs and drove in 20 runs.

Pitcher Al Beccaccio picked up 10 victories this year to set a school record. Beccaccio failed to finish just one game this season but was the winner of that one.

Mike Augustine set two new FSU marks with a batting average of .430 and a base hit total of 58.

Shortstop Woody Woodward set a new school record for assists although he had a poor year at the plate he did drive in 21 runs to help the team.

Arthur Williams, former Vice-President of FSCW

In Memory Of Arthur Williams

History Building To Change Its Name

"He built on the sure foundation of faith in God and in man" will be the inscription on the plaque to be unveiled at the dedication of the History Bldg. in honor of Arthur Williams on Wednesday.

The building, constructed 37 years ago, will be officially dedicated as the Arthur Williams Bldg. in honor of the history and Bible scholar who for 24 years served as vice-president of FSCW, the only vice-president FSCW ever had.

Guyte P. McCort, clerk of the Florida Supreme Court and a former student of FSU, will be the principle speaker at the ceremonies to be held at 3 p.m. in the foyer of Conradi Theatre.

President Gordon W. Blackwell will preside at the dedication and the Rev. William D. Stewart, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, will give the invocation.

"Mr. Pi," as Williams was known, came to FSCW in 1901 where he served as professor of history until 1931. From 1931 to 1937 he was professor of Bible and religious education. In 1913 he also served as vice-president of FSCW until his death in 1937.

Born in Radnorshire, South Wales, he attended the King Edward VI Grammar School in Wales; Elmfield College in Yori, England, where he received an A.B. degree in 1878; Cambridge University, where he received his master of arts degree in 1883; and Cook County Normal School, Chicago, where he received a certificate in 1887.

His teaching career began at Grocers Company School for Boys in London. He then taught at Cathedral School in Carslisle, England, and at the University School in Nottingham, England.

Williams came to America in 1886. From 1892 to 1897 he was principal of the Lakeland, Florida, high school and from 1897 to 1901 he was principal of Summerlin Institute, in Bartow. He also was a member of the Polk County School Board for five years.

Dr. Edna Rees Williams of Northhampton, Mass., a daughter who has been a member of the Smith College faculty for many years, and A. Rees Williams of Tallahassee, a son, are expected to be here for the occasion.

Welcome FSU Guests

Host Bureau Proposed By Smith

By MAX COURTNEY

A Host Bureau, proposed by Student Body President Johnny Smith as a part of his ...gram for '63-'64, will become a working reality in the second half of the third ...imester.

The Bureau will be under the direction of John Jones, secretary of state, who will ...ve as chairman.

... Smith and Jones talked ...tedly about the purposes, hopes, ... future of the Host Bureau. Jones ... that, "Student Government ... aware of the need of a host ...mittee to aid in welcoming guests and visitors to the FSU campus has established a Host Bureau."

Smith added "that there is a real need to establish good relationships between students presently here and important campus visitors--especially if the visitors are students, as in the case of athletic possibilities.

"With the Host Bureau students can communicate with students. The administrators and coaches who are now responsible find that regular duties don't allow time to devote to performing host duties. In instances like this the Host Bureau can be most valuable."

"The Bureau will begin its operations this trimester and continue as a permanent government agency in the future," according to Jones.

It will be composed of Student Government officers and appointees who are familiar with the operation of FSU. Appointments for the Bureau were made by the president in agreement with the secretary of state, summarized Jones.

The eleven bureau members are, Student Government president, vice-president, men's vice-president, chief justice of the honor court, attorney general, secretary of finance, secretary of the university union, secretary of communication and public affairs, secretary of internal affairs, chairman of the University Court and the secretary of state, who will co-ordinate the affairs of the Host Bureau with visitors and guests on campus.

'Dark Of The Moon' To Open Tomorrow

...hat happens. . .
... the moon goes dark
... witches fly?
When the thunder peals
And eagles cry?

... the stage of Conradi Theatre, tomorrow through Sunday, when the ...oon and house lights) go dark at 8:15 p.m. the conjur folk and witches ... meddle with the destinies of people in a mountain community. "Dark of the Moon," by Howard Richardson and William Berney, ...metimes referred to as the dramatic legend of Barbara Allen, will ...ng to a close the 1963 University Theatre season.

...irected by Sam Baker, "Dark of the Moon" features an able cast headed ... Annette Hannon as "the fairest gal... Barbara Allen," and Eddie Reid ... the witch boy who falls in love with her.

...eatured as the two provocative witch-gals are Ellen Whigham and Judy ...debrand, and in the role of "Ma Allen" is Louise Beddingfield. ...hers in the cast are Ken Richart as "Pa Allen," Jimmy Rayfield as "The Conjur Man," Betsy Stafford as "The Conjur Woman," Susan Jekel ... "Miss Mercalf," John Hoffman as "Uncle Smelicue," Kent Wood as "Preacher Haggler," John McCotter as "Marvin Hudgens," and many ...ers.

...he plot of "Dark of the Moon" revolves around the strange love of a ...itch boy for a carefree mountain girl. Through conjur magic he is ...anted permission to become human and to marry his Barbara Allen if ...e will be faithful to him for a year.

...Barbara's reputation as a flirt casts serious doubts upon the result of ...is bargain, and two witch gals make their own bargain that, if Barbara ... not faithful for the appointed time, she must die and leave the witch boy ... them.

...n the mountain valley, the superstitious people are uneasy; their narrow ...ounds have been tainted by Barbara's eerie young man, and in a fanatic ...evival meeting in the church, they force her, unmercifully, to be unfaithful to her husband.

..."Dark of the Moon's" message rises above the action of the stirring ...olk drama: while witches may play in the moonlight, they've got 300 years ... . . then they must turn to mountain mist, and "thar ain't no more;" ...umans, however, live briefly, and the nature of man or witch cannot be ...anged, or can it?

Tickets are now on sale at the main Ticket Office in Westcott, priced at ... cents for students and $1.50 for all others.

Business Honor Society Formed

The organization of a local chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the only scholastic honor society in business administration recognized by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business, has been announced by FSU.

In the field of business, election to Beta Gamma Sigma is the greatest academic honor a student can achieve. Twenty-six FSU students are in the Gamma Florida Chapter.

Dean Donald J. Hart of the College of Business Administration, University of Florida, will be the installing officer at the banquet to be held Monday at the Duval Hotel.

Dean Charles A. Rovetta of the FSU School of Business has been elected president of the chapter. Other faculty members are H.C. Edgeworth, secretary - treasurer, Finley E. Belcher, Homer A. Black, John E. Champion, O.D. Dickerson, Peter Dukas, Harry H. Elwell, Jr., Persis Emmett, W.R. Heck, Warren B. Nation, Royal H. Ray, J. Richard Stevens, Harvey D. Tschirgi, and Waino W. Suojanen.

To be eligible for election to Beta Gamma Sigma, a candidate must rank in the upper 10 per cent of his graduating class. Juniors must be in the upper 4 per cent and Master's candidates must stand in the upper 20 per cent.

Starlight Concert To Be Tomorrow

The Brass Choir, a small group of specialized instrumentalists conducted by Dr. Clifford Madsen, will present a Starlight Serenade concert tomorrow night.

The program will begin at 8:15 in the outdoor theatre of the Music School Bldg. It is free and open to the public. In the event of rain the concert will be held in Opperman Music Hall.

The eight-number program will open with a Bach March, Chorale and Fugue and a sonata by Giovanni Buonamente, followed by In Modo Religioso by Alexander Glazounov.

Other selections on the program will be Paduana by Johann H. Schien, Mozart's Fugue (K. 401); Music for Brass Instruments by Dahl and Modern Moods by Norman Dietz.

FSU Library Is Given Children's Periodicals

Florida State University today announced an addition to a growing collection of children's periodicals: the first five volumes of "The Little Corporal" (1865-1869).

The gift to Strozier Library is from Miss Miriam Wilson, director of Presbyterian Westminster House. Miss Wilson said the gift was in honor of Guyte P. McCord Sr., for 35 years the chairman of Presbyterian student work at FSU, and now the chairman of Friends of the FSU Library. Miss Wilson received her Ph. D. degree in English literature in April.

According to Director of Libraries Orwin Rush, the rare book gift adds to a collection originally begun by the late Miss Louise Richardson, who was librarian for many years.

"Recognizing that the years 1869-1920 were the great age of children's periodicals, Miss Richardson acquired over the years substantial runs of "The Youth's Companion," "Wide Awake," "Merry's Museum," and "Oliver Optic's Magazine," he said.

In recent years business executive John MacKay Shaw contributed his collection of more than 5000 volumes containing childhood in poetry, including rare volumes of "St. Nicholas," "Our Young Folks," "Peter Parley's Magazine," "Aunt Judy's Annual," "Good Words," "Household Words and others.

Rush said that within the last year the Library had been fortunate enough to acquire a nearly complete run of th famous British publication, "The Boys' Own Paper."

Rush added that he hoped alumni and other friends of the library will add to the collection, all part of the Childhood in Poetry collection.

Moderation Needed

Thanks to the mature and responsible attitude of city leaders, Tallahassee's latest racial crisis in momentarily past.

The climax was reached Thursday, with the arrest of over 200 Negro demonstrators who defied the court-issued temporary injunction against mass demonstrations seeking desegregation of the all-white State and Florida theaters. Certainly they cannot claim that their arrest was unjust; they must have known the consequences their action would bring, since the husband of their leader was recently graduated from Florida A & M law school. And if they hoped to appear in the eyes of the watchful nation as martyrs to the racial injustice of Southern white courts, they must have been greatly disappointed.

Circuit Judge Ben C. Willis should be commended for his wise action in a difficult situation. By suspending those arraigned before him Friday, with a severe warning against further defiance of the court injunction, he made doubly clear the position that Tallahassee's leaders have taken in averting violence, such as has occurred in other now bloodbathed Southern cities.

Peaceful demonstrations are continuing this week, under the specific regulations set down in the injunction. As long as the situation remains calm and peaceful, business will go on as usual, although the atmosphere is likely to remain tense and watchful against any little spark that will set off an explosion.

It is the way of students everywhere to scorn moderation and urge immediate action; it is also their way to be in the thick of that action. But social change must come slowly; for without moderation, law and order is sacrificed to expediency.

FSU students are not immune to arrest, and it is to be hoped that any attempt on their part to interfere illegally will not be allowed. FSU students in sympathy with the movement have the same rights of expression as the demonstrators themselves, but they must abide by the same rules. Students who are not in sympathy with the demonstrators still must recognize the rights of the Negroes, and would best discourage the movement by refusing to be a spectator to it.

Above all, individual rights must not be clouded over by the emotionalism involved in racial demonstrating. What law is it that would take away from the property owner, in this instance the theatre owner, the right to choose his patrons? Peaceful demonstration and even voluntary boycott of the theaters by white sympathizers eventually may break down the lines of color, but coercion will not.

Attitudes are changing in the South; but they will have to change much more before complete social integration can be expected. Little by little stores, restaurants and theaters will open their doors to Negroes. Only gradual change can conquer the accumulated prejudices of the past centuries.

This Is Not Birmingham

Last Thursday evening Tallahassee was the setting of an incident which resulted in some nation-wide recognition for one of the uglier facets of life in this community: an incident centering around the peaceful picketing of a local theater by Negro students and involving the arrest of some 227 demonstrators.

The apparent lack of objectivity on the part of reporters for the national news media has resulted in coverage which paints a rather distorted picture of life in Tallahassee. Of course, none of us claims complete objectivity, and most of us believe that all life here does not center around such incidents.

I think we must realize that the aim of a basically sensationalistic press in this country is not necessarily to give the reader a complete picture of the context in which a particular event occurs--only to report "news." And so we should not attempt to blame our problem on the national press or other news media.

Neither should we refuse to acknowledge the existence of our problem, nor place the blame with "northern agitators," the "northern press," the NAACP, or Communists. It has become increasingly the fashion to point accusing fingers northward and to tell-them-dam-yankees-to-clean-up-their-own-front-yard. A locally-heard newscaster who calls himself "Florida's foremost news commentator" practices this ritual almost daily on his program. This is not the answer either. Like it or not, this situation is our baby.

Fortunately for those of us who are concerned with this problem, cooler heads have thus far prevailed. I would single out for praise at this time the Tallahassee Police Department (which is not usually so singled-out), May Sam Teague and the rest of the City Commission, the conscientious writings of the local "Democrat," and Paul Brown, whose cool-headed letter appearing in Friday's "Flambeau" I consider a quite reasonable recommendation.

For those who would attack the Police Dept. for its part in the current issue because of the possi[ble] questionable way it may have han[dled] some past issues, certain [facts] should be pointed out. The po[lice] have been keeping a wat[chful] eye the peaceful demonstrat[ors] for past several days. The police h[ad] had the unpleasant task of pro[tect]ing the demonstrators from cer[tain] "shirttail toughs" (as the "De[mo]crat" described them); and thi[s] have done.

It was not until there was [a] violation of a court injunctio[n] the police took any actio[n] the demonstrators. The [de]cision the City Commission thous[ht] sary was taken. . .apparently effectively, as no one was [hurt] seriously at last report.

Whether we sympathize with fellow students or not, we must that Tallahassee does not becom[e] Birmingham.

Conservatism Doomed. Unless . . .

Recently a Goldwater for President group met on campus. How sad it is that a man that could deliver us from the Kennedy plague should fall into such hands.

Although it met on campus, less than 25% of those present were students. The usual right wing flags were flown: "Goldwater is an American" (whatever that means), "he will return us to constitutional rule" (isn't their complaint against Kennedy that he "uses" the constitution to rule). The time could never be better. The self-seeking policies of the present administration and their major failures have alienated a large enough part of the public that election of a conservative is a possibility.

But apparently our right wing can never learn. Opposition must not come from the usual emotional value judgments but from factually supported evidence. The American people have not lost their alternative, the conservative-liberal argument is still a vital issue and should be decided from knowledge not slogan.

The conservative leaders, by associating with retarded business interests, emotional reactionaries and offended southerners, lose what support they might have received from the intelligent voter and from the students.

In 1946 one of our political scientists challenged college professors to become involved in the political process. This has paid off and often college graduates are, if not a carbon copy, at least a good likeness of their instructors.

This may be unfortunate but it is understandable. If those who claim the conservative mantle cannot match the reason and persuasion of the liberal, their cause is doomed.

Faced with perhaps the last conservative candidate, will the conservatives adopt the rational argument and bring their future to the students, based not on emotions or canned concepts but by adopting the enemies' methods, create a new and prosperous conservatism.

Socialism's Demands

Mr. Turner's observations that "Socialism is a creeping paraly[sis] which affects the sense of responsibility," (Flambeau, May 24, 19[59]) could not have expressed the exact opposite of what socialism sta[nds] for had he thought to do so. What socialism demands is more, not le[ss] responsibility for freedom requires a strong sense of social just[ice] and the willing assumption of individual initiative.

Socialism is an effort to obtain for the people of any country th[e] democratic rights as regards the social and economic planning of soci[ety]. And with these rights comes an awesome responsbility. The respo[n]sibility of obtaining an education, of keeping abreast of political [and] economic developments, of making sure one understands all the co[n]sequences of one's actions before one casts an election ballot, these [and] many more are required for the proper functioning of socialis[m].

The current apathy and disinterest would be dispelled by the feelin[g] many millions of people that their votes would mean something, [that] they must actively participate in the forming of public policy and that [we] were no longer responsible for themselves alone, but for all huma[nity].

Mr. Turner slights the liberals and the socialists and praises the succ[ess] of "status quo" politics. But the very America that appears so "perfe[ct]" today is the product of the great social upheaval of the past three decad[es]. The world we live in is a liberal world, saved, preserved and transmit[ted] by social radicals who resaved it from the mighty free market collap[se] of 1929.

Progress, change, flux, these are the motivating actions of civilizatio[n] advance. If we are to have a better, freer world tomorrow than the one [we] have today, even if today is superior to the past, we will not accomp[lish] it by conservatism of "status quo" politics.

Conditioned Rats Found To Survive 'Fatal' Shock

Rats have been found to survive two or three times a normally lethal amount of shock after being injected with serum extracted from other rats which have been conditioned to shock according to Dr. Sherwood M. Reichard, assistant professor in the Biological Science Dept. at FSU.

Preliminary investigations relate that the same type of injections may also serve to protect against fatal doses of radiation.

The protective material is produced by the cells of the so-called RES system. This system consists of cells scattered through the body, acting as "policemen" to engulf foreign substances and serving as a first line of defense against various ills.

"Former experiments with rats," said Reichard, "have shown that rats placed in rotating cylinders could survive 500 turns at a rate of 40 revolutions per minute, but 800 turns produced a deadly amount of shock."

Rats conditioned with 200 rotations a day for two days and 300 for two days would tolerate a lethal number of rotations on the fifth, while during some tests, the tolerance was built up to 2500 revolutions.

The non-conditioned animals were injected with an acidified boiled filtrate of certain tissues and blood drawn from the conditioned rats. They were found to be 100 per cent protected from drum trauma with all surviving 800 rotations of the drum.

"This factor could not be kept from untrained animals," Reichard said, "indicating either that it was present in too low concentrations or produced by RES cells during conditioning."

Conditioned or trauma-resistant rats treated with a substance to block the RES cell function lost their ability to withstand fatal doses of drum-trauma.

When injected after exposure to x-radiation, the protective factor from drum trauma-conditioned animals may protect against symptoms of radiation sickness. This has been indicated from work using FSU's 250 KV X-ray machine.

Reichard is now trying to isolate chemically the protective factor present in the spleen and blood plasma of the resistant animals and to develop an assay system to measure the purified substance. This research is financed by a grant from the National Institutes of Health.

This summer, Reichard will direct the fourth Summer Institute in Radiation Biology at FSU. Twenty high school teachers will attend the Institute, financed by grants totaling $36,962 from the National Science Foundation and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Contact Advisors

All undergraduate students who do not already have green trial schedules are to contact faculty advisers before June 11.

Freshmen and sophomores uncertain as to their advisor may secure this information from the Counseling Center, 302 Westcott. Juniors or seniors with difficulties should contact the dean of the school in which they are enrolled.

Students who are enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences may see their advisers any time prior to registration.

Seminoles Win Second Straight District Tit

Florida State's Seminoles won the NCAA District 3 Tournament for the second year in a row in Gastonia, N. C., over the weekend. The victory means an invitation to the College World Series this month in Omaha, Neb.

The tournament turned into a battle between FSU and Wake Forest. West Virginia and Auburn, the other District 3 participants, were eliminated earlier in tournament play.

FSU opened its defense of the title with a 4-3 victory over SEC Champion Auburn, Thursday morning.

Bill Williamson and Dave Dahlen provided the big blows in the first game. In the sixth, Williamson smashed a two-run homer to dead center field, a drive of some 390 feet, driving in George Rountree who had singled.

Dahlen hit a triple in the seventh and scored on Woody Woodward's long sacrifice fly for what proved to be the winning run.

Auburn started the scoring in the second. Mailon Kent reached first on shortstop Woodward's error, went to third on Vic Svetley's single, and scored on George Nichols' single.

The Seminoles tied the score in the bottom of the fourth when Woodward scored as Buddy Teagle hit into a double play.

After Williamson and Dahlen had put the Tribe ahead in the seventh by a 4-1 margin, Auburn rallied in the final two innings.

In the eighth, after Jim Bachus and Kent had whacked back-to-back singles, Dink Hair smashed a hard shot up the middle. Woodward made a diving stop of the ball and flipped to second baseman Jim Reed who relayed it to first for a double play, Bachus scoring on the play.

Auburn almost pulled it out in the ninth. Pinch hitter Jimmy Crysel reached first base when Seminole starter Al Beccaccio nicked him with a pitch. Reggie Gilbert went in to run for Crysel. He advanced to third on a passed ball and came home on Jim Martin's sacrifice fly.

After another out, Jim Barfield singled sending Beccaccio to the showers. Relief pitcher Marty Howell got Bachus on a long fly which Dahlen caught against the left field wall for the final out.

Beccaccio was credited with the win, pitching eight innings plus. The righthander gave up three runs on 10 hits, striking out five and issuing three bases on balls.

The losing pitcher for the Tigers was Jim Lewter who pitched the last three innings, giving up the winning run. George Nichols was the starter for Auburn going five innings plus.

The Seminoles next encounter came against Wake Forest Thursday evening. The Deacons had beaten West Virginia in first round play.

Wake Forest kept the game close in the early innings but the Seminole bats came alive late in the game to register a lopsided 12-4 triumph.

FSU scored three runs in the first inning as the jittery Deacons chipped in with two errors.

Wake Forest scored its first run in the third when pitcher Jerry Pardue blasted a homerun. The Deacons scored two more to tie the game in the fifth on Bill Scripture's two run double with Dave Miller and Walt Noell on base.

Buddy Teagle broke the deadlock in the seventh hitting a homerun to left field. Bill Williamson and Larry Johnson singled and Jim Reed walked to load the bases.

Mike Augustine, the next Seminole batter, smashed a drive down the third base line that Moe the Deacon third baseman, was unable to handle, Williamson scoring.

In the eighth, George Rountree walked and Williamson and Johnson singled to load the bases. Allen Thomas then drew a base on balls to force home Rountree.

Jim Reed grounded to shortstop but all hands were safe when he bobbled the ball. This brought home Williamson and left the bases still loaded.

Tribe centerfielder Mike Augustine, the next batter, drove in Johnson with a single leaving the bases loaded. Woodward followed with a grandslam homer to left, clearing the bases and making the score 12-3.

Wake Forest picked up a final tally in the ninth to make the final score 12-4.

Allen Thomas rode home on the big run production of his teammates for an easy victory, his ninth of the season.

Jerry Pardue took the loss for the Deacons pitching the first six innings. Ed Mandy and Bill McDowell pitched the final two innings for Wake Forest.

The double win Thursday pushed the Seminoles into the finals Saturday. Wake Forest beat West Virginia Friday to get into the finals and another crack at FSU.

Florida State, the winner of both its previous two encounters, needed just one more victory. Wake Forest needed a double win to take the tournament crown.

The determined Deacons took the first game on Saturday by a 6-5 margin but the Seminoles rolled to an 11-5 victory in the all-important second game to win the District 3 title.

In the first game, Wake Forest took the initiative scoring one run in the second. Wayne Martin walked, moved to second on Mike Budd's single and rode home on Jim Israel's long single to right.

The Deacons scored again in the third when Bill Scripture powered a three run blast over the centerfield fence making the score 4-0.

The Tribe scored three runs in the sixth. Mike Augustine singled and advanced to second on Dave Dahlen's basehit. Woody Woodward doubled both runners home and then scored on Billy Williamson's single.

Wake Forest scored again in their half of the sixth. The Deacons loaded the bases but were able to push across just one run when Danny Loftin hit into a double play.

FSU came right back in the seventh. Augustine singled and scored on Dahlen's long double to left.

The Deacons put the game away in the eighth on Jim Israel's run scoring double.

FSU just didn't know when it was beaten. In the ninth Augustine again singled and scored on Woodward's single. The threat was erased, however, when Woodward was caught at home in a double steal attempt.

Bob Biddix was the winning pitcher for Wake Forest giving up five runs on 11 hits, striking out three and giving up two bases on balls.

Marty Howell took the loss for the Seminoles. He was relieved by Allen Thomas in the seventh.

In the second and deciding game, shortstop Woody Woodward started the Seminoles rolling in the first when he blasted a 350-foot homerun to left with Mike Augustine on base. From then on it was all Seminoles.

A potential All-American, Woodward drove in four runs and scored twice as he led the Tribe to a 11-5 victory.

After the two run first, FSU picked up six big runs in the second. Buddy Teagle doubled and rode home on Bill Williamson's double.

Winning pitcher Al Beccaccio scored Williamson with a single and was scored in turn by Jim Reed. Dave Dahlen's single moved Reed to third and both runners scored as Woodward smashed a two-run single.

George Rountree then blasted the third Seminole double of the inning to score Woodward.

The Deacons scored two runs in he fourth as Wayne Martin socked a homerun driving in Walt Noell who had singled.

Ground To Be Broken Monday For Student Union Complex

All students are invited to attend groundbreaking ceremonies for the University Union at 12:15 p.m., Monday.

Taking place in the lawn area at the northeast corner of the drainage ditch and Call Street (in front of the School of Business), the ceremonies will mark the beginning of construction for a new four-unit complex, culminating efforts which began in 1959 toward such a facility for students.

Originally planned as a one building unit, the architects for the Board of Control gradually evolved the present complex of four buildings, to be located south and east of the present Student Center.

Presiding at the ceremonies will be George Miller, secretary for campus union in the student body president's cabinet, and regional vice chairman of the Association of College Unions.

Brief remarks will be made by President Gordon W. Blackwell, Dean R. R. Oglesby, and Student Body President Johnny Smith. Blackwell and Smith will then use two garnet and gold shovels to turn the first shovels full of dirt toward the complex's expected completion in September and November of 1964.

Ray E. Green, Jr., is chairman of the University Union Planning Committee, and Dr. Reid H. Montgomery has been named director of the Union Program.

The Union, which will function as a community center for the campus, will have a cultural-social-recreational program to include lectures and forums, book talks, music hours and concerts, art exhibitions, student talent shows and student-faculty discussions.

The complex will include an auditorium which will seat 400 persons; a recreation center with 12 bowling lanes and 10 billiard tables; a two-story food building, with a cafeteria seating approximately 600 on the first floor and three large and three small dining rooms on the second floor.

On the first floor of the Student Activities Bldg. will be a student store, a barber shop, a beauty shop and an information-ticket office.

The second floor will have a lounge, browsing library, music listening rooms, meeting rooms and administrative offices.

Student government and student publications offices, the Honor Court and the Senate rooms and the Union Board rooms will be located on the third floor of the building.

The present Student Center will be adapted to house the post office and a part of the book store.

A swimming pool will be constructed across Call Street from the University Union and will also function as a part of the Union program.

Summer French Institute To Be Miniature France

Teachers from all parts of the country have been selected to attend the Summer Institute for Secondary School Teachers of French which will be held at FSU for 8 weeks beginning June 23, it was announced today.

Participants, according to Dr. Jean Charron, associate professor of modern languages and director of the Institute, will receive intensive training in speaking, writing, and reading French, will study French civilization and will make an intensive study of modern methods, equipment and materials used in the teaching of French.

To encourage language compentency, students will spend two or three hours a day in the language laboratory, will receive classroom instruction in French from masters of the language including several French natives, will have French practice drills in small groups, learn French songs, attend seven French motion pictures and observe a "no-English" rule even when off campus.

The 45 teachers will stay at a sorority house, the Alpha Phi at 634 West Call Street. It has been taken over for the eight-week session. French cooking will be served, "mais naturellement."

The house will be called the "Maison Lafayette," named this because land near Tallahassee was selected in 1825 for the township officially given by Congress to General Lafayette for his services during the Revolutionary War. The "directrice de la Maison Lafayette" will be Mrs. Joseph Cimon of Tours, France, presently a member of the Modern Languages Dept. faculty.

Dr. George Paul Collet of Tulane University will teach the course in French culture and civilization and other members of the faculty will be William Henning of Indiana University; Mrs. Jeanne Palyek of Dreher Senior High, Columbia, S.C.; Miss Nancy Shirley of Emory University; and Joseph Pesseat of Lyons, France, director of activities and French conversation. He will be assisted by five specialists in French language and culture, three of them natives.

A grant of $72,494 from the U.S. Office of Education, whose Language Development Program is sponsoring the Institute, will pay the cost of the Institute. Participants will receive a stipend of $75 a week with an additional allowance for dependents.

Teachers selected to attend the Institute include:

Alabama: Florence G. Robinson, Helen W. Hubbard.

Arkansas: Lois M. Pattillo, Sister Mary H. Varley.

California: Eileen Press, Joseph O. Rodriguez, Theresa Dunne, Patricia LaFleur.

Colorado: Diana C. Howe.

Delaware: Helen Kalfas.

Florida: Marie Gray, Eddie El-Hessen, Bernice Henderson, Polly Biddle, Nell L. Berrey, Kathleen Hartnett, Hazel Beazley, Toni Di Carlo, Mai Norwood, Lois Boggs, Jocelyn Blair, Mary J. Clark.

Georgia: Lynn Nebhut, Eleanor Allan.

Louisiana: Abbie Vicknair, Mary Barra.

Fritz To Give Organ Recital

Robert Fritz, an FSU student will present a recital of organ music in Opperman Music Hall tomorrow night.

A student of Ramona Beard, Fritz will be assisted in the recital by The Brass Choir. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

The program will open with "Prelude and Fugue in F minor" by Buxtehude and "All Glory Be to God on High" by Johann Pachelbel. The Brass Choir, conducted by Clifford Madsen, will join Fritz for Bach's "Allelulia (Cantato No. 142)."

Second part of the program will include "Improvisation," by Jean Langlais; "Intermezzi I," by Hermann Schroeder; Cathedral Music by Thomas Beversdorf; and Chorale Fantase on "Christ The Lord Has Risen" by Flor Peeters. The Brass Choir will be featured in the last number.

Fritz in working toward a bachelor of music degree, studying both trumpet and organ. He has been president of the school of music student body, an officer in Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, and principal trumpeter in the University Symphony and the Symphonic Band.

Herndon Reviews Renault's 'The Bull From The Sea'

"Sophocles is much better but it is interesting to see it in a different angle," was Dr. Sarah Herndon's comment on the novel, "The Bull From the Sea" by Mary Renault, in this week's book review.

Herndon, Chairman of the Humanities Dept., compared the book with "The King Must Die," another novel based on the legends of Theseus also written by Mary Renault.

"'The King Must Die' is greatly superior and much better unified than its sequel, 'The Bull From the Sea'." The latter in comparison seems to have "no vitality."

In both books, Renault deals with the life of Theseus, Greek hero and King of Athens. Theseus succeeded Aigeus to the throne after killing the Minotaur, a being "with a man's body and a bull's head, who fed on human flesh."

At his departure to kill the Minotaur, Aigeus, Theseus' step-father, had instructed him to change the black sail of the ship to a white one should he return alive.

Coming in sight of Athens on his return, Theseus forgot to change the mourning sail for a white one. Aigeus, seeing the black sail, in grief leaped off a high rock into the sea. Theseus thus became king.

"The Bull From the Sea" picks up the life story of Theseus when he returns to Athens to face up to his kingship duties. It is divided into four books, the fourth one telling about his death at Skyros, where he fell off a high rock into the sea.

According to Herndon, Renault is "a good storyteller but does not evoke any second thoughts after reading her works as is found in great art."

Herndon stated that although Renault painted a real and vivid picture of ancient Greece, she did not present the wholeness of human life and feelings.

Reconsider Bonds

Florida's educational growth in the coming years is going to be severely blighted, unless the Florida House reconsiders and passes some form of Governor Farris Bryant's bond program for university construction.

The House rejected the proposal with a vote of 89 yeses and 33 noes (94 votes for the measure were needed for passage). But proponents of the bill were preparing to bring it up for reconsideration yesterday.

Several House members wanted amendments to the program, which would limit borrowing and spending of the finances. An amendment by Rep. Fred Karl of Volusia County, which would have limited the amount to $75,000,000 the first two years, and to $50,000,000 the following two years, was barely defeated. There has been speculation that if this amendment is passed, the bond proposal might gain sufficient votes to pass the House.

We can understand the anxiety of the House members who do not want to cripple this state with a heavy burden of debts of be paid off in the future. But Florida's educational institutions need funds to expand their facilities now, and cannot rely on "catching up" later with other more far-sighted states. It is sound reasoning to recognize that if Florida higher education attracts increasing brainpower and talent and an increasing number of those educated here remain in the state, Florida's future will be economically healthy and prosperous.

The saying, "There is no better investment than education," holds true for Legislative investments too, and Florida's House of Representatives should remember this in their reconsideration of the bond proposal.

Pope Of Peace

The world this week mourns the loss of Pope John XXIII, whose gentle spiritual reign has profoundly influenced secular thought as well as sacred life of the world's people for the past five years.

Even as the robed body of the pontiff has lain in state in St. Peter's Basilica to receive the last respects of a grieving people, cardinals throughout the world began making preparations for the conclave which will pick John's successor. The 82 cardinals, more than half of whom were appointed by John during his reign, will elect one of their number to shoulder the burdens of the unfinished work of the deceased pope.

People of all religions must pray that his successor is a man like John--gentle, understanding, compassionate and loving of all humanity--and that the new pope will follow in John's footsteps in working to unite all people in harmony and love.

In these times of turbulence and strife, the loss of this great peacemaker can only be reconciled by the election of another peace-loving pope, so that John's work will not be in vain.

"Blessed are the peacemakers. . ."

They have done an excellent job in this capacity so far for Florida State.

Black Muslims Reverse Prejudice, Hate Whites

To the Editor:

On January 1, 1863 Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation; and in 1870 the Fifteenth Amendment was ratified stating generally that the rights of citizens are not to be denied because of race.

A century after the Emancipation Proclamation you still hear the cry that "They're moving too fast." What has finally occurred today is a virtual revolution. Radio news in the past weeks has been filled with an almost unending list of riots and demonstrations throughout the nation. These small demonstrations and riots will only be the beginning unless something is done immediately and not in months or years.

Such movements as the Black Muslim have gained great strength because of the refused plea of the negro for equality. The May 31, 1963, issue of "Life" carries a very provocative account of this growing movement. The Muslims have reversed the situation. They advocate voluntary segregation and hate the "white devils."

They train in self-defense; ban alcohol, tobacco, dancing, and singing; and pray five times a day. Suspensions from the movement is the price for breaking a U.S. law. They don't believe in demonstrations because they don't believe in the mixing of the races.

This is just one alternative for the oppressed negro. What pride these negroes must feel and what fear it must create in the whites. For once the negro can look at his black skin with pride rather than shame; for once he can be proud of his curly hair instead of trying to straighten it; and for once he can give himself either credit or blame for what he has done.

To me the Black Muslims are in certain respects beneficial to both the black and white race. Perhaps it will wake the white race up to the seriousness of the problem. Hate is a terrible thing, and that is exactly what the Muslims advocate -- hate the "white devils."

I spent last summer in D.C., and I saw this hate on the "other side." It was confusing trying to figure out why these negroes in the restaurant where I worked hated me and the rest of the white people there. But how many times has the negro asked himself -- why do the whites despise me so?

With such radical groups as the Black Muslims, perhaps the whites will realize what friends the "reactionary" NAACP and CORE are.

Somehow the white man has felt that he has the right to mistreat, rape, lynch, and beat the negro; and the negro is to continue taking this kind of treatment because he is "naturally inferior" to the white man.

At long last the negro is standing with his back straight. I dread to think what will happen when one of the Black Muslim women is raped or beaten. As one of the leaders is quoted in the "Life," "If anybody attacks us, may Allah have mercy on his soul."

There are alternatives open to us before it is too late. The most obvious one appears to accept the negro as an equal, or else to accept the consequences of Black Muslimism -- hate the "white devil."

"Dark Of The Moon" Plays Through Sunday

The Witch Boy finally gets his wish through the magic of the Conjur Man, Betsy Stafford, and is free to marry Barbara, but only if she remains true to him for a year.

Rumors of strange noises and sights occurring within the vicinity of Conradi Theatre lately may be somehow connected with the University Theatre's final production of the season, "Dark of the Moon," a play of witches and conjur folk in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

In order to prove or disprove these rumors of flying broomsticks and the full moon disappearing at 8:15 each night, students may wish to attend the play, either tonight (when there will be a full moon), or tomorrow night.

Those more timid souls may even purchase tickets at the main ticket office in Westcott for one of the 2:30 p.m. (when the Sun will be shining) matinees tomorrow or Sunday. Tickets are 75 cents for students with ID's, and $1.50 for all others.

"Dark of the Moon," a tale of folk drama's legendary Barbara Allen, is cause enough for the unsuperstitious to go.

Witch Boy Eddie Reid pleads with the Conjur Man, Jimmy Rayfield, to change him into a human form so that he will be free to marry Barbara Allen.

The fairest gal. . .Barbara Allen" played by Annette Hannon, the reason the Witch Boy wants to become human being.

Prof To Visit Oak Ridge Lab

Dr. R.W. Menzel, a marine biologist at FSU whose work has been principally with oysters and clams will attend the Radiation Ecology Institute at Oak Ridge National Labs June 10 through July 26.

Some of Menzel's work as associate professor of marine biology in the Oceanographic Institute and Biological Sciences Dept. has been directed toward developing a strain of oysters resistant to the destructive fungus Dermocystidium marinum.

In research of this nature Menzel has kept oysters from various areas along the Atlantic and Gulf coast in special brood ponds.

FSU To Be Host For Math Institute

Florida State University will host 30 elementary school teachers, principals and supervisors from 18 states and the Canal Zone at an 8 week Summer Mathematics Institute beginning June 17.

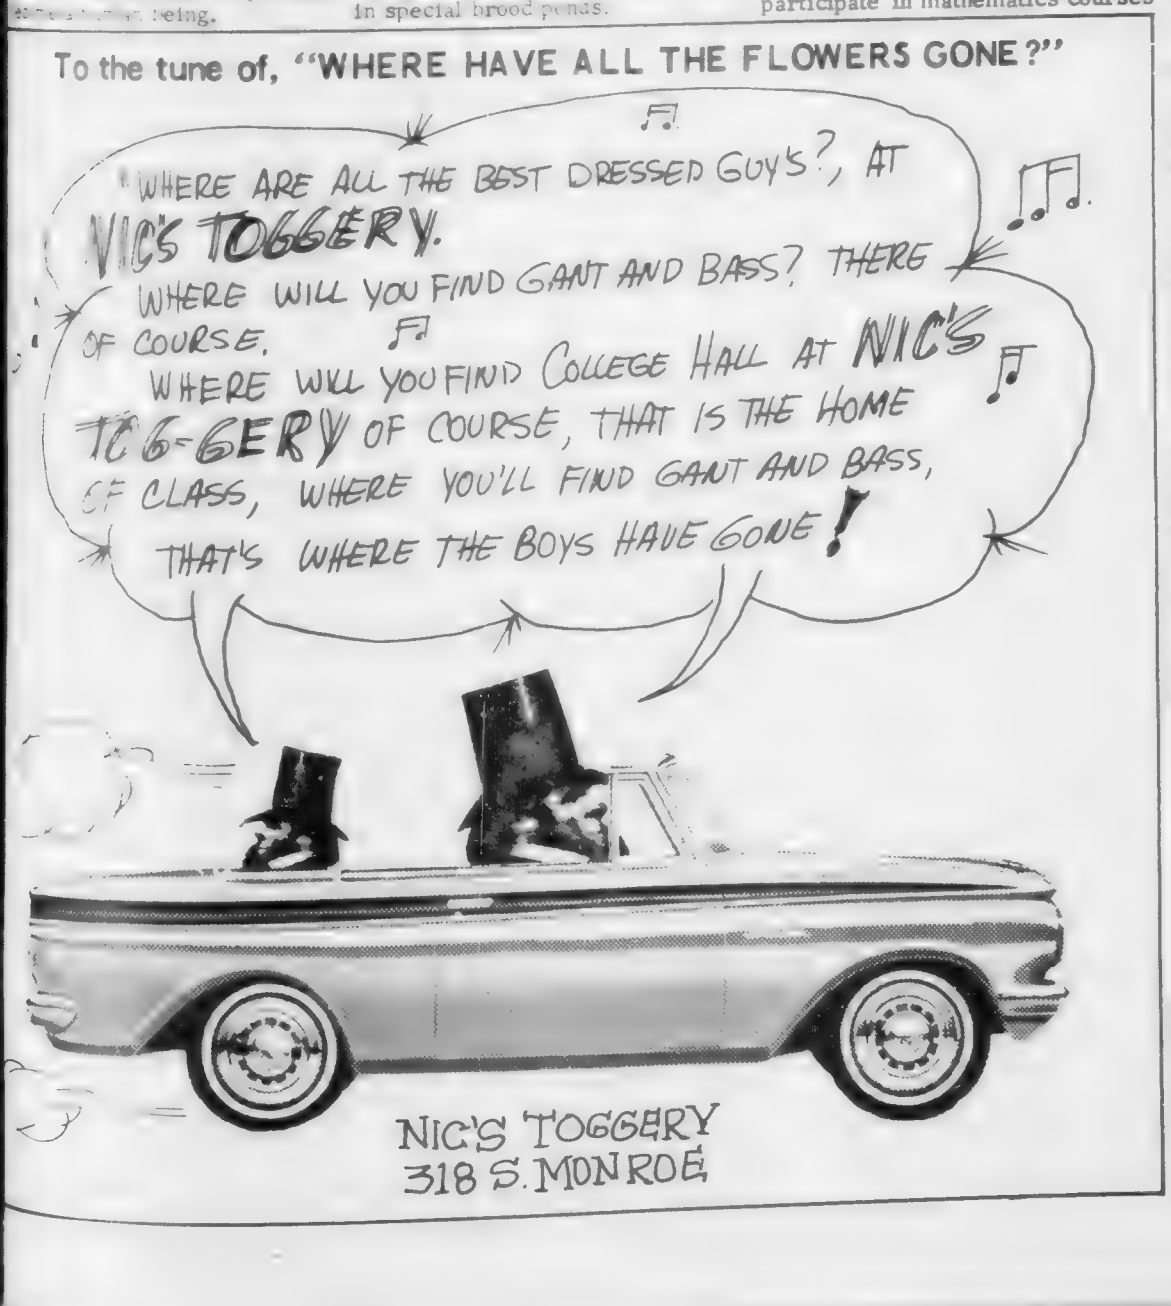
The purpose of the Institute, according to Dr. Eugene Nichols, professor of mathematics education and director, "is to provide elementary school teachers and supervisors of mathematics with an opportunity to participate in mathematics courses designed specifically for the improvement of mathematics teaching in elementary schools." The Institute is supported by the National Science Foundation.

The teachers, all of whom will receive stipends of $75 a week and additional allowances for dependents will have an opportunity to earn graduate credit by studying in courses in structural aspects of the number systems, in geometric ideas and in experimental programs in elementary math education.

"Emphasis will be placed upon creative ways of presenting some topics so as to develop in teachers the ability to ignite enthusiasm for mathematics in their students," Nichols said.

"In addition to the formal instruction the participants will be given an opportunity to have informal discussions with the instructors. These will be evening discussions centered around problems concerned with curriculum revision. At least one discussion will be scheduled for each week.

"Two guest lecturers will be invited to deliver talks related to the experimental work, currently in progress, in the revision of the elementary mathematics curriculum."



Faculty besides Nichols, will be Dr. Robert Kalin, assistant professor of math education at FSU, and Dr. Ralph T. Heimer, assistant professor of math education at Pennsylvania State University.

Jaycees To Sell, Install Seat Belts

A "Seat Belt Sale" and installation is being sponsored by the Jaycees tomorrow from 9 to 5 in the Parkway Shopping Center.

The cost is $6 per belt, and the safety belts will be installed free of charge by the Jaycees and the Garage owners.

Crews will install belts within 15 minutes, with 25 qualified men working in cooperation with the Independent Garage Owners of Tallahassee and the Jaycees.

Seminoles Aim For College Series Title

With the NCAA District 3 tournament title safely tucked away, the Florida State Seminoles move to take on bigger game as they travel to Omaha for the College World Series, Monday.

The Tribe will open against West Michigan State in the first round play. Other games will pit Penn State against Arizona, Southern California against Texas, and Holy Cross against Missouri.

This will be the third team that FSU has sent to the College World Series competition. The Seminoles also participated in the series in 1955 and 1962.

FSU made the games in Omaha as a result of an impressive victory in the District 3 playoffs.

The Tribe, which under Coach Danny Litwhiler, has made the district tournament in seven of his nine years as head coach, entered the tournament this year as the defending champion.

The Seminoles edged Auburn 4-3 in the first semi-final contest and whalloped Wake Forest 12-4 in the second to advance to the finals as the strong favorite.

As in last year's competition, Wake Forest and Florida State faced each other in the tournament final--the Deacons needing to win two games for the championship.

Wake Forest won the first game 6-5 but the Seminoles staved off the determined Deacons and registered a 11-5 win for their second straight championship.

In 1962, the roles were reversed, Florida State needing two games for the district title.

The batting star for FSU in the tournament was shortstop Woody Woodward. The junior from Sarasota collected two homeruns and in the final and deciding contest had a perfect day at the plate going four-for-four with a homerun, a double, and two singles.

Woodward was also the fielding hero of the playoffs. Coach Litwhiler was ecstatic over the play Woodward made on a grounder hit up the middle which he converted into a double play.

The Tribe in general seemed to feast on tournament pitching. In addition to Woodward, catcher Buddy Teagle and left fielder Billy Williamson also socked homeruns and the Seminoles sprayed baseballs all over the park recording a total of 32 runs in the four games.

Al Beccaccio extended his season mark to 12-1 with his two tournament victories. Beccaccio has rewritten the pitching record at FSU this season. Until this year, no other pitcher in Seminole history had won more than nine games.

Allen Thomas, pitching in the shadow of Beccaccio's record-breaking performance, picked up his ninth win of the season to become the third Tribe pitcher to win as many as nine games.

36 To Attend Math Institute

Thirty-six teachers have been selected to attend the 1963 Summer Institute for High School Teachers of Mathematics June 17-August 10 at FSU.

The high school mathematics teachers will receive a stipend of $75 a week and an allowance for dependents. The eight weeks institute directed by Dr. James E. Snover, assistant professor of mathematics, is financed by a $42,300 grant from the National Science Foundation.

Purpose of the institute is to increase mathematical competence and to increase the ability to motivate students to take up careers in mathematics.

Teachers selected for participation in the Institute include:

Alabama--Charles W. Norris.

Florida--Mrs. Edna S. Chinoy, Norman Chinoy, Mrs. Mary Louise Harris, Mrs. Margaret W. Hinnant, Miss J. Naomi Cheely, Miss Maudena L. Barteaux, Mrs. Mary Margaret Odom, Miss Janet Doak, Alonzo F. SPORTS

Tribe Mentor Mentioned In S.I.

Seminole baseball coach Danny Litwhiler is the subject of a story in the June 3 issue of SPORTS ILLUSTRATED.

While many may not realize it, we have the good fortune to have a recognized authority on baseball skills and techniques coaching at Florida State.

After 10 seasons in the majors with such teams as Philadelphia, and Chicago, Litwhiler managed for a time in the minors and then was named head baseball coach at FSU in 1955.

Since that time, he has taken seven of his nine teams to the NCAA district playoffs and three times, including this season, the Seminoles have advanced to the College World Series.

Litwhiler, long famed for his baseball savvy, is also one of the game's most prolific innovators with such items as an unbreakable mirror for pitchers to study their form, a sawed-off baseball bat for bunting skill, and many more.

Litwhiler has written a book entitled "Baseball Coach's Guide to Drills and Skills" and has assisted the State Department by making a glossary of baseball terms which has been printed in four languages.

He also has traveled abroad, setting up baseball clinics in Europe and the Caribbean area. This summer he is going to Central American on another similar trip.

As the article points out, Coach Litwhiler would probably make an excellent Major League manager but so far he has resisted all suggestions along such lines.

For the sake of FSU we hope he continues to do so.

Dr. Werner Baum

Dean Baum To Leave FSU Post For University Of Miami Office

Dr. Werner A. Baum will leave his post as dean of the faculties September to become a vice president of the University of Miami.

President Gordon W. Blackwell said that "Dean Baum's resignation is a major loss to FSU. As teacher and administrator he has given outstanding leadership, and the distinction achieved here is due in some considerable part to his insistence on excellence.

"Dean Baum's resignation is accounted for not only by the challenge of the opportunities at Miami, but also by certain weaknesses in the Florida system of higher education under which he must labor.

"One of our great handicaps, for example, is the unrealistic salaries of deans and other top administrative personnel.'

Dr. Baum's new position will be that of vice president for academic affairs, dean of faculties and professor of meteorology at the private institution in Coral Gables.

"I leave FSU regretfully after 14 years," Dean Baum remarked.

"In the University of Miami I see the promise that I earlier identified with FSU," he added. "If the state of Florida really wants quality higher education, I believe that it is absolutely essential that Florida provide the kinds of support that quality education requires.

"This means not only more realistic financial support but also a deeper commitment to higher education so that there can be developed here the kind of climate in which teaching and research can flourish," Dean Baum concluded.

Dr. Baum came to the faculty in 1949 to organize and head a new department of meteorology which has become one of the most important in the nation.

While head of the Meteorology Dept. from 1949 to 1957, he edited the "Journal of Meteorology," and later served as editor in chief of the periodicals of the American Meteorological Society.

Dean Baum has written numerous scientific articles and has been a consultant to the Air Force, National Science Foundation and other agencies.

He has held the position of dean of the faculties, the most important academic post in the university, since 1960. Previous to that he served as dean of the Graduate School and diector of research.

Currently chairman of the Panel of Education of the National Academy of Sciences Committee on Atmospheric Sciences, Dr. Baum is a member on the Executive Committee and Board of Trustees of the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research and of the Governing

Musical Calendar Packed With Summer Programs

Already in progress, a full summer of musical activities is being furnished by FSU's accomplished School of Music.

In addition to student musical organizations, there will be performances by the FSU-sponsored Music Camp, Youth Symphony Workshop, Twirling Camp, and Marching Band Leadership Camp.

Also featured on the summer's calendar of musical events are numerous student and faculty recitals.

FSU musical organizations active this summer are the University Band, University Symphony, Women's Glee Club, and University Singers.

Tomorrow night the University Band will present a program of music under the stars in the amphitheatre outside the Music Bldg.

The final Starlight concert of the trimester will begin at 8:15, with Robert T. Braunagel conducting the 42 member band.

Opening with "March Brighton Beach," by William Latham, the program will include "Overture in C" by Charles S. Catel and "Concerto Grosso" in three movement by Handel.

Solpists for the concerto will be Patsy Forte and Richard Brock, flutists; and Carole Donaldson, clarinetist.

Soloist on the trombone for the Rimsky-Korsakov "Concerto for Trombone and Band" will be James Swett. A junior, Swett has been a member of the University band for the past 3 years.

Other numbers will be "My Fair Lady" by Robert Bennett, "El Capeo," by Antonio Parera and "The Irish Washerwoman" and "The Raks of Mallow," both by Leroy Anderson.

Combining the talents of many musical junior high and high school students from all over the country, the School of Music's four summer music camps will greatly augment an already full summer of concerts and recitals.

Having two concert bands, an orchestra, several choral groups, an operetta, and dance bands, the Summer Music Camp will run from June 23 to July 27. During those five weeks will be five weekly concerts in Westcott Auditorium, in addition to other scattered productions.

The Youth Symphony Workshop will feature a week of intensive study for young musicians, July 28 to August 2, and will present a concert to the public on August 2 in Opperman Music Hall.

The Twirling and Marching Band Camps will put their talents on display in gala twirling reviews in August.

Champion Is Awarded Fulbright To Teach In Indian University

Mignon Champion, graduate student at FSU, has received a Fulbright grant to India, where she will teach English and work in her chosen field.

After obtaining a passport and visa in New York, she will continue by air to Hyderabad, India, for a month's orientation preceding her assignment to a university.

Miss Champion hopes to be assigned to a university in New Delhi. She plans to do research in the field of India-China relations.

Her findings will be filed as a report with the State Department, and she also plans to use the material for her thesis and for a possible book.

Miss Champion was graduated last June with a degree in government and a minor in history. She had planned to receive a master's degree in government in August, but now will complete the work after her return from India.

A few days before hostilities broke out between India and China, Miss Champion had filed her application for the grant, specifying her desire to study relations between the two countries.

President of Women's Senate in her senior year at FSU, Miss Champion had served two years previously as president pro tem.

She was also assistant summer editor of the Flambeau during her freshman year, and has been a guest columnist several times as an undergraduate.

Miss Champion was a member of Mortar Board, senior women's service and scholarship honorary, Garnet Key, service honorary, and was president of Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

Construction To Begin Soon

Ground Is Broken For Student Union

"Today marks the beginning of an exciting period of construction and an even more exciting period of use," FSU President Gordon Blackwell yesterday told a small crowd of students and faculty members who gathered to watch groundbreaking ceremonies for the University Union.

Top administrative personnel and Student Government leaders were on hand for the ceremony, which is the culmination of several years' cooperative efforts in obtaining the union complex. George Miller, secretary for the University Union in the Student Government cabinet, was master of ceremonies.

Dr. Blackwell expressed his belief in importance of co-curricular activities in University life. He said that students learn and develop by experiences outside the classroom, library and laboratory, and that learning in classrooms will be better because of the new traditional facilities.

"I have been impressed by the extent that Student Government has participated in planning the Union, and I believe student leaders have helped greatly in making the planning sound," he declared. He added that the swimming pool which will be constructed across the street from the University Union is a direct outgrowth of action by Student Government.

"The Union will be a great building because of what happens within its walls," Blackwell said.

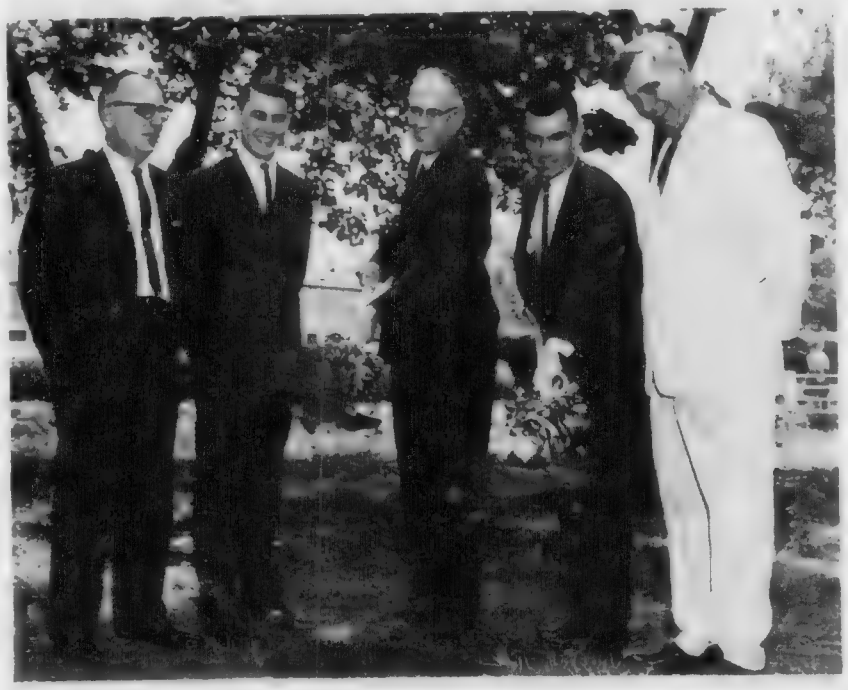
Student Body President Johnny Smith emphasized that the University Union is representative of the combined work of three Student Government administrations, beginning with that of Carl Butler, and continuing through those of Bobby Byrd and Ken van Assenderp. It is this year's administration, he noted, that will see the realization of the work Student Government has been doing for the students.

Smith added that the Union also is representative of the way Student Government and the administration at FSU can work together to achieve results the university can point to with pride.

Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby spoke of the purposes of the University Union, which he said have been misunderstood and misinterpreted in some places, by those who say the university is building a "country club."

"This is emphatically denied," Oglesby asserted. "The accusers simply misunderstand the role of a college union.

"I believe it will truly be the "living room" of the University, the place where we entertain our guests, whether these be parents, prospective students or visiting firemen. I also see it as a place of inspiration, of bright memories, of rich conversation, of understanding.



"I am persuaded that deepened understanding can come from a cross fertilization of ideas from the many University disciplines and heterogeneous viewpoints as the Union becomes the crossroads of all student life. But more especially we must make it a source of understanding of our world in the way we develop companionships with our fine young people from abroad. In our international program lies a wealth of potential if we only have the wisdom to discover it.

"I also envision it as a place for students growth. College students, too, learn much from doing. If experience at other unions is valid it will probably take as many as 200 students serving on committees and other positions of leadership to keep this Union strong and thriving.

"Finally it should be a place of learning. Practically every study of student life made within the past decade indicates that one of the major sources of student learning is still in the extra-curricular.

"Dr. Blackwell, the students and the Division of Student Affairs at FSU accept the challenge which the construction of the building offers. We pledge ourselves to manage it so that it will become educationally fruitful, fiscally sound, culturally

FSU's Loss

It is with much regret that we see the resignation of Dr. Werner A. Baum as FSU dean of the faculties.

Dean Baum, who has been with FSU since 1949, will assume new duties as vice president in charge of academic affairs, dean of faculties and professor of meteorology at the University of Miami. FSU's loss is Miami's gain; another able administrator and leader has been forced from the ranks of public higher education into the more profitable and academically freer atmosphere of a private institution.

The shame is not just in the loss of another extremely talented and capable educator -- although this in itself is cause enough for grief -- but in the fact that his reasons for resignation point up Florida's lack of a quality higher education system, and a seeming dearth of concern in providing such a system.

Almost anyone will say he favors "better education," so long as he personally does not have to fork over extra money tosubsidizeit. Ay, there's the rub; education DOES cost money, lots of it, and it must come from somewhere. Where else it not from the taxpayers' pockets?

The Florida Legislature has passed upon reconsideration Governor Farris Bryant's bond issue proposal for university construction monies. Assuming the citizens of Florida are receptive to the program come voting time state universities will be able to increase substantially their facilities in the next few years.

Alas, however, and alack. There is no hope on the horizon (not even the tiniest glimmer) that funds to tempt and catch top-flight faculty members will be forthcoming. The prospect of attracting and keeping these people with salaries now offered is too bleak a picture to be painted for those with optimistic spirits. Unless something is done about this portion of the educational outlook, FSU will become a stepping stone for talented people on the way up -- not the culmination of an ambitious career, as our optimistic spirit tells us it should and could be.

Unfortunately, as powerful a force as economics may be, it is not the only reason Florida's state universities are unable to hold key personnel. Felt even stronger is the need for, in Dean Baum's words, "a deeper commitment to higher education so that there can be developed here the kind of climate in which teaching and research can flourish."

These things flourish only where freedom is a respected, almost enshrined commodity, and Florida doesn't measure up to the big-name schools in this attitude. In all the controversy over academic freedom and its dependent responsibilities, one fact is obvious: an atmosphere of constraint and control is NOT the ideal attraction to academicians.

It is evident that Florida has a long way to go in making her higher educational institutions a haven for the type of educators we really want and need. An appraising look at our narrow-minded attitudes might help to change the direction of Florida's education.

The loss for FSU -- and other state-supported schools -- of the top educators is a problem which must be faced and solved NOW.

Unrest Hits Southern Politics

The Southern political scene is presently undergoing a tremendous upheaval which signals the end of the "solid South," and starts the "pendulum of power" in national politics swinging once again. In 1962 the Republican vote in the traditiinaly Democratic South increased 244% over the Congressional campaigns of 1958. In the past March elections, the Republicans won 12 of the 38 new seats in the state legislature, and how long has it been since Florida cast its electoral votes for a Democratic presidential nominee?

What does the current political unrest hold for the students of FSU? Is it superficial or intrinsic change? Only time can answer these questions completely, but only a moment's contemplation is necessary to clear the air of some of the political propaganda that is being showered upon the Southerner by both parties, and to reveal the basic fundamentals of the situation.

An intelligent insight may be obtained if the following questions are answered: (1) Why is the South largely Democratic today? (20 Do party labels correctly identify Southern attitudes and beliefs? (3) What should the Southerner do about the situation?

In answer to the first question, the South is largely Democratic because of the War Between the States and the atrocious inequities inflicted upon the defeated but unconquered minds of the white population. Are Columnists Necessary ?

A recent article appearing in the "Flambeau" suggests the dire need for a "5 cent middle of the road" columnist to be added to the staff. Apparently our columnists on the left, on the right, and in the air do not write with the avowed purpose of spewing forth material which will be immediately acceptable to everyone who reads it.

Everybody knows, for example, that all "left wingers" are radical liberals who are left-wing about everything all the time forever -- without exception. All left- and right-wing writers (not to mention astronauts, anarchists, atheists, and a host of other "losers") are supposed to be wild-eyed, fanatical, unreasonable maniacs who never say anything acceptable to the "average, normal, everyday, moderate middle-of-the-roader."

So obviously everybody knows what a particular way-out extremist has said in his column by merely reading the heading; furthermore, we are to conclude, nobody is interested in what this "kooky columnist" has to say.

If all this is true, then it seems as though the "Flambeau" colunists ought to get together and see if they can collectively slant the editorial page to fit the tastes of the apparently moderate majority. But naa, I don't thing that our two "wing-men" could agree on anything.

The thing we must do is to hire a "5 cent middle of the road" columnist to "stick to walking" while the rest of us soar about our separate ways. But then why should we do that? If there is such a potential columnist in existence (and who sets the criteria?), everybodyalready knows where he would stand on issues.

He would believe that Honor Court justices should be recognized on the editorial page, that APO is good, that Charley has really fallen in love with his work, and that "segregation is both wrong and immoral and has no place on the FSU campus." (How many people do you know who don't think segregation is "immoral" and consider themselves in the middle of the road?)

Well then. There's the left, the right, the orbiting, and the middle of the road. And everybody knows where every columnist in every group stands on every issue. Since every columnist is placed in one of these groups, and since everybody is going to know what he is going to say on a given issue, why have any columnists at all?

Book Burning Rampant In 'Land Of Free'

To the Editor:

This letter is partially based on an article in "Sunday," the St. Petersburg Times Magazine, which was written by a UPI correspondent.

Robert Lockard, the social science librarian at the University of Oregon, tells of the very serious threat of the increasing amount of book banning and burning that is taking place in the United States. where freedom presumably is asic."

Lockard states that most of the banning is happening on local levels. He gives numerous examples including a person who had been jailed and who had his private book collection burned because he put "The Stranger" by Albert Camus on a required reading list.

The following are the books mentioned that have been banned or limited in various parts of the nation: "The Stranger" by Camus; "Brave New World" by Aldous Huxley; "East of Eden" by John Steinbeck; "Lolita" by Vladimar Nabakov; "Lady Chatterly's Lover" by D.H. Lawrence; "Peyton Place" by Grace Mitalious; "Pilgrim's Progress;" "Fairy Tales by Hans Chistian Anderson;' and "The Last Temptation of Christ" by Nikos Kazantazakos.

There are various reasons why these books were banned. In 1960 "Brave New World" was banned in Miami on the strength of "one anonymous phone call." Several American Legion officials had three of the above mentioned books banned in Clifton, N.J. They admitted that they hadn't read any of the three books. Need I go on?

I vaguely remember several essays written by early English writers like Johnson, Boswell and Milton who wrote on the censorship of literature. If I remember correctly, they all concluded that either minimal censorship for children was needed or absolutely no censorship at all. As the author brought out in the "Times' " article, at one tim... Homer's "Odyssey," Dante's works, and DeFoe's "The Shortest Way with Dissenters" were banne... during several periods of history.

In an introductory literature course that I took at another school, the professor was shocked to find that no one had read "Pilgrim's Progress." He said that most of the early American families had at least two books -- the Bible and "Pilgrim's Progress." Yet in Illinois in 1954 it was labeled for adults only in order to "make it impossible for school children to obtain smut."

To conclude, I would like to mention the extre... right-wing. Although I consider myself a libe... I'm all for conservatism; I think it is necess... and I think it is beneficial. I personally d... consider the conservative movement and extre... right as being related.

Somewhere and somehow the extreme right ... idea that God has appointed them to carry out ... "divine plan." If a person doesn't fit their conc... of a "100% pure American," he is almost aut... matically labled a Communist. Anyway, getti... closer to my point, I feel that this extreme move... ment is responsible for much of this censorship.

The San Diego Patriotic Society tagged "The Last Temptation of Chirst" as "Communist propaganda." In his native Greece, Nikos Kazantazak... is considered a mystic and holy man," Lockard said that there "is a trend for right-wing groups to try to ban books they consider communistic. If they can't ban them, they want to label them."

Are we going to continue allowing a small segment of our society to act as our self-appointed conscience? As B.G. would say, "How do you stand, sir?"

FSU Student Union Dream: A Reality

Nature and Purposes of a Union

The following is a statement of union rpose unanimously adopted by the sociation of College Unions general embership in 1956:

1. The union is the community cen- of the college, for all the members the college family -- students, ulty, administration, alumni and ests. It is not just a building; it is so an organization and a program. gether they represent a well-con- dered plan for the community life the college.

2. As the 'living room' or the earthstone' of the college, the union ovides for the services, conven- nces, and amenities the members of e college family need in their daily e on the campus and for getting to ow and understand one another rough informal association outside e classroom.

3. The union is part of the educa- al program of the college.

4. As the center of college community it serves as a laboratory of zenship, training students in social sponsibility and for leadership in democracy.

5. Through its various boards, com- ittees, and staff, it provides a cul- ral, social, and recreational gram, aiming to make free time tivity a cooperative factor with in education.

6. In all its processes it encourages lf-directed activity, giving maxi- um opportunity for self-realization d for growth in individual social mpetency and group effectiveness. goal is the development of persons well as intellects.

7. The union serves as a unifying rce in the life of the college, cul- ating enduring regard for and loy- ty to the college."

Nature of the Union

The earliest college unions were udent debating societies in English versities. The first, founded at mbridge in 1815, was literally a ion" of three debating societies. was followed by a sister organ- ation at Oxford in 1823. In the be- ning the Cambridge Union head- arters in a dingy back room of the ed Lion Inn and the United Society Oxford in a "low-browed" room at rist Church College. With emphasis most wholly on debate, need devel- ped first for a debating hall, com- ittee rooms for conference, a read- g room, and a place where those rriving early for a debate could have eir evening meal. Such quarters ere rented. It was not until 1857 that e Oxford Union planned its own uilding, this becoming eventually a lub-lik building in the tradition of e British "gentlemen's club," but with the debate hall, of course, at the heart of it.

The first union in America was founded at Harvard in 1832 -- also a student debate society fashioned in its objectives after the Oxford Union. Toward the end of the 19th century, the union conception at Harvard embraced the idea of a general club (for men, and privately owned) -- "a large and comprehensive club, which shall do for Harvard what the unions of Oxford and Cambridge have done for these universities." A new emphasis on the social elements of student life appeared in the dedication address (1901) -- "the need . . . for meeting each other, for meeting your teachers, and for meeting the older graduates." The first union building to be planned and administered by a university itself was built in 1896 by the University of Pennsylvania. Again this was not a debate club, but rather "a place where all may meet on common ground."

At the turn of the century there were still only four union buildings in the United States, and at the close of the first world war barely a dozen. Most were still men's clubs. Shortly, however, these unions (with a few exceptions) and those which followed, evolved as general social centers to meet the out-of-class needs of all students. And in the late '30's began a trend to add music rooms, theaters, browsing rooms, art facilities, and craft and hobby shops, which has given unions the complexion of social-cultural centers.

Now there are at least 450 such centers, with varying degrees of balance among social, cultural and service facilities, representing a plant investment of more than $550,000,000; at least another 300 are in the idea or active planning stage.

Unions now exist at colleges for 300, at many junior colleges, and even at large high schools. The idea has spread to all of the British commonwealths (all the Australian and virtually all the Canadian universities have unions), and to Norway, Sweden, Germany, Lebanon, Egypt, Israel, Iran, Puerto Rico, Mexico, Cuba, Columbia, Hawaii, Alaska, Formosa, Japan, Thailand, Malaya, East and West Pakistan, and India, where colleges (or governments) have built unions or are seeking the means to do so.

In short, almost all colleges in this country, small as well as large -- and many overseas -- have become concerned with the living problems of their students. They now recognize that the campus environment furthers

The Story Of The New Student Union

GROUND HAS BEEN BROKEN on the site of FSU's new Student Union Complex. This event signals the beginning of construction and the end of four years careful planning and preparation on behalf of the Administration and Student Government, of a needed center for a fast-growing University.

THIS "PEOPLE TO PEOPLE" project was a seed in 1959 when then President Strozier appointed the first Union Committee. One of the Committee's first actions was to employ the services of an early-planning consultant, expert Porter Butts, Director of the Union at University of Wisconsin. Butts, along with co-consultant Abe Hesser, Director of Oklahoma State's Union, guided the Planning Committee from a one-building, $3-1/2 million Union plan, to the present and final four-building complex at $2.4 million.

THE STUDENT BODY'S role in the evolution of the Union is considerable, beginning with Pi Kappa Alpha's action urging Govenor LeRoy Collins to use his influence to raise student fees to provide funds for the new building.

IN THE SPRING OF 1959 a poll conducted by Porter Butts showed the students were behind the new Student Union. 78% of FSU students were in favor of transfering part of registration fees to support the Union. The Board of Control raised the fee from $75 to $90, reserving $5.00 from each fee for the new Union Building. With this support, Student Union enthusiasm climbed. One Student Body President wrote letters seeking aid for the project, and included a letter to President Kennedy.

DONATIONS FROM CLASSES have totalled approximately $2400. This began with the Class of '59 ($509) and extends through the Classes of '61 ($604), '62 ($720), and '63 ($525).

THE PEOPLE AT THE HEART of this project during its growing pains were Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby; Director of Student Activities Dr. Reid Montgomery; Dr. Jack W. Rollow, the first Committee Chairman; Dr. Harry P. Day, chairman of the Executive Committee; and Dr. Ray E. Green, Jr., present chairman of the Planning Committee.

ORIGINAL MEMBERS OF THE Planning Committee, and active supporters all, were Miss J. Kirk Bell, Ivan Johnson, William Randel, Robert Sanford, R. K. Shaw, Miss Lynette Thompson, Bobby Byrd, Carl Butler, Sally Highman, Harvey D. Tshirgi, William O. Cullum, Zachary Skokas, Jack Haskins, Dean Charles A. Rovetta, and those mentioned previously.

IN MAY OF 1961 the Board of Control Architects submitted the plans which were finally approved. The polishing and final development of the Union plans was put in the hands of a special Executive Committee that year. The Committee consisted of Dean R. R. Oglesby, Dr. Reid Montgomery, Mr. R. K. Shaw, Mr. John Beranek, and Harry Day, Chairman. These men worked over the Christmas Holidays to put things in shape.

FROM THE APPOINTMENT of the first committee members to the final signature of Governor Farris Bryant last Friday, the concerted efforts of Administration and Student Body have made this a dream-come-true just the way all dreams come true: through hard work and dedication. This dream will be a working reality in November, 1964 providing an auditorium for 400, a two-story food building, Student Store, recreation center, post office, publications and student government offices, and many other facilities. The pulse and core of Florida State University.

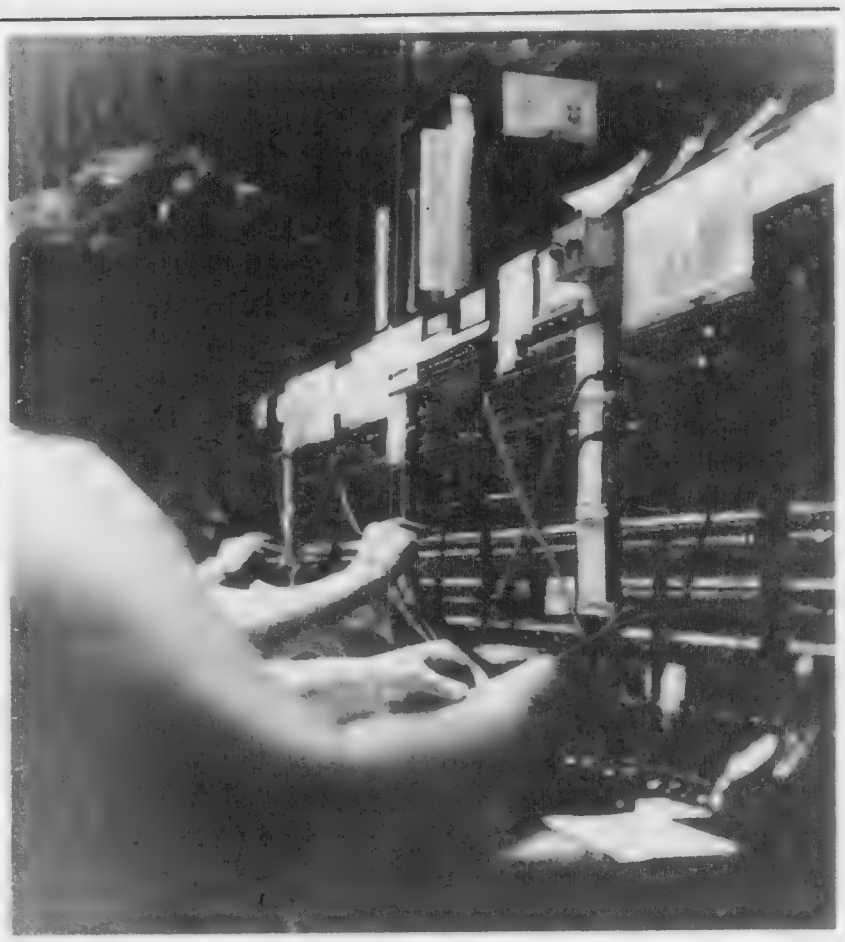
also increased in college, she says.

Now free from teaching duties and the allied activities of a college professor, Miss West hopes to travel and to do some writing.

Already the editor and co-author of one book, "The Humanities: Our Classical Heritage," originally published in 1951 and then in a second edition, Miss West is listed in "Directory of American Scholars" and "Who's Who in the South and Southwest."



The Classical Association of Florida honored her in 1960 by giving her the handsome "Atlas of the Classical World" inscribed "In token of our deep affection and esteem, and in gratitude for your service to the Classical Association of Florida."

Miss West was one of the founders of this organization in 1935 and was its president from 1956 to 1958. Currently she's vice-president for the Southern Section of the Classical Association of Middle West and South. She also helped found the Tallahassee Chapter of the Archaeological Institute of America and served as its president in 1961-62.

She founded in 1953 and has edited for the past 10 years, "The Latin Bulletin," a quarterly published by the Classics Dept. In this publication she regularly reported each year the progress of Latin in the high schools of Florida from materials gained from her questionnaire.

She also compiled a yearly directory of Latin teachers

Three times, while the department chairman was on leave, she's served as acting head of the Classics Dept. For several years she was chairman of the program in Humanities 101.

Constantly busy with dozens of calls, FSU's twelve campus telephone operators have a vital part to play in helping the university run smoothly. (Photo by Wayne Cowart)

Campus Operators Handle Heavy Load

By ELLEN THOMPSON

"Good afternoon, Florida State," along with constantly blinking and flashing lights is what is seen and heard at the office of FSU's Campus Telephone Operators.

The twelve operators appear to take in stride the hustle-bustle and seemingly confusing job of pushing buttons and putting green, red and gray wires into all sorts of holes.

One operator, when asked how long it took for her to learn the numbers and wires, etc. replied, "You never learn it all." Doing all their varied duties efficiently and rapidly seemed to come almost naturally to them.

There is an emergency list in the PBX office for just about everything. They keep a book for the police and maintainence men after hours, a fire log and a book in which is recorded the elevators that are out of order.

The main complaint that most of the operators had was that too many students dial the campus operator when they could just as well dial the extension directly.

"If students don't know the extension number, they can find out by dialing '0'." The swithchboard does not have enough lines to handle all these calls.

Presently short of equipment FSU is doing its best to quickly supply operators with the apparatus to handle more calls.

According to Mrs. Hayes, chief opeator, "They have two-thirds of the equipment to handle the calls that we take."

People are generally understanding of the things the operator does. She must handle several calls at one time, and handle long distance, information and local calls at the same time.

Mrs. Hayes remarked, "People just sometimes don't understand our overload. Patience is the only thing to handle it."

Some students have the mistaken idea that by dialing 222-8000 they may obtain information on campus activities.

"We are usually the last ones to know what is going on on campus," stated one woman.

Students may visit the PBX office in Room 26 Cawthon anytime from eight to five, Monday through Friday, if they wish to see how the system works.

On the coming of new equipment, Mrs. Hayes commented, "We hope that people get better service. The better service we give, the happier we are."

"The Godel Incompleteness Theorem and Intelligent Machine" will be the topic of a talk to be given by Douglas Jenson at the Computing Center Seminar at 4 p.m. tomorrow in Room 303 of the Math-Meteorology Bldg.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

33 years later, he got the bug.

We're glad that most people don't wait 33 ... to buy their first Volkswagen.

But Albert Gillis did, and maybe he had the right idea all along.

He didn't buy a new car for 33 years because he didn't happen to need one.

He and his 1929 Model A Ford did just fine by ... other.

He always did his own repairs and even jacked ... up at night to save the tires.

When he needed a new car last year, he went ... and bought a Volkswagen.

"I heard they hold up," he explained.

Does he like the VW?

Mr. Gillis is 78, a Justice of the Peace, and not given to hasty decisions.

"Your inspectors sure do a good job of inspecting," was as far as he would go.

But he did mention that he and Mrs. Gillis took a trip for their 54th anniversary.

They drove their new VW 6,750 miles and spent $62 on gas and 55¢ on oil.

"I didn't think they were supposed to burn oil," he said.

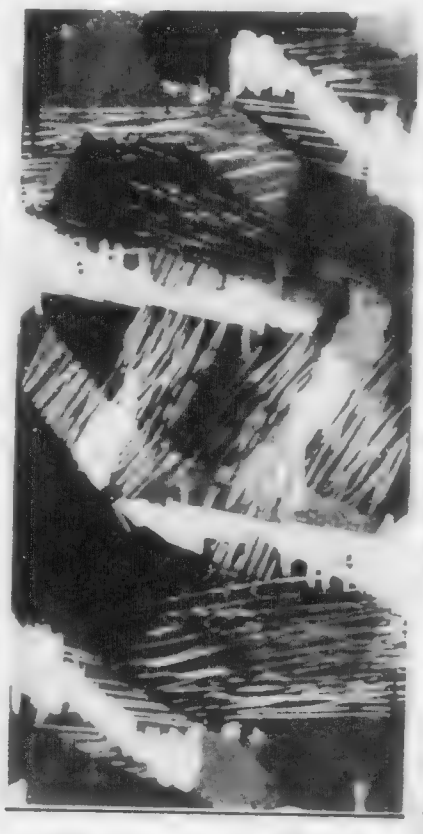
Art Gallery Opens Smithsonian Exhibit

There will be an exhibit of contemporary Swedish Art showing at the Art Gallery from now until June 30.

The showing consisting of fifty-two woodcuts, etchings, aquatins, and lithographs is being circulated by the Smithsonian Traveling Exhibition Service.



The show was organized by E. Maurice Bloch of the Grunwald Graphic Arts Foundation, the UCLA Art Galleries, the National Museum of Stockholm and the Galleri Brinken. It is being sponsored by the Swedish Embassy.

The many varied subjects of the prints include seascapes, figures, compositions and scenes.

The exhibition is an interesting study of how participating Swedish Artists have made adjustments to international art trends and the modern art movement.

As Per Bjurstrom, curator of the National Museum of Stockholm has put it, "... it can be seen as a manifestation of the progressive forces, of the art that has gained attention during the most recent years.

"There has been a noticeable breaking away from much of the slavish clinging to national tradition, but we are left with a respect for the individual will to express itself and for a technical skill inherited from earlier generations."

oriented, and student centered," Dean Oglesby concluded.

Coble Construction Company of Orlando, which submitted a low bid of $1,983,300 for the four-building Union complex, will begin construction immediately south and east of the present Student Center.

Funds for the Union will come from revenue certificates, and the project is scheduled for completion in September, 1964. Revenue from rental space in the buildings will help woth operating expenses. The complex will include an auditorium, recreation center, food center and student activities building. All the buildings except the auditorium will be connected by covered walks.

Mrs. Joanne M. James, wife of Dr. Herman G. James, Jr., of the Modern Languages Dept. was injured in a traffic accident last week when her car went through a railing of the overpass near Campbell Stadium on West Pensacola Street, and fell 30 feet to a street below.

Mrs. James underwent emergency surgery and her condition was reported as fairly good by Tallahassee Memorial Hospital.

Patrolman Mayo Davis reported that her car was demolished in the accident. The car tore out 18 feet of bridge railing in its plunge, Davis added.

Counseling Center Offe Advice On Problems

Offering advise on personal problems as well as academic and vocational counseling, the Counseling Center at FSU is an integral part of the university.

Organized in the late 1940's, it was known as the "office of the Coordinator of Counseling' . It offered academic counseling and was responsible for selecting, training, and organizing faculty advisors.

The services of the Counseling Center are available to all students, both undergraduate and graduate. Graduate students are offered help in job placement and appraisal of their capabilities. Of special interest to girls is help in correlating their career with marriage.

Dr. Harold Massey, Director of Counseling, emphasized the availability of counseling services and that a student need not have severe problems before seeking counseling.

Speaking for the Counseling Center he said, "We want the students to know about the services available at the Counseling Center and to be aware that it is uniquely and personally theirs."

Two recent innovations at the Counseling Center during the last year are the addition of an official Veterans Administration guidance service and the organization of a summer preorientation program.

Under the summer preorientation program, incoming freshmen are able to familiarize themselves with the FSU campus and complete much of the necessary counseling and testing. This has shortened the fall orientation period considerably.

's Patricia Brill, Southeastern queen, and Mary Hermany, Eastern ates queen from Bucknell University, take over the cabin of Captain and Lewis during a boat trip around Manhattan Island. Both girls are peting in New York City for the title of National College Queen.

Pat Brill Vies For Title

atricia May Brill, a junior at FSU, has been selected as the most tstanding college girl in the Southeast and is in New York City, where e is competing for the title of "National College Queen."

Based on her scholastic accomplishments and her leadership in campus ctivities, Miss Brill was chosen as Regional Winner from among ousands of college students in this area.

She will represent the states of Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi d Georgia during the 9th annual National College Queen Pageant. The ty of New York plays host to this event each year, honoring collegiate omen from across America. Miss Brill will participate in a series of rums and will face more than 40 national judges -- educators, journlists and celebrities. They will score each finalist on her knowledge, ademic achievements, personality, poise and attractiveness. The name of e new "National College Queen" will be announced on Sunday.

For the past year, hundreds of college newspapers across the nation have ncouraged students to enter this competition. Candidates were also nomnated by sororities and campus club groups.

Regional judging was completed recently, and 12 National Finalists were elected from 12 different sections of the United States. Miss Brill was warded the title of "Southeast College Queen." While in New York, she n now win more than $5,000 in prizes, including a trip to Europe and an tomobile.

Miss Brill is 21 years old, President of Mortarboard, and her high cholastic average has also earned her membership in Kappa Delta Pi ational education honorary.)

She was awarded the Garnet Key for leadership and service at FSU. lected as President of the Freshman Dormitory, she is also a member f the Senate Student Relations Committee and the Speaker's Bureau. Miss rill is majoring in Social Studies Education, but is also studying Psyology and Sociology. Her ambition is to become a teacher of history sociology.

The college girls participating in this year's Pageant will receive many nors during their visit to New York City. Mayor Robert F. Wagner has tended greetings to all the candidates. Each year, Times Square is renamed "National College Queen Square" as an official salute to these tstanding students, with ceremonies held in Times Square. The collegate Pageant is a highlight of the "New York is a Summer Festival" elebration.

Each of the young women will be asked to voice her opinions on a wide nge of subjects. Forums will be conducted on Education, General Knowledge, Current Events, Fashions, Career Goals, etc.

Among the National Judges are Mrs. Betsy Talbot Blackwell, Editor-in-Chief of "Mademoiselle Magazine;" Dr. George K. Evans, College Editor of Prentice-Hall publishers; Miss Carol Brock of "Good Housekeeping Magazine;" Mr. Basil Harrison of "Book of Knowledge" encyclopedia; Mr. Bruce Downes, publisher of "Popular Photography Magazine;" Mrs. Sally Shelley from UNESCO of the United Nations, and other prominent experts.

The National College Queen competition is a serious effort to select and honor "the nation's most outstanding college girl." The annual search has the full support of many leading companies in American industry. They provide the National Prizes.

Record $11.1 Million Proposed For FSU Building Program

The largest single (money) outlay in history has been designated for FSU in a college construction bill proposed by a legislative committee Tuesday, although it is nearly $15.5 million less than the original $125 million borrowing bill provided.

The new bill authorizes $11.1 million toward these FSU projects: Men's dormitory equipment $229,000; social science building $2.5 million; library addition $1.4 million; infirmary $250,000 (a beginning on the proposed $1 million building); women's dorm $921,000; engineering science unit $1.3 million; land acquisition $350,000, oceanography institute (coastal facilities) $200,000; and $215,00 towards relocation of the greenhouse, a new molecular building, expanding the computer center and improving physical education facilities.

The earlier bill provided for the following projects at FSU which have been left out of the present bill: a second physics unit $2.5 million; second chemistry unit $2.5 million; air-conditioning of dorms and other buildings $2 million; Longmire Building renovation $288,000; fine arts building $2.45 million; men's dorm $467,000; child research lab $300,000; accelerator building addition $1.1 million; renovating the old infirmary $310,000; fire protection system $106,000; biological science building $2.3 million and science library $1.375 million.

Unless a new plan for providing funds is found, however, FSU and other state universities and colleges will be forced to wait until November at the earliest to begin definite planning for the majority of building projects, if the construction bill is passed in a statewide election to be held Nov. 5.

This will mean a delay in building and improvement plans at FSU of a number of years with some buildings' completion not being possible before 1966.

Turnbull Book 'One Of Best'

By ADELINE PETERSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

"It was a little on the pedestrian side," commented Dr. William Randel of the English Dept. who reviewed "Scott Fitzgerald" by Andrew Turnbull.

According to Dr. Randel there are three ways to frustrate an author of a biography. The first way is to burn all old letters, the second is to write an autobiography, and the third is to burn old letters.

Fitzgerald was an easy subject apparently, for he kept a short daily summary of his activities.

A biography is an individualistic history. It may be handled in four ways. It may be interrative, defending a thesis, based on a significant background, or as Turnbull used in "Scott Fitzgerald," a factual report.

Dull though this technique may be, Turnbull uses it to an interesting advantage and eliminates much of the "schmultz" that is often found in biographies.

Although many fine biographies have been written about Fitzgerald, in Randel's opinion, this in one of the finest.

Dr. Randel said of Fitzgerald that "everything he wrote was a testimony to an era that had passed."

Fitzgerald was a man who learned the lessons of success and failure. In his youth he was a clown, a nonconformist, wealthy, and happy. He spent little time in his early days with his writing.

University Singers To Give Concert

The University Singers directed by Dr. Wiley Housewright will present a concert tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Opening the program will be "Te Deum Laudamus" by Alessandro Scarlatti, with nine soloists: Ann Cameron Bowman, Evalyn Drake, Frances Easterling, Lillian Amos, Terry Schreckengost, James Dooley, Coy Huggins, Michele Ann Davenport and Ervin Gatlin.

Two numbers, "Gloria" by Arnold Bax, and "The Holy Infant's Lullaby" by Norman Dello Joio, will be directed by Richard Powell assistant conductor of the choral group. Soloist for "The Holy Infant's Lullaby" will be Ann Bowman Cameron.

Other selections on the program include Four Slovak Folk Songs by Bartok, Six Chansons by Hindemith, Six Madrigals by Jean Berger, Three Reincarnations by S. Barber and "Sanctus" by Ildebrando Pizzotti.

Founded on the campus in 1948 by Dr. Housewright, the University Singers has been under his direction for the past 15 years. The chorus is made up of seventy-six voices, selected by audition.

The choral organization has since it was first organized appeared in guest performances with the Jacksonville Symphony Orchestra, and on Artist Series programs at colleges throughout the state and on professional recording for radio.

Musical literature of the chorus ranges from the great choral masterpieces to lighter music with many numbers selected from contemporary works.

Registration Announced

Registration for trimester III-B will be held in Tully Gym June 17 through June 19.

Registrar Murray W. Kenna said that students may pick up their cards at Station 1 by reporting to the gym according to an alphabetical schedule.

Those whose last name begins with letters A-F will report Monday, any time between 1 and 4 p.m.; G to S will report Tuesday, 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and T to Z on Wednesday, 8 to 9:30 a.m.

These appointment hours are for students who were enrolled at FSU last summer or in Trimester II or III-A during the current school year. Those who were enrolled in Trimester I only or in prior years must first be readmitted by coming to the registrar's office in Westcott.

Students currently enrolled for III-A only must re-register for III-B. Students who have previously registered for trimester III-B may alter schedules by the add and drop procedure before or after regular registration.

The alphabetical schedule at Tully Gym will be as follows: on Monday, students with last names beginning with A will register at 1 p.m., with B from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., C from 2:30 to 3:30, D from 3:30 to 4, and E-F at 4 p.m.

On Tuesday, Students in the G category will register at 8 a.m., H at 8:30 to 9:30, I-J at 9:30, K at 10; L at 10:30, M at 12 to 1 p.m., N-O at 1, P from 1:30 to 2:30, R at 2:30, and S at 3 p.m.

T to Z register on Wednesday: T at 8 a.m., U-V at 8:30, W at 9, and X-Z at 9:30. New students and transfers will register also on Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m.

That's The Breaks

FSU's Slugging Seminoles are back home again today. Although they did not bring with them the College World Series championship, the baseball team represented FSU well in Omaha, showing that they merit the District 3 title they now hold for the second straight year. Each game was a real thriller, with the outcome in the dark until the last moments of play. The opposing ball clubs narrowly eked out 4-3 wins in the last two games, after FSU's smashing good start in the first game of the tournament.

The FSU team played its heart out; perhaps it tried too hard. Spectators and students who agonizingly followed play-by-play accounts of the game have a small notion of the tenseness and strain the players must have felt.

No one likes to lose. Our disappointment in this instance is tremendous; but our disappointment is in losing, and not in the way the game was played.

Coach Danny Litwhiler and his team deserve the plaudits of the entire student body for their efforts at the College World Series.

No Trouble

Gov. George C. Wallace showed good sense in allowing the peaceful enrollment Tuesday of two Negro students at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

In a token "doorway stand," the segregationist leader played the dramatic situation for all it was worth before bowing to the supremacy of federalized National Guard troops. In doing so, he made clear his position of opposition to the forced integration of Alabama's public schools, but at the same time underlined his desire to maintain law and order at all costs.

His action, which is seen by some segregationists as the surrendering of the "Old South" to Washington, was a courageous one under the circumstances. His decision must have been difficult to make, but he made the right one, for he prevented a possible recurrence of violence and bloodshed such as occurred at the University of Mississippi.

Those who thought he would sacrifice peace in order to appear a martyr for political purposes also may see this recourse as inspired by ambition. Perhaps the real reason that Gov. Wallace bowed to federal authority is the one that is most obvious, but which few seem ready to accept -- that he realized preservation of the peace is worth more to the people of his state than a last-ditch defiance that has been proved futile time and time again.

Students, Use Judgment In Civil Rights Actions

Today there exists on the FSU campus an undertow of unrest which could seriously affect the future of unwitting students. The source of this danger lies in a certain group of organizations, both formal and informal, that are indirectly linked with the recent integration demonstations in the Tallahassee area.

These organizations are subtly agitating for student participation in these demonstrations, and are actively recruiting on this campus. The unreflective student can very easily end his college education on short notice by becoming involved.

The University has stated its position in these demonstrations; Tallahassee has done the same. No longer can anyone say they misunderstood the law.

The demonstrations will continue for some time if past events are indicators of the future. Therefore, it is the duty of every student to become objectively acquainted with the situation and the issues involved. How this is done is immaterial as long as it is neither illegal nor immoral, but it must be done.

How the individual charts his course of action is his decision alone. No one else should make it for him. But, it should be done in the reflective calm of objective contemplation. Only established fact, not raw emotion, should be used in the reasoning behind the decisions.

Deliberate violation of the law and flaunting of authority can't be endured in any civilized society. Violence is the last resort of the desperate and irrational man; it mocks authority. The "common law" of the United States is a means of social control and a code of institutionalized conduct which is deemed necessary for attaining [illegible] society; it is dualistic in natur[illegible] The whole concept [illegible] spect for authority. Susie Attends Groundbreak

By SAM McCALL

Plodding along about six plods per minute, Susie arrived in time to see the groundbreaking (and heartbreaking for one of the small crowd, who ventured too close to the existing drainage ditch) for the visiting firemen's club that will have an un-connected auditorium.

Pulling her wig off, repectfully, for the occasion, she hung it on the nearest APO supporter and attented her ears to the speakers, who blamed the existence of the club on whoever was not present. Boredom and the sweet smell of sewer soon set in and she fell quietly to sleep.

She was jolted to vague awareness by the splat of a mud ball on the nape of her naked neck. Taking a quick survey around the unfamiliar terrain, she spied an un-named building and headed there post-haste, tripping over Longmire ladies who were unable to get out of their "wedgies" quick enough.

She got inside the glass doors just as a barrage of Tallahassee snowballs pelted the unchristened edifice. Pulling out her rusty opera glasses she saw a socio-economic struggle for power between the "wing-men" and the "fifth Columnist" (so named because he was a five-cent middle of the road.)

The fifth columnist had the upper hand, having taken his pogo stick to walking and therefore mobilized. The "wing-men" were soaring about their separate ways, mainly in the ditch. Susie wondered where she had seen the fifth columnist last, and decided it was the colored (as in flag) store, with the "bonnie-blue" flying over the trashcan, downtown; where they burn Wheaties baseball cards and "Flambeaux." Not wanting to get involved, Susie slithered un-noticed out the back door and fled pell-mell (no, she didn't give up smoking) to the RMS Library and sought information on the Hellenistic wars and was promptly told she'd find out that hell was war if she didn't stop swearing in there.

The coke machine also being completely empty upstairs, she pointed herself toward the Soda Shoppe and was hailed by a former cell-mate who inquired of her destination. Her ex-ami told her to be careful, it had been turned into a midget hangout. Being an inch too tall and wigless Susie planned her recoup for another day and changed her course to Westcott-back, relinquished her permanently temporary ID, for the Tallahassee Edition of Grove Press rejects, picked up her card which had been hastily dropped when the dispenser looked up to smile, and headed home for a session with Wonder Wart-Hog.

Demonstrations Get Results

The ethics of involvement are never easy to discuss from a dispassio[illegible] ate viewpoint. Any pretense of neutralism in the description of a l[illegible] and intensely dramatic social revolution is almost an impossible att[illegible] ment. For the honesty of all concerned such pretense should be abandon[illegible]

The Negro picket lines in downtown Tallahassee represent a case [illegible] point. The question, simply stated, is to what degree of involvement [illegible] this issue should students at FSU commit themselves? The issue, [illegible] should be noted, is not the integration of local movie houses. A far deep[illegible] and more personal issue is at stake. That issue is the final testing [illegible] the social structure of Southern America, of the "great" Southern [illegible] of life," of conservatism and status quo moderate proposals which se[illegible] to deny the Negro his immediate rights and promise him some futu[illegible] Utopia attained by some "other" or more "reasonable" way than pub[illegible] demonstration.

Moderation not demonstration will preserve "our" way of life [illegible] the Southern tradition built upon a base of human slavery and miser[illegible] nurtured in its prime by ignorance and moral callousness, and defend[illegible] today by romanticists who, by evoking the name "chilvalry," try to sof[illegible] en our hearts and apologize for a long dead world whose decay still pu[illegible] rifies the thinking and feelings of others.

It is the demonstration and all of its ramifications of mob vi[illegible] and human suffering that finally moves the masses of moderates t[illegible] itive action. It is the demonstration, by which hundreds of Negroes wou[illegible] rather face injury, police brutality (let no one think for a minute th[illegible] local police are praiseworthy or noble in their duty), and imprisonme[illegible] that emphasizes the gross and uncivilized position that the land of t[illegible] free has given to its "ex"-slaves.

No one can dictate the degree of involvement in these demonstration[illegible] that another human being should undertake. But perhaps one can defi[illegible] oneself by the position adopted in this crisis. A world is coming to a[illegible] end. A world of small mindedness and cruelty, a world of hate, cupid[illegible] and arrogance. What will result tomorrow may be worse, for i[illegible] be better without the commitment of all of us.

PRAECO SIMPLICI

Quo Vadis, SG?

Where oh where is Student Government?

The Mecca, the Corner and the Sweetshop still refuse to serve the colored members of our student body. Student Government and in particular, Student Body President Johnny Smith, represent all FSU students, white, foreign and colored alike. So far President Smith has not indicated publicly any concern over this situation.

This is an issue that demands strong, active leadership on the part of our student government to enable ALL FSU students to eat at campus establishments that are entirely supported by FSU students... regardless of color.

FSU Golf Course To Open In August

Dr. Peter Everett of the Physical Education Dept. announced recently that the new golf course on Lake Bradford Road will be ready for use on or around August 1.

The nine hole regulation course will be open to students, faculty and staff, and their out-of-town guests.

Dr. Everett stressed that all plans are in tentative stages and that the opening date depends largely on the readiness of the course.

The Flambeau will be carrying a more complete story on the course as August nears.

Full ROTC Schedule Offered This Summer

By BRENDAN SLATTERY
Flambeau Staff Writer

A full schedule of ROTC courses is being offered during the summer program for the first time at FSU.

This major innovation is necessitated both by the desire of advanced cadets to complete the program early, and by a university regulation which requires a student to complete four consecutive trimesters of ROTC.

Just how difficult has the adjustment to a year-round basis been? Both the Professor of Air Science and the Professor of Military Science agree that there are no extra hardships involved in such a change-over.

As Lt. Col. Wolfred K. White, Professor of Military Science, aptly put it, "We have been prepared to run a summer program with a full course load."

In answer to the question of whether or not there was any marked difference between the type of program offered during the first two trimesters and that which is now being conducted, both the Air Force and Army spokesmen replied in the affirmative. The watchword on both sides of the Military bldg. this summer is "more individual attention."

The Air Force is conducting a trimester-long program which combines academics with drill and leadership instruction. The unique feature of this operation is that, instead of a two-hour drill period on Thursdays, the cadet is given one hour of classroom instruction by a different advanced cadet each week.

The cadet then spends one hour on the drill field, putting instruction into practice, and each cadet is given several opportunities to exercise command.

This program is facilitated by the small number of students enrolled (approximately 70).

Professor of Air Science, Lt. Col. Preston B. Hardy, and Commandant of Cadets, Maj. Billy P. deCherniss, both remarked that the Air Force would like to continue this type of program, since it stimulates interest and desire in the student.

Army ROTC is also running a full trimester of courses, but in addition, Military Science 401 is being offered in trimester III-A to allow prospective seniors to finish in time for Summer Training.

The Army program is basically the same as that conducted in the fall and spring trimesters, but with an enrollment of 35, it is felt that cadets can gain more practical experience on the drill field through the rotation of squad leader and platoon leader positions.

Marie Willis To Leave Graduate School Staff

Mrs. Marie Willis has "kept the books," so to speak, for 516 students who have received a doctorate and 4018 who have received a master's degree at FSU during the past 15 years.

Now she's completing her work as administrative assistant in the Graduate School and will join the staff of Florida Atlantic University at Boca Raton on July 1. As an administrative assistant to Dr. Kenneth Williams, president, she'll assist in the organization and planning for a graduate division which this university hopes to have along with an upper division undergraduate program.

In the FSU Graduate School Mrs. Willis has kept a file on each student, showing every course passed, every exam completed, every requirement met or to be met in the complicated maze of requirements which to tired graduate students sometimes looks like an obstacle course sown with occasional landmines.

Since Mrs. Willis has been under instructions to see that every student has met the requirements before clearing his file for a degree she has sometimes seemed like the goalie in an educational hockey game -- the last person to get by before getting a master's or doctor's degree.

Willing to help beyond the call of duty, she recently arranged a hospital bed doctoral defense for a student who had suddenly had a flareup of a back injury. On other occasion she has helped work things out when the stork and a degree were running a close race.

The letters she gets from graduation typically start out: "I wish to thank you for the patience and interest you have shown..."

Mrs. Willis has kept the files for all students getting a doctorate and for all but 438 of those getting a master's degree since the first was awarded in 1908. She's seen the graduate program grow from 75 to more than 1500 students.

Born in Pensacola, Mrs. Willis completed high school at Atmore, Ala., where her businessman father had moved, then returned to Pensacola to teach for a year at Ferry Pass School. She enrolled in FSCW and studied here in 1922-3, then returned to Pensacola to teach at Brentwood Park School.

For 14 years she was in the federal civil service, serving as principal clerk in a district office of the old Farm Security Administration and serving with that agency when it was renamed the Farmer's Home Administration.

New Skits Sought For Pow-Wow

Students who are weary of seeing the "same ole skits" at the annual Pow-Wows now have an opportunity to write an original skit to be presented at the 1963 Pow-Wow.

The skits sould be approximately three minutes in length, must feature some aspect of FSU or school activities, be humourous and in good taste.

A copy of all skits must be sent to Coach Ed Gilbert, Physical Education Dept., and to Miss Carol Grizzard, 2715 Berkeley Avenue, Lakeland, Fla. The skits must be typed or printed legibly.

A faculty-student committee will choose the top three skits to be presented at the Pow-Wow, and winners will be notified in the fall.

Other committees needing student volunteers for Pow-Wow activities are the Floor Committee, Ground Crew and Lighting Committee, Coach and Team "Committee," Queen Presentation Committee, Fireworks Committee and the Programs and Ushers Committee.

Students interested in any of these committees should notify Miss Grizzard.

Tribe Loses Two, Dropped From Serie

Florida State was knocked out of the College World Series competition by Southern California, 4-3 Thursday.

The Seminoles had won one and lost one before Thursday's elimination.

In each of the three games, the outcome was not decided until the ninth or extra innings.

The Tribe took the first game of the series against Western Michigan 5-2 with three runs in the ninth. Arizona State inflicted the first loss with a 4-3 victory and Southern California followed suit the next night.

Billy Williamson, Buddy Teagle, and Woody Woodward were once again the big men for Florida State. Williamson, until the Seminoles' elimination, was the leading batter in the College World Series.

Teagle and Woodward contributed clutch hits and sparkling fielding throughout the series.

In the first game Monday, the Seminoles and Western Michigan battled right down the wire in the ninth inning. The Seminoles pulled it out with the help of two Michigan errors for a 5-2 win.

Marty Howell and Woody Woodward were the big men for the Tribe, Howell pitching three strong innings in relief and and Woodward batting in two runs.

The Seminoles jumped on Michigan starter Gary Wallman for two quick runs in the first inning. Both Jimmy Reed and Mike Augustine walked with Reed advancing to third on George Rountree's pop-foul.

Woodward scored Reed with a single and Augustine dashed home on an error by the Michigan shortstop.

That was the scoring until the seventh as Tribe starting pitcher Al Beccaccio and Wallman settled down into a pitching duel.

In the seventh, West Michigan picked up two runs to tie the contest. After Fred Decker walked, Dick Michalski smashed a liner back through the box that bounded off Beccaccio's left arm. Beccaccio quickly recovered and threw out the runner with Decker advancing to second.

Dave Kwiatowski followed with a booming triple to center tht easily scored Decker. Kwiatowski came home on an error by Dave Dahlen.

Coach Danny Litwhiler then replaced Beccaccio with Mary Howell who retired the side side without incident.

It was a 2-2 ball game until the ninth.

Billy Williamson led off the Seminole ninth with a single to left. He was sacrificed to second by pitcher Howell and took third on shortstop Dan Predovic's error on Jim Reed's grounder.

Mike Augustine singled home Williamson sending Reed to third. Predovic then committed his second error of the inning fumbling Dahlen's grounder which allowed Reed to score.

Woodward followed with a single to drive in Augustine with the final tally.

Howell set down the Michigan batters in the ninth for a 5-2 triumph.

Wallman went all the way for Western Michigan absorbing his second loss against seven wins.

* * * * *

With the win on Monday the Seminoles moved into the second round against Arizona State which had beaten Penn State by an 8-1 score.

Florida State again fought valiantly, this time for eleven innings, but Arizona State pitcher Jim Nichols and costly Seminole errors were just too much. The Tribe finally lost in the bottom of the eleventh, 4-3.

Arizona State started the scoring in the first. Bob Maxwell walked and took second on a throwing error by catcher Buddy Teagle. Ron Theobold followed with a single to center which chased Maxwell home from second.

FSU evened things out in the top of the second when Billy Williamson's single scored George Rountree who had singled and taken second on an error.

Again the game settled into a pitching duel between Nichols and the Seminole's Allen Thomas. Both pitched to no more than four batters per inning until the eighth.

In the eighth, Arizona's Wildcats picked up two runs. Mort Saull singled. Ron Theobold hit a grounder to Larry Johnson, the Seminole third baseman, who threw wildly to first allowing Saull to move to third and Theobold to second.

Bill Brown then came through with a single to right to score both runners.

The Seminoles were not beaten yet.

After Augustine's single, Woody Woodward belted a long double to center. Augustine, one of the fastest men on the FSU squad, scored all the way from first.

With two outs, Buddy Teagle came through with a single to score Woodward and tie up the game at 3-3.

In the Wildcat ninth, Hector Bernetche led off with a triple putting a runner on third base with no outs.

This set up a series of strategy maneuvers on the part of Tribe Coach Litwhiler.

He had Thomas intentionally walk the next two batters to load the bases for a possible force play at any base.

The strategy paid off. With the Seminole field playing in close to prevent the possibility of a short hit and giving the Wildcats the long ball, Thomas pitched his way out of trouble.

The first batter, Nichols, bunted towards the mound in a suicide squeeze play. Thomas was on the ball in a flash and flipped to Teagle at home to force the runner.

Mort Saull, the next Arizona batter, went down swinging. Now with two out, Maxwell drove a one-hopper to Johnson at third. He stepped on the bag for a force play and the game went into extra innings.

FSU's final scoring opportunity came in the tenth. The Seminoles put two men on base but couldn't score a run.

Both Arizona and FSU went down in order in the bottom of the tenth and the top of the eleventh respectively.

In the bottom of the eleventh, FSU's old nemises Bernetche led things off with a single to right. Acuna then hit a dribbler to the right side of the infield which was just out of first base man George Rountree's reach.

Thomas, running towards first, fielded the ball but threw wildly permitting both runners to advance a base.

Litwhiler once again ordered an intentional walk to load the bases and brought his outfield in.

Lightening never strikes twice and this was no exception. Nichols stepped to the plate and delivered a single through the middle that Woodward, diving to his left, knocked down but could make no play. Bernetche easily dashed across the plate with the winning run.

Nichols went all the way in recording his tenth victory against three losses. Thomas took the loss for the Seminoles making his record 9-3.

* * * * * * * * *

The loss to Arizona moved the Seminoles into a game against Southern California which had been beaten by Texas but had recovered to record a 6-5 victory over Holy Cross. Both teams needed a win in order to stay alive in series competition.

The Trojans took an early one run lead, increased their margin, and hung on in the face of a last ditch Seminole rally for a 4-3 triumph.

Gary Holman led things off for USC with a walk. He advanced to second on a force play and took third on Darrel Wilkins' pop fly on which Dave Dahlen and Jim Reed collided. Dahlen received an error on the play.

Larry Sandel then laid down a perfect bunt and Holman easily scored from third.

The next scoring came in the sixth when Bob Hollowell blasted a 400-foot home run. Holman walked and Darrell Wilkins smashed a triple deep to right field to score Holman and put the Trojans out in front by a 3-0 margin.

FSU tied the ballgame in the seventh.

Larry Johnson singled and took second on a wild pitch. Coach Danny Litwhiler went to his bench and inserted Ken Suarez to bat for starting pitcher Howell. Suarez responded with a single to right to score Johnson.

Mike Augustine walked forcing Woody Litwhiler, who had gone in to run for Suarez, to second. Litwhiler took third on a wild pitch and scored moments later as Beccaccio hit into a force play at second.

Woodward walked forcing Beccaccio to second. Beccaccio took third on a wild pitch and then, seeing an opportunity, tried to steal home. Nichols, however, was too fast for him, firing the ball to home for an easy out.

USC scored what proved to be the winning run in the bottom of the seventh. Will Brown walked, moved to third on a stolen base and an error, and came home on Hollowell's single.

For the third night in a row, the Seminoles put on a desperate rally but this time it fell short.

Augustine led off the Seminole ninth with a base on balls. Woodward followed with a line drive double down the third base line to score Augustine and leave the tying run at second base.

With the tension mounting on every pitch, reliefer Pete Hillman faced George Rountree. A wild pitch moved Woodward to third.

Rountree smashed a line shot to right but Ken Washington was playing him perfectly and there were two outs.

Buddy Teagle came to the plate. After fouling off a couple of pitches, he worked Hillman for a walk.

This left it all up to Billy Williamson. On a 1-2 count, Williamson lifted a long fly to center and that was the ballgame and the end of Seminole dreams for a national title.

Howell took the loss for Florida State making his record 2-4. Garry Williamson pitched the last two innings for the Tribe.

Jim Lasas recorded the victory for the Trojans going the first six innings. Hillman finished the last two innings.

370 Attend Music Camp

Some 370 junior and senior high school students are expected for the summer Music Camp, which will officially begin Sunday.

Bands, orchestra, and choral groups will be organized and the young musicians representing 14 states will take classwork in orchestration, music theory, and music appreciature. Instruction will be under the direction of the FSU School of Music faculty. A series of music camp concerts will be presented on consecutive Sundays.

An operetta, "Pirates of Penzance" by Gilbert and Sullivan, will be presented by the students on Tuesday, July 23. Miss Betty Jane Greene, director of the Women's Glee Club, will direct it.

During the five week session, the young musicians will attend four Tuesday evening recitals by musicians from the music faculty. Scheduled to perform on the first of these, this Tuesday, are Dr. Ramon Meyer, percussionist; Dr. William F. Cramer, trombonist; and Robert Glotzbach, pianist. Other programs will be: a Woodwind Trio, July 2; Charlotte Reinke and Herb Center, vocalists and Tommy Wright, and Paul Svendsen, pianist, July 9; and Walter James, vocalist and Leonard Mastrogiacomo, pianist July 16.

MUSIC'S IN THE AIR

. . . as FSU prepares for the 22nd annual Music Camp which will bring some 370 musicians from 14 states Sunday. The dean of the School of Music here discusses plans for the summer's schedule with key members of the Music Camp Program.

Insurance Class To Begin Here

Seven Floridians who plan to take the insurance commissioner's examination for an insurance agent's license in property and casualty will be on campus for a 240-hour short course in general insurance today.

Taught in the School of Business by faculty members, the course will consist of classroom instruction in automobile insurance, fire and allied lines, multiperil contracts, inland marine, ocean marine, fidelity and surety, agency management, general casualty, workmen's compensation, health insurance and disability insurance.

Lectures for the six weeks' short course will be Dr. James E. Dillaber, head of insurance and real estate at FSU and director of instruction for the course; Dr. O.D. Dickerson; Dr. E. Ray Solomon; and Ronald T. Anderson.

Thornton Wins Grad Fellowship

Boyd A. Thornton, the first person to receive a master of accountancy degree at FSU, has been awarded an H.B. Earhart Fellowship for work toward a Ph. D. degree in accounting at Ohio State University. The award carries a stipend of $2400 plus tuition for the academic year 1963-64. The Relm Foundation of Ann Arbor, Mich., grants the Earhart fellowships, designed to further graduate work in economics and business administration.

Thornton did his post-graduate work under the direction of Dr. Homer A. Black and received the first master of accountancy degree in August, 1962.

Davis Becomes Head Of Van de Graaff

Dr. Robert H. Davis, associate professor of physics, has been appointed principal scientist in the Tandem Van de Graaff Accelerator Program to succeed Dr. G.M. Temmer, who has been named director of the Tandem Van de Graaff Program at Rutgers University.

As principal scientist Dr. Davis will be responsible for operation of the 12 million electron volt accelerator, which is being used for nuclear research, and will administer an Air Force grant of approximately $400,000 a year supporting research using the accelerator.

Dr. Davis, whose appointment was announced by Dr. John K. Folger, dean of the Graduate School and Dr. Earle K. Plyler, head of the Physics Dept. has been a member of the faculty since 1957.

At that time he began shielding wall design calculations for the building to house the tandem, a million dollar machine for which the Legislature had provided an appropriation. He was responsible also for the tandem laboratory.

Graduate students under the direction of Davis have conducted several experiments in nuclear scattering, using the accelerator. In collaboration with one student, Elmer B. Carter, he developed a negative helium ion injection technique which opened up a new area of nuclear research with tandem machines.

During the past year five students earned Ph.D. degrees in nuclear physics under his direction. In addition to nuclear physics Davis has published in the fields of high vacuum technology and film physics. The British Physical Society has invited him to present a paper on alpha particle reactions in Manchester, England, during the fall.

Davis earned his Ph. D. degree at the University of Wisconsin in 1955. As a student at Wisconsin he was co-inventor of the Evapor-Ion pump and participated in the development of a new type Van de Graaff accelerator.

Stille Drowns

Kent A. Stille, a junior in accounting at FSU, was apparently drowned late Wednesday night when he fell from a bridge below Panacea.

Stille, 21, is survived by a wife and small son, who live in Alumni Village. He was from Iowa, and had been a member of the 1963 FSU Baseball Team.

Fishing on a bridge not far from Panacea, Stille and three friends were getting ready to head home at about 10:15 p.m.

Stille hopped over the bridge, expecting to land on a small catwalk or ramp which ran along the bridge for some distance. He had misjudged his position however, and fell approximately 25 feet into the swift current.

His companions heard the splash and ran to the point where they had last seen Stille, but no further noise was heard.

Jumping into the water, they searched for Stille, but failed to find signs of him.

Police and Coast Guard dragged the river, but a last reports had not located Stille's body.

4 Commissioned

Lt. Col. Wolfred K. White, professor of military science, has announced that four Army ROTC cadets received commissions yesterday following successful completion of requirements toward a baccalaureate degree.

The cadets were commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the Army Reserve, and will now embark on a 24 month active duty committment toward fulfillment of military obligations.

Receiving commissions were Robert Williams, Artillery; Richard Kaeslin, Artillery; Joseph Kraft, Artillery; Dennis Barton, Infantry.

Preorientation Starts For Fall Freshmen

Freshmen-to-be at FSU this fall will get a preview look at campus life when they attend one of three preorientation sessions to be held next week on June 23-25, June 26- 28 and June 30 - July 2.

Freshmen and parents will participate in the summer pre-orientation, with parents attending informative group meetings and discussions, and students attending group sessions and taking exemption tests in advance of the fall orientation program.

The schedule for the three preorientations will be the same:

First Day

1-6 p.m. Students and parents may check into Smith Hall.

4-6 p.m. Campus Tours (optional) will be offered. Buses will leave from the front door of Smith Hall at 20 minute intervals beginning at 4 p.m.

Second Day

8-8:45 a.m. Opening Session with introductions and explanations of the Pre-Orientation Program in Westcott Auditorium.

Students

9-10:30 a.m. School and College Ability Test in Opperman Music Hall with Dr. G.E. Tully in charge.

10:45-12:45 a.m. Mathematics Placement Test in Opperman Music Hall with Dr. James Snover in charge.

Parents

9-9:30 Tour of Strozier Library with Mr. Orwin Rush in charge.

9:30-10:30 "The Year Ahead" will be presented by Dr. John Cummer in the Library Lecture Hall.

10:30-11 Coffee will be served in the Library Lecture Hall with Miss Marie Williams in charge.

11-12 Dean Katherine Warren and Robert Brewer will speak "A Word from the Deans" in the Library Lecture Hall.

2-2:50 p.m. First Information Session in Westcott Auditorium with Dr. C. Tanzy, Acting Director of the Division of Basic Studies presiding. Speakers will be Dr. C. Tanzy and Dr. John Cummer and Mr. Johnny Smith, president of the student body.

3-3:50 p.m. Second Information Session in Westcott with Dean of Women Katherine Warren presiding.

4-5 p.m. Third information session in Westcott with Mr. Robert Brewer, Assistant Dean of Men presiding.

8-9 p.m. Reception for parents and students will be held in the lounge of Kellum Hall.

Third Day

7:30-12 noon Check out of Smith Hall

8-10 a.m. Applied Music Auditions for Music majors will be held in the School of Music with Dr. J. White in charge.

8:30-10:30 Group Interest Meetings.

10-12 noon Music Theory Examination for all music majors in the School of Music.

1-3 p.m. Final Information Session in Westcott with information on scheduling procedures and course sequences being provided by Dr. Tanzy; information on registration procedures for the fall, Dr. John Cummer; special information for the music majors, Dr. Joe White.

Johnny Smith Reveals SG Position On Integration

Student Body President Johnny Smith today termed the question of using Student Governement influence to bring pressure on owners of eating establishments adjacent to the FSU campus, to force them to serve FSU Negro students, an "explosive" one.

Smith said that "We are in a situation so potentially dangerous that if we can't have full cooperation from all quarters in working this problem out, the University will undoubtedly suffer greatly."

Student Government's role in the situation was clarified by Smith, who also released this statement on SG's position.

"In these past few weeks the role of Student Government in this situation has been, and will continue to be: number one, to protect the integrity and interests of ALL FSU students, and number two, to use peaceable means and negotiation to accomplish as much as we can.

"I, as well as many members of my Cabinet, have been attending innumerable meetings with the University Religious Council representatives, the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce, President Blackwell, Dean Oglesby, owners of private eating establishments, and groups of students involved in ths situation."

The Student Body President added that "with this powderkeg we're sitting on here in Tallahassee, the main thing to avoid is irrational, unthinking action geared toward agitation.

"Although it may take longer, the same desired end can be accomplished if the action is mature and peaceable. If it is not, the University will be the one to suffer."

No Prayer?

The Supreme Court's decision earlier this week which banned required Bible readings and the saying of the Lord's Prayer in public schools is certain to set off another rash of lawsuits aimed at removing religion entirely from daily life.

The new ruling does not specifically forbid teachers from conducting a morning devotional, so long as it isn't required, but many teachers may not realize this. Florida, one of 39 states requiring the daily Bible readings, probably is the first state in the Union to enact legislation to circumvent the Court's edict. Tuesday a bill which will allow each Florida county to set up an objective Bible study course passed the Senate unanimously and the House with only one dissenting vote.

It seems that the Supreme Court is acting in the best interests of the nation's non-believers in its to-the-letter interpretations of the Constitution, but is disregarding the spirit in which the document was drafted. This nation, being founded under God, is intimately tied up with its belief in a Supreme Being, and to destroy this belief would be to destroy the nation itself.

Non-believers today (and it's so fashionable and sophisticated to be a non-believer) will continue to push for their rights not to be deluged with religion in public places--such as the slogan "in God we trust" on all U.S. minted or printed money, the oaths of office which end with the words "so help me God," the words "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance to the U.S. flag, and in the many public assemblies that begin with the invocation of God's blessing.

And where are the silent majority--the ones who worship in many different ways, but who recognize the existence of a Supreme Being who has kept this nation as if its people were his chosen people, since its founding? Will they continue to watch without comment as God is forced to go underground?

If this fear seems exaggerated, just watch the national news papers. Lawsuits already have been brought to remove recognition of God in most of the public instances cited above, and more are without a doubt being contemplated even now.

We do not advocate defiance of the Law of the Land, as it is interpreted by the Supreme Court; nor do we resort to name-calling and branding the Court Justices as atheists for their action. All nine men are sincere and dedicated public officals whose accumulated knowledge and experience with the law are now devoted to seeing that this nation continues on the optimistic course its Founding Fathers foresaw. But we are reminded of a cartoon which appeared a few weeks ago in the "Saturday Evening Post" magazine, in which a small schoolboy remarked to his friend, "I don't care if it is unconstitutional, I still pray before going into a test."

Prayer is and should be a highly personal, individualized affair. Religious activities, such as Bible readings and prayer, will continue to play an important part in the nation's daily life, but they can no longer be subsidized by public schools. It is now entirely up to the home and the church to bridge this gap in education.

Quo Vadis, Soccer Team?

Several weeks ago, Student Body President Johnny Smith indicated that certain improvements could be made in the foreign students program, particularly in those areas for which student government is responsible.

For nearly two years now the FSU Soccer team has been pleading for a small amount of money so that uniforms could be purchased and traveling expenses offset somewhat. This Soccer team is composed largely, if not entirely, of foreign students. No significant action has been taken on their behalf. Their playing is a credit to FSU and something needs to be done. This sort of responsibility comes under the department of the Secretary of Internal Affairs in student government. Perhaps Luther Kramer, who presently holds this position, could tell us what has been done about this situation.

* * * * *

Last week several tables were set up so the FSU students had an opportunity to indicated their support for integrated theaters. This is an admirable concern on the part of those students involved actively behind the petition.

But who were they?

This writer inquired several times of the people manning the tables but the general answer was always "just a bunch of students." Perhaps the time has come for the students behind the petitions to identify themselves and any groups supporting them, and of course what the outcome of their efforts has been.

There are some people who might like to know what's going on.

Socialists Offer Negroes Hope

One of the most important problems that will be facing American Socialists in the coming decade is whether or not the Socialist Party will be able to face up to its possible position as spokesman for the overwhelming majority of Negro people.

It has been, I believe, rightly pointed out by the editors of the "Monthly Review" that such middle class Negro libertarian groups as the NAACP or CORE have little to offer in the way of solving the economic problems of the lower class working Negro.

The NAACP and CORE, representing predominantly middle class Negro interests, are caught in the bind of trying to preserve the American class structure and achieve "equality" within it. These civil rights movements offer no solution to the steadily rising Negro unemployment rate. Their almost exclusive interests in immediate freedom while commendable, has led them to underestimate the social forces which they must contend with.

The Black Muslims appeal mostly to working class Negroes and have served a useful function by giving to many Negroes a sense of human dignity and worth. "Monthly Review" also points out that this organization has little understanding of the forces involved in the conflict between white dominant group and the oppressed Negro minority.

A radical synthesis between these two groups, the Muslims and civil righters, is called for. On the contrary, I propose that such a radical organization already exists, or potentially exists. Active and dynamic leadership by the NEC (National Executive Council) of the Socialist Party may well bring untold rewards in increased party membership and the reactivation of many party locals in the South.

The detailed economic analysis that is needed for the solution of this crisis is such that Socialist theoriticians can be expected to provide.

Stock Checks Hurt 'Elite'

To the Editor:

Myth or truth? The Florida [illegible] Chamber of Conscience [illegible] the following information.

When the move to effectively [illegible] dividends was first started, the [illegible] manitarian cry went out in [illegible] strength. Statements like this [illegible] were made. What about the [illegible] little, old widow who will lose [illegible] of her sole income which will [illegible] withheld from dividend payments? Such arguments might be pertinent except for the "myth" about [illegible] dend recipients.

In a reputable economics [illegible] Lloyd Reynolds, I found the following statement. "The top five per cent of income recipients in the United State receive more than two-thirds of the dividend payments [illegible] close to half of all property income." Taking this into consideration it is obvious that the other [illegible] per cent of the income recipients receive less than one-third of the dividend payments.

Now, who really stands to lose by the tightening of restrictions on stock income? The vast majority of people receive only very small amounts of income from stocks. The way I see it is that this "elite" five per cent plays on the humanitarian side of the American people for their own selfish motives. One of the worst motives appears to be to illegally deprive the government (the people) of legally due tax income.

Changes Coming In Communist Europe

RADIO FREE EUROPE NEWS BUREAUS

Change is sweeping through Communist East Europe. Now in one country, now in another, internal party dissent replaces iron discipline, relations with other bloc countries shift, and there are new attitudes toward the outside world. These postures spring from various causes: severe economic problems, ever more insistent demands for freedom of expression, expanding contact with the West. Recent weeks have seen important developments.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA -- Party restiveness made Czech Premier Antonin Novotny oust two old cronies, Karol Bacilek and Bruno Kohler, from high office. Novotny was trying to clear himself of responsibility of some victims. Main interest is in the 1952 trial and execution on rigged charges of former party secretary-general Rudolf Slansky, a Vovotny rival. Bacilek, a hatchet-man for the for the state, bestowed special praise on Novotny for securing "evidence" against Slansky. Both rose to power swiftly after Slansky's death. Novotny so far has yielded little to destalinization. Bacilek and Kohler were only demoted; Slansky has not been rehabilitated. But opposition to Novotny's repressive leadership is growing, within and outside the party.

ROMANIA -- Romania has disagreed with Russia's plans for its place in Comecon, Eastern Europe's version of of the Common Market. The Romanians fear their rapid progress in industrialization will be harmed if they acced to Soviet plans for Romania's share of the labor in the organization. Romanian papers have been devoting much space to China's stand in the Sino-Soviet quarrel, while giving somewhat less attention to Soviet pronouncements of it. Many observers believe this is linked with Bucharest's dissatisfaction with Russia's Comecon policy.

YUGOSLAVIA -- Addressing the plenary session of the Yugoslav party, Tito laced Red China for dogmatism and intransigence. At the same time he reasserted Yugoslavia's independence. He argued that China's foreign policy was pitting the peoples of emerging nations against those of the developed countries, and said it was conducive to a catastrophic nuclear war. This incensed the Chinese and North Vietnamese. Prospects for Soviet-Chinese accord at their July meeting were dimmed considerably. Yugoslav hints that Khrushchev would visit there in June irritated the Chinese further.

HUNGARY -- Amid signs that Cardinal Mindszenty would finally be permitted to leave Hungary and speculation that the US might resume diplomatic relations with Kadar government, the regime lifted residence restrictions on five Roman Catholic bishops. This was an undoubted concession to the Vatican, but one probably too grudging in itself to improve Church regime relations significantly. The bishops have not been permitted to return to their dioceses; of Hungary's one Cardinal 14 bishops, only seven are free to carry out their normal duties; and six of the country's 11 dioceses have no head.

BULGARIA -- A major speech by Bulgarian boss Todor Zhivkov revealed that his authoritarian regime is having serious difficulties making young people and intellectuals toe the party line. In an address to cultural workers, Zhivkov said an official party report expressed "anxiety and alarm" over the growing influence of "bourgeois ideology" in Bulgaria. Zhivkov complained bitterly about the increasing admiration, particularly among certain youth groups, for the free world's institutions and way of life. He used the occasion to praise Russian Premier Khrushchev's recent crackdown on artists and attacked several outspoken young writers and some publications, warning them to tone down their work. Zhivkov followed the address with one to Bulgaria's official Communist youth organization, in whch he exhorted it to fight all forms of Western influence.

Thespians Rehearse For Asolo Festival

An acting company of 34 has begun rehearsals at FSU for the six-week-long Asolo Theatre Comedy Festival at Sarasota beginning July 12.

One of the five plays to be presented at that time in Ringling Museum's 18th century Italian Opera House, the Asolo Theatre, is a new English translation and adaptation of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac."

The new adaptation is by James Forsyth. Asolo Festival Director Richard Fallon, associate director of theatre at FSU, said the Festival performances will be the first for this new adaptation.

Other plays to be presented through Aug. 24 are Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," Sheridan's "The Rivals," Moliere's "School For Wives" and Goldoni's "The Mistress of the Inn." There will be 57 performances in all.

Festival players, gathered from as far away as San Francisco and England, have begun several hours a day of work in FSU's Conradi Theatre rehearsing under the direction of Fallon and his associate directors, Robert Strane of Reno, Nev., and Eb Thomas of New York City.

The acting company will work here through early July and then will go to Sarasota for the first of the performances in Asolo Theatre July 12.

Tickets for the Asolo Theatre Comedy Festival are now available at Conradi Box Office. The Box Office will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

A special season ticket rate of $14 is available, whereby patrons can attend performances of 5 plays for the price of 4.

The performances are so arranged that spectators can attend, in the course of 5 days, all 5 performances or, if they wish to limit their attendance to one night a week, a different play on the same night of each of the 5 weeks.

Team Up To Bowl

A meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Monday to organize bowling teams for men, women and mixed team.

The meeting will be in Longmire Student Lounge. Teams will play at the Seminole and Parkway Lanes at a cost of three games for $1.

Yessin Selected For Music Award

Gerson Yessin, a graduate student of music, has been selected for the "Award of Merit" by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Yessin, working on a doctorate in music and a piano student of Edward Kilenyi, is chairman of the Division of Music of Jacksonville University College of Music and Fine Arts.

The Award was presented to "the College of Music and Fine Arts, andGerson Yessin" for "outstanding participation" in music at the State Meeting of the Florida Federation of Music clubs in Jacksonville, and in his absence was accepted by Dr. Frances B. Kinne, dean of the College of Music and Fine Arts on his behalf.

Yessin, a concert pianist, has made numerous recordings of the Junior Festival List, sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. These recordings of piano teaching pieces are used by students, teachers, schools and universities throughout the country and present recording, the fourth since Yessin originated the idea in 1956, is currently in its third pressing.

Augustine Gets Top Honors In 1963 FSU Baseball Play

Mike Augustine, 5-9, 150-pound centerfielder, walked away with top honors during the 1963 Florida State baseball campaign.

Augustine, a senior, was named to the NCAA All-American First team (the sixth at FSU in nine years) and official statistics released today show him leading the team in hitting with a final .399 average.

Augustine shared the spotlight with shortstop Woody Woodward in leading the '63 Seminoles to a 26-13 record, their second straight District III Championship in the Gastonia, N.C. tournament and on to the College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska.

Danny Litwhiler's 1963 outfit downed Western Michigan in first round action of the Omaha meet, then fell to Arizona and Southern California in order. Arizona and USC later battled it out for the Championship, with USC the victor.

Two members of the 1963 team have signed professional contracts to date; Woodward, who had one year of eligibility remaining, cast his lot with the Milwaukee Braves for a reported $50,000 bonus, and will report to Denver of the Pacific Coast League.

Pitcher Allen Thomas, who finished the year with a fine 9-3 record, signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox for an undisclosed amount and will report to Wellsville, New York in the N.Y. - Pennsylvania League.

Meanwhile, Litwhiler, whose record for nine years at FSU stands now at 179-81 (.688 pctg.), departed June 19 for a two month tour of South and Central America to conduct baseball clinics and demonstrations under the sponsorship of the U.S. State Department. Assistant Coach Ernie Lanford and star pitcher Al Beccaccio are also going along.

Team wise, the 1963 Seminoles' 26 wins set a new standard, erasing the old mark of 24 by the 1956 team (which lost 5). Litwhiler's team also ran up a total of 200 runs-batted-in this year to break the old mark in that department of 199 set by last year's team.

The 1963 outfit missed the Most Hits Season record by one; the 387 total this Spring was one shy of last year's 388 total.

Augustine, Woodward, and Beccaccio led the assault on individual records.

Augustine's 65 hits easily bettered the mark of 44 by Bob Clem in 1959. At the same time, Woodward broke or tied no less than three standards. Woody's six homers tied the old record held jointly by Fred Twomey, 1955, and Jack Dull, 1959.

Called by Coach Danny Litwhiler one of the nation's 10 best shortstops (including the pros), Woodward racked up a total of 126 assists, breaking his own record of 110 set last year as a sophomore. Ironically Woody's 22 errors broke the school record of 19 by Dale Koch in 1959. Litwhiler, however, explains that Woody's amazing speed afield allows him to reach and knock down many balls that other shortstops would never touch.

Beccaccio, who became the finest pitcher in FSU history after beginning his Seminole career as a second baseman, set a new record for wins (12, lost only one) while giving up 59 walks for another new mark. Frank Slusser won eight games in 1958, as did Frank Davis in 1959 and 1960 for the old wins record, while Ed Lockard, 1951, holds the record for walks.

Augustine and Woodward also dominated leadership in statistical categories. Augustine, who was not a regular starter until tournament time last year, led this year's team in runs (41), hits, total bases (81), and batting average (.399), and tied Woodward for leadership in doubles (8).

Woodward led in triples (3), homers runs-batted-in, and walks (27).

Seminole Flyers

The FSU flying club, SEMINOLE FLYERS, announces that it has immediate openings for new members. Any student, staff or faculty member may join the club, and learn to fly, at approximately half the cost a flying school would charge. Contact Dr. Ken Miller, 2640, or attend the monthly business meeting, first Wednesday of each mohth, 102 Business.

2 FSU Stars Go Pro Baseball

By EUGENE BALLARD
Flambeau Staff Writer

Two of Coach Danny Litwhiler's District Three Champions have signed professional contracts.

They are short stop Woody Woodward and pitcher Allan Thomas.

Woodward, after a slow start led the team to its Gadstonian victory. Despite his slow start he hit .305 and led the team in home runs with 6, and also with rbi's with 35.

In addition he tied for the lead in doubles with Mike Augustine hitting seven.

He was signed by the Milwaukee Braves for an estimated $50 thousand. He was assigned to Denver of the Pacific coast League, and will count on the Braves roster next year.

Junior college transfer Allan Thomas compiled an enviable record while at FSU. Over two seasons he had a 14-4 record.

He was the number two starter this year behind Al Beccaccio. At a won-loss record of 9-3 and an earned run average of 2.45 for 16 games.

He signed with the Boston Red Sox for an undisclosed amount. Al was assigned to Wellsville in the class A New York - Pennsylvania league. Coach Litwhiler says that he feels Thomas has a good chance of making good in pro ball.

Cool Pool Opens

The swimming pool in Montgomery Gym will be open for recreational swimming between 5:30 and 7:30 Monday through Friday during Trimester III-B.

Registered students will be admitted upon presentation of ID cards. Students family members, faculty, staff, and families of faculty and staff will be admitted upon the presentation of tickets purchased at the Westcott Business Office.

Two tickets will be issued for 25 cents; the use of towels and tank suits are included and may be checked out at the pool.

Lex Wood Wins Tennis Singles

Lex Wood, an FSU junior from King Williams, South Africa, defeated his opponent from North Carolina last week to win the singles division in the Eastern Intercollegiate held at Colgate University in Hamilton, New York.

Last year's champs, the entire FSU tennis team had graduated, leaving this year's newcomers sparked by Wood as the defending champions for the title.

Although Wood won the singles match, going into competition with an 18-5 record, Coach Eddie Cubbon's team lost out in doubles, leaving FSU no chace for the title this year.

Schick Coordinates AID In Guatemala

Elmer Leroy Schick, former FSU professor, is serving with the Agency for International Development in Guatemala.

Schick is conference coordinator for the U.S. Regional Office for Central America and Panama (ROCAP) which was established by AID in August, 1962, with headquarters in Guatemala

ROCAP works closely with organizations formed by Central Americans themselves to help bring about unification of economics and raise educational standards. These organizations are concerned with varied activities related to the attainment of a Central American economic community.

The plans of the organizations include the creation of a common market, regional development lending and the development of higher education.

Schick's responsibility for ROCAP is to coordinate the many conferences held among the regional and national organizations and their specialists.

Schick taught business administration at FSU for six years. He left to join AID in 1960 when he was assigned to Guatemala as business education advisor, He transferred to his present regional duties when ROCAP was formed.

IT'S NOT SO HARD

. . . for these Turkish scientists to study science education in Amer FSU has been awarded $325,000 by the Ford Foundation toward the gram to improve secondary science courses in Turkey.

Turkish Scientists Study US Education

Several prominent scientists from Turkish universities have begun a summer-long study of science education in the US to pick up ideas for a model high school they hope will increase the flow of scientists from Turkey educational system.

The first two and last two weeks of their stay in this country will be at FSU, whose Science Education Dept. is under a $325,000 contract with the Ford Foundation to provide consultative services for the ambitious project. Plans call for opening of the model high school with 300 gifted students in Sept. 1964.

The project is novel in several respects, according to Dr. J. Stanely Marshall, professor and head of FSU's Science Education Dept. It is the first time, for instance, an attempt has been made to transplant to a distant country some of the recent important developments in science and math education which have radically changed high school programs in the USA.

The 10 Turkish educators, after observing science teaching methods and materials in Tallahassee, Austin, Berkeley, Chicago, Boston and half a dozen other cities, will re to their homeland on Aug. 11 to work on a special training prog for science teachers. Dr. Mar also will go to Turkey.

Thirty Turkish secondary teach meanwhile have been sele through competitive tests and views as teachers for the s Nine are math teachers and are seven each in biolog chemistry and physics. The 30 teach will spend the summer of 196 the FSU campus and so will scientists. Together they will out a curriculum.

Dr. Marshall and Dr. Cemil Sevar, a chemist from Ankara U versity, are responsible for adm istration of the Turkish proj Dr. Ernest Burkman of FSU assistant to Marshall. It is the special high school at Anka which will have 300 students s ected by competitive examinat from over Turkey, will start of an upgrading prog help Turkey meet its needs for tec nicians and technologists in eloping economy.

Away We Go

...on the construction of the new University Union complex. Work is being done by Coble Construction Company of Orlando, which submitted a low bid of $1,983,300 on the project. The entire area of construction has been fenced off.

Summer Registration Climbs By 25 Percent

The most recent figures available for the number of students enrolled for Trimester III-B have reached 5063.

Registrar Murray W. Kenna reported that nearly complete registration figures included 2710 continuing from Trimester III-A and 2353 new registrants for Trimester III-B.

This total is about 130 more than were enrolled in the trimester just ended.

Figures for Trimester III-A were 4309, with those students enrolled for the entire third trimester included in the count.

Last year's figures for the 1962 Summer Session totaled 4,043 students.

All class buildings are in use at this time, and classes will be dropped only at the discretion of the dean of the school involved.

Miss Edith McCollum of student housing has reported that Dorman, Florida and Landis Halls are open for the remainder of the summer. Kellum Hall is open for all men students.

None of the fraternities are remaining open for III-B, and Sigma Kappa is the only sorority open at present.

Preorientation Now In Progress

Preorientation will continue for the remainder of the week as freshmen eager for an early glimpse of FSU begin the second preorientation session tomorrow.

The first session ends today as weary parents and students wind up the three-day whirlwind of events with special interest meetings and a final information session on scheduling procedures and course sequences this afternoon.

A third preorientation period will begin Sunday and run through Tuesday of next week.

These preorientation programs enable parents to meet the heads of departments and key members of the university who will play a large part in the daily life of FSU students.

Students who will begin their freshman year with the fall trimester have an opportunity to get exemption tests out of the way before regular fall orientation begins in September by attending the summer sessions.

The schedule for the remaining two preorientations will be as follows:

First Day

1-6 p.m. Students and parents may check into Smith Hall.

4-6 p.m. Campus Tours (optional) will be offered. Buses will leave from the front door of Smith Hall at 20 minute intervals beginning at 4 p.m.

Second Day

8-8:45 a.m. Opening Session with introductions and explanations of the Pre-Orientation Program in Westcott Auditorium.

Students

9-10:30 a.m. School and College Ability Test in Opperman Music Hall with Dr. G.E. Tully in charge.

10:45-12:45 a.m. Mathematics Placement Test in Opperman Music Hall with Dr. James Snover in charge.

Parents

9-9:30 Tour of Strozier Library with Mr. Orwin Rush in charge.

9:30-10:30 "The Year Ahead" will be presented by Dr. John Cummer in the Library Lecture Hall.

10:30-11 Coffee will be served in the Library Lecture Hall with Miss Marie Williams in charge.

11-12 Dean Katherine Warren and Robert Brewer will speak "A Word from the Deans" in the Library Lecture Hall.

2-2:50 p.m. First Information Session in Westcott Auditorium with Dr. C. Tanzy, Acting Director of the Division of Basic Studies presiding.

Speakers will be Dr. C. Tanzy and Dr. John Cummer and Mr. Johnny Smith, president of the student body.

3-3:50 p.m. Second Information Session in Westcott with Dean of Women Katherine Warren presiding.

4-5 p.m. Third information session in Westcott with Mr. Robert Brewer, Assistant Dean of Men presiding.

8-9 p.m. Reception for parents and students will be held in the lounge of Kellum Hall.

Third Day

7:30-12 noon Check out of Smith Hall

8-10 a.m. Applied Music Auditions for Music majors will be held in the School of Music with Dr. J. White in charge.

8:30-10:30 Group Interest Meetings.

10-12 noon Music Theory Examination for all music majors in the School of Music.

1-3 p.m. Final Information Session in Westcott with information on scheduling procedures and course sequences being provided by Dr. Tanzy; information on registration procedures for the fall, Dr. John Cummer; special information for the music majors, Dr. Joe White.

Reception Set

President and Mrs. Blackwell will honor all third trimester students, the faculty, and their families at a reception Thursday from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

The reception will be a garden party at the President's home.

Minnick Appointed Advisor

By SHEILA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Wayne C. Minnick, head of the Speech Dept., has been appointed the national advisor in speech and the dramatic arts by the Houghton Mifflin Co.

The company sends Dr. Minnick manuscripts in related fields; he decides whether or not they would be worthy of publication. If so, Dr. Minnick edits the copies, returns them to repective authors for revision, and follows the books through press.

Minnick is the current President of the Florida Speech Association and has served as Representative-at-Large of the legislative Assembly of the Speech Association of America and as Chairman of the Rhetoric and Public Address Interest Group of that Association.

He graduated from Indiana University with Phi Beta Kappa honors and was Associate Professor of Speech at FSU from 1949-1956. Then he taught at Northwestern University 3 years, returning to FSU in 1959 as Head of the Speech Dept.

He has contributed numerous articles to the "Quarterly Journal of Speech," "Speech Monographs," "Southern Speech Journal and Etc: A Review of General Semantics."

A direct outgrowth of his teaching a course in persuasion here at FSU was his book "The Art of Persuasion."

Presently he is in the process of writing another book on the fundamentals of speech which he says, probably won't be finished for "a couple of years yet."

Minnick praises highly FSU's speech dept. saying it is "one of the best in the Southeast," yet he sees the need for a new theater, art gallery and museum in the fine arts area.

Girls' State Invades FSU

Girls State of Seminole set up its model government on the campus of FSU and has elected a governor from among its more than 268 members.

Under auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary and with Mrs. J.W. Kuhn of Plant City as director, Girls State will provide its members training in all branches of government. The girls, all of whom have just completed their junior year in high school, will be here through Thursday.

In addition to choosing a governor from the opposing candidates offered by Girls State's two parties, the Federalists and the Nationalists, the high school girls will signify their choices for a full Cabinet and a Supreme Court.

Following the opening convocation in Westcott Auditorium, the Girls Staters elected officials of make-believe cities to which each girl has been assigned. There were county elections, followed by organization of the opposing parties.

On Monday morning the girls visited the Capital and heard talks by Governor Bryant and other members of the Cabinet. Political rallies were held at Lake Bradford and the girls voted on voting machines in Westcott Auditorium.

After the big election senators and representatives of Girls State Legislature were elected. The Legislature will organize and elect officers this morning, and at 3 p.m. today the newly elected governor Cabinet and Supreme Court will take their oaths of office, before a joint session of Senate and House at the Capitol.

The Legislature will hold other sessions tomorrow morning and afternoon and Thursday morning.

Pugh To Review 'Morte D'Urban'

Dr. Griffith T. Pugh of the English dept. will review James F. Powers' novel concerning the life of a Catholic priest, "Morte D'Urban," tomorrow afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Student Lounge of Longmire.

A reception at 4:30 p.m. in the Lounge of Longmire will precede the book review, and special guests for the reception will be the participants in the institutes now underway at FSU.

"Morte D'Urban" tells the story of a member of the order of St. Clement who stumped the country preaching retreats and parish missions prior to his assignment to a small isolated foundation in Minnesota.

Dr. Pugh is book review editor of the "English Journal" and in 1962 served as chairman of the American Literature Group of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association.

He is chairman of the book review series this summer and is the author of "Guide to Research Writing," published by the Houghton Mifflin Company.

Obstacles Game

The obstacle course that progress, this time in the shape of University Union construction, sets up to impede continuance of daily routine has hit the campus with a bang.

Harried drivers and pedestrians are being besieged at all turns with barricades of every description. Like white rats in an experimental labyrinth, where all controls have suddenly disappeared, FSU's ingenious students are being left to find their own solutions to the barricade problem.

Motorists are having trouble in particular getting to and from the Library, with more difficulty being attached to the escape route because of the number of one-way streets. The only exit available is through the gate way on the south side of campus, or through the recently opened drive in front of Florida Hall (also on the south side). Entrance may be gained from the east or the south gates.

One street near the Library is barricaded at both ends, with no entrance or exit. Presumably the second barricade is needed so that, if the car hurdles the first one, the driver'll be sure to see the second.

The best solution, until the Faculty Traffic Committee alleviates the situation, might just be to park off campus and walk to the Library.

Students on foot are having the most fun, though. As the bewildered construction crew watches in disbelief, the undaunted students trample nonchalantly over, under, around and through fences, poles and other barricades, taking the same short cuts they always take.

It's great fun, but it's one problem the constructors probably didn't foresee. Rerouting 5,000 determined students is going to take more than mere physical handicaps; psychology is the thing, gentlemen. You gotta outsmart 'em.

LM

Open Doors

With the increased pressures of the trimester, and specifically with the additional concentration of the summer trimester, Library hours should be lengthened to give students extra research time, in particular on Saturday night.

Many activities are at a minimum operating speed this summer, but the Library is one place where operations should be increased rather than decreased. To set up special Library hours during exam week is commendable, but it is not enough. Keeping the Library open until 11 p.m. Saturdays would require only a slightly larger staff, and the value of the additional time to students would more than outbalance this disadvantage.

Closing the Library at 5 p.m. Saturdays especially limits students who work several hours on weekdays, for they cannot make up lost research time in their time off if the doors to their Library are locked. Access to exclusive research materials is even more severely curtailed in areas such as the microfilm Dept. and Special Collections, where they are available only on weekdays until 5 p.m., and on Saturdays until noon.

Many students would be grateful for a chance to spend Saturday evenings studying in the Library. Their social life might suffer a little, but their grades might improve a lot.

It should be their choice to make.

Did India Provoke Conflict?

On April 18, 1963, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor was asked point blank by Florida Rep. R. Sikes, "Did the Indians actually start this military operation?"

Sikes was referring to the recent border attacks between the Indians and the Red Chinese. "They were edging forward in the disputed area," replied General Taylor. "Yes, sir." -- At this point the testimony was censored out of the public transcript. (From the New York Times)

This testimony throws much doubt upon the claim by India that it has suffered from Chinese "aggression." Such claims, however, give the Indian ruling classes ample excuse to request military "aid" from the West. Red China has slowly been elevated to the position we used to save for the Russians -- i.e., the role of the barbarous and uncivilized "monster" race plotting to destroy everything that's good in the world and to replace our "God" given Western values with the insidious and evil corruptions of atheistic materialism.

No doubt the Red Chinese have done a lot to deserve the stereotype we now label them with, although compared to some of the past deeds of the Western "democracies" their atrocities appear to be merely of degree rather than of kind.

The "New Statesman," published in England, has pointed out that the Soviet Union and the West seem to be approaching some sort of rapprochement. As Russian Communist dogma, as well as the patently ridiculous Western line of "everything Communist is evil, foul, dirty and mean," both begin to assume a more liberal tolerance of one another, vast areas of understanding and friendship begin to open. Togliatti Communist leader [illegible] to command even some "liber American conservatives' resp and Russia assumes the aspec a potential ally.

The threat of war [illegible] thing clear -- we [illegible] working class by destroying it. "N.S." asks that "As dogm ers, the Russians are increa revealed as human beings lik selves. Do we really believe Chinese are any different?"

"What Do You Mean, I Can't Take It With Me?"

Hiking Involves Politics

(ACP) -- Now that the 50-mile walk craze has hit Baltimore City College, perhaps it's time to reflect a bit upon this hiking. Just why, for instance, did the President single out this particular ordeal to test American fitness?

Obviously, the whole idea has bitter partisan undertones. It's really just a plan to push through some sneaky medical-aid bill that the Democrats are hiding under their donkey pins.

First of all, the walks will placate America's medical men. Podiatrists will be able to afford homes in Hyannis Port, too.

Secondly, with the influx of sore-foot and exposure cases, America's hospitalization rate will double. Then the Democrats will save the happy wanderers from undue financial strain by picking up the medical tab and some '64 votes.

But who, one might ask, would vote for someone who gave him sore feet? The Democrats have thought of that angle, too. They're blaming it all on Teddy Roosevelt.

To retaliate, the Republicans should start a 50-mile swim program. Since at least three out of four doctors agree that swimming is much better exercise than walking, the Republicans will have outfinessed their opponents. Moreover, the plan will stimulate swimming pool sales (50-mile swimming pools?) and thus give business a boost in its race with labor.

The ultimate stratagem would be for the Republicans to persuade some of the Democratic leaders to demonstrate their virility by undertaking the first 50-mile swim. Then, competition would be considerably thinner in 1964.

Connor Retires

One of the country's best known teachers in the field of home and family life, Dr. Ruth Connor, professor of child development and family life and head of the Home and Family Life Dept. retired Sunday after 32 years.

Dr. Connor joined the faculty as associate professor of child development and home economics in 1931. She became professor of child development and family life in 1939. When the school was departmentalized in 1945 she was appointed head of the Department of Home and Family Life, which has participated actively in the inter-divisional programs of human development and marriage and family life since its inception.

The department's doctoral program in child development was one of the first doctoral programs authorized (1948) by the Board of Control at FSU, and is considered one of the five best in the country.

The first doctoral degree in home economics at FSU was from the Department of Home and Family Life in Child Development. This summer the department will graduate its 25th Ph. D. student. Dr. Connor has directed th research of 12 of the department's Ph. D. candidates and 35 of its master's degree students. Many of these students are teaching or heading schools or departments in universities in California, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, and Texas.

Recently Dr. Connor's longtime interest in the child, his development and education, earned her the highest recognition given by the Southern Association on Children Under Six. Dr. Walters, her first doctoral student and presently professor of home and family life at FSU, said as he made the presentation: "As head of a department in which a variety of subject matter specialties are included -- child development and family relations, housing and interior design, home management and family economics -- she has consistently evidenced leadership of the highest caliber.

"She has championed the cause of early childhood education and she has been instrumental in the development of nursery school and kindergarten programs as laboratories for the study of human development in universities throughout the country.

LAWMEN FROM AROUND THE WORLD

. . . are attending the Delinquency Control Institute being held at FSU. From the left, Thailand policemen are ThavomNinsananda, Pravin Malakul and Adul Boonseat, who are discussing a textbook with Robert Stringer, detective.

Delinquency Studied

A "juvenile defender" was suggested by well known New York criminologist Donal E.J. MacNamara, who told an audience at FSU young people too frequently are given a delinquency label "which follows them the rest of their life" on the flimsiest evidence.

Adults, said MacNamara at the opening of the four-week Juvenile Delinquency Institute, often give young people a delinquency tag for conduct imitative of adult behavior, conduct no longer possible for adults or conduct which seems to show evidence of abandoning the "sterling virtues" of past generations.

It would have been better, so far as America's ideas on sex are concerned, he indicated, "if Plymouth rock had landed on the Pilgrims."

Much of what is called delinquent behavior, said MacNamara, who is dean of the New York Institute of Criminology, represents "healthy, normal response on the part of juveniles" to circumstances like an intolerable home from which he runs away or an intolerable school from which he is truant.

He expressed the opinion more flexibility should be exercised in administering laws requiring school attendance up to a particular age. Some physically mature children should not be required to remain in school when there is no motivation and when they "might be more happy and productive members of society" somewhere else.

There's quite a bit of discriminationagainst children in the law, he said. New York, for instance, recently passed a bill, which he thought as originally drawn was a good one, to reduce drunkometer reading requirements on drunken driving cases from .15 to .05 percent alcohol. It was amended, however, to make this new requirement applicable only to persons under 21.

More children are killed by parents than are parents by children, he reported, and more children are beaten by teachers and principals than are teachers and principals attacked by students. Unlike the property of a wife the property of a child is not protected by law.

MacNamara told the students, most of them law enforcement officers attending seminar-type discussions on the causes and cures for delinquency, to question the statistics showing heavy increases in delinquency. He expressed the opinion delinquency is a problem everywhere and always has been "for the simple reason that we're dealing with human beings."

Lecture, Research Grants Available

Govenment Grants are available for university lecturing and advanced research under the Fulbright-Hays Act for 1964-65 in Europe, Africa, Near East, South and Southeast Asia and the Far East.

Requirements are that the individual be an American citizen; have a minimum of one year of college teaching experience if seeking a lecturing position; have a doctoral degree or recognized professional standing if seeking a research post; and in certain cases, have a knowledge of the language of the host country.

For application forms and additional information write to the Committee on International Exchange of Persons, Conference Board of Associated Research Councils, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D. C.

The closing date for all competitors is August 1, 1963.

Care To Play?

Men interested in playing summer intraleague BASKETBALL may attend a meeting in Tully Gym at 7 p.m. tonight.

Students interested in playing on a BOWLING team during the summer should inquire in Room 19 Longmire at once.

"It's going to be hard to get off to a winning start," is the way Coach J.K. "Bud" Kennedy sees the 25 game slate for next year's season.

Kennedy says that "in our first three games we play three of the contenders for the Southeastern Conference championship," and he added that FSU would face its toughest basketball schedule since entering major college competition in 1954.

The Seminoles will open on the road against Florida in Gainesville and play no less than nine games against SEC teams during the course of the season.

Newest names on the FSU schedule will be Tulsa, VMI, Jacksonville, Texas Christain University, Air Force Academy and Manhatten. The FSU fivesome will meet the Air Force and Manhatten in the course of the Gator Bowl Tournament Dec. 26 and 27.

Memphis State, Rice and Furman, always hard contenders for a game, are returning to the Seminole's roster after brief layoffs.

The Seminoles will play teams from six different conferences, plus several major independents. Rice and TCU are in the Southwest Conference, Furman and VMI are in the Southern, Tulsa in the Missouri Valley, and Manhatten is in the Metropolitan New York Conference.

Despite a rugged schedule, Kennedy has high hopes of equaling or even bettering the Seminole's 15-10 record last year.

"We'll have more size and more team speed," Kennedy commented. "If our sophomores come through and we can find someone to fill those size 13 shoes of Charlie Long, we should be in good shape."

Long, who has graduated, was FSU's leading scorer and team captain last year. Faurest Coogle, Dale Ricketts, Bill Giswold and Dale Reeves will also be missing for the new season.

Returning from last year's squad are eight lettermen. Two redshirts and five men up from the freshman team round out the prospective ter.

Campus Movies To Be Shown

There are five campus movies reading to be shown during Trimester III.

The shows will begin at 7:30 p.m. westcott Auditorium, and admission is $.2[illegible] per person for each movie.

The campus movie selection for [illegible] tomorrow is "Vertigo," starring James Stewart and Kim Novak. The film is an Alfred Hitchcock thriller involving a young detective with a neurotic fear of heights and a beautiful but unhappy young wife.

"Teahouse of the August Moon" will be shown July 5 and 6, starring Marlon Brando and Glenn Ford. The story of a young American Army officer (Glenn Ford) to rehabilitate Okinawa by introducing American customs are subverted thoroughly by Sakini, his interpreter (Marlon Brando), with the result that the Americans stationed on Okinawa become thoroughly Okinawanized.

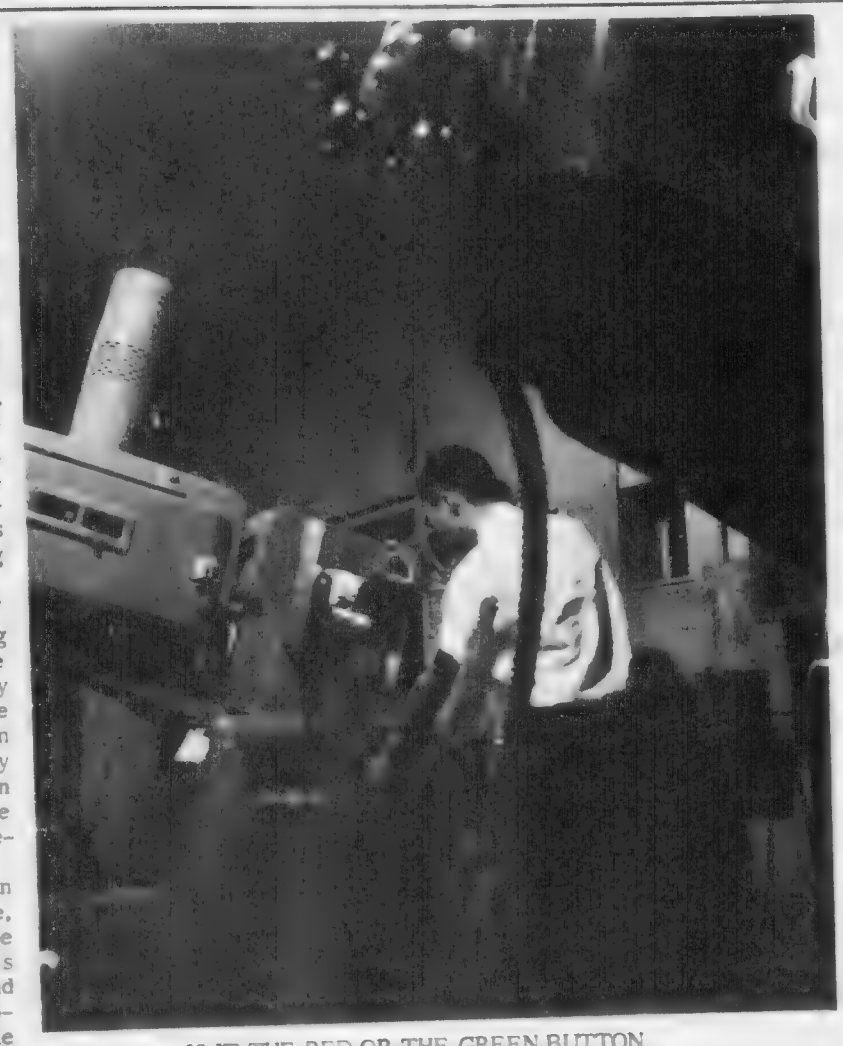
"North to Alaska," starring John Wayne, Stewart Granger, Capucine, Ernie Kovacs and Fabian, will be shown July 19 and 20. The film is set in the "Gold Rush" days, and the plot revolves around what happens when Wayne, going to Seattle for mining supplies, is asked by Granger to bring back his fiancee, [illegible] she is married to Granger.

"[illegible]" with Shirley MacLaine, Frank Sinatra, Louise Jourdan and Maurice Chevalier will be shown July 25 and 27. A tale of a Montmartre dancehall owner of the 1890's who is subjected to police raids due to illegal performances of the can-can.

The last movie of the season will be "A Farewell to Arms," which will be shown Aug. 2 and 3. Starring [illegible], Jennifer Jones and Rock Hudson, a novel by Hemingway about the tragic love story of an American ambulance driver and an English nurse who meet on the Italian front in World War I.

R.E. Stevenson Joins Faculty

A California-trained oceanographer who has been serving as associate director of Texas A&M University's Marine Laboratory at Galveston, Dr. Robert E. Stevenson, will join the faculty on July 1.



Dr. Stevenson will be a research associate in the FSU Oceanographic Institute and also, beginning in September, will become an associate professor in the Meteorology Dept.

Following service in the Air Force during World War II he received an A.B. degree in geology from the University of California in 1946.

His M.S. degree in geology was received from the same institution in 1948 and a Ph. D. in geology and oceanography from the University of Southern California in 1954.

He has been a lecturer at USC, assistant professor at Long Beach State College and a research associate at the Allan Hancock Foundation. In 1959-60 he conducted special research in London for the Office of Naval Research.

Dr. Stevenson is the author of more than 2[illegible] publications.

Summer Math Camp Begun

Over thirty high school students gifted in mathematics have begun six weeks of advanced studies in FSU's sixth annual Summer Math Camp.

Their three basic courses, according to Dr. Robert Kalin, assistant professor of math education and camp director, will be computer programming and related mathematics, theory of numbers and related mathematics and earth science.

If past experience is any guide, most of the students will major in math in college, Kalin said. A study of students attending the four math camps held between 1958 and 1961 showed 50 majoring in math, 15 in physics, six in electrical engineering, four in chemistry and several in other sciences.

There were, however, four majors in philosophy, two in history, one in government, one in fine arts and one in psychology.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology received the most students from FSU math camps (10), and California Institute of Technology was second highest with eight. FSU and Harvard University each received seven and four went to Emory, Princeton, Rice and the University of Florida.

The 1963 participants were selected from among hundreds of applicants, and many have won special recognition in math or science competition, according to Dr. Kalin.

New Tests Administered

Several hundred prospective freshmen at Florida State University are taking a new math exemption test designed to reflect the new content of high school math courses and new requirements for math at FSU.

This was disclosed Wednesday by Dr. John Cummer, assistant director of counseling at FSU who told prospective new students and some of their parents at a pre-orientation session that it will not be known until the last tests are given in September what students will be exempted from Math 105, basic math for general education.

Cummer said those exempting 105 will take a newly offered course, Math 135, integrated algebra and trigonometry. This course replaces 117, college algebra and 118, trigonometry. Students in pre-orientation session are taking the new exemption test. Other incoming freshmen will take it during regular orientation in September.

Cummer said students going through the three pre-orientation session this summer will be a day or a day and a half ahead on the regular orientation session.

New freshmen and transfer students totaling 466, along with 191 parents, went through the first pre-orientation session Monday and Tuesday and 233 new students and 68 parents are here for the second session lasting through today. There are 278 new students and 83 parents registered for a third pre-orientation beginning Sunday.

Kramer Reports On Soccer Club

Secretary of Internal Affairs Luther Kramer announced today that a check into the status of the FSU Soccer Club, financially and otherwise, has been completed.

At present the Soccer Club is composed largely of international students from nations where Soccer is a major sport. The club is not officially recognized or supported by the athletic department.

The research revealed that the Soccer Club has requested funds for uniforms and travel expenses but the requests have been made through the Intra-Murals Office and not through Student Government.

Secretary of Finance records indicate that no formal requests have been made for the past four years for SG funds.

According to Coach Eddie Cubbon, director of the Intra-Murals program, the athletic department furnishes a staff member to work with the team but that a budget of $3600 is "simply inadequate to permit any allocation of funds to the club." The soccer groups does receive a small amount at present from the Dean of Student's Office.

"This is a budgetary problem," Kramer reports. It is a problem of allocating a limited amount of money in the fairest and most equitable manner possible.

"The proper allocation of these funds depends on Student Senate, for it is their responsibility to determine who gets what of close to one-half million dollars of student activity fees.

"It is the hope and goal of Coach Cubbon in particular, and of this office, that eventually all such groups as the Soccer Club can be accommodated, and that Intra-Mural athletics and Inter-collegiate Soccer can be a richer and more rewarding experience for a larger number of students, as it should be," added Kramer.

Research Program Authorized

Creation of a new, separate Division of Sponsored Research at FSU and at other state universities has been authorized by the 1963 session of the legislature.

One of the major legislative aims of FSU's President Gordon Blackwell, University of Florida President J. Wayne Reitz, the bill provides considerably more freedom of action and spending in sponsored research programs.

President Blackwell is expected soon to recommend to the Board a director of the new division at FSU.

The division will be financed from non-state funds which are received for use in FSU's research or related programs. The funds will be subject to regular state audit.

The sponsored research program will be exempt from certain portions of law regulating financial budgeting under the budget commission and will also be exempt from legal requirements of competitive bidding on some of its special equipment purchases.

The bill provides for financing and transfer of funds from existing research trust funds to permanent sponsored development funds.

The bill also authorizes the Board of Control to contruct research facilities out of contract payment funds.

Pugh Reviews 'Morte D'Urban'

By SHEILA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"It's characterization has been likened to Chaucer's," Dr. Griffith T. Pugh of the English Dept. commented during his review of J.F. Powers' book, "Morte D'Urban."

This novel concerns a Catholic priest named Urban Roche whose life was drastically changed when he was transferred from the Chicago area (where he had been successful, infuential, and well-off) to a backwoods Minnesota province (where he felt dissatisfied with the illiterate, at times incompetent, people.

Fr. Urban doesn't have his heart in his work — thus is not the eager reformer he used to be. Consequently, when he becomes head of the Minnesota province for his order and has the opportunity to correct any displeasing aspects, he does nothing.

Dr. Pugh leaves his listeners on this note after recounting a few merry events in Urban's life. Though the title suggest death, Urban's death is not mentioned in the book.

Pugh recommends the book commenting that it is "well put together" and that the colloquial language lends the book humor and contrasts.

The author Powers is a Catholic layman and a Minnesota lawyer who writes about Catholic priests with great insight.

He has published two collections of short stories, and this, his first novel, won "best novel of the year" award. Surely this in itself denotes the book's tremendous appeal, and makes it worth reading.

Militant SG Action On Integration Urged

Last Friday Student Body President Johnny Smith issued his infamous "powderkeg" statement to the "Flambeau" and the student body at large.

While most people might agree that Student Government should "protect the integrity and interests of ALL FSU students," we can plainly see that this is a hopelessly Utopian ideal. The interests of rabid pro-segregationists are not easily reconciled with those of moderates and progressives in this situation.

It should be painfully obvious to all of us that continued racial barriers erected against FSU students because of the racial or religious backgrounds, from fraternity membership, to off campus eating establishments, to the movie houses in downtown Tallahassee, must be demolished.

Mr. Smith should be praised for taking any interest in this situation at all, but he vitiates his stand when he states that S.G. will "use peaceable means and negotiation to accomplish as much as we can." As much as "we can" may not be enough to relieve S.G. of its moral responsibility not only to Negro FSU students, but to the Negro people as a whole.

A university S.G. represents, supposedly, the ideals of the university itself. Those universal educational ideals that have fought for freedom against persecution and prejudice ever since the idea of a university became rooted in the minds of educated people.

It is not enough for Mr. Smith and for S.G. to take a mild and "peaceable" stand. Human rights and the dignity of our fellow men will not be gained by the stalling negotiations of insincere white supremacists.

It is encouraging that the off-campus eating houses are now giving desegregation a trial of a few weeks. What we now want is S.G. to take militant action, if peaceful negotiation should fail.

American Vanity Seen In Reaction To Prayer Edict

The amount of indignant self-righteousness expressed over the recent Supreme Court decision regarding Bible-reading in the public schools indicates to me that a fairly large number of people hereabouts are afflicted with a vanity that Narcissus himself would reject.

This vanity, coupled with various "pure" motives (like "peaceful" overthrow of the so-called Warren Court), is moving these self-ordained spokesmen of the American People to release irresponsible remarks and draw foregone conclusions.

For example, our own governor was quoted at a press conference as stating that the Supreme Court ruling banishing mandatory Bible-reading in the public schools has the effect of denying the very existence of God. Really? I take a course in contemporary literature. I am informed that I am not to be reading "Fanny and Zooie" while in the classroom. Therefore J.D. Salinger doesn't exist.

But have no fear, dear friends. Our legislature has legislated God back into existence. Now our public school pupils may enroll in a "voluntary, objective..." course in Bible-reading.

The castor of the lone dissenting vote in the decision did so on the grounds that if we must own up to our constitutional responsibility and not officially recognize religious practices in the classroom, then it follows that mass prayer before session of the Congress must stop, "...under God" must be deleted from the pledge of allegiance, and "In God We Trust" must be wiped from the face of the national currency. Perhaps so.

The reaction of churches to the Court's decision has been one of acceptance on the whole. The official publications of various denominations were quick to point out that the place to get one's religion is in the church and in the home -- not in the public schools. If the people who are officially responsible for religious training accept the decision in this light, why cannot others do so?

Now to this matter of vanity.

How did this "God-and-country" identification get as far as it did in the first place? Certainly we must agree with the dissenting Justice and say that if by having the Bible read in public schools we have officially recognized a religion, then we have likewise violated the stipulations of the First Amendment by adhering to such other practices as he points out.

I suggest that the stereotypic American has a fondness for the double standard that few other people can rival. He says, "Sure! Government by Constitution! Government by the people! But every American worth his salt is supposed to be at least "God-fearing," if not a member of a specific Christian denomination. And God is supposed to have made America the greatest nation the world has ever known. So we must recognize God -- at least nominally -- as an integral part of America. And, if need be, to hell with the Constitution! But leave the First Amendment (and the Fourteenth too, for that matter!) the way it is. It looks democratic."

Even to this point, the vanity expressed officially by our country can be interpreted as mild and innocent. But when it comes to referring to ourselves as "God's chosen people," a "Christian nation," or officially (and quite modestly) declaring that our nation is "under God" (though "sovereign"), our national pride has surely over stepped its bounds.

As Americans it might be well for us to remember that even we are only human beings -- a polygot of minority groups from cultures all over the world. And that our admittedly imperfect form of government, even the "Maryland atheist" deserves a fair shake.

Quo Vadis, Berlin Wall?

As most, if not all FSU students have noted, it is impossible to walk directly from the business building or from anywhere in that direction directly to the student center.

A long, roundabout and unnecessary trek is required. This trek follows a large fenced in area, previously known as the parking lot and now known as no-man's land... a fence with barbed wire on top. Barbed wire appears to be a rather vicious way to keep students out of a vacant lot. It would seem that someone is afraid that someone might run off with the asphalt of the parking lot.

Another question that arises is why wasn't a corridor left, through which the students could walk; the company could even check ID cards to make things more realistic. The bridge walk-way could and should be kept open just as long as possible until actual construction is begun in that area. This solution to a great inconvenience would seem to present no obvious difficulty to a competent construction crew.

Students attending the campus movie of late will no doubt have noticed a considerable improvement in picture showing. A special thanks is due to Miss Marie Williams, university social director who secured the new projectors.

Some mention should also be made of the winsome young women of Gamma Sigma Sigma, the service honorary, which supplies ushers for all campus movies.

It is curious that, at least during the summer term, so few faculty members attend international club meetings. Last Friday there were only about five excluding those on the program. It was "Turkish" night featuring the visiting Turkish scientists and educators presently at FSU.

Next Friday at 8 p.m. in the Large Lounge of Longmire, the international club will feature folk music from the various national groups represented on campus. Perhaps a few of the music faculty would be interested, if only professionally.

It would be a wonderful gesture of friendliness and concern if more students and particularly faculty members attended these meetings.

Remember: their impression is only as good as our expression.

Ban Class On July 5!

To the Editor:

Why do we have to attend classes on July the fifth? Many of us students have families far from Tallahassee, in fact, many of our families are so far away that in order for us to be with them on the Fourth of July, a national holiday, we would have to travel many hours. And most, if not every one of us would appreciate not having to make the trip back to school Thursday night in order to attend classes Friday morning (or take a double cut.)

Several faculty members have also indicated to me that they would appreciate a four-day "Fourth" week-end. But I don't have the time in this accelerated term to ask every one of the faculty and students to sign a petition, or something of that nature.

The Dean of the Faculties' office has committed itself to the consideration of all legitimate requests, and I, for one, request that we attend class on Thursday, August 8, instead of Friday, July 5, in order that we have the time to spend July the Fourth in "relative" peace with our families.

Disagrees With Editorial On Court Prayer Decision

To the Editor:

Here are several suggestions and comments in connection with the recent prayer editorial:

Shouldn't the phrase "removing religion from daily life" read "removing religion from public life"? No conceivable series of rulings could justify the original phrase. Further, the promotion of religion as essentially private experience and the discouragement of standardized, compulsory Protestantism are consonant with the later assertion that " prayer should be a highly personal, individualized affair."

As Bible reading is not forbidden but made optional, can't the religiosity of our teachers be assumed reliable enough to avert the desperate plight of total removal of school prayer and Bible reading? An excessive lack of confidence in teachers seems indicated in the statement to the effect that most teachers probably wouldn't realize that only compulsory prayer was outlawed -- not prayer itself.

The assertion that the spirit of the law, if perhaps not the letter, has been violated appears gratuitous, unsupported. Similarly the contention that non-belief is currently regarded as "fashionable and sophisticated" implying like most vagaries of the vogue it is substantially silly is inexplicable. Certainly the line that a Supreme Being has kept this nation from its founding as "if its people were his chosen people" is somewhat misleading. That destruction of the belief in a Supreme Being "would be to destroy the nation itself" suggest a disproportionate effect of a cause incapable of really affecting a deep-seated faith (i.e. de-emphasis of public religion) -- or else a nation already on the brink of destruction.

As for the "silent majority," clearly they will remain silent, and God must be now "underground": certainly the "silent majority" can be identified with the well-known majority of non-regular church-going Americans whose beliefs ... only characterized an inform... personal, if not vacuous.

Finally, in connection with an e... lier point, "defiance of the law ... the Land" would appear uncalled ... since acquaintance with what ... ruling permits and a favor... posed teaching professi... ficient to effectively preser... status quo.

DR. C.S. NIELSEN OF BIOLOGY HAS TAUGHT OVER 8,600 STUDENTS AT FSU

Nielsen: Well Known Biology Professor

When Dr. C.S. Nielsen, chairman of General Education Biology at FSU, recently moved his office in Conradi, someone asked to count the number of students he has taught in General Education Biology classes and students in both the Graduate and Upper Divisional studies.

According to the count taken from his class roll books, the number exceeds 8,600 in the seventeen years he has taught at FSU.

Dr. Nielsen, Associate Professor of Botany in addition to his chairmanship, joined the faculty of Florida State College for Women and participated in the Tallahassee Branch of the University of Florida, which was at FSCW to accomodate veterans of World War II.

He came to Tallahassee after four years in the Hospital Specialist Core of the Navy. Dr. Nielsen received his bachelor's degree in pre-med from the University of Chicago; his mater's in zoology from Northwestern University and his Ph. D. in Botany from the University of Chicago.

During his first 10 years at FSU he was interested in research problems relating to the photo period and the taxonomy of algae, and during this time he published over 20 research papers.

In later years however, he has been devoted to teaching and administering the largest laboratory course of the University's curriculum.

Dr. Nielsen served as secretary-treasurer (1948-52), president-elect (1953) and president (1954) of the Florida Academy of Science. He is a fellow of the American Association of the Advancement of Science; of Sigma Xi; and of Phi Sigma.

He is a member of the Phycological Society of America and was a delegate to the Eighth International Botanical Congress in Paris.

He is a judge of the American Camellia Society and has a large personal collection of camellias, including numerous blue ribbon winners.

His deep interest in Wagnerian music may seen an unusual hobby for a botanist, yet Dr. Nielsen has an intimate knowledge of the German master of opera.

Few have conquered Dr. Nielsen in the field of cards, for in addition to his other interests, he is a senior master in the American Contact Bridge League.

Contest Deadline Is This Sunday

"Mademoiselle" is offering cash prizes for winners of its fifth annual college publications contest.

Cash prizes will be awarded for the best article entered in each of the three Contest categories (Undergraduate, Faculty and Alumni) in the order of $75 to each author of a winning article; $50 each to the publications in which winning articles appeared. Winning authors will be paid for articles "Mademoiselle" chooses for republication, in addition to receiving cash prizes.

Students and faculty members should submit articles of any length and on any topic of general interest to students.

Entries should be suitable for republication in "Mademoiselle." Only nonfiction published during July 1962- June 1963 academic year is eligible.

"Mademoiselle" will accept no more than three entries in each category, from each publication.

The photographer of the best picture published in a college newspaper, student magazine or alumni publication will receive $75, and $50 will go the publication in which the photograph appeared.

Each publication may submit no more than 12 photographs.

Entries must be accompanied by a 5x7 inch or larger glossy print of the photograph. Each print should bear the name and address of the photographer.

Entries will be judged by the "Mademoiselle" Editors, and decisions are final.

All entries must consist of the actual page or pages that appeared in the publication, and be accompanied by the name and address of the editor, the name and address of each author and photographer.

Entries should be accompanied by an entry blank and must be postmarked no late than June 30, 1963.

Winners will be announced by Oct. 15, 1963.

How far can your ideas take you in the new world of opportunity in data processing at IBM?

Growth and discovery: The development and application of data processing at IBM open a new world of exciting opportunities for individual career growth. Data processing is producing some of the most far-reaching developments of our age. Each basic advance in technology and application requires new concepts. Ideas—new thinking and new ways to approach problems—are needed. For the individual who likes to discard conventional solutions and find new ideas, there's room to grow in IBM.

IBM offers graduates with Bachelor's or advanced degrees in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or Liberal Arts challenging assignments in the marketing of information systems and equipment. These opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, and space. Each technological advance and each new application can enlarge the scope of your own career at IBM.

A wide range of positions: Rewarding opportunities will exist in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, located in major cities throughout the United States. Positions open include:

Marketing-Sales: The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. He calls on customer executives, giving timely information, presentations, and demonstrations for better business management and controls through data processing.

Systems Engineering: IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise the best approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in the implementation of this solution.

Customer Engineering: The IBM Customer Engineer is a specialist in precision data processing machines and systems. He is responsible for the installation, maintenance, and functioning of IBM's vast line of electronic and electromechanical equipment.

Opportunities for advancement: IBM offers you extensive initial training, both in the classroom and on the job, in the area of your special interest. This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. IBM also offers company-sponsored education programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field, and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study.

Company-paid employee benefit plans are comprehensive, and include life insurance, family hospitalization and major-medical coverage, sickness and accident pay, and retirement benefits, to name but a few.

See your college placement director to determine when IBM will interview on campus, and make an appointment to see our representative. We will be glad to discuss openings and opportunities at IBM, including our training and education programs, financial rewards, and company benefits. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Talent To Spare

. . . is indicated by possession of the Morehead Patterson Award, established by the American Machine and Foundry Company and presented each year to the all-events winner of the National Inter-collegiate Bowlint Tournament. Sculptor William King--himself a bowler--designed the trophy.

Bowling Goes Academic

Boom! The sound of a bowling ball making contact with ten pins also describes the situation of college bowling today.

You might be surprised to learn just how many college students bowl, and how well they do it: in the 1963 National Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament, there were more than 10,000 contestants competing for the prized Morehead Patterson Award.

Why the academic bowling boom? One reason is the new status of bowling at colleges: more and more campuses offer shiny new bowling facilities -- and college credits for learning how to bowl.

Yes, there's an intellectual side to bowling -- and this is evidenced by a casual conversation with a group of college students at their on-campus alley. A student of archeology will tell you that Egyptians were bowling 7,000 years ago.

A bright-eyed youngster who studies European languages discloses that the reason bowlers are sometimes called "keglers" stems from the fact that as early as 200 A.D. the Germans set up their war clubs, called "kegels," and rolled a stone at them.

But a young theologian argues that written records of 300 A.D. claim bowling orginated in the monasteries of continental Europe where it was part of a religious ritual.

A future history teacher relates that England's King Edward III outlawed the popular game of bowling in 1366 because he feared the practice of archery would suffer. An English Literature major refers to the strange people Rip van Winkle met in the mountains who were playing "ninepins," a game the Dutch introduced into America in 1623.

A budding lawyer expands upon this by stating that ninepins grew in popularity and fell under the control of gamblers, whereupon New York State outlawed the game; to circumvent the law, another pin was added and the name changed to "tenpins."

Today, boasts a Physical Education major, bowling is the second greatest participant sport in the United States, preceded only by fishing.

Says John M. Gleason, National Director of Boys' Clubs of America: "Bowling is one of the finest participant sports for young people. It's fun and it's healthy. And it develops agility, team spirit and fine competition."

College students have found bowling a low-cost way to entertain a date -- or work off tensions after a big exam. And it's one activity in which ALL coliegians can participate, not just those who happen to be athletically inclined. Everyone takes part in bowling and, using a handicap system of scoring, the pea-green freshman can compete against the seasoned senior.

This striking new campus trend culminates each year in an Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament, when finalists in the men's all-events division vie for the coveted Morehead Patterson Award -- a large sculpture of a bowler about to release the ball.

Created by the well-known New York scuptor William King, the award was named for the late Morehead Paterson, former Board Chairman of American Machine and Foundry Company, under whose direction and leadership the Automatic Pinspotter was developed and introduced to the game.

Presentation of the Morehead Patterson Award is sponsored by the Association of College Unions in cooperation with AMF and the American Bowling Congress. Appropriately enough, the 1962 winner was a student from a university named Bowling Green.

FSU's Symphony And Opera To Be State Ambassadors

Florida State University's present Symphony and Opera became the first official state symphony and opera when the 1963 Legislature created a Florida State Symphony and Florida State Opera to be administered by the School of Music.

Introduced in the Senate by Senator Wilson Carraway and in the House by Representative Mallory Horne, the bill authorized the symphony and opera to use a portion of the proceeds from performances to provide graduate assistant fellowships.

The Florida State Symphony and Opera will be made available to cities, counties, public schools, civic organizations and other groups as FSU officials deem advisable and as financial support allows.

Knowledge For College Test Given For Women

The "Knowledge for College Test" will be given to all freshmen and upperclass women who have not previously lived on campus in residence halls or scholarship houses.

The test will be given on Thursday, July 11, at 5:15 p.m. in the Longmire Auditorium on the second floor of Longmire Bldg.

The "Knowledge for College" handbook may be obtained from any resident counselor.

Insurance Grads Sought

More than 2,000 graduates from the 1963 college classes are being sought to fill positions with the nation's property and casualty insurance companies.

The need for graduates was disclosed in the second annual survey conducted jointly by the American Mutual Insurance Alliance, the Insurance Information Institute and the National Association of Independent Insurers.

The survey indicated that 2,074 graduates will be needed by 153 insurance companies which handle about two-thirds of the property and casualty insurance in the U.S.

This is a drop from 1962, when a similar survey showed a need for 2,898 graduates. Only direct employees of companies -- not agents and brokers and their office employees -- were covered by the survey.

The survey also showed that 63 percent of the companies were able to satisfy their needs for college graduates last year. The remaining 37 per cent said they could have filled an additional 711 positions.

The survey also showed a strong preference among the companies for graduates who have had insurance courses at the college level. Nearly three-fourths of the companies said they preferred college men with insurance training.

The survey disclosed that there is no single method of attracting college graduates to the insurance business that is considered superior to all others. Employment agencies were found to be the most frequently used source, followed in order by recruitment visits to the college campuses and then by advertising.

Only 43 of the 153 responding companies recruited on college campuses in 1962. They conducted 7,044 interviews in several hundred colleges.

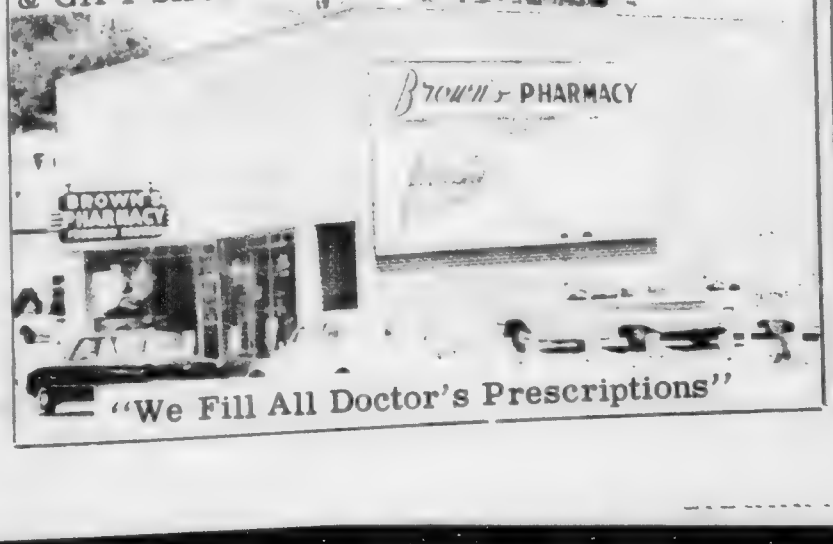
New Loan Established

Students who attend either public or private Florida colleges may now benefit from a scholarship loan fund of $500,000 established by the 1963 Legislature.

Students can borrow up to $1,000 a year (determined by financial need), payable starting the July 1 after they are graduated or drop out of school. The loan will be backed up by a promissory note endorsed by a parent or guardian.

The measure provides for the State Dept. of Education to administer the loans under policies set by a scholarship and loan commission.

Only Florida students, residents of the state for at least three years are eligible for these loans.



A commission of nine, three representing state universities, three from private colleges, and three from the state at large, will oversee the funds.

The bill was a committee compromise of a similar proposal calling for a $3-million grant and loan fund.

Reservation Offers Recreation To Student

By PAT FREEMAN
News Editor

Summer, with her carefree rainy days and soggy red clay has hit FSU, and the students have migrated to a better land: the FSU Reservation.

Swimmers, canoers, nonswimmers and ducks have headed for "nature's version of the Soda Shop" (where popularity is concerned) ... and the Reservation seems to be the number one choice for between class relaxation.

Many students who are carless have discovered that buses are provided for trips to the reservation daily at a minimum cost.

Located at Lake Bradford, the Reservation is open for all students, faculty, staff and their guests and families for the remainder of the summer months. The hours are: Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. until sunset; Tuesday through Friday, 2 p.m. until sunset and the area is closed on Mondays.

The waterfront is now open, and hours will vary with the weather, so check the bulletin boards around the camp for the latest schedules.

Watercraft are available at the reservation boat house and may be used upon passing a skill and safety test to the satisfaction of the lifeguards on duty.

If your shin is skinned in the process of executing a difficult nosedive (or swan song) upon the diving boards, first aid stations are located at the boathouse.

Absent-minded professors who forget their wives and children or students who forget their dates, will find pay phones on the back porch of the Resident Director's cottage.

For picnics between cloudbursts, there are tables provided, and in case of famed Tallahassee three-second weather changes, sheltered tables are featured. Groups of 15 or more should reserve basket-space in advance to avoid conflicts.

Miss Jane Adams, director of Longmire Bldg., issues permits for the use of cabins at the Reservation. cabins? Yes, cabins for student groups may be rented at the following fees per night: Cabin 2, $4; Cabin 4, $5; Cabins 6 and 7, $2. For individuals, such as members of visiting athletic teams, the charge is $1.50 per night per person.

These cabins are for the use of student groups who are properly chaperoned (and who have paid the charges in advance).

Mrs. Ruth DeKalb, resident director for the Reservation, has reported many students don't use the cabins because there is a lack of information concerning rules and regulations.

Procedure for obtaining a cabin are: all groups, for social affairs, for overnight groups, or for individual housing, must have the approval of the Director of Social Activities, Room 19, Longmire, before a permit can be issued. Names of the chaperones must be on the permit.

The gates to the Reservation close at sunset, except when the camp or its cabins are reserved for groups. Arrangements should be made in advance with the Resident Director for the gatekeeper to admit late arrivals or those who wish to leave before [illegible] a.m.

Overnight groups should arrive at 7 p.m. and remain until 6 a.m. Check out time is 10 a.m.

Approved social affairs may last until 9 p.m. during week nights, and until midnight on Saturday and Sunday.

For students remaining overnight in the cabins, a few rules for leaving the cabins in order are: (a) the kitchens must be clean, with no food left in refrigerators or elsewhere. (b) garbage and refuse must be placed in covered cans outside the kitchens, and (c) fires must be extinguished and covered over.

Along with these specific rules come the old familiar rules asking that NO SMOKING be done in the dormitory areas of cabins and please check to be certain all equipment borrowed from the camp facilities has been returned.

If a group leaves any personal belongings behind, they will be kept by Mrs. DeKalb for 30 days, and turned over to the Lost and [illegible] Dept. in Longmire.

So as the summer lazily amble course throughout the sunshine why not investigate the Reservation's facilities, bought and tained for your en[illegible] esident of FSU Dr. Gordon W. owell has been appointed as a ber of the executive committee he State Universities Associ-.

a member of this committee Dr. owell will help in the adminis- on of the Association during the between the biannual national ventions.

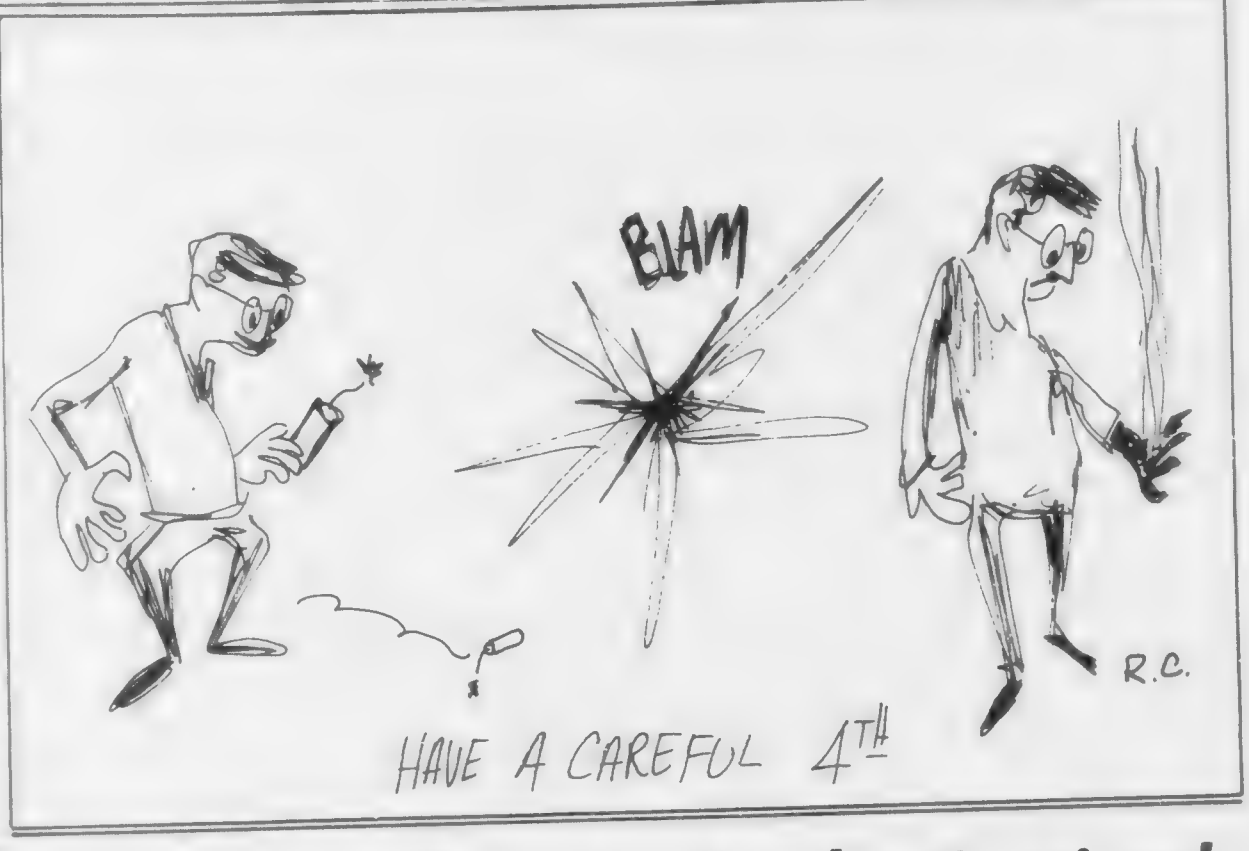
e State Universities Association s questions such as "How good the courses and curriculum? good are the professors? How are the libraries, labs and ac- mic buildings? How good are the dents?"

e Association works closely with American Association of Land nt Colleges and State Universi- s in presenting the case for the e university.

ese two organizations have found large universities to have the ntage of flexibility, such as be- able to offer both remedial work specialized advanced work for dents with varying abilities.

s the large school is more able provide superior libraries and s. Where smaller schools are able to provide the opportunity for close work the large state sup- ed school can bring the gradu- school within its scope.

The presence of graduate research on a campus is an excellent source of intellectual stimulation to advanced under-graduates.



The State Universities Association is concerned with excellence in education and hopes to see further provsions for academic stimulation.

The Association has found that large size need not be a handicap to quality education. During the period 1933 to 1958, 32 of 46 American Nobel Prize winners were from state universities.

In one year 69 per cent of the doctorates in biology and 59 per cent in physical science were products of state institutions.

The State Universities Association believes that the university must present the whole universe of scholarship and professional training. In a recent survey it was found that 71 per cent of the state institutions offered Russian language where as only 15 per cent of the colleges surveyed offered Russian.

The triple role of teaching, research and service to the community can best be filled by state universities according to the Association. Service to the community comes in the form of extension agents and off campus education in agriculture and home economics.

Traffic Routes Changed To Ease Campus Movement

eral recent adjustments in cam- traffic routing to alleviate ever- nting problems created by the cking of West Call Street during versity Union construction have sed confusion among unaware ers on campus.

fter attention had been called to difficulty of getting to and from Library, the simple solution of ing the small portion of West Street between Dogwood Way Lewey Street to one-way traffic devised by university officials.

o previously one-way streets e also been changed on the south e of campus, making two-way ffic possible in and out of the pus from that direction.

w open to two-way traffic are portion of roadway beginning in t of Dodd Hall to the circle in t of Gilchrist Dorm (University from Ivy Way); and Ivy Way from University Way (north to Westcott) to West Call Street.

For students unfamiliar with street names, the two-way roads run from in front of Reynolds to West Call (past Longmire and the Home Economics Bldg.); and from Dodd Hall to Gilchrist Dorm.

Governor Boosts Asolo Festival

Floridians were urged by Gov. Farris Bryant to take in one or more of the 57 productions of the Asolo Theatre Comedy Festival at Sarasota between July 12 and Aug. 24.

Bryant, along with other members of the Cabinet, expects to be there for the opening night, by special invitation of the sponsors of the festival, FSU's University Theatre and Ringling Museum. Its 18th century opera house, Asolo Theatre, will be used for the five plays.

At the same time Bryant issued a proclamation designating July and August Asolo Theater Comedy Festival Months and asking Floridians to "share in the pleasures of theatre at its finest." He said the Asolo Festival is "foremost among the cultural achievements of the state."

Bryant issued this statement as he signed the proclamation: "I hope that each and every person who enjoys good family entertainment will take the opportunity this summer to attend at least one of the Asolo Summer Theater Comedy productions.

"This is a wonderful thing for the state of Florida and I can assure you that the caliber of production is professional in every way. Make your plans today to enjoy this wonderful cultural experience."

Playgoers can see all five plays in one week this summer under the schedule for the Comedy Festival.

The festival, jointly sponsored by Ringling Museum, will have 57 performances of the plays at Sarasota's Asolo Theatre between July 12 and August 24.

Director Richard Fallon, associate director of theatre at FSU, said tickets now are available at the Conradi Box Office at FSU. The Box Office will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. A special season ticket rate of $14 is available, whereby patrons can attend performances of 5 plays for the price of 4.

The performances are so arranged that spectators can attend, in the course of 5 days, all 5 performances, or, can enjoy, if they wish to limit their attendance to one night a week, a different play on the same night of each of the 5 weeks.

The Asolo Theatre company is presenting this year five classical plays, all comedies, but each possessing an individual appeal and calling for widely varying techniques in both direction and acting.

The Festival opens on July 12 with an evening performance of "The Taming of the Shrew" by William Shakespeare, and opening night's performance will be honored by the attendance of Governor and Cabinet.

July 13 has been named Italian night, July 14 is Sister City night, and July 19 the opening of "Cyrano de Bergerac," will be called French night in honor of the author of the play.

Special arrangements have been made with motels and restaurants in the neighborhood, which will give reduced rates to Asolo patrons. All details relating to this "package deal" can be obtained from the Box Office at the Conradi Theatre.

Peace Corps To Give Exams For Volunteers

Requests from 47 nations for additional Peace Corps Volunteers late this year have prompted the addition of a July 20 date for national administration of the Peace Corps Placement Test.

Dr. Ed Henry, director of the Peace Corps selection division, said the non-competitive test will be given by the Civil Service Commission in more than 800 communities on Saturday, July 20, and again on August 24. Both start at 8:30 a.m.

"In order to meet even the most urgent requests from Latin America, Africa and Asia, we plan to start training programs each month from August through December," Dr. Henry said. "I hope all interested college students who complete their degree requirements during summer sessions will submit their applications and take one of the tests."

More than 2,000 prospective Volunteers will enter training during the last five months of 1963 to supplement the 5,000 now in the field and the 3,000 in training during the summer.

Students can obtain the location of the nearest test site by calling the local CSC. Only requirement for admission is that the applicant has already submitted a Peace Corps Questionnaire or brings his completed application with him.

The test, which can't be "passed" or "failed" in the traditional sense, includes one half hour sections on general aptitude and modern language aptitude. Students who have had any prior training in Spanish or French take an additional one-hour test of proficiency in the appropriate one.

Foreign Service Applications Taken

Students interested in taking the competitive written examination for Foreign Service Officers during the fall should apply for forms and booklets of sample questions from the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Room 2529, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.

Candidates must be at least 21 and under 31 years of age as of July 1, 1963, and must have been citizens for at least nine years.

In addition to the three options of History, Government, and Social Sciences, Management and Business Administration, and Economics, applicants will be tested in English Expression, General Ability, and General Background.

"New Currents In Religious Thought" Starts Religion Series Program

The United Religious Program Series, "New Currents in Religious Thought," will begin tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

This series, especially designed for those teachers who have returned for Trimester III-B and for the regular trimester students, will focus on current developments and empases in theology, biblical stories, ecumenics and missions, ethics and science and religion.

Each member of the university community is cordially invited to participate in this series of programs seeking to speak relevantly to our time.

Rev. George Bedell, Minister-Director of the Episcopal Student House, will speak tomorrow on "New Currents in Theology." The one-hour program will include a short discussion period following the speaker and coffee and dessert at the close of the program.

Davidson Wins Graduate Grant

Joy Davidson, a special voice student of Elena Nikolaidi at FSU, has been awarded a grant from the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music for the second year to continue her studies here.

Mrs. Davidson has just returned from New York City, where she was in competition in Town Hall with young professional musicians from all parts of the United States. For her audition she sang arias from "The Medium" by Gian-Carlo Menotti and "The Magnificat" by Bach. The panel of judges for the award included representatives from the Metropolitan Opera Company and San Francisco Opera Company.

Mrs. Davidson received a grant in April, 1962, from the Rockefeller Foundation for advanced studies with Madame Nikolaidi. The unusual honor of winning a grant for the second year was given Mrs. Davidson for continued study with Madame Nikolaidi.

Recently Mrs. Davidson was engaged to give a debut recital at the Phillips Gallery in Washington, D.C.

Read Declaration

Thursday is July the Fourth.

To students and the work force Thursday is a holiday a breathing spell in which to relax and take a break from work. It is a day to sleep late, to go on a picnic to attend all-day celebrations culminating in elaborate fire-works displays.

But there is a reason for each calendar holiday, and we should take stock of what July 4 means in the history of our nation.

July 4, 1776 a small band of men pledged their lives their fortunes and their sacred honor in support of a Declaration of Independence from Great Britain, at that time the mistress of a large part of the world. How the colonists with courage and little else eventually succeeded in throwing off the yoke of tyranny is a story with which we are all familiar -- when we stop to think about it.

How long has it been since you read the Declaration of Independence? I picked up a copy yesterday and read it through carefully for the first time in four years. The words and phrases are familiar yet the concepts within the framework were revolutionary and untried when the document was drafted 187 years ago.

And one point was brought home quite strongly: this nation was launched as an experiment and it has not yet been terminated. We take for granted the freedoms and privileges we enjoy, and as we go on our merry way it seems that parts of these freedoms are slowly slipping away, until someday we may look to find them beyond our reach.

This July 4, read a copy of the Declaration of Independence. This is what the holiday is all about, and we should stop to think seriously about it, so that we do not continue to take the precepts of this nation for granted.

Then, enjoy your holiday -- you've earned it.

Be Patient--Try!

Students whose daily trek to classes takes them by the site of the University Union construction are apt to be getting impatient (to understate their frustrations) with the changes that send them each day farther out of their way.

At first they grumbled as the short cuts and parking lots were fenced off with barbed wire, making the whole area resemble one giant prisoner stockade. Yesterday they succumbed to disbelief and dismay as they were forced even farther afield -- into the hockey field -- as the street which they assumed was to be their walkway was being torn up.

Despite the unfortunate inconvenience to students which is being caused by this additional barrier on the street, there are reasons that require the rerouting. Imperative at the present time is the relocation of the viaduct on West Call Street, which is now being constructed.

The problems of the construction have not been ignored by the administration, which is open to practical solutions that students might be able to suggest. Two catwalks will be constructed soon for students to use: one immediately to the south of the construction company's storage area, through the middle of the hockey field; the other, a bit to the north of the bridge, to the west of the Business Bldg.

Double doors are also planned for immediate access to the book store area.

It is impossible to be overjoyed when the construction work creates a daily nuisnace -- but attempts are being made to minimize the problems.

Sino-Indian Dispute Has Long Pa

To the Editor

If the Chinese-Indian border war is a matter which merits a column in the "Flambeau" perhaps we might approach it from a standpoint of intellectual honesty, historical fact and common sense.

Let us write that the war is fought between India and New York is the Peking and Delhi. Peeping the capital of China has been under Communist control for almost 15 years. The next great step in the Communist program is the gradual seizure of India. While Soviet Russia was secretly establishing a missile beachhead in Cuba the Red Chinese were assembling munitions [illegible] 000 men and heavy armor for an attack on India. The attack was perfectly timed. It caught the west off guard. It occurred at the very time the Soviet arms riveted the world's eyes on the Caribbean. Are we to suppose that the Indians and not the Chinese planned it that way?

Red China insists that it has a legal right not only to Tibet but to many parts of India and Southeast Asia. It is part of their propaganda that these areas once were under Chinese scattered outside of China, throughout Southeast Asia, are providing a hard core of local Communists in paving the way for an ultimate Chinese take-over of these "traditional Chinese" regions.

Here is the story behind Red China's claims. Recent maps published by Red China and later published in Russia show 30,000 square miles of Assam in India's northeast and 22,000 square miles in Ladakh as Chinese territory. Their most recent maps also lay claim to parts of Nepal and Bhutan.

The Indians insist that the boundary between India and China is settled on the basis of the British-determined MacMahon Line. The story goes back to 1914 at a convention held in India between Nationalist Chinese, the British government in India, and Tibet. In drawing the MacMahon Line, the British sought to keep Chinese armies at a safe distance from India's frontiers. Britain insisted on incorporating vast areas of mountainous countries also the Sino-Indian frontier wh[illegible] really claimed.

Riggins Hit On Criticisms

To Thomas Riggins

the "Flambeau" Editor

Since I have been on campus, I have made it a point to read the "Flambeau" and along with it your articles. I am not a profound intellectual nor do I propose that I am a journalist of the current times; however I have noticed two things about your articles that I would like to comment on.

First of all sir, is there anyone or anything that you actually agree with? For instance, when the President of the student body made his comment on a terrible touchy situation 'twas not enough for you -- so you spout out about S.G.'s "moral responsibility" which I would like to see you define. Also the "stalling negotiations of insincere white supremacists" is a nice mouthful of words, but would you care to name them or better yet, offer a better suggestion than negotiations at this point?

Or maybe you'd rather see your "militant action" cause another Mississippi here in Florida — would that satisfy you and advance your aims more satisfactorily or more rapidly (there's another point, what are your aims,?

Which brings me to my second point. Through all my observations of your writings, I have yet to see you make a specific concrete solution. Is the extent of your talents only to tear down and criticize or are you able to come through with some logical proposals?

Rogers Publishes History

Thomas County, Georgia, from 1825 to 1861 is the subject of a new 136 page history book published as No. 39 in the FSU Studies.

Dr. William W. Rogers, assistant professor of history, is author of the history, called "Ante-Bellum Thomas County, 1825-1861." A second volume will continue the history after 1861.

The Thomas County Historical Society underwrote the book. Rogers said the idea of having a history of the county originated with the Thomasville Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"Between 1825 and 1861, Thomas County evolved from an Indian hunting domain into a prosperous region," said the author. "It retained characteristics of the frontier, but these were tempered by the sophisticating processes of time and tradition."

A native of Alabama, Rogers received his undergraduate and master's degrees from Auburn University and his Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina. He has written on southern history for such journals as "Agricultural History," "Florida Historical Quarterly" and "Alabama Review."

Pool Time Change

A change has been announced in the recreational program which will be in effect through the remainder of Trimester III-B concerning the use of the swimming pool in Montgomery Gym.

Students, faculty, staff and their families are requested to use the pool facilities from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

All "campers" may swim from 6:30 to 7:30 to avoid an over-crowding of the pool.

. . .Dispute

It was not till after World War II that they were finally able to take over the whole mainland. Only the island bastion of Formosa escaped.

In 10 years since the occupation of the China mainland by the Communists, all China has been brought under the direct control of the Communist party. The Chinese will to resist was quickly broken. Well over twenty million Chinese were "deprived of life" as a warning to others never to rebel against their Communist overlords. In no previous war, revolution, holocaust--even including Hitler's reign of terror--have so many people perished in so short a time. This is being "human"--Communist version.

China, with her "Middle Kingdom" philosophy of world conquest, is now ready to begin devouring the rest of Asia. China intervened in Korea; Korea became divided. China launched attacks in Indochina and seized control of North Viet-Nam. Viet-Nam became divided. Next, the Chinese Communists took over all Tibet. From Tibet the Chinese planned conquest of India by dividing her and devouring her a piece at a time. India and Pakistan are being placed in a giant vice between Russia and China.

Language Program Brings France To FS

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

French Music To Be Presented As Part Of Teacher Program

MISS FRANCA SIKORSKI, STUDENT PIANIST,
...will assist Edward Kilenyi and Ralph Andrews in an "Evening of French Music" Monday, July 8.

An evening of French music will be presented by Howard Kilenyi, pianist and Ralph Andrews flutist, assisted by Franda Sikorski at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall Monday.

Numbers by LeClair, Debussy, Faire and Milhaud are on the program, featuring French music from the 18th to the 20th century.

The program is offered in connection with the French Language Institute now underway at FSU.

Kilenyi, professor of piano at FSU, is widely known for his concert appearances in America and abroad. Although born in America, he received his early musical training in Europe and was an experienced concert pianist before coming to FSU.

Andrews is a member of the Florida Symphony Orchestra at Orlando and has given solo recitals in Germany, France and the United States. He is presently working toward a doctorate in music at FSU.

Miss Sikorski, piano student of Howard Wilson at the School of Music, was recently a soloist with the University Symphony Orchestra.

NOTED PIANIST, EDWARD KILENYI

"Ici on parle francais" has become the watchword of 45 teachers now attending the Summer Institute for Secondary School Teachers of French through August 6 in an effort to improve the teaching of French in Florida high schools and in the secondary schools of states across the nation.

Participants, according to Dr. Jean Charron, associate professor of modern languages and director of the Institute receive intensive training in speaking, writing, and reading French, study French civilization and materials used in the teaching of French.

In a report made in 1962 it was found that French has become the second most popular language in secondary schools and that enrollment in "la langue favorie" has increased 21.8 percent from 1959 to 1960.

Using FSU as an example of the popularity of French, over twice as many students registered for second year French at registration than were expected, yet many of these students had to be placed back in first year French due to poor preparation on the high school level.

There will be no grades issued for the institute, as a majority of the faculty members teaching in the Converse College for Miami NDEA Institutes during the past three years have found that this type of Institute is most efficient and rewarding when the threat of a grading system is absent.

Participants are required to have a BA degree or its equivalent, a minimum of two years of college French or the equivalent, and teaching experience in French on the secondary level.

To encourage language competency, students spend two or three hours a day in the new air-conditioned language laboratory, with the latest equipment available in the field.

Class room instruction in French is received from masters of the language, including several French natives, and practice drills in small groups enable personal supervision and instruction.

The Language Analysis course consists of an extensive language practice course where every effort is being made to re-educate the thinking procedure of the students.. to think of a structure not because there is a grammar rule for it, but because it happens to be the way people spear in France.

Each Tuesday evening there will be a French film shown in the Library Lecture Hall for the participants. Advanced French students who are not in the program have been invited to attend, and French newsreels of the week will be included with the films whenever possible.

Not only has French become the only accepted language for the session, but after hours finds the 45 teachers in an atmosphere similar to family life in "la belle France."

Boys State Opens Session To Set Up Model Government

American Legion Boys State opened its practice government last Sunday afternoon, with some 544 high school boys, more than ever before, on hand.

Political machinery will be directed toward an election Thursday night, when a governor, cabinet and supreme court will be elected. The electees will take office at the capitol the next day.

R. Elmo Hood of Winter Haven again is serving as Boys State director. Richard Hood, his son who was a boys stater two years ago, is back to address the assemblage on his year as a plebe at West Point. The boys staters also will hear from two students at the Air Force Academy.

Each of the 544 boys was assigned to one of the two political parties. the Nationalists or Federalists. The parties began to organize yesterday with the election of chairmen, whips and secretaries.

Nominees for state office are scheduled to be named tomorrow night and the election will be held on voting machines in Westcott Auditorium from 7:45 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Thursday. The results probably will be known shortly after 11 p.m.

Meanwhile the boys will have elected mayors and other officers of their 17 mythical cities, a full slate of county officers and a legislature, which will begin its two-day session at the capitol Thursday.

The session began at 3 p.m. Sunday with a general assembly in Westcott Auditorium. They are staying in Smith Hall.

During the week they will hear from such Legion officials as John J. Adams of Greenacres, state commander; Arthur M. MacCarthy of Tallahassee, immediate past commander and the president of Boys State, and from the Boys State governor elected in 1962, Bill McBride of Leesburg.

Special schools of instruction will be set up, with lessons in law, peace officer work and civil service and government. Legislative proceedings will be guided by two Legion men who have had actual experience in Florida's Legislature.

800 Will Graduate From FSU In August

Florida State University expects to graduate about 800 students in August, twice the usual number in previous summer graduations.

Registrar Murray W. Kenna said the new trimester system of year round operation, started last September, caused the unusual increase.

"This is the first appreciable surge in graduation since the trimester system started, "Dr. Kenna asserted. "I expect there will be additional increases during several future trimesters."

One apparent reason for the sharp increase in number of graduates this summer, the registrar added, is that students, by taking a full load for three straight trimesters, can complete "a year and a half of work in 11 months."

"Students can earn 54 hours in the three trimesters while under the old semester plan they could earn 45 hours at most by studying during the two semesters and summer school," he said. "Thus more students are now placed within range of graduation this summer."

Another reason, according to Dr. Kenna, is that both graduates and undergraduates who are approaching a degree now have two periods in which to earn the needed credits, Trimester 3-A and Trimester 3-B, instead of one summer session.

As a result, the registrar's office has prepared a list of 855 persons who expect to complete graduation requirements in August and has ordered diplomas for this number. A number probably will not complete their work but approximately 800 may be expected to earn degrees. There will be no commencement ceremony but diplomas will be mailed to graduates about August 12.

878 Complete Preorientation

The Counseling Center reported today that 878 prospective freshmen and transfer students have completed pre-orientation at FSU.

Three pre-orientation periods were held during the past two weeks, enabling the new students to complete one day to a day and half of their orientation. The remainder of orientation will be held during the first week of September.

In addition to the students, 422 parents attended the two-day pre-orientation sessions.

Music Echoes 'Under Stars'

Music under the stars begins again at FSU tomorrow night, when the first Starlight Serenade of Trimester III-B is presented by the Summer Band under the direction of Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb.

The 70-member groups has selected stirring marches, ballads and familiar light classics, designed to provide a pleasant evening of entertainment and relaxation, to begin at 8:15 p.m. in the School of Music's Amphitheatre.

"Holiday for Winds" by Glenn Osser will open the nine-number program, followed by a Dan Godfrey arrangement of Wagner's "Entry of the God's into Valhalla" from the Rhinegold.

Music by Johann Strauss, Fred Kepner, Henri Rene, Respighi and Sousa will complete the night's encounter with the stars after the "Hebrides Suite," arranged by Clare Grundman from airs taken from Marjory Kennedy-Fraser's collection of "Songs of the Hebrides" has been presented in four airs.

Starlight Serenades have become increasingly popular as a spring music program at FSU during the past several years, and this series will serve as a complement to Starlight concerts given during Trimester III-A.

Music Campers Give Premiere Performance

Photos and Story By
Wayne Cowart

Contrary to the optically obvious, pictured here is not the Music Camp Chorus being directed by conductor Alan Drake, but rather the Music Camp Chorus being directed by the unseen Herman Gunter of the FSU School of Music and Alan Drake conducting the unseen Gold Band of the Music Camp.

This bit of anti-opticalism took place Sunday night at Westcott Auditorium as the various performing groups from the Twenty-Second Annual Summer Music Camp produced their first concert of orchestral, band and choral music.

Also participating from the podium were Robert Sedore who led the Music Camp Orchestra and Robert Braunagel who directed both the Garnet and Gold Bands in various parts of the program. Both men are members of the FSU music faculty. Camp students are of senior and junior high school age.

Thomas Riggins

Hungary Now 'Liberalizing'

Perhaps many conservatives who still find in Hungary a rallying call against Soviet-American co-existence would be less apprehensive of Soviet intentions if they were aware of the conditions in Hungary in 1963 instead of 1956.

Johan Vogt, of the University of Oslo, has reported to the Norwegian government many encouraging signs of liberalism in Hungary. His report is based on experiences resulting from a trip to Budapest and from conversation with many eminent Hungarians, many of whom were imprisoned as a result of their revolutionary activities in 1956.

Tibor Dery, perhaps Hungary's most outstanding author, sentenced to nine years imprisonment in 1957, was released within two and a half years. In fact most of the political prisoners have been returned to public life.

The Hungarian government is trying to liberalize, and with some success the new Communist thinkers are making headway against the conservative Stalinists (conservatives everywhere hold up progress).

The Hungarian revolt, and its brutal suppression, was an ideological reflex of Stalinist politics. Hungary's 1956 rejection of Stalin's Communism was a prelude to Khrushchev's rejection of Stalin a few years later.

Many grim crimes can be attributed to Communism in respect to the October Revolution in Hungary -- crimes traceable to the Stalinist mentality of the leaders of world Communism. But if it is logical to react with disapprobation towards Stalinist crimes against humanity, it is even more logical to support those liberalizing forces within the Easter block that are attempting to eradicate Stalinist political philosophy from the world Communist movement.

Much as we may decry Communism as a political system we cannot ignore any attempts by Communists to correct the abuses of their system. We should not, therefore, allow ourselves to be unduly swayed by conservative polemics against 1956 Stalinist Communism, when we are facing the challenge of 1963 non-Stalinist Communism. The people of Hungary have gained far more than we may have imagined them to.

Conformity Stifles Intellect

Today the college student is threatened with being drowned in a numerical sea of conformity, much of which is disgustingly voluntary.

Exactly what lies behind this mass conformity is presently the recipient of intensive scientific examination both from an economic and social point of view. However, the college student himself is the only person capable of substantially altering the situation. Considering the problem from this viewpoint, several interesting facets are revealed which aren't readily apparent to those unacquainted with the immediate circumstances.

Here at FSU this conformity takes form in the manner of dress, the levels of intellectual curiosity, and the established codes of social conduct, to name a few of the overt forms. These actions per se are not undesirable. However, when this pseudo-necessity to conform overrides the creative instinct and intellectual curiosity of the students, they have a definitely negative effect.

For many years now those who have rebelled against the practice have done so in such a manner so as to nullify all the good they might have accomplished. These are the rebels who attempt to completely shirk their social responsibility, i.e., beatniks, hermits, ultra-radicals, etc.

However, the real and useful contributions to society are made by those who rebel within the existing framework and at the same time maintain their social responsibility. By doing this they keep open the lines of communication between the conceiver of the idea and those who put the idea to use, if it is acceptable to them. Those who attempt to break with society completely must severe all lines of communication. In doing this their usefulness becomes limited.

The students of FSU can either vegetate in an ignorant stupor or rebel and become a dynamic force in the vigorous intellectual world of the great thinkers and leaders. The manner and degree of this rebellion is of utmost importance.

Here on campus the curious are literally surrounded with potential outlets for their intellectual energy. The college students can afford to be different, and he can be forgiven for the mistakes he makes. Here and now is the most opportune time to be different, think deeply, but don't waste four years of your life cowering in fear of social disapproval.

State your views, but be prepared to defend them logically. Just don't stand there, do something!

'Intimidation And Humiliation'

To the Editor:

The following editorial was printed in the "St. Petersburg Times" July 2, 1963. It is in regard to the recent attempt by three FSU students to swim in a municipal pool which is in the Negro section of town not far from the FSU campus.

The three students did not endanger their academic status. (In fact, as long as any students protesting social injustices remain within the bounds of the law, their educational careers at FSU will not be jeopardized.)

The incident is important because it demonstrates a way in which local authorities violate federal law and use local police power to intimidate those who protest the violation.

John Parrott

(Reprinted from the "St. Petersburg Times")

Three white Florida State University students -- two boys and a girl -- attempted to buy tickets at a Tallahassee municipal swimming pool Sunday afternoon.

They wound up being arrested, interrogated by officers and "mugged" like criminals before being released. It happened to be a "Negroes only" pool.

The students said they did not belong to CORE or any other interracial group, but had merely gone to the nearest municipal pool.

We have no doubt that these young people knew what they were doing.

Nevertheless, they were on unassailable legal grounds.

One has to go no further than the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in regard to St. Petersburg's Spa Pool to know that no municipality may maintain a segregated pool -- and it doesn't make any [illegible] that these happened to be people trying to enter a Negro rather than the usual reverse that order.

Quite apart from Tallahassee's official flouting of the law, [illegible] intolerable action of the police quizzing and photographing students as though they accused of a felony.

Repeatedly we have said we have no objection to having citizen of the United States printed or photographed, [illegible] identification purposes -- provided that everyone were treated

It is singling out special groups such as school teachers, employes in totally "nonsensi jobs, or any other individual classifications as though they dangerous and untrustwor[illegible] is utterly repugnant to ideals.

In the present instance Tallahassee authorities [illegible] violating the law, and their was nothing but a naked attempt intimidation -- to prevent from attempting to exercise legal rights.

Anonymous Pamphlets Protested

To the Editor:

Found in our room last Tuesday morning, surreptitiously placed there at some odd hour by person or persons unwilling to expose himself, was a pamphlet proclaiming the virtues of 'democratic socialism.'

We now address a few remarks to those daring pamphleteers.

Anyone with a reasonable amount of intelligence must realize that both by definition and in practice, socialism and democracy are totally inconsonant ideas.

In Paragraph One, you say that you 'stand in opposition to capitalism and Communism.' Since it is generally understood that America is basically capitalist society, are you, then, advocating the overthrow of that society? How can you stand in opposition to Communism when your pamphlet is nothing more than a Machiavellian paraphrase of Marxist-Leninist doctrine?

We cite, for example, Paragraph 5, in which you assert that a class struggle exists. Marx states in the "Manifesto of the Communist Party," "The history of all hitherto existing societies is the history of class struggles."

Paragraph 8 is also familiar: '... that production can be democratically organized and operated on the basis of need rather than profit.' Marx, in his criticism of the Gotha program, states, "from each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs."

You speak in your introduction of rejecting 'all conceptions of minority rule.' It is assumed that you refer to a political elite. Would not the administrative power of your socialist state become just such a political elite?

The name of your organization, the Socialist Party -- Social Democratic Federation, is reminiscent of that of the first Russian Marxist party, the Social Democratic Party (1898) of which Lenin was a prominent member.

We the undersigned of Kellum Hall prefer to speak to honest men face to face, rather than deal with those who slip Red propaganda under doors. Your co-operation in future would be appreciated

Urges Integration In Daily Life

To the Editor:

Three weeks ago, FSU students had an opportunity to express their favor of the Tallahassee integration movement by signing a petition sponsored by an interested group of students and faculty.

The petition stated in effect that the undersigned would continue to patronize the Florida and State Theaters should they desegregate. It was interesting indeed to watch the emotional release these students experienced by signing this petition.

It has become evident that many FSU students are in favor of the principle of integration, but are not certain how to express their support of this principle. It is not possible for all students to participate in the well organized demonstrations approved by the courts which have occurred down town. Many students, who would have liked to express their feelings, unfortunately missed the signing of the petition. A few of us have maintained our own personal boycott of segregated facilities; the rest have been unable to act.

But FSU students can help the integration movement in many ways; the following are suggested and urged: (1) Get to know the Negro members of our working staff as well as our Negro students on campus. Talk with them and develop a spirit of friendly tolerance and interchange of ideas. (2) Include Negro FSU students in your activities, invite them to lunch or up to the dorm room for a bull session.

(3) Discuss integration with your friends; let others know how you feel. Study the issues and stand up for what you believe with your mind as well as your heart. (4) Let the people of Tallahassee know how you feel; write a few letters in your "trimesterspare" time. (5) Get behind your Student Government's trend in favor of integration. Suggest and support projects which will further integration of all facilities used by students.

(6) Let the Legislature know how you feel, as well as various ones of the news agencies. (7) Make integration an active program in your church participation. (8) Stop using segregated facilities.

The principle of integration, of brotherly love, cannot be made a way of life on the FSU campus and in Tallahassee by means of demonstrations and petitions alone. Each person must take his or her individual stand by finding ways of putting the integration principle to work in daily life. Join the growing group of students who are doing this daily.

Birch Society Said Dedicate[illegible]

To the Editor:

An article appeared [illegible] the "Florida Times Union" I think should be brought attention of the FSU students article stated that the John Society was a "dedicated dangerous" organization the conclusion drawn by the ifornia Senate fact-finding mittee on un-American after extensive investigation "hate" groups.

Because of all the unfounded isms previously levied on ciety by the Communists taken in by their propaganda lieve this is a very significant To alleviate some of the misunderstandings which brought about criticisms, I think a brief tion is needed.

The John Birch Society is of informed, dedicated and iously-motivated Americans nationalities and creeds. The pose is to eliminate Communism create greater personal responsility with a less centralized limited government. Their program revolves around education action.

It is only through comprehensive understanding of America's government, the free enterprise system, and the Communist that effective action can be taken. The Society's actions trate on specific targets each month in their bulletin can be obtained from the Belmont, Massachusetts).

After reading many of their publications and meeting some of members, I cannot understand any informed, patriotic American would want to discredit the Society. Ezra Taft Benson, former United States Secretary of Agriculture said, "The organization is, I convinced, the most effective church organization in our against creeping socialism and less Communism."

I thoroughly agree with him. the security and survival of America and the liberation of the enslaved people in the world, the John Birch Society offers a guiding light.

Therefore, I hope that those citizens, who previously have spoken against them, will, in the future, direct their efforts against our real enemies -- the Communists.

"Crane Was Not Bored" Says Randel In Article

Contrary to his biographer, Stephan Crane was anything but bored by his four-month stay in Jacksonville in 1896-97, Dr. William Randel of the English Dept. says in an article "Stephan Crane's Jacksonville" in the spring issue of "South Atlantic Quarterly."

Jacksonville at the time was "the most active filibustering center in the country," Dr. Randel reported, and this fact had brought Crane and numerous war correspondents and adventurers to Jacksonville in the hope of getting to Cuba where a revolution was in progress against the mother country, Spain.

Although Crane's biographer, Thomas Beer, concluded that Jacksonville bored Crane, Randel said the filibustering activity, the bars and gambling and many other activities made Jacksonville "a place where a man like Crane could not have been bored and alone."

His stay in Jacksonville was from mid-November, 1896, to the following March, shortly after publication of his novel, "The Red Badge Of Courage." Actually he did not get to Cuba until he covered the Spanish-American War in 1898.

"The four-month stay in Jacksonville was not a total loss, however, for it included the abortive Commodore expedition and the hours in a lifeboat that he turned to literary gold in his most famous short story, "The Open Boat," Dr. Randel added.

Account Of Cuban Revolution To Be Reviewed By Stoakes

"The Fourth Floor: an account of the Cuban Communist Revolution," by Earl T. Smith, will be the subject of the book review to be given by Dr. Paul Stoakes of the English Dept. tomorrow at 5 p.m. in Longmire Student Auditorium.

A former U. S. ambassador to Cuba, Smith's book gives an eyewitness report of the "red tide" which brought about the Cuban Revolution.

Dr. Stoakes, just returned from more than a year spent in Lebanon, was a professor of English at the University of Oriente in Cuba from 1954 to 1956, holding a grant from the State Department under the Smith-Mundt Act.

For the past year he has been on leave from FSU, teaching in Lebanon at the American University of Beirut, where he has been developing a program for training Arabian teachers of English.

Dr. Stoakes will be introduced to the Coffee Hour audience by Mrs. Olive Cross of the English Dept., who has recently returned from a State Department supported lectureship at the University of Saigon in South Vietnam.

Colberg And Menzel To Study Economics Of Oyster Industry

The Walrus and the Carpenter, who once feasted on their friends (the oysters, according to literary legend), were surpassed in the oyster business recently when FSU announced that an $18,000 contract with the U. S. Public Health Service for a two-year economic study of the oyster industry at Apalachicola had been signed.

Dr. Marshall R. Colberg, professor and head of the Economics Dept. and Dr. Winston Menzel, associate professor in the Oceanographic Institute, will be directors of the study which will involve collection and analysis of original material.

Douglas Windham, an economics student at FSU who will serve as research technician, initially will spend a week in Apalachicola gaining a familiarity with the industry before his research duties begin.

One approach will be to study the multiplier effect on changes in activity of the oyster industry on the local economy. Value added at the various stages of production and distribution will be measured, and benefits versus costs of various governmental activities in the oyster industry will be estimated.

The contract is for a period running through June 30, 1965.

Today Is Last Day Of Textbook Exhibit

Dr. Ivan E. Johnson, Publicity Chairman for the third Annual Textbook Exhibit, announced recently that the exhibit is open through today in the Lecture Room on the second floor of the Education Bldg.

Exhibiting are twenty-two publishers of textbooks, teaching materials and maps. The purpose of the exhibit is to bring together materials that will help teachers, now studying at FSU, to see new aids in teaching.

Representatives of the various publishers are present to provide information on the material shown.

The exhibit is open to all students and faculty.

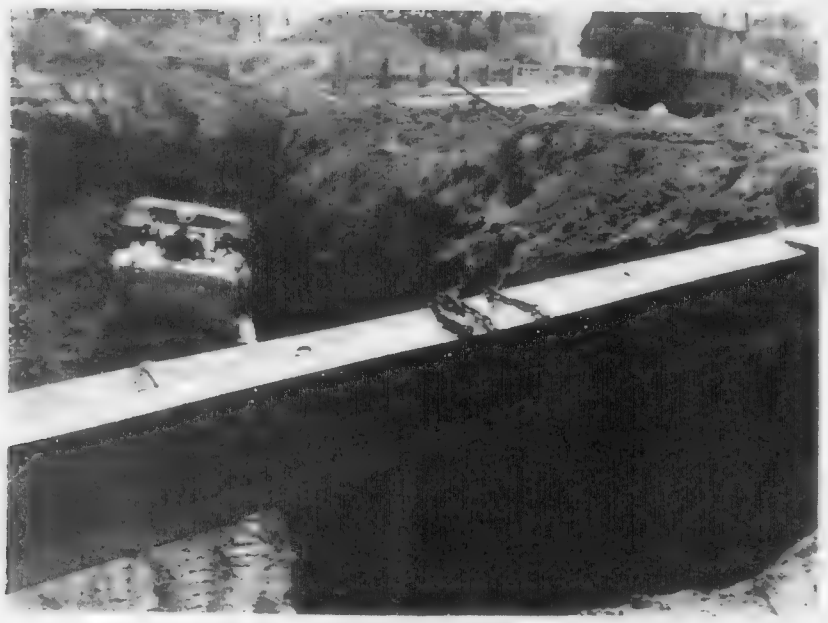
THE CONCENTRATION CAMP

Signs jokingly (?) proclaiming the area surrounding the Student Center as "East" and "West" zones have resulted from the barricades topped with barbed wire to keep unauthorized personnel from risking life and limb in the construction underway toward completion of the University Union.

The rerouting of the old drainage ditch which ran between the Business Bldg. and the Student Center has necessitated the closing of West Call Street to students, while the storage of building materials in the field opposite the School of Business forces pedestrians to walk an additional distance in order to circumvent the construction area.

University officials have requested that students follow necessary detours in order to avoid possible injury in the construction zone.

A new entrance to the Student Center from the North side of the building will be provided to afford entry away from the site of work. The new door will open into the Student Center Cafeteria.



THE HOLE IN THE WALL

. . .will soon be the new and more convenient entrance to the student center. Shortcut-hunting students will also use this entrance while on their way to the post office.

. . . in the former Student Center parking lot is part of the war of progress. Students jokingly refer to the barbed wire barricades as FSU's "Berlin Wall."

THREE GOOD REASONS

. . .why West Call Street, above and left, and the footbridge, below, have been closed. Footsore students will be glad to hear that plans are in the making for new paths and footbridges leading to the post office by shorter routes than the present lengthy detours. At any rate they will be able to see the construction progress as they pass by the site on the way to classes.

Mistakes In Cuba

'Fourth Floor' Is Sad Commentary

by BARBARA HOON

"A long needed account of our diplomatic history in Cuba," commented Dr. Paul Stoakes, internationally known scholar and professor at FSU, in his review of Earl T. Smith's book "The Fourth Floor: An Account of the Castro Communist Revolution."

Dr. Stoakes was particularly well-qualified since among the five foreign countries in which he has been a professor of English is a two-year term served in Cuba immediately preceding the events recorded by Smith.

Also lauded for complete coverage of Cuban history during Smith's years as ambassador to Cuba, Stoakes referred to the book as the sad commentary of a man who "saw our mistakes in Cuba and was unable to prevent or remedy them."

Earl T. Smith was the US Ambassador to Cuba under the Eisenhower administration from 1957 through January 10, 1959, ten days after the Castro regieme came into power. A financier and experienced diplomat, having served in three countries under three different US Presidents, Smith was one of the few people in US diplomacy to oppose Castro on the basis of Castro's known Communist connections.

According to Smith, both the CIA and lower State Department officials were aware that Castro, his brother, and his top advisor had Communist affiliations; however, the information never passed "the fourth floor" (where US policy decisions are made) to the fifth floor which houses the top State Department officials.

Failure in Cuba can be attributed to the flaw in America's governmental stratification which allows major policies to be formed at low levels without sanction of important heads of the State Department of the Secretary of State.

In spite of anti-American actions by Castro, such as the 1958 kidnapping of American citizens and soldiers stationed at Guantanamo, the American people and the State Department, spurred on by the press, continued to eulogize Castro as the hero who would throw out Batista and re-establish democracy.

Smith made himself an unpopular man by continuing his campaign against Castro expecially after Jack Paar and Ed Sullivan represented Castro as the colorful bearded rebel who would restore democracy to Cuba.

In the "New York Daily News," Jan. 12, 1959, Ed Sullivan claimed that "US Ambassador Earl T. Smith had swallowed" Batista propaganda against Castro, and went on to hail Castro as Cuba's liberator. It is to Sullivan's credit that he is perhaps the only critic of Smith who has publicly reversed his stand, for in 1960 the "Daily News" published Sullivan's apology and his statement that "Smith was right and everybody else was wrong."

Although he does not admire Batista, the author points out that the US government made a poor exchange when it traded a dictator who was anti-communist and who allowed no communist embassies for a dictator who is anti-American and who has broken diplomatic ties with the west.

The author cites one of the biggest mistakes as being the non-recognition of Andres Rivero in the Nov. 3, 1958 Cuban election. Since he was elected on the Batista ticket, the US would not recognize the new government; Smith insists that this man along with interested Cuban businessmen who opposed Batista would have made a democratic success of the government and have preserved pro-American sentiments.

Expected Shift To Add To FSU Operating Costs

By 1971, upper level students (juniors and seniors) are expected to increase from 4000 this fall to 7000 and graduate students from 1600 to 4000 at FSU.

At the same time the number of lower level students (freshmen and sophomores) will drop from 4400 to 4000, it is estimated.

In other words, the forecast gives an increase in the upper level and graduate students by 5400 and a decrease in lower level students by 400, totalling a net gain of 5000 students by September, 1971.

This will have serious financial implications since the cost per year of educating a graduate student is approximately twice the cost of educating a lower level student, with that of the upper level student falling somewhere in between.

President Gordon Blackwell said last week that an "acceptable" job can be done by FSU with the $23,480,956 it will receive from the $987 million general appropriations bill. However, in view of increasing enrollment and a shift to upper level and graduate students, the 1963-65 budget "leaves us far short of doing a good job, much less a superior one," he said.

Dr. Blackwell observed that perhaps the best feature of the budget will be a significant increase in faculty positions in the second year of the biennium.

He termed the salary outlook fair, but reported that the scarcity of badly needed operating capital outlay funds will hinder the sciences and certain other programs on campus $544,395 MORE.

The general appropriations act became law June 4, 1963, giving FSU $554,395 more than the Budget Commission recommended for FSU operations during the 1963-65 biennium (but was $5,088,144 less than the Board of Control had recommended for the University).

Some $6.5 million in trust funds (students fees and other earnings) will be added to FSU's general revenue appropriation to bring the two-year total to $30 million for operations.

FSU's educational and general budget for 1963-64 and 1964-65 includes: salaries $10.1 million and 11.3 million, other personal services $1.3 million and $1.9 million; expenses $1.9 million and $2 million; operating capital outlay $0.9 million and $1 million.

The appropriations law provides an increase of seven per cent in salary funds for current positions the first year and three percent the second year.

President Blackwell said all salary increases will be given "strictly on a merit basis."

Dr. Blackwell has called for citizen support of the $75 million bond program for expansion of state universities and junior colleges, which goes before the voters Nov. 5.

State gross utility tax revenue would be used to pay off the bonds. This tax produces $21 to $22 million over biennium.

FSU would receive a minimum of $9.6 million for capital expansion. Dr. Blackwell said the bond program would provide funds "far short of our goals" and that if the capital outlay for higher education in the 1965-67 biennium should be limited to %50 million as suggested in the bill, "we will lag even further behind in our building program."

Only two FSU projects are authorized in the general appropriations act: Chemistry unit one $2.75 million and utilities expansion $913,000.

FSU projects listed in the bond plan include: men's dormitory equipment, utilities expansion and other campus improvements, chemistry unit one, library addition, infirmary, social science building, science unit one (Biology), relocating green house, computer center expansion, molecular building loading ramp and physical education facilities, women's dormitory (matching la women's dormitory (matching) land acquisition, Oceanography institute and coastal facilities.

29 Frosh To Have Alumni Scholarships

Twenty-nine incoming freshmen have been awarded scholarships averaging $300 apiece from funds raised by alumni during the past year, it was announced today.

The 29 freshmen made scores ranging from 452 to 494 on their Florida 12th grade tests and all qualify for FSU's Honor's Program.

Awards were made on the basis of need, which averaged $600 for the students. Those in great need were given loans and work in addition to scholarships.

In addition to the nearly $9,000 for scholarships, contributions to the Alumni Greater FSU Fund in 1962 made possible about $10,000 in loan funds under the National Defense Education Act. The federal government provides loan funds on a local matching basis.

Castro's Money

Cuban dictator Fidel Castro's worries and embarrassment are going to increase tremendously as a result of Monday's announcement by the US State Dept. that all Cuban money in US banks will be frozen, and that no transfer of Cuban-owned US dollars by persons "acting in behalf of the Cuban regime" will be allowed.

Before the official pronouncement, Castro had been making use of the US dollar -- the unit of international exchange throughout Latin America -- to pay his representatives at embassies and his other agents with money deposited in US banks and forwarded by the Inter-American Financial System. Since the Cuban peseta is virtually worthless on the international exchange, the Bearded One now will have to cast about for other foreign currency with which to pay his agents, and the dumping of quantities of any other currency on the Latin American system, geared to the US dollar, should cause the Cuban government some difficulty.

Apparently the action came as a big surprise to the Cubans, for no attempts had been made to withdraw the funds. The State Dept. took its action promptly following a resolution July 3 by the Organization of American States, that governments of the hemisphere should keep a close watch on funds used by Cuba for subversive activities. And the US is planning to make its policy a stiff one -- violators will be subject to $10,000 fine and 10 years imprisonment.

The regulation, drafted under a "Trading with the Enemy" act, has resounding implications. Critics who complain that nothing is being done by the US to get rid of the Communist regime in Cuba should note this action gleefully, for it puts the pressure on Castro in a place where it really hurts -- the pocketbook.

It is a sad reflection on human nature that ideological battles must be won by resorting to economic sanctions, but this is often the case. Certainly other action could be taken legally to harry Castro's Communist regime, such as that proposed by Sen. Gordon Allott of Colorado, who suggests allowing a Cuban government-in-exile to be created and set up provisional government on the US Naval Base at Guantanamo.

The freezing of US dollars being used by Cuba may be just one of many steps which will prove to Castro -- and, incidentally, to the rest of the world -- that Uncle Sam can flex his muscles when need be.

Selective Taxes Hurt State Growth

The Florida legislature has done it again, they have penalized those Floridians who make this state great.

After 19 days of foot-dragging, the legislature decided that the best way to solve its financial problems was to play Robin Hood twentieth century style, i.e., selective taxation. The shame of it all is that the state is deliberately destroying the marrow of its ability to grow — the lure of economic success for the entrepreneur.

The case in point, the 20% increase is state taxes which are aimed at those persons who have worked hard to enjoy the pleasures of economic success, i.e. the scientists, engineers, successful business executives, etc. These people who lead the state economically are punished because they have managed to do a better job than the next man.

A quick glance at the $194 million tax package the legislature formulated reveals tax increases on whiskey, recreational equipment and tickets, automobile tags, capital stock, documentary stamps, farm machinery, and repairs on personal property. This is only a partial list. Further examination of the facts shows that many more special groups have been singled out and stuck with the tax burden.

What does this mean for the future of Florida? First of all it means a substantial increase in the cost of living in this state, thus destroying the most important advantage that one state can possess over another. For this very reason the professional people who would like to live in Florida will not. Today the state loses scientists and engineers by the hundreds because there are no jobs. These people are trained using state money paid by the taxpayers. In other words, Florida pays the bill and gets nothing in return.

For several years now, industry has moved to Florida because it was economically advantageous to do so. Graduating seniors in the rest of the US would gladly move to Florida because of the climate and lower cost of living. Also, they would suffer a reduction in income to do this.

Florida has no resources or mass markets to offer, and it is geographically undesirable from a manufacturing point of view. Our only advantages were cheap labor and reasonable taxes. Now the legislature has slashed the juglar of its growth and destroyed busi incentive for building and reloca in Florida. International Journalists React To America--Herald

In place of my regular column I should like to share with you this reprint from Sunday's "The Miami Herald." The accompanying column gives a supposed cross-sectional opinion of a few features of our country by a few foreign newsmen. It might be of interest to see whether some of our foreign students would care to agree with or take issue with some of the opinions expressed.

Sixteen journalists from around the world toured "The Herald" Sunday. The newsmen were here with the World Press Institute, a program for bringing promising young journalists to the US for a year.

A representative group was asked three questions: (1) What most favorably impressed you about the US? (2) What most unfavorably impressed you? and (3) Will you return to your home with changed attitudes toward the US?

Here are the replies:

Takashi Wada of Tokyo newspaper "Asahi Shimbun": FAVORABLE -- "One thing I didn't expect is that the American people are a lot more religious than I thought." UNFAVORABLE -- "I think the student here has much more opportunity than the foreign student, but doesn't use it."

ATTITUDES -- Wada said he understands now why Americans from all walks of life think so nearly alike. It's because there is little difference between rural and city life -- the newspapers, radio and TV are all the same. "This can be good and bad," he said. "Democracy depends upon this huge middle class, but it's drawing down the intellectual level."

Kamal Raduf of the Cairo, Egypt newspaper "Akhbar El Yom": FAVORABLE -- "You are a hard-working people and fight government intervention. In my country if they want a hospital or such they first cry for the government." UNFAVORABLE -- "Your radio is horrible ....I was horrified. There was no education, no message, no line, no culture at all."

ATTITUDES -- A better and favorable understanding of what sort of people we are: "The American is not a very complex man."

Eugene Forson of Ghana News Agency: FAVORABLE -- "The friendliness of the people and the achievements you've made in agriculture, science and technology." UNFAVORABLE - "Of course the race question ... I expected the inconveniences I experienced." Forson was refused service in Birmingham, Ala., and Louisville, Ky., restaurants.

ATTITUDES -- Forson said he'd discussed the race question here and better understood the problems, but was still appalled at our thinking of Africans as savages.

Finn Marc, a freelance Danish newsman: FAVORABLE -- "It's your hospitality. I had expected everyone to be busy chasing the almighty dollar with no time for his fellow man." UNFAVORABLE -- "Your provinciality... your newspapers are filled with local news compared to the little foreign coverage. Maybe the bigger a nation is and the stronger it gets the more provincial it is."

ATTITUDES -- The myth of widespread divorce, gangsterism, wild living were erased: "Your movies and cheap books we get in Europe give us such bad impressions."

Ramesh Verma of the Free Press Journal of Bombay, India: FAVORABLE -- "Your generosity, though it's misplaced sometimes. I think Americans do it out of sheer comradeship and community spirit and sometimes I think you're played for suckers."

UNFAVORABLE -- Verma was most reluctant to discuss "irritants" he'd experienced here, though he did say Americans seemed afraid to discuss socialism and its role in the world because of our "Red bogeyman fears."

Family Life Program Welcomed By Cities

By SHEILA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

That Family Life Education extends beyond the campus can be easily witnessed by the efforts of three FSU faculty members-- the Dean of the School of Social Welfare, Coyle E. Moore; and professors Edwin Hartz and Douglas Brown.

This extension program, sponsored through FICUS (Florida Institute for Continuing University Studies) by the school of social welfare, first began its community services dealing with marriage and family living in 1947 at Quincy, with Dean Moore in charge. Since this first institute more than 500 have been conducted.

Nearly 70% of high school students never have the opportunity to attend college--never have the chance to obtain marriage counseling or to take courses pertaining to marriage and the family.

Therefore, according to Hartz, "The plan makes it possible for high school students in Florida to have a full week devoted to discussion concerning dating techniques, mate selection, marriage, parenthood, and other aspects of family life education." However, FICUS caters to adults as well as to teenagers.

Any organization--the church, school but more frequently the local PTA--may arrange for the five-day institute which consists of a lecture and discussion period to be conducted in their town.

Two of the professors alternate during the year as instructors in the institute. Hartz is scheduled to participate in the full program and Brown in the spring. The extension program serves Florida and neighboring southeastern states. Forthcoming institutes are planned for such cities as Pensacola, Miami, Panama City, Tampa, Daytona Beach, Birmingham, and Chipley.

Principals, teachers, PTA members--all see the need for such a program to prepare young people for marriage, as one out of every four marriages presently ends in divorce.

Commenting on the response of communities to this program, Brown says: "I recognize the need because young people and adults who are contacted are so very grateful for the discussion of this subject matter."

Trumpet And Tuba Recital In Opperman

A joint certificate recital will feature Doug Greer on the tuba and Frank Edmonson III on the trumpet tonight at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

Greer a student of Dr. William Cramer, was principal tuba player for the American Symphon, Orchestra in the summer of 1961. Edmonson, who is in the Honors Program in Music History at FSU, is a student of Dr. Clifford Madsden.

The Program will consist of a Sonata in three movements by Paul Hindemith, a Sonata for Trumpet and Piano by Hindemith, Thomas Beveradorf's Sonata for Bass Tuba and Piano and a Concertino for Trumpet and Piano by Joseph Kaminski.

Greer will be assisted by Steve Smith at the piano and Edmonson will be assisted by Sue Darden.

Accountants See Top Gains

The age-old law of supply and demand was set aside on at least two counts in the 1962-63 college recruiting season, according to an announcement by James C. Hardy FSU director of placement.

Aircraft and electronics firms--the two leaders for some time---continued to make the highest average dollar offers to bachelor's candidates but, significantly, their increases over the previous year were well down the list of the 16 employer groups studied by the College Placement Council's Salary Survey. Aircraft (4.5%) finished fifth while electronics (3.5%) was twelfth.

A checkrein on starting salaries also was exerted in offers to prospective electrical and aeronautical engineers---traditionally among the most widely-sought students on college campuses. Electrical engineers, the leader in average dollar value, placed sixth in rate of increase with 4.1% and aeronautical engineers, a close second in dollar value, finished seventh on the percentage chart with 3.8 %.

Eleven key undergraduate curricula and eight master's programs are covered in the report by the Council. Its report was based on a study of beginning salary offers made during 1962-63 to 20,122 male, bachelor's degree candidates and 3,848 master's degree candidates. Data for the survey, were reported each week during the recruiting year by 91 selected colleges and universities including FSU.

Electrical engineers commanded the highest offers in the master's degree phase of the study with an average of $751. Mechanical engineers finished second with $722 and physics placed third with $714. Although they were last in dollar value among the eight graduate programs surveyed, business administration candidates with a non-technical undergraduate degree experienced the highest rate of increase rising 6.3% to $608.

The aircraft industry once again led in average dollar offers to bachelor's candidates with $605 a month, followed by electronics at $596, electrical machinery at $587, and chemicals and drugs at $580. By curricula, electrical engineering received the top average offer with $607, only $1 more than the figure for aeronautical engineering. This reversed the order of the past year when aeronautical was first by $1. Mechanical engineering was third this year with $592 and chemical engineering fourth with $588.

Over all, students majoring in technical curricula gained $25 over the previous year, finishing with an average of $595. Non-technicals went up $24 to a final figure of $500.

Public utilities accounted for the most dramatic increase in average dollar value offers. They hiked their starting salary offers an average of 7.1% over last year, rising from $524 to $561. Public accountants continued to make sizable increases, going up to 6.0% to a final figure of $526.

As anticipated, students majoring in accounting experienced the top gains with a hike of 6.7% to $527. Next in line were civil engineering (5.8%), mechanical engineering (5.0%), and chemical engineering (4.4).

ONE OF OVER 20 WORKS OF ART

...this painting by Walter Ugorski will be on exhibition in the FSU Art Gallery throughout the remainder of the summer.

The paintings are by 15 former graduates of the FSU art dept.

Computing Machines Make Diligent Staff Members

By GEORGE GRIFFIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Two somewhat unusual staff members are at large on campus with abilities wich include the capacity to meet a "normal" 15-hour workday, then "occasionally work all night" to keep up with an ever-increasing work-load.

What type of job requires a 15-hour workday? Jobs which vary from large amounts of complex mathematical computations for the physical sciences to statistical work to occasional secretarial work, such as compiling letters.

These two members of the FSU force seldom complain about tasks menial or otherwise, for both are IBM computers valued at 2.5 million dollars.

A computer is a system of electronic data processing machines which accepts data and instructions for analyzing data, then proceeds to obtain results.

FSU's largest and fastest computer is the "709," a two million dollar tube machine. The newest and most modern machine is the "1401," which is very fast on input and output (600 lines per minute)--a transistorized machine.

The computational process occurs in four main steps. First, the data and instructions for processing it are punched on cards by a machine similar to a typewriter. The basic language of words and symbols fed to a computor is called Fortsan.

Then punch cards are fed to a reader, which puts the information on tapes utilized by the computer itself.

The actual computing is done by a series of tapes. Among these is a "library tape" which stores basic formulas. Employing these formulas, trigonometry and log functions are automatically computed rather than stored in mass.

To illustrate the speed of the "709": 40,000 additions per second is its operating speed. When the process is complete, the results are fed to a printer which issues written records of the results.

The FSU computers are run by full-time staff with the help of 25 part-time students.

According to Dr. Miles, the IBM machines are presently doing over 40 times as much work as was being done two years ago.

The computers are used by several hundred students and by various departments in the university.

Lost And Found

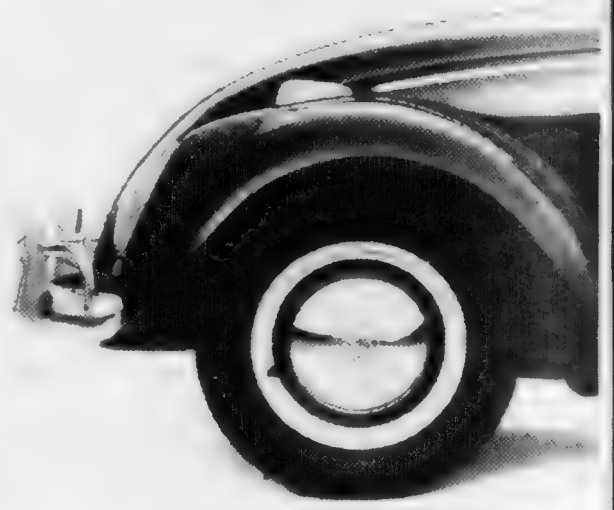
The Lost and Found Dept. will complete its sale of items unclaimed over the last two years today.

All articles may be seen and purchased at the Director's Office on the main floor of Longmire Bldg.

Miss Jane Adams, Director of Longmire, said that included in the collection are: umbrellas, raincoats, scarves, sweaters, coats, gloves, records, books and other miscellaneous objects.

Legislator To Help Legion's Boys State

A legislator who was once Boys State governor and then Boys Nation president, Rep. Edmond J. Gong of Miami, will be here today to help out with American Legion Boys State now in progress.



Gong, who is 32, is a Miami lawyer who was elected a Dade County representative in the 1963 Legislature. He's an alumnus of Harvard and of University of Miami Law School.

Four other legislators have been invited to the Boys State session and are expected to make their appearance during the week. House Speaker Mallory Horne of Tallahassee and former House Speaker William Chappell are expected during the week. Rep. Lawton Chiles of Lakeland and Rep. Richard Mitchell of Tallahassee will be at Boys State through today.

Morris Publishes Study About Richard Barnfield

A book about Richard Barnfield, a minor poet and a contemporary of William Shakespeare, is the latest FSU studies publication.

Called "Richard Barnfield: Colin's Child," the 203-page study is by Dr. William Morris of the English Dept. The second part of the title refers to Barnfield's close ties with Edmund Spenser, who was sometimes known as Colin.

"No full-scale work has ever been done on Barnfield, the most extensive essay being an introduction to his collected works in 1876," the jacket says. "Barnfield has always been admired as the composer of several gracefully turned lyrics as well as for generous tribute to William Shakespeare, his contemporary.

"But no one has ever rightly understood Barnfield's role as one of the earliest, and certainly the most completely devoted, of Edmund Spenser's admirers. Almost every poem that Barnfield wrote owes some part of its conception to the author of "The Faerie Queene."

This study of Barnfield not only explores the works of 'that pleasing poet' for the first time but also analyzes in depth the nature of literary influence in the Elizabethan age."

Morris received his B.A. degree (1949) and M.A. degree (1950) from the University of Miami and got his Ph. D. degree (1957) from the University of Minnesota. He is co-author of a textbook on the study of poetry and author of various articles on Renaissance and modern literature. More than 70 of his poems have appeared in literary quarterlies and a volume of his verse will be published shortly.

Prior to joining the FSU faculty in 1961 he taught at Tulane University and Ohio University. Research for the present book was done on a fellowship provided him by the Folger Shakespeare Library and a summer grant from Tulane University.

Psychology Has Teacher Program

Directed by Dr. Barron B. Scarborough of the Psychology Dept., seven college teachers are currently engaged in a special research program at FSU.

Fifth in this series, the program is sponsored by the National Science Foundation to 'beef up' research interest in college teachers, said Dr. Scarborough. The teachers will in turn 'funnel out' this interest to students when they return to their schools after nine weeks.

Five post-doctoral and two predoctoral teachers were picked from a set of 47 applicants. According to the director, the number of applicants has been steadily increasing since 1959 and "we can be very choosey now" he added.

Each teacher will be engaged in a separate research program in consultation with a member of the Psychology faculty.

The teachers receive a stipend from the National Science Foundation. The faculty is working on a voluntary basis.

Financial support amounting to $2000 will be provided by the NSF to these teachers for continuance of their work after completion of the nine weeks program here.

Public Relations Program

FSU Is Focus Of National Attention

National attention has been focused on the public relations program at FSU through the publication of an article in "Editor & Publisher," circulated throughout the United States.

The article, which fills an entire page in the current issue, describes the development of the realistic public relations courses with the full backing of Dean Charles A. Roevetta in the School of Business.

The article tells of the beginnings of the program under Prof. William R. Slaughter, now retired, and the more recent expansion under Dr. Royal Ray, head of the Advertising and Public Relations Dept.

Illustrated with a large picture of FSU students taking a motion picture as a class project, the article stresses the close tie-up with the local Hush Puppy chapter of the Florida Public Relations Association, of which Patrick Hogan, FSU public relations director, is president.

In the day-by-day courses, the public relations program, taught by Prof. Richard Joel, Dr. Ray and Dr. Sidney Kobre, emphasis is placed on the important role public relations plays in our society. The article relates public relations' many uses in business, in government and for nonprofit organizations, such as schools, universities, health and welfare groups. The introductory course attracts students from all over the university.

The practical operations of the course are described by Dr. Kobre, writer of the article, who tells about the assignment of students to local business and other organizations. Students report on employee, stockholder, consumer and community relations. Excellent co-operation has been won from Tallahassee groups and officials, the article points out.

In the advanced course, the class goes deeper into public relations. Greater emphasis is placed on solving public relations problems organizations have, and the production of a variety of communication tools. Each student selects a local client, developing a program for him over a four-month period.

The article closes by telling of the local internship program with the information divisions of the Florida State agencies.

'Four Party Politics' Is Topic Of Review

"The Deadlock of Democracy: Four Party Politics in America" by James MacGregor Burns will be reviewed by Dr. Daisy Parker, associate professor of government tomorrow at 5 p.m. in Longmire Student Lounge.

One of a summer series, it is open to the public and institute and camp participants are especially invited to attend.

Author Burns maintains that both the Republicans and Democrats are split into a presidential party and a congressional party, Dr. Parker said, and this has resulted in a paralyzing conflict between the president and Congress.

Burns traces the history of the conflict from the days of Jefferson and Madison to the present and proposes changes he believes necessary to meet the domestic and international crises of the present time.

Burns is a professor of political science at Williams College and served as a delegate at the last three Democratic national conventions.

FSCW Grads Return To Study New Ideas

Seventy-five graduates of Florida State College for Women and FSU will return to the campus July 21-26 for a week's study of contemporary ideas and ideals.

The seminar, first of its kind held at FSU, is co-sponsored by the FSU Alumni Association and the FSU Committee on the Education of Women. President Gordon W. Blackwell will address the opening meeting.

"We are limiting our invitations to members of honorary groups and people who were outstanding leaders in college," said Dean of Women Katherine Warren, chairman of the Committee on the Education of Women.

During the week lectures and discussions will be held on such topics as recent trends in art and literature; international affairs; impact of urbanization on contemporary society; impact of science on twentieth century culture and on woman's role in the current world.

Speakers from the FSU faculty include: Dr. Gulnar Bosch, head of the Art Dept.; Carlisle Floyd, professor of music; Richard Fallon, assistant professor of Speech; Dr. Jackson Lee Ice, assistant professor of philosophy and religion; Dr. Robert Bone, associate professor of Government; Dr. Meyer F. Nimkoff, head of the Sociology Dept.; Dr. A. Gib De Busk, associate professor of zoology; Dr. Laurence Chalmers, assistant dean of faculties; and Dr. Ralph Allen Bradley head of the Statistics Dept.

'Price Is Right' For FSU Coed

Still dreaming of a boat and car -- and wondering how to obtain them without it costing anything?

Then go to New York like Martha Rose Wilson did this summer, attend a "Price is Right" show and just be lucky enought (luck is a prerequisite) to be chosen from the audience for the program.

Yes, this 18 year old FSU coed has already won her 16 foot boat with motor and trailer and a corvair monza also.

Martha hails from Charleston, S.C. and is studying voice in New York for the summer. She will return as champion on the "Price is Right" until her knowledge (and luck) fail.

Would Oust Earl Warren

Recently the Supreme Court reached a decision forbidding the reading of the Bible or the recital of the Lord's Prayer in our schools. Although this decision had been anticipated, it still seems almost unbelieveable. It is now obvious that the Warren-led Court intends, step by step, to declare the whole Constitution of the United States unconstitutional.

There is still, however, one course of action which the American people can take to reverse this procedure and compel the Supreme Court to observe the oaths taken by its individual members to uphold the Constitution. This is by supporting the Movement to Impeach Earl Warren.

If enough people become familiar with and support this Movement, he can be impeached through the means provided by our Constitution. In a column as short as this, I can not possible supply all the reasons for his needed impeachment. This would take a large book or two.

Many such books have been written, though. One of the best synopsis I have read is available in a package known as the "Warren Impeachment Packet." It is available for $1 at the Americanism Center Book Store downtown. If you are concerned over the wrongs imposed upon us and our system of government, I urge you to buy it and get thoroughly acquainted with the facts.

I will now briefly list some of the needs for his impeachment. When Chief Justice Earl Warren was appointed by President Eisenhower in 1953, he had no experience as a judge whatever and had spent his life in politics. Why was he appointed, then? It was an out-and-out political pay-off.

See Officials. Ask Questions

Many of us as students have felt at times that there is corruption in Student Government; many of us have studied the problems of local, state, national, and international government in classes and discussed these problems in student seminars; almost all of us have read news accounts of poor and mishandled government. It is our concern as students to study these things in order to better lead our world when our turn comes.

But how many of us have tested what we have heard? How many have stepped out of the campus world to see practical, day-to-day government at work? Well I did and found it disgusting.

I decided to ask the City Commission of Tallahassee the following question: "I would like to know if it is going to continue as general knowledge that the city of Tallahassee tolerates police intimidation and humiliation of law-abiding FSU students when such students hold different views from the average citizen of the community."

I asked this (1) because three friends of mine had recently received such treatment, and (2) because I wanted to see the reaction of a real government to a student citizen's question. I am legally unable to print my subjective evaluation of the treatment I received.

But if you really want a sobering experience on why it is crucial to step into government positions, then I challenge you to take an afternoon off and go ask a few controversial questions; ones on integration might do for a starter. I promise you it will be an education in itself.

Quo Vadis Honor Court?

This columnist has learned that, during the last month, cases which should have been heard by the Honor Court have been heard by Judiciary. It also appears that Honor Court is not going to function at all this summer. True, this is largely due to accident but this is the sort of accident which shouldn't occur.

The Justice who was to have served as Chief Justice had to leave school beginning term III-B. So, there being no justices going to school this summer who are qualified to serve as Chief Justice, Judiciary had to take over.

It is a real shame that the operations of Honor Court for the summer are so dependent on one person. There is no doubt that Judiciary will handle the cases fairly and competently but the sad part is that the highest court on campus is not able to function as was intended. Steps need to be taken to insure that this doesn't happen again.

* * * * *

During III-A several of the sorority houses were open and now during III-B they are closed, so most of the girls have moved into Landis. Instead of being scattered all about the dorm they are located on the second floor. The Kappa Delta's have one side of a hall, the Kappa Kappa Gamma's have another side of a hall, the Kappa Alpha Theta's have another side of the hall and so on.

Maybe they are arranged this way for better control since most of the girls may be unaccustomed to living by dorm rules or maybe it's a case of "sister love conquering all," even the housing office.

Death Blamed On Societ

The July, 1963, issue of "Mainstream," if one discounts political apologetics, levels a telling blow against America and her middle class values in a striking editorial called "Death on the Bowery." The editors present a gruesome picture of broken down and disabled men, victims of our "way of life," and condemned to uselessness and early death for no other "crime" than being unable to adjust to the rigors of a social system predicated upon ruthless competition and the debasement of human values.

How do they "live"? They work at odd jobs in order to make enough to buy drinks and liquors, they sell their blood and bodies to the medical profession — they are easily taken advantage of and exploited by the desperateness of their situation. "Mainstream" points out that "... they have many uses, al involving cash for everybod themselves. But the limax -- hope it's a climax -- came i when a paint clerk knowingl City charges in its indictment wood alcohol to the Bowery and in one week 50 men were "Many of these me have cast out by society by the ruthl ness of the demands on them. Socialists Ignore Challenge?

To Thomas Riggins
c/o the Editor

Come now, Mr. Riggins, surely you're not going to ignore my urgent plea in a previous Flambeau, for an explanation of your ridiculous condemnations of the past.

I thought an avowed Socialist would always uphold his propaganda. Oh, but wait, that's not true, is it? A true Socialist will hit and run, if necessary, to make his comments and impressions and if not challenged — good he's so much ahead in the game of world politics. But if challenged, "ignore it — maybe it will go away." To speak back may cause attention in the wrong areas and alienate those that are perhaps about to be swayed. Now we can't have that, can we Mr. Riggins. No, we must wait for the right moments to let Socialism creep out from under the rock of its origin and make its point, its destructive malicious criticism only to withdraw and become stagnant until it feels secure enough to advance again.

Well, Mr. Riggins, this attempt at destruction is aimed at something I hold dear — FREEDOM. Not the definition given the word by so many other countries of the world but the everyday American definition. That single word stands for many other words such as justice, liberty and capitalism. Yes sir, Mr. Riggins, capitalism — the method that has made our country pass all others in a flash of time, to be the richest nation with more prosperity than any other nation in the world. And they've had a much longer life than we.

No doubt you can find points here to argue for your beliefs. But as surely as you do, it can be discounted. So take your "rock," sir, and go elsewhere to try and organize your party, for you're not wanted here.

Raymond Klein

Student Aroused By Pamphleteers

To the Editor:

I would like to express my wholehearted approval of the article which appeared recently, condemning the socialist pamphlets which had been placed in various rooms throughout Kellum Hall.

We are constantly bombarded with the idea, expressed by Mr. Riggins and others that we should allow all shades of opinion and philosophies to be subjected to the "free marketplace of ideas," and that we should discuss our beliefs in a reasonable manner. I support this view without question and am always amenable to intelligent debate, as are Messrs. McQuown, Hanlon, and Regner who wrote the article.

But a surreptitious pamphlet campaign does not foster a spirit of intelligent debate. Indeed, this "underground" type of display makes one believe that the Socialists themselves recognize the unpopularity of socialist doctrine and aims.

So I would encourage those students at FSU who believe in socialism to express their views with intelligent personal discussion, not through cliche-filled pamphlets on "democratic socialism." I personally abhor socialist doctrine but I would appreciate very much, as many others would, the opportunity to talk to a student socialist about his beliefs. There is nothing wrong with distributing pamphlets, so long as it is accompanied by honest, face-to-face debate.

My remarks, incidentally, are directed not only to the Young Peoples Socialist League, but also to the Young Democrats, Young Republicans and Young Americans for Freedom, who have conducted similar pamphlet campaigns on campus in the past.

Thanks, FSU!

To the Editor:

While I am just a visitor to your wonderful campus at Florida State University, I think I should offer my sincere appreciation to all of the faculty and students at FSU.

Their cooperation and patience has been simply fabulous toward the small, bewildered high school members of the Music, Art, Math and Speech camps.

Also our spare time has not been spent idly because of your very timely tips on "things doing" on and around campus. Your paper leaves very little to be desired in a campus publication.

The author of this letter, being a member of the latter of the four groups, would like to speak out in behalf of all and offer a hearty ....Thanks, FSU!

Forum Committee Presents Speaker Policy

esident Blackwell has approved ew policy document governing peration of the University's ic Forum Committee.

e eight-member faculty and stu- committee was appointed by the ident last January to recom- policies and procedures for ers and special lecturers on us.

its publication below, the ment represents offical insti- al policies and practices. The ic Forum Committee Policy ment:

I. General Policy Statement

One of the responsibilities of a university is to develop a spirit of free inquiry and to maintain a vital platform of public discussion for the stimulation and intellectual development of the student body and the general public. In pursuit of this goal two additional responsibilities must be met:

(1) Free inquiry must be consistant with the preservation of our democratic society which provides peaceful means for change, and

(2) An effective platform of public discussion must provide for a diversity of content and a balance of opinion.

The Public Forum Committee has been appointed to aid in the development of a more vital and balanced forum at FSU. The Committee is concerned solely with speakers invited from outside the University who speak on occasions of general public interest.

At all times the Committee must avoid placing the University in the untenable position of sponsoring an individual who advocates either illegal or immoral activities. The Public Forum Committee shall evaluate the ability and the timeliness of a proposed speaker and his subject rather than evaluate his viewpoint. It shall be the further responsibility of the Committee to assist in the maintenance of a balance of opinion expressed by invited speakers during any biennial period.

Insofar as the concern of the Committee is limited to public addresses by speakers who are not members of the faculty or student body of the University, the responsibility for the presentations by outside speakers or lecturers in classes, seminars, or departmental meetings shall rest with the individuals who extend the invitation. Similarly, when members of the faculty express their views either on or off campus they shall by individually responsible for their presentation.

II. Interpretations of Policy

A. DEFINITIONS

1. "University speaker" shall be those guests (1) who use University owned facilities, or (2) whose appearance is announced through University publications other than the Flambeau, notices posted on campus, or notices sent through campus mail.

2. "Occasions of general public interest" shall be those which can reasonably be construed to be of interest to the general academic community and to which non-specialists in a discipline would normally be invited.

3. "Illegal" shall mean in conflict with the laws of the U.S. or of the State of Florida.

4. "Immoral" shall mean in conflict with the basic ethics and morals commonly and generally agreed upon in our Judaeo-Christian culture.

B. EXCLUSIONS

1. The Committee will not knowingly approve as a University speaker any individual who is under indictment for or has been convicted of any felony under federal or Florida law, or whose past performance indicates that he may reasonable be expected to advocate illegal or immoral activities, or who represents, on a controversial topic, a viewpoint which has been disproportionally represented over a period of time.

C. INCLUSIONS

1. Subject to the stated exclusions, the Committee will seek to promote the spirit of free inquiry without regard for the real or supposed popularity of viewpoints or for the special interests of organized groups.

III. Procedures

A. No facilities will be made available and no publicity through University media will be authorized until the proposed speaker has been approved by the Public Forum Committee.

B. To obtain such approval, the individual in charge of arrangements must complete a form which may be obtained from the Office of the Dean of Students or the Office of the Dean of the Faculties.

C. The completed form must be approved by either the Chairman (Dean of the Faculties) or the Secretary (Dean of Students) of the Public Forum Committee.

D. If the Chairman or Secretary considers the request questionable, it will be considered by the Committee in formal meeting. It should be anticipated that two weeks may be required for approval in such instances.

E. Decisions of the Committee may be appealed to the President of the University.

F. Upon presentation of the approved request to the responsible individuals, allocation of facilities and use of media will proceed as usual.

G. WFSU-FM and WFSU-TV represent highly specialized phases of the University's platform of public discussion. Therefore, upon request of the Director of University Relations and the Director of Broadcasting Services, the Public Forum Committee will advise them on decisions pertaining to balance in viewpoints concerning controversial issues.

. . .Impeach Warren

A deal was made at the convention that if Warren could cast California's sixty-eight votes to seat Eisenhower delegates, he would get the first Supreme Court vacancy if Eisenhower became elected (from "Human Events," Jan. 6, 1958 and "Nine Men Against America" by Rosalie Gorden).

Of greatest concern however is his stand on the issues favoring the Communists. Warren has voted 62 pro and 3 con on issues advocated by the Communists (from a speech by Senator James Eastland on May 3, 1962). Some of the decisions which passed are: 1) opening the confidential files of the FBI to the Communists, 2) forcing the schools, colleges, and bar associations to accept employment of people who won't answer questions about past or present Communist activities, 3) assuring the Communists that urging the violent overthrow of the government is all right so long as you don't spell out how it is to be overthrown.

These decisions go on and on and I don't have the time or space to list them all. However, they are available to anyone who will just take time to look.

In closing, I would like to say that I have no illusions that impeaching Earl Warren will cure all the ills of the Supreme Court. However, it will serve as a warning and a lesson to the justices in the future who try to twist, ignore and write laws without the approval of Congress.

Former FSU Coed Takes Golf Title

Former FSU student Betty Tobin shot 38-40-78 to lead a field of 54 entries by one stroke in the qualifying round of the 60th annual State Women's Gold championship.

The twice state junior champion had three birdies and the medal all tucked away...until she realized she was strokes ahead as she was approaching the 18th hole.

"Then I got the jitters," she admitted. "So what did I do? I just dropped my approach in the sand and then I left it there. I finally got down in six, a double bogey, and I knew then that I didn't make it."

Fate played favorites, however, when former champion Dana Lombard ran into trouble on the late holes and bogeyed the 15th, 16th and 17th holes.

It is regretable that a few of the music campers here on the campus appear to be working so hard to ruin the good will and impression created by the majority of the music campers. There are frequent instances of these students behaving in rude and inconsiderate behavior ... such as emptying ashtrays all over the tables in the sweetshop, yelling and screaming near classrooms where, knowingly, classes are in session and so on.

An effort should be made by the music camp administrators and counsellors to restrain these kids.

Eumenides And Everyman

High School Institute Presents Double Bill

The High School Speech Institute under the supervision of the FSU Speech Dept., will present a double bill in Conradi Theater, July 17 at 8:15 p.m.

High School students from Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and Indiana will act in Aeschylus' "Eumenides" and in "Everyman" by an unknown author.

The "Eumenides" is both a record of ancient Greek mythology and a modern psychological drama. Steeped in the mythology and religion of its day, the play deals with the flight and salvation of Orestes, who is plagued by the Furies seeking revenge for (his) act of matricide.

Harold W. Poe is Director of Theater for the institute and will also direct "Eumenides." A doctoral candidate in speech and theater at FSU, Poe is on leave-of-absence from the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

"Everyman" is a morality play, which in allegorical form, tries to teach a lesson. This play comes from medieval England and treats the subject of man's call to his final reckoning in a poetic style.

Serving as director of "Everyman" is Edith Hansen, who received her B.A. and M.A. in speech and drama from FSU.

Costumes for the productions will be under the supervision of Abbie Mitchell, a former FSU student.

These will be the only plays sponsored by the Florida State Speech Dept. in trimester III-B. The public is invited and admission is free.

Deans Explain Forum Committee

By DICK SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

...an of the Faculties, Dr. Wer... A. Baum stated in an interview ...hopes the Public Forum Commit... "will strengthen and encourage ... expression of differing points of ... at FSU."
The Public Forum Committee will ...empt to ensure as wide a range ... opin... as possible within its ...ted limits," Dean Baum went on ... explain.

Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students, said, "The Public Forum Committee is not an attempt to restrict the freedom of access of students to diverse opinion, but is an attempt to give order to what could be a confusing situation in a growing FSU."

"The size and growth of FSU seemed to indicate a need for a more systematic, ordered policy with regards to outside speakers," Dean Oglesby stated. He went on to say that one of the functions of the Public Forum Committee is to serve as a channel between the limited facilities of FSU for speakers and the demands made on those facilities.

In discussing the terms "illegal" and "immoral" Dean Baum explained that "freedom entails responsibility," and necessitated the inclusion in the Public Forum Committee's platform of certain restrictions. He added that the limit is such that "the vast majority of people in the US would agree on as being necessary for the maintenance of our freedom."

"FSU, as a state institution," continued Dr. Baum, "has a responsibility to those who support and maintain it. We cannot, for example, approve speakers who would advocate the violent overthrow of the very government from which we recive financial support."

Dr. Baum stressed that this does not mean that FSU should not seek change and progress, but simply that we should recognize our responsibility.

"The spirit of the Public Forum Committee is not negative," Dr. Oglesby affirmed, "It is, as I see it, a positive attempt to widen the latitude of opinion available to students trhough FSU facilities."

Both Dean Baum and Dean Oglesby asserted that there is no censorious intent in the Public Forum Committee except that provided in the statement of its policy. Both also see the Public Forum Committee as one which will have the exact opposite effect from censorship.

Dean Baum summed up his feelings in this manner. "It is better to have a policy (on speakers) and have exceptions to it, than to have no policy and be in a situation in which one person in a dominant position makes an arbitrary decision (with regard to speakers)."

The Deadlock Of Democracy

Four Party Politics Provocative Study

By GEORGE GRIFFIN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Well, but not brilliantly written," said Dr. Daisy Parker of James MacGregor Burns' book, "The Deadlock of Democracy: Four-Party Politics in America. (Prentiss-Hall, 1963), reviewed in the Longmire Student Lounge at the weekly book review.

After an introduction by Professor Donald Loucks, Dean of Men, Dr. Parker went on to term it an "arresting and provocative thesis... on political parties in the 20th century." Her major contention is that Burns did not give enough credit to the books and authors on which he based his ideas.

Dr. Parker deemed the work "good job of research" and "an interesting job of terminology," and heartily recommends that all read it.

Burns' thesis is that American politics has diversified into four main party types. A congressional republican party, a congressional democratic pary, a presidential republican party and a presidential democratic party.

Presidential parties are generally liberal, have their home at the White House and in the Cabinet, and are European in concept. Congressional parties are more conservative, have thier home on Capital Hill and in te states, and are Oriental in concept.

Professor Burns criticizes government for delay in meeting of urban representation, civil rights and conservation. He comments that "political parties react to change rather than dominate change."

Giving forth constructive criticism Burns advocates several controversial measures, though he doubts that they will ever be fulfilled. He

The Panhellenic Association has announced its sorority scholarship rankings for the second trimester of 1963.

Alpha Gamma Delta has both the highest overall average, 2.8040, and the highest active average, 2.8031. Delta Gamma was second with 2.7825 overall.

Falling in third, fourth and fifth place respectively are, Pi Beta Phi, 2.7576, Alpha Phi, 2.7403, and Kappa Kappa Gamma, 2.7389. Gamma Phi Beta has the highest pledge average with 2.7407.

Dissertation On Culture Sets Precedent

The state of the arts in Florida's 10 largest communities is the subject of a book, "Culture in Florida," which has just been published jointly by FSU and the Florida Development Commission.

The 149-page study was made by Robert Smith as the dissertation for a doctor of education in music degree he received from FSU in December. It is thought to be the first doctoral dissertation to be published by the university. Smith thinks it's the first such study in the nation and also that it represents the first co-operative approach by a university and state agency in a study of cultural activities of a state.

Through interviews, questionnaires, published information and other means Smith summarized the cultural activities in Ft. Lauderdale Hialeah, Jacksonville, Miami, Miami Beach, Orlando, Pensacola, St. Petersburg, Tampa and West Palm Beach — the Florida cities with more than 50,000 population according to the 1960 census.

Smith summarized activities in art,

Policy Unclear

The Public Forum Committee, in its recently-announced policy statement concerning speakers and special lecturers who may be presented on this University campus, has unwittingly set up an ambiguous code which can be used in the future to blackball any speaker that a mere handful of people believe objectionable.

Unwittingly, because the apparent intentions of the group were not to set up standards of censorship, but rather standards of protection for the University, which often is criticized by the Legislature or the Board of Control for its policies in allowing speakers on highly controversial issues to present what these august bodies consider "radical" viewpoints, at the very least.

The Committee in its policy stressed their recognition of the university's responsibility "to develop a spirit of free inquiry and to maintain a vital platform of public discussion for the stimulation and intellectual development of the student body..." They further stated that "free inquiry must be consistent with the preservation of our democratic society which provides peaceful means for change and an effective platform of public discussion must provide for a diversity of content and a balance of opinion."

The responsibilities that go along with the freedoms that we prize must be recognized and met. But the interpretations which the Committee attempts to put upon its policy can be used and misused to reject anybody and any views.

The problem that the universities face today is not that there is too much freedom of expression, but that there is too little, and that this freedom is rapidly dwindling away, under the well-meaning but misguided attempts to "protect" the nation's youth from corrupting influences.

Seeking to comply with the criticisms of the legislative and administrative bodies controlling the state institutions is not the way to reverse this unfortunate trend. Advocates of academic freedom cannot sit idly by, compromising this valuable ideal or merely protesting feebly the inroads these restrictions make; they must become vocal -- they must be ready to protect the rights of academicians to hear all opinions and to weigh and judge them.

Judging a proposed speaker's "morality" (immoral is defined by the policy as "in conflict with the basic ethics and morals commonly and generally agreed upon in our Judaeo-Christian culture") is sticky business; it assumes or attempts to affirm a set of absolute values in an atmosphere where social change is presently proceeding at a rapid rate.

The policy opens the door to those who would like to indoctrinate students with their values and force them into a mold of conformity. It invites a pervasive censorship -- not now, while the objectives of the committee are still fresh in everyone's mind, but later, when the reasoning behind the policy is forgotten, and only a set outline of regulations remain, to be followed religiously.

A University should not close down its open forum out of fear, either of what is said by the speaker or of criticism which may be made later. Fear is a pervasive contagious disease which must not infect academic freedom any more than it has already done.

Forum 'Policy' Fosters Censorship

The new "policy document" of the University Public Forum Committee, recently approved by President Blackwell (Flambeau, July 16, 1963) represents a step backward for academic freedom and allows for university censorship of any speaker which may be in disagreement with the administration, or might "embarrass" the FSU administration.

This "new policy" is an attack upon freedom of speech on the university campus and should be vigorously protested by all students and faculty members who consider a University a place of free and open discussion of all points of view. I do not mean to infer that this "new policy" is specifically aimed at destroying free speech at FSU, but it could be used for this purpose.

The Public Forum Committee now has the right to prevent almost any controversial figure from appearing at FSU under university auspices–a right that should be abolished for the good of the Student Body.

A brief review of some of the definitions offered by the committee will easily show that who will be allowed to speak at FSU rests not on any general policy, but on personal opinion.

The Committee will "avoid placing the University in the untenable position of sponsoring an individual who advocates either illegal or immoral activities."

DEFINITIONS: 3) " 'Illegal' shall mean in conflict with the laws of the U.S. or of the State of Florida." This definition does nothing but create confusion. In practice it can keep fascists and communists off the campus (G. L. Rockwell and Gus Hall), but in theory Gov. Bryant or Sen. S. Thurmon could also be turned away because they don't agree with Federal laws on desegregation. And since free speech is allowed to all citizens by the Constitution no one should be turned away.

Last year Norman Thomas spoke at FSU with the grudging consent of the Administration. Strom Thurmon, U.S. Senator from South Carolina, spoke also – and Mr. Thurmon's politics are much more out of line with American democracy than Mr. Thomas'.

This "new policy" could keep both speakers off the campus – though in practice Mr. Thurmon undoubtedly would be prefrred as a "guest" of the university. Since this rule could be interpreted in any way it means nothing – but gives the Administration the right to [illegible] away any one who might "embarrass" it with the Legislature the Board of Control. Thus our [illegible] as students must be sacrificed [illegible] "expediency."

DEFINTIONS: 4) " 'Immoral' shall mean in conflict with [illegible] and morals commonly and generally agreed upon in our Judaeo-Christian culture."

This rather broad definition could be used in any way the Committee saw fit. Bertrand Russell could be turned away, as well as any Moslem, Buddhist or Oriental thinker who might advocate a different ethic than that of the Committee. In practice the rule will no doubt only be used against someone who might again embarrass the Administration.

This Committee, like HUAC and the John's Committee [illegible] in the intellectual life of an academic community nor in the democratic society. While it may not yet be, or the members may not have even considered the possibility, it is a potential instrument for the destruction of free speech. Let's abolish the Public Forum Committee.

Integration Is Dual Problem

To the Editor:

People talk and write of integration as a unity; as if there were one simple question called integration. But in actuality there are at least two major points connected with it.

One is the most often discussed civil or more appropriately human rights. Few but the most radical would argue against integration on the moral grounds.

The other point is more subtle. One hears shouts of political dynasty and black-robed monarchy which clearly are not the case – yet. But the path is open. The growing cohesiveness of society beginning particularly in the 20's and having its effects start to be felt in the 50's is upon us. Mass communication and transportation is making a homogeneous people. Social legislation is establishing a bureaucracy over these people and forcing further homogeneity. Small wonder then the cries of conformity.

The worst point of this is that the 50's to 80's may be considered in the future as the formative period of the first American Empire. For as the power becomes more centralized the chance for its abuse becomes larger and human beings have not satisfactorily demonstrated ever that they will not misuse power.

The fighting of integration in order to oppose one step on this road to increased federal power is a righteous and honorable stand. One should take steps such as writing one's congressman to let him know how you stand in order to prevent our union of states from becoming an amalgamation of them. And if people judge that human rights are obtainable only through federal legislation and edict and not through local persuasion then it is they who will pay the price in the future.

Protest Restrictions After Knowledge For College Test

To the Editor:

I just flunked my Knowledge for College test and as a result I must [illegible] in my room from 8 p.m. until 6 a.m. the next morning with a half-h[illegible] break at night from 10:30 til 11. I studied for th test, but I missed more than 5 of the 50 questions, and I don't know which ones. (Some were those famous ambiguous items; two answers are right, but one is more right than the other.)

According to one officer in the dorm, it has been a "tradition" that girls receive partial restriction until the test is given again. (One was not punished unless one failed it a second time, according to another [illegible] who is a junior.) If the former is true, several girls who flunked the test last fall got away without punishment. Also, one of the girls talked to Assistant Dean of Women and she knew nothing of a punishment for taking the test. As for "tradition", I believe in progress and change. I think this school believes in those things too, otherwise it would still be only a school for girls.

I believe in punishment for breaking rules, but what rule have we broken? Being in by 8 means no library. My classes demand reserve reading since I'm in class most of the day I don't want to run to the library immediately after my last class. I can't even check out books after [illegible].

This is an accelerated trimester and it is also mid-term week and I am not allowed to study in the library. Should we be restricted from [illegible] just because we missed 6 questions out of 50? And should this [illegible] for a whole week?

I came from a girl's school whoe rules were more strict than [illegible]. We were on the honor system for many things including knowing the rules. We learned them because we knew we would be punished if we broke [illegible]. The Dean of Women here at FSU said in her summer orientation [illegible] that the school had faith and trust in its girls. Why doesn't it show this faith by putting us on our honor to learn the rules?

Certainly there are going to be those who will break them. [illegible] little test going to change their attitude by making them respect regulations which they merely memorized for the time being? I think [illegible] passing or failing (missing more than five) this test is supposed to determine who shall break rules and who shall not, then you could dismiss those who failed and have a perfect woman's system.

I believe that if this test were given to all FSU women, over half [illegible] would fail. The rules change from year to year and you forget the [illegible] don't use every day. You can always refer to the Knowledge for College book and refresh your memory on the rule which pertains to [illegible].

I think this strict punishment for failure of the test is bad for most freshmen women. They come to school very enthusiastic about everything. This is an important and impressionable time of their life when they are eager to do their best and learn what is important. Failing this test and adding more restrictions to the already firm freshmen rules could destroy a girl's confidence. She feels like a failure before she really even begins. Your first trimester is difficult enough without having added an extra unnecessary burden.

One girl said she had gone before judiciary for breaking a minor rule. Her punishment: 5 days of partial restriction. Our punishment: 7 days of partial restriction.

If this school feels it necessary to give a test (I know of three state universities that have 8,000 girls apiece and they don't find tests necessary), let them have a test, but for heavens' sake, don't decree that failure the first time means punishment.

Although this letter has been written in the first person, it is a composite of the beliefs and opinions of two girls who have discussed this subject thoroughly with those who have passed the test and with those who have failed.

We are both Junior transfer students.

Major Tobacco Companies Ban College Advertising

Most of the major cigarette manufacturers have decided to stop advertising in college newspapers, magazines and football programs, and campus representatives of several cigarette companies will lose their jobs.

George V. Allen, president of the Tobacco Institute, confirmed this, and said:

"The industry's position has always been that smoking is an adult custom. To avoid any confusion or misconception in the public mind as to this position, a number of member companies of the Tobacco Institute, I understand, have each decided to discontinue college advertising and promotional activities."

While Mr. Allen declined to specify the number of companies that would ban cigarette advertising on campuses, it was understood on good authority that "most of the major companies" were involved.

The tobacco companies' decision to eliminate advertising from college newspapers, magazines and football programs will be felt financially on campuses.

It also will affect the students who take jobs as cigarette representatives - jobs that enable them to smoke free, make a small salary, and enjoy a good deal of popularity, especially along fraternity row before "smokers."

Inasmuch as the Tobacco Institute is composed of companies that manufacture 99 per cent of the cigarettes, pipe and chewing tobacco and snuff produced in the United States, the campus publications and representatives face an almost absolute advertising boycott.

The institute includes the tobacco industry's big six - Philip Morris, Inc., of New York; R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, New York; Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, New York; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, and P. Lorillard Company, Inc., New York.

Spokesmen for Reynolds, American Tobacco and Brown and Williamson confirmed last night that they were ending their advertising in college publications.

An official of Philip Morris declined comment, and Lorillard could not be reached.

Zach Toms, president of Liggett & Myers, would say only: "We've been reviewing our advertising and promotion policies with regard to college-age people, and we are preparing to make substantial changes."

It was proposed by the director of student activities at FSU before the Board of Publications at its Feb. 14, 1963, meeting that The Flambeau consider dropping cigarette advertising. The head of the FSU hospital had already taken the position that there was a definite health hazard in smoking.

The decision of the cigarette manufacturers will mean a loss of gross revenue to The Flambeau during 1963-64 of $4,960, based on 1962-1963 amounts. Cigarette advertising in The Flambeau has been declining. It was $8,386 in 1961-62. Approximately 35% of the gross is spent for commissions to advertising agencies, which is standard practice.

The national advertising agency for The Flambeau has confirmed the loss of cigarette ads. The Financial Aids office has not been notified that there will be no employment of students as campus representatives.

So don't be lulled into a false sense of security by smoked glass, goggles or sunglasses."

It is best not to observe the eclipse at all. Henderson says there's absolutely no safe way to view it directly. You can view it indirectly by watching television, by making an indirect viewing box, or by using a cardboard with a hole in it to project the image on white paper.

The eclipse will be visible tomorrow along the state at 4:03 p.m. It will reach its maximum at 6:05 p.m. At this time a deep notch will be apparent in the sun's disk. The eclipse will be over shortly after 7 p.m.

the theater, music and the dance and commented on the results.

"There is a lack of communication between the various media of the arts, indeed between organizations of the same media, as it relates to programming, performance and presentations," Smith reported, and added that "in several cities some of the cultural activities vie with each other for audience, donor, patron and perfoimer support."

Duplication of activities in music exists in five of the 10 cities, "where there are two orchestras in three of the cities, two lyric theater groups in one, and two opera groups in another city," he said.

The lack of a civic choral organization in each of the cities, Smith purported, "offers a challenge to music leaders in those cities." He found little rapport between cultural activities and chambers of commerce in nine of the cities except during fund-raising or when chambers were seeking data in surveys.

"After visitation of the 10 cities and from seeing, hearing and viewing many of the cultural activities in the cities, and after interviewing citizens and cultural leaders, it is concluded that eight of the cities offer a variety of cultural activities for active and audience participants and have a clultural climate conducive to the formation of arts councils," he said.

"The other two cities, Hialeah and Miami -- the former almost completely lacking in cultural activities and the latter, with many commercial activities but lacking in major cultural activities in three of the four media -- offer opportunities fr the fostering of interest in and the organization of activities for community cultural development."

A native of Scotland, Smith had begun a career in music education when World War II came. He holds a licentiate from the Royal Academy of Music, London (1932). He joined a British tank unit which fought in Africa, Sicily and Italy.

From 1949 until 1952 he was dean of the Conservatory of Music at Flora Macdonald College in North Carolina, and from 1952 to 1957 he was coordinator of music for the city of Denver, Colo.

Basketball

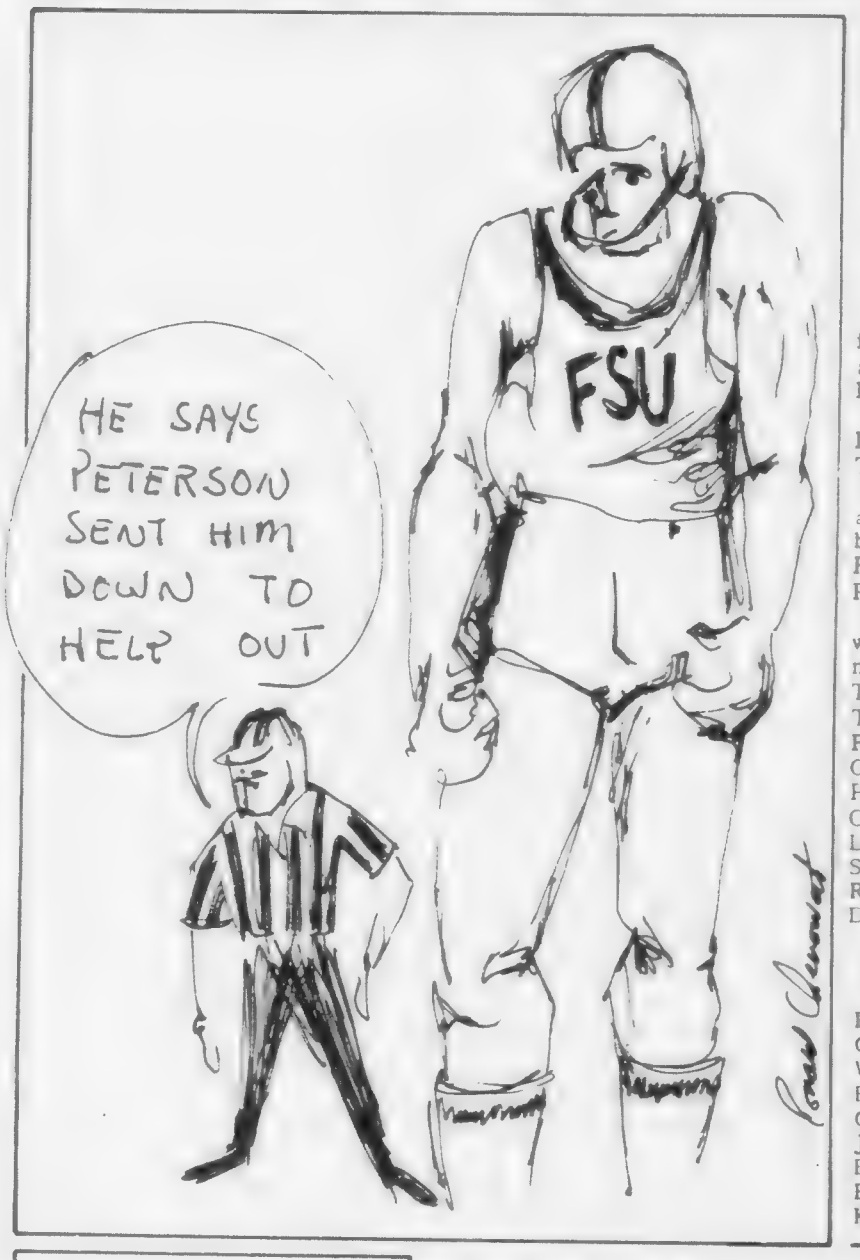
Baby Seminoles Look Up For Their Fall Hopefuls

By GENE BALLARD
Flambeau Staff Writer

This year's Freshmen Basketball Team will be big! big! big!

Led by such human skyscrapers as Dick Danford, who is 6-10, and Ken Doyle, 6-9-1/2, the team has an average height of six feet three and nine-tenths inches.

Danford and Dolye should be the scoring leaders of the team. They are from Clearwater High School and Plant High of Tampa, repectively. Both were members of the All-State team of Florida. The two also have the winning tradition. Danford led his team to a conference title and to the finals of the Division Playoffs. Doyle led his team all the way to the finals of the State Tournament.



FSU has three boys who tip in at six foot five. They are Ralph Zediker, who made All-State in Pennsylvania, Tom Stembridge of Lee High of Jacksonville , and John Rodgers from Seabreeze of Daytona Beach.

Six-four players include Bill Glenn of Tallahassee, who made several All-State teams, and Ron Malmen, an outstanding service player from the Air Force.

Smaller members of the squad will include: six-three Larry Moody of Seabreeze; six-two Bob Nelson of Independence, Missouri; Joh Wallace of Gainsville, also six-two; six foot John Bloodworth, All-State from Dixie-Hollins; and five-ten Lee Canter, the smallest boy on the squad.

The Baby Seminoles will have power under the boards too. Doyle, Danford, and Malmen are all over 200 pounds, with Rodgers at 190, and Glenn and Lager weighing in at 180.

Things should be looking up for the Freshmen this season, in more ways than one!

Falcons Lead Summer Play

Led by Bill Glenn, the loop's leading scorer, the Falcons are running away with the summer basketball league.

With two games left, the Falcons lead the Outlaws, Psychology, Old Timers, and the Lions by two games.

Games are played every Tuesday and Thursday night and are refereed by varsity basketball players: Pete Rogers, Gary Schull, Jerry Shirley, Pete Gonzales, and Cal Huge.

Tournament play begins July 25, with the finals being held Thursday night, Aug. 1 at Tully Gym at 7 p.m.

The standings:

Team	Won	Lost
Falcons	5	0
Outlaws	5	2
Psychology	3	2
Old Timers	3	2
Lions	3	2

LCA Awards Litwhiler One Of Four Scholarships

Danny Litwhiler, 21-year old FSU senior, has received one of the for graduate scholarships given annually in the country by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Litwhiler, who will receive his B.S. degree in math in August, will continue his studies here in September, working toward a master's degree in math. The scholarship is for $1000.

Young Litwhiler is the son of Daniel W. Litwhiler, FSU baseball coach, and Mrs. Litwhiler. He was a letterman in basketball and baseball at Florida High and was president of the student body at the time he graduated in 1960.

Litwhiler is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary, and of Pi Mu Epsilon, math honorary. He has participated in student government, among other activities.

s a part of the new Student Union Program, the chase of six "Flying Dutchman, Jr." sailing s has been tentatively decided upon for use by tudents of FSU.

s design of sailboat was selected as an ideal ning-racing craft by an advisory group appointed he FSU Reservation Committee. The advisory mittee consisted of Dr. Michael Kasha, head of nstitute of Molecular Biophysics, Fred Moore, te student and Stanley Stearns, an under- student assistant at the reservation. r a number of inquiries sent to various boat ers, the committee decided upon the "Flying , Jr." the 13-foot boat was designed as g craft for the larger racing sloop, "The utchman," the 1964 Olympic two-man sail-

Tomorrow is the last day for graduate students to register in the Graduate School Office for language/statistics exemp- examinations to be given Aug. 3. The deadline for stration is at 5 p.m.

FSU Receives Grant

Research in biomedical sciences and related fields will be expanded in the Chemistry Dept. during the next five years through a graduate-student training program financed by a new $194,400 grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Dr. Earl Frieden, chairman of the department and training program director, said the grant would allow FSU to support the first year's education of 30 graduate students during the five-year period.

Six biochemistry research fellowships a year will be awarded and each recipient will receive $3000 to cover expenses of the first year's study. Outstanding lecturers will be brought to the campus to speak at weekly biochemistry seminars and the grant also provides for a visiting professor in residence.

The training grant, along with funds from other grants, will allow the Chemistry Dept. to increase the number of its first-year entering graduate students from 25 to more than 40 new students, according to Dr. Frieden.

Seventy-five of the present 100 students are supported by funds provided by federal and other granting agencies, Frieden said. Stipends now amount to a total of about $200,000 per year.

Four of the first six biochemistry research fellowship holders have been selected. They are:

Walter Brooks, who holds the BA degree from Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., where he served as a research assistant from 1961 through 1962. After completing his doctoral studies at FSU, he plans to go into research and teaching.

Charles Huber, who plans to conduct research in drugs on completion of his doctoral work, holds the BS degree in chemistry from Georgia Institute of Technology where he held a National Merit Scholarship.

Robert Dee Gray, who holds the BA degree from DePauw University Greencastle, Ind. held the Edward Rcotor Scholarship and the Phi Kappa Psi Scholarship. He plans a career in the pharmaceutical industry.

Herbert Duane Knudsen received the Dana Freshman Chemistry Award. He holds the BA degree from Dana College, Blair, Neb. where he served as chemistry laboratorv assistant for one year.

Seniors May Lose Driving Privileges

Seniors will not be permitted to drive or park on campus during normal school hours under a regulation which has been sent to the Board of Control's executive committee for consideration.

This newest traffic regulation is still another move to tighten up on the use of student automobiles on FSU's campus.

It will extend the prohibition already in effect at the junior level. Freshmen and sophomores are prohibited from owning cars in Leon county.

B Of C Refuses Salary Request

The Board of Control has decided to refuse a request that would allow state universities to hire professors at salaries over $10,000 a year without permission.

University presidents claim that they often lose good men by the time official channels and red tape procedures have been cleared. The school presidents may hire and fire personnel under the $10,000 limit, subject to review, if the proposal is passed in the final decision, whch will be Sept. 12.

Both Dr. Charles Forman of Fort Lauderdale and Dr. Wayne McCall of Ocala, board members, stood firm for board review of salaries above $10,000 a year. Dr. Broward Culpepper, executive director of the board, sought to raise the limit to $12,500 a year in an amendment, but his attempt was unsuccessful.

In presenting the proposal to let the presidents and the director pass on salaries up to $12,500 for administrative personnel, Dr. Culpepper was following a 1963 legislative act and the BOC's recently formulated policy of shifting more authority to the presidents and the director.

The unsuccessful amendment would have provided for letting the presidents and the director pass on salaries up to $15,000 for teaching and research personnel.

Dr. McCall reportedly wanted to continue the $10,000 a year practice at least until the Nov. 5 election on the $75 million university expansion bond issue.

The 1963 Legislature raised the $10,000 salary limit to $12,500 and $15,000 as the maximum salaries that could be passed under the university system without the express approval of the State Cabinet.

It sometimes takes more than 30 day between contacting a prospective employee and finally getting him on the payroll, according to University and BOC officials.

Last Artist Series Features Treigle

Norman Treigle, leading bass-baritone of the New York City Opera, will appear in recital at the final summer Artist Series Program Monday night, Aug. 5, with FSU's Carlisle Floyd at the piano.

Treigle has appeared in New York City Opera production in principal roles of two Floyd operas. He is noted for his dramatic as well as his singing ability.

An Artist Series presentation, the recital will be at 8:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Season ticket holders may pick up their tickets beginning now. Tickets are priced at $2 for the public and are free for full-time students.

Reaver To Review 'O'Neill'

Dr. J. Russell Reaver, associate professor of English, will review the biography of Eugene O'Neill written by Arthur and Barbara Gelb tomorrow at 5 p.m. in Longmire Student Lounge. The public is invited.

"Within the detailed record of O'Neil's confused personal life the authors show the significance of biography for understanding O'Neill's ideas and themes in his plays," Reaver said.

"He drew repeatedly on personal experience from his early sea plays to his late drama, 'Long Day's Journey Into Night,' which treats the emotional tensions among his parents, brother and himself."

With the aid of his seminar students this summer, Dr. Reaver began preparing a concordance to O-Neill's chief dramatic works. Already many of the texts of the plays have been processed on key-punch cards which will be fed into computers in the FSU Computing Center to sort out the leading words or phrases for preparation of the Concordance. It will be the first reference work of this kind for students of O'Neill, according to Dr. Reaver.

Modern American literature for a long time has been one of the chief interests of Dr. Reaver, and he has published critical articles on William Faulkner and Thomas Wolfe.

He also is the author of "Emerson as Mythmaker" and co-author of "Humanities in Contemporary Life." The latter book is to be followed early next year by a companion volume, "The Humanities Tradition," published by Holt, Rinehart.

His book, "Fundamentals of Folk Literature," written in collaboration with George W. Roswell, was published recently by Anthropological Publications in the Netherlands.

Taking Wooden Nickels?

One of the more interesting pastimes on this campus is what is known as "radical watching," i.e., the gyrations of the political wings of the FSU political turkey. Particularly interesting is the apparent ideological molting of the left-wing socialists, ultra-liberals, do-gooders, etc.

For many years the "welfare staters" and socialists have been clamoring for a chance to try their systems; the welfare state advocates have had their chance and are now stalled (see Harper's, June 1963), now the socialists are on the move. By associating themselves with completely unrelated groups they hope to attain a significant following. Some of the tactics used in this political maneuvering are undeniably humorous and contradictory.

The socialists constantly claim they are for the "working man." This seems natural as this group has the largest number of votes, and if this is the case, what politician can afford to be against the working man.

Another interesting socialist tenet is that they are for the well-being of the individual and through their system the individual will progress economically. This is nice but socialism is a philosophy which is economic in nature only; it considers men as "classes," not as individuals. Actually, the conservative political philosophy is based upon the individual. It is the conservative who considers political philosophy a hom-

Free Negroes--Now!

The setting is a committee room in Washington. The event is the hearing before the Commerce Committee of the controversial commerce clause of the Administrations's civil rights package.

The cast include a young Attorney General, some interested Congressmen, and a notably small collection of especially loud, outdated politicians who consider themselves spokesmen for the American People. (Who also consider their political careers at stake — which they are.)

The time is now.

The introduction to the Congress of the civil rights package and the subsequent hearings before the Committee have served as an invitation for a number of budding McCarthyists to "stand up and be counted" by hurling charge after charge at whoever gets in the way of their realization of long, phlegmatic political careers. Two of the most vocal of these "witnesses" are the Messrs. Wallace of Alabama and Barnett of Mississippi.

Wallace seized his opportunity to express what he may or may not believe to be the feeling of all Americans. He seems to think that all protesting minority groups (esp. Negroes) are participating in "mob violence," with complete disregard for the "law." The preservation of law and order, peace and tranquility, and what he calls "tradition" are more important that the establishment of Justice. With all his claimed respect for the "law," he still asserts that if the pending legislation is passed, it will never be recognized by his state!

Furthermore, it is claimed, since all mob violence is Communist-inspired, and since the Brothers Kennedy "encourage" this mob violence, the Kennedys "encourage" Communism and should therefore be removed from office.

Barnett was not to be outdone. He declared categorically that all Negroes are Communist-inspired and that their "meddling" leaders are actually Communists. He was even so audacious as to show the Committee a film which allegedly depicts the Reverend Martin Luther King attending a "Communist school" in Tennessee.

Men like these two have attained their offices as a direct result of purporting to hold such views. This sort of "reasoning" may succeed in winning to heart the population of Mississippi and Alabama — But given a nationwide airing, IT STINKS.

Such politicians have balanced lofty principles against the attainment of political office on many occasions. With few notable exceptions, it is clear which they have chosen. They have attained office largely by keeping the American Negro "in his place" — which means flat on his back, with the white man's heel in his throat.

They have kept the Negro on his back for 150 years and the Negro is finally getting tired of it. He is expressing his long-held-back emotions by participating in the mob violence of kneeling in prayer on the courthouse steps; by spending long hours in the white man's jails; by somehow realizing that he is both a human being and an American citizen!

The Negro's patience has been more than we have a right to expect from any man. But after a century and a half, it is beginning to wear thin. I say let him get off his back! I say let him stand on his own two feet! I'm not afraid of him. Are you?

The place is here. The time is now.

Hungarian Student Views 'Liberalization'

To the Editor:

Just coming back from the congress of the Hungarian Student in Exile, I would like to refute Thomas Riggins, not by stating opinion but by quoting statistics and statements from the Hungarian communist leaders themselves.

Party ideologist T. Petho writes, "The word liberalization is used by foreign (western) visitors to express their appreciation. This concept here however is a reactionary one which tries to malgamate the antique concept of freedom in our socialist society."

It is true that Deri is free. But he was not freed because Hungary is liberalizing, but because of the constant propaganda and protests of the Western European intellectuals, the U.S. Government, and the United Nations, whom we emigres kept informed. Also I wonder whether Mr. Riggins knows who Deri is. Deri was not a revolutionary, not even an anti-communist, but a dedicated communist for almost all of his life. He was in prison for many years before the war as a communist. The only thing is that he had in his mind a different kind of communism from that of Mr. Kadar. In spite of that I respect him very much, in fact more than the whole party full of Marxist socialists who made a fusion with the Communist party and were more subservient to the Russians than Communists like Premier Nagy, General Maleter, Professor Lukacs and others.

Mr. Riggins states that most of the political p[risoners] have returned to political life. Let us re[view] the law of amnesty in order of importance: 1) criminals; 2) Communists who took part i[n] dering other Communists during S[talin's] 3) "counter-revolutionaries;" 4) [refu]gees who left the country illegal[ly]; [5] criminals. Those to whom the amnest[y] refer are: 1) Those who were se[ntenced] for spy 2) Those sentenced for treason; 3) Those sente[nced] for murder; 4) Those sentenced for destr[oying] state property by fire.

Most of the revolutionaries were sentenced for crimes to which the amnesty did not refer. amnesty was so restricted that some of the known prisoners had to be released by spe[cial] personal pardons to achieve the expected pro[pa]ganda value of the amnesty.

Mr. Riggins talks of the new communist thinker. Why then is the world famous communist, Marx[ist] esthetic Professor Lukacs still under house arre[st] deprived of his chair, while the Hungarian gover[n]ment sells his books in the West?

Speaking of Khrushchev's rejection of Stalin after the Hungarian revolution, I would like to bri[ng] to Mr. Riggins' attention the fact that Premi[er] Imre Nagy, General Maleter, and others w[ere] executed years after the military interventi[on]. Also, Khrushchev promised the same thing to t[he]

"First Let's Get Him Out Of That Black Box"

Where Does Laundry Fee Go?

To the Editor:

Today in the mail I received a notice from the FSU Housing Office stating (demanding) that I pay an additional $15 for my room next year. This now brings the total cost to almost $150 for four months' occupancy of a room.

This $15 might be necessary for reasons beyond my feeble understanding, but if it is, then I believe it is high time that somebody got rid of certain fees that aren't necessary— such as the $17 laundry fee. Just why is it that all residents of women's dorms must pay this fee regardless of whether or not they use the laundry service?

I have seen many clothes mangled, prematurely worn out, and otherwise damaged by the FSU laundry service. Due to this and the slowness of the service, I choose not to send my clothes to the laundry. Since I have now paid room rent for six semesters, that makes six semesters that $17 has just been wasted — FSU laundry service now has $102 of my money.

As far as I am concerned this money has just been wasted, and I know of lots of places I could use it other than donating it to the FSU laundry for a service that I don't even use and yet am force to pay for. Why can't all women residents have the option (as do residents of men's dorms) of using the laundry service at the $17 per semester rate, or of paying for their laundry piece by piece, or of not using it at all?

And just where does every woman's $136 for eight semester's accumulated laundry fee go? Somebody must be making a nice profit off of us women students! Can't something be done about this?

In conclusion, I am hoping that if there are other students who share my feelings that they will let them be known and then perhaps something will be done about the $17 a semester (it is now "trimester," but the laundry fee has not been reduced accordingly) that women non-users of the laundry service are just "throwing down the drain."

P. E. Program Said Lacking

To the Editor:

The condition of the weight-lifting room in Tully Gymnasium is a disgrace to FSU, for in its present state it is almost useless to the student body.

Weights lie scattered [on] the floor, many of which do not have any bars available. [There is a problem] securing weights to bars [because] ally non-existent. There is a general shortage of equipment, and much that is available is in an advanced state of deterioration.

The weight room itself is [not large] enough. It can barely accommodate a half-dozen exercisers without confusion and loss of efficiency [and] time to its users).

It seems to me that the [whole] weight-exercising program [is largely] neglected by the Phys. Ed. Dept.; and to those to whom no form of exercise is feasible or who prefer weight-lifting, this neglect is sorely felt.

I realize that acquiring more space is a long-range problem and requires a complete re-evaluation and careful planning, but there are short-range solutions which can help alleviate a frustrating situation.

For instance, why cannot the Phys. Ed. Dept. purchase some more weights and bars, fix the weights to the bars so that they cannot be lost, done, and set them on a rack in the weight-room? That would eliminate changing bars from one weight to another, and might help solve the problem of disappearing weights. Alum keys would then not be needed.

The cost of buying the weights and bars would surely not exceed the cost of continual replacement due to theft which seems to prevail now, and this would facilitate the use of the weights. And the carpenter shop could build a suitable rack for the weights at practically no cost.

This and other problems could be readily cleared up if someone would give a few hours' thought to the program, and money could probably be saved in the long run by wisely spending it now.

Some attention is definitely needed in my opinion, for the facilities now available hardly merit the name and certainly, if they are allowed to deteriorate at their present rapid rate, will sink to level of a rusty corner in Tully Gym, like a torpedoed ship.

below, nodding slowly in the sun is a five foot circular ever listening to the noise-messages from the instrument a young scientist fiddling with looking black box and there have the complete set up of a "Ozone-Zonde." Its fun-- to measure how much ozone ntained in every few yards of sphere.

seven a.m. every Wednesday, similar balloons will go up from es as far away as Greenland and ska in the north to Tallahassee the Panama Canal Zone in the h. The cost of each balloon and ccessories is a little over $500.

ne's importance as a minor stituent of the atmosphere was lized as early as 1920. If all the e in the atmosphere is com-ssed to the ground level, it will d as little as an eighth of an . But what the scientist wants to out is how this 1/8 inch of ne is distributed in the lower 000 feet of atmospheric space. rtunately for us, most of this is occupying a space of a undred feet at a mean altitude to 80,000 feet, it is just about his point that the harmful ultra-et radiations from the sun can be trapped to make life possible down below.

It took several years to perfect an instrument which can measure the distribution of ozone in the atmosphere. Named after its inventor, "Regner's Ozone Zonde" is the newest of them and the one in use at FSU.

The big question one would like to ask, however, is about the importance of this measurement -- of what benefit is this to anybody?

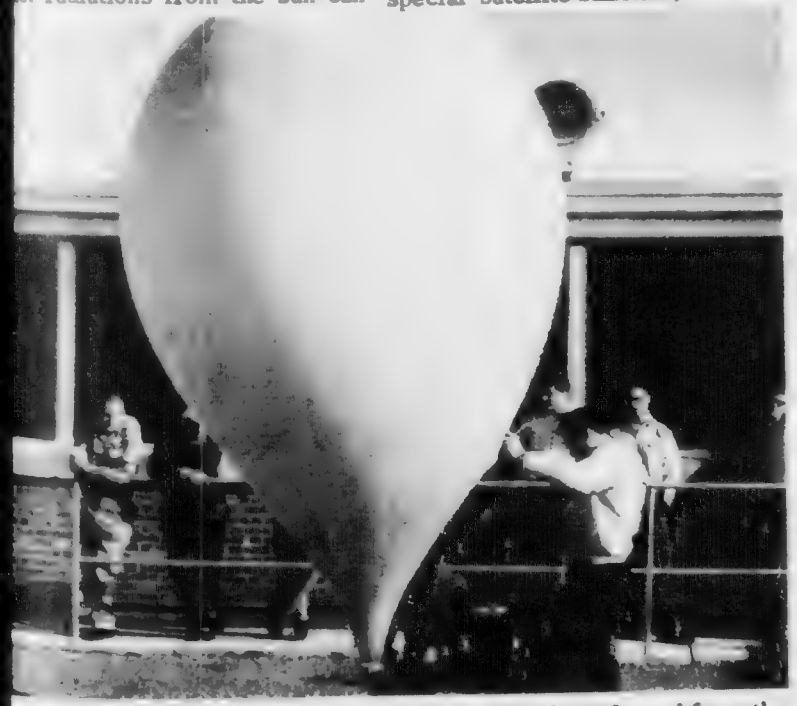
But here the scientist would prefer to shrug his shoulders and say, "we" are bothered with fundamental questions like the "Why and How" of matters and not the "returns" from it.

Of course, in the present case, he thinks that by finding out how the "Peak Ozone region" shifts from one level to another as observed, he may get near a solution regarding the mechanism of the "Atomic-Fall-Out" or again, by the time the present investigation extending through the "I.Q.S.Y." (International Quiet Sun Year) is complete, he will have some definite clues for co-relating the day to day weather changes with the variations in the Ozone distribution.

What the casual visitor is likely to overlook upon stepping on the roof of the Math-Meteorology Bldg. is the maze of weather information pouring forth from the teletype and "facsimile."

If an observer collects some weather data anywhere in the U.S., from Alaska and Newfoundland to Mexico and California, in just under two hours, it will be available to meteorologists at FSU through an intricate nationwide communication network.

"Hourly surface observations," Upper air data, Radar information, special satellite bulletins, all come in one endless stream, ready for interpretation by the advanced students and experienced staff. Thus the aspiring "meteorologist" will be able to work with first hand data and current situations -- a unique facility.



But what the visitor misses completely is the Hydrodynamics laboratory hidden in the basement where a team of scientists under the supervision of Dr. Seymour L. Hess, are straining their grey cells to study laboratory models of atmospheric phenomena.

With the "Rotating Apparatus," a massive 500 pound piece of equipment, shortly to be completed, they expect to simulate the mechanism of the controversial "general circulation" of not only the atmosphere of the planet earth, but that of Jupiter and possibly some of Earth's neighbors as well.

Successfully test-completed is a laboratory model which will explain the formation of convective types of cumulus clouds.

In combination with the "Rotating Apparatus" this may go a long way (the scientists hope) in understanding some of the complicated questions concerning hurricanes and similar phenomena of which so little is known.

Measurement of the moisture content of the atmosphere of Mars is one other problem that is being tackled by the research team at present. The "Frost-point Hygrometer" being built is especially designed for the extremely cool and dry atmosphere of planet Mars. When dropped into this atmosphere and measurements are taken, the hygrometer may help in answering some of the questions regarding the vertical structure of the atmosphere of earth's nearest neighbor.

WEATHER BALLOON is almost ready to be released from the ratory atop the Math-Meteorology Bldg. Special transmitters will ay atmospheric conditions to receivers in the lab.

Finally let us have a look at the Hungarian birth rate which is the measure of the nation's faith in the future: (figures represent live births per 1,000 persons): 1949 (the year of Communist takeover)-- 20.6; 1960 -- 14.7; 1961 -- 14.0; 1962 -- 12.9; 1963 (January) -- 12.1. This rate is among the lowest recorded on the globe.

Finally to eliminate Hungary as a nation altogether, the free abortion was introduced; since the revolution the officially registered abortions are above 700,000 for a country whose population is under 10 million.

How could it be that Mr. Riggins is so fervently denouncing the bad things in this country and at the same time shows greater understanding, patience, cooperation to the murders of the Hungarian people than to most of the decent Hungarian communists themselves?

Language Lab Is Canaveral Styled

IT'S NOT A LETTER HOME, EITHER,
...but a list of vocabulary words being copied as this student listens to a tape of advanced French conversation.

Visitors or students unfamiliar with the varied activities now in progress on campus might form the impression upon visiting one of the French Institute classes in session at the new language laboratory, that the students were in training for some Cape Canaveral operation.

Modern equipment installed in each of the separate booths enables a monitor to check the progress of any individuals privately, and without moving from her position at the instructor-monitor's desk.

For the Institute, tapes of French conversation are being used to improve pronounciation and diction, but tapes containing music, drama or aspects of a country's civilization may be used to give modern language students a broader knowledge of the country being studied.

The new language lab is located at the west end of a long corridor bordered by newly constructed classrooms and offices on the second floor of the A Bldg.

Although the lab is being used by the French Institute during Trimester III, it will be open for use by the Modern Language Dept. in the fall.

COMPARING NOTES CAN BE HELPFUL

Music Camp Concludes Stay

Some 350 high school students from across the state will finish their final week at FSU's 22nd annual Music Camp with a flurry of concerts and musical programs.

Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, "H.M.S. Pinafore" will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight in Opperman Music Hall. Directed by Betty Jane Grimm, director of the FSU Women's Glee Club, the opera will be narrated by Herman Gunter III, of Tallahassee. A takeoff on English officialdom, the opera has such songs as the "Admiral's Song," "The Gallant Captain of the Pinafore," "For He Is an Englishman," and "The Merry Maiden and the Tar."

Tomorrow night, the choral division of the music camp will present a concert at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. Numbers by the girls oratorio choir, a boys' chorus, a girls' chorus, and a mixed chorus will be featured.

Included on the program will be several spirituals, a folk song, Cherubini's "Venu Jesu," "Fragments from the Mass" by Emma Lou Diemer, and "Rejoice, Beloved Christians" by Dietrich Buxtehude. Two violinists, a cellist, and an organist will assist the Oratorio Choir with the Buxtehude number.

The grand finale of the week will be the Gala Concert Friday night, July 26, in which all the choral organizations, orchestra and the Garnet and Gold Bands will perform. The program will be at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

All the events are open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Considering the aforementioned observations, it is interesting to note the socialists parading around under the banner of civil rights. Civil rights concerns all men who are interested in all aspects of the human being, not just the economic aspect. The connection between socialism and civil rights is vague at its best.

Tankersley Becomes Professor For Army

Lt. Col. Milton J. Tankersley, who relinquished the duties of Post S3 (Plans and Training) Officer on June 1 to become Deputy Post Commander at Fort Monroe, has been named Professor of Military Science at FSU.

Co. Tankersley was commissioned in the ROTC in October 1940 after receiving the BS degree in Agriculture at the University of Georgia in Athens. He was employed as a Vocational Education teacher in the state of Georgia at the time of his call to active Army duty in January 1942.

His more than 21 years of active service since have taken the Fort Monroe officer overseas five times. He served as Headquarters Company Commander and later as Headquarters Commandant of the 40th Infantry Division during a tour of duty with that outfit in the Pacific Theater from August 1945 to March 1946.

In additional foreign duty assignments, Col. Tankersley was Provost Marshal on Okinawa from October 1946 to March 1949; served successively as Plans and Training Chief and Provost Marshal of the Sendai (Japan) Regional Command from October 1950 to July 1953; and held the posts of S1 (Personnel and Administration) Officer and Executive Officer of the Orleans Area Command, France, from August 1956 to July 1959.

He also served as Advisor to the Imperial Iranian Army during a duty tour from January to December 1961.

LT. COL. MILTON J. TANKERSLEY

Other Army posts held by the colonel have been those of National Guard Advisor to the 31st Division Birmingham, Ala. in 1949-50; Chief of Personnel Services and Plans Division for Headquarters Third US Army, Fort McPherson, Ga., in 1953-56; and Commander of the 19th Training Battalion.

Frustration Formed O'Neill

Gells' Biography Is Probably The Best

"Arthur and Barbara Gell's work will probably be 'the' biography of Eugene O'Neill," said Dr. J. Russell Reaver during the book review this week. (Mr. Gell is a former drama reporter for the New York Times.)

Reaver feels the Gells are quite skillful in showing ways in which various settings and circumstances in O'Neill's life are reflected in his writing. "O'Neill was a man of conflicts and paradoxes," commented Dr. Reaver. Most of his longings and frustrations were due to an insecure and unhappy childhood.

Born into a theatrical family, O'Neill spent most of his youth viewing life from the wings of a theatre. His father, an actor, was unusually selfish and domineering; as contrasted with his delicate and overprotective mother. The family was torn by accusation and frustrations.

O'Neill moved from one emotional extreme to another in his personal life. Catholic boarding school only destroyed his faith; a year at Princeton was wasted. He sought excitement in such adventures as prospecting for gold, marrying a young Socialite and serving as a deck-hand on freighters.

He later rejected his wife and a son he had never seen.

O'Neill, at his lowest depths, became a beachcomber. During this period he developed strange sympathy toward social outcasts and vagrants. Many of the sulkiest characters in his earliest plays are drawn from these attachments.

Reaver feels that O'Neill's physical breakdown was the turning point of his life. Due to his strenuous youth, he contracted TB. This close scrape with death and the final rejection of his father caused O'Neill to loose his identity with society and to adopt a hermit attitude. It was at this point that he decided that he could only realize himself through his plays.

"Hobnobbing with the New York Bohemian circle developed O'Neill intellectually and sensually," stated Reaver. In 1920 "Beyond the Horizon" won the Pulitzer Prize. From this period he is known as the foremost native playwright. O'Neill does not attempt to communicate to humanity or gain wealth; he merely expresses his inner life.

Reaver concluded his review by stating that O'Neill was not interested in searching out relations between man and man, but between man and God.

The Challenge Of Art Is The Linking Of Men

SUSIE McFARLANE

"Teaching the arts must begin with youth, therefore, it is necessary to initiate an effective arts education program early," stated Dr. June McFee, an arts education authority from Sanford University, who spoke to a large group of art teachers and interested students from Tallahassee recently.

She discussed a new dimension in art -- one in which art experience can mean a great deal to every person through self-expression, and emphasized the importance of arts as a foundation of communication.

Dr. McFee declared that youth must not only learn language early, but that youth must also learn the language of the arts.

"Students soon realize as they become more advanced that communication is the bond which links man to society and society to other societies," she explained.

"All communication depends on information and experience, and so the challenge is to increase awareness in the students," Dr. McFee said. "By exposing students to many art problems and by stimulating solutions, aesthetic frames of references can be established for future aesthetic judgements."

The speaker pointed out that self expression is a result of effective teacher-student interaction and necessary growth as an individual in appreciation of the various art forms.

Dr. McFee also discussed the misuse of the arts. She described mass media as a "one way street" which manipulated man.

"Man has been playing a passive role because few have spoken against the ways art has been used for purposes other than education and pleasure," she argued. "Discrimination is needed at the mass media level expecially, because the arts are being used in this area for subliminal purposes and are creating habitual emotional responses which many people do not understand."

Students who are introduced to the more complex forms of art become more discriminating and habitual responses can be checked and evaluated . Education in the misuse of the arts has to begin in the classroom under a teacher who stresses awareness.

The professor emphasized that communication of the arts and in applying arts in communications, but students must be cooperative and eager to learn under their guidance. By teaching various aesthetic values, each art experience can be fully evaluated.

Dr. McFee concluded her talk with a challenge for each teacher to do his best towards furthering the arts as communication stepping-stones.

Thomas Riggins

Speaking Of Wooden Nickels. . .

Mr. Turner's statements concerning socialism (Flambeau, July 23, 1963) need clarification. While it is manifestly true that socialism identified itself with the working class, inter alia, the purpose is not to gain votes. The working classes are seen as the agents of the socialist revolution (social or otherwise) and have been consistently represented by socialists even in areas of disenfranchisement.

As opposed to the meretricious charms of conservatism, socialism stands out in favor of the rights of the individual and is not solely an economic philosophy. While society may be viewed as one of classes, a view that Marx inter alios picked up from "conservative" classical economics — a fact alluded to in the Federalist papers as well— the individual and his liberation from alien forces which seek to oppress and stifle his development is at the heart of the socialist ideal.

Conservatives may say, along with Adam Smith, that "Every individual is continually exerting himself to find out the most advantageous employment for whatever capital he can command. It is his own advantage, and not that of society, which he has in view." Any good that comes to society is incidental. Socialism, on the contrary, looks to good of all men and seeks to construct a democratic society in which no one need live in poverty and want.

Since Socialism speaks to every man and demands his individual assent in helping to bring about the total rearrangement of a pecuniary society it must make strong appeals on other than economic grounds. Thus socialism, whatever else it might do, does not "ignore the spiritual and moralistic facet of man's nature."

Since the economic side of man is only one of the many sides that socialism is committed to the Civil Rights struggle. Man could reach his fullest development only if he is unhindered by undemocratic and prejudicial restrictions to the exercise of his freedoms. Since, to the socialists at least, the fullest development of all, Civil Rights become one of the most important movements for socialists to align themselves with.

When civil authority seeks to deny to persons their legal and "moral" rights, whether in China, Russia, Spain or the Southland, it must be defied and resisted. This is just one of the many battles that must be won before mankind will have the right to inscribe upon the banners of humanity, "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need."

Marxists See US Victory

There are forces around us who are determined to see our flag dragged through the mud and walked on by hobnailed boots. They want to see the Red flag flown in the U.S. and will not stop until total victory or their total annihilation has come about. How far have these forces of evil come towards victory over our country?

More than a century ago Karl Marx in his Communist Manifesto laid down the program by which a country may be converted to Communism.

"1) Abolition of property in land and application of all rents of land to public purposes; 2) A heavy progressive or graduated income tax; 3) Abolition of all rights of inheritance; 4) Confiscation of the property of all emigrants and rebels;5) Centralization of credit in the hands of the state by means of a national bank with state capital and an exclusive monopoly.

"6) Centralization of the means of communication and transportation in the hands of the state; 7) Extension of factories and the instruments of production owned by the state; the bringing into cultivation of waste lands, and the improvement of the soil generally in accordance with a common plan; 8) Equal liability of all labor. Establishment of industrial armies, especially for agriculture; 9) Combination of agriculture with manufacturing industries; gradual abolition of the distinction between town and country by a more equitable distribution of the population over the country; 10) Free education for all children in the public schools. Abolition of the children's factory labor in its present form. Combination of education with industrial production."

There you have the measures that constitute the grand strategy of communism. It is important to note that Karl Marx did not imply that these measures would be associated with armed revolt. His conception was that the revolution would come through processes in which by degrees the methods of production would be centralized in the hands of the central government.

If you think over those 10 proposals of Karl Marx, you will be able to find your own answer to the question as to what extent they have been winning victories in the United States in the last 30 years or so.

Equality Also Fine Principle

A recent letter to the editor (by C. Tyler Burt; July 19 issue) makes a point on the subject of integration which is often overlooked.

As I interpret the writer, the point is that the "integrationists", in their driving search for equality among all American citizens, are prepared to cast their lot with the Federal government. And that since "Social legislation is establishing a bureaucracy (bad word) over these people and forcing further homogeneity," this indiscriminate granting of power to the Federal government must stop. (Else the formation of the "first American Empire" might result.) Therefore, the writer concludes, "The fighting of integration in order to oppose one step on this road to increased Federal power is a righteous and honorable stand."

If I might be so presumptious as to assume that the writer considers himself "conservative" on matters of U.S. politics, what ever happened to that "fine old principle upon which our nation was founded?" Namely, that all men are created equal.

Apparently the "integrationists" who find in the Federal government the power to grant all citizens the rights to which they are Constitutionally entitled should be damned because they are operating on the principle that "the end justifies the means." This seems to be the indictment of all integrationists as stated by a great many political conservatives.

On the other hand, look at what some of these conservatives are saying. It is perfectly acceptable to withdraw and keep withdrawn the constitutional guarantee of equality from a portion of the citizenry. If we do not adhere to this practice, they say, we are in danger of losing some of our fundamental rights to that indescribable monster: Big Government.

One fundamental right that conservatives fear we will lose is NOT the right to grant human rights to the deprived elements of the populace; it is the right NOT to grant these rights.

This fact serves to point out that there is some truth in the assertion made by Mr. Burt that "human beings have not satisfactorily demonstrated ever that they will not misuse power." But it also points out that "highly centralized governments" are not the only ones which can be guilty of abusing power. It is not true that human beings will abuse their power as a part of a central government and not do so as individuals or as a part of a state government.

The government of the U.S., essentially "decentralized" on the determination of racial policy, has not succeeded in making good the promise of America to a significant portion of its people up to this time. Therefore I feel that integrationists are justified in seeking to employ the legal power of Federal legislation as a means of seeking the rights and privileges they have been so long without.

New Bank Site Protested

To the Editor:

The recent move to make the Women Day Student Lounge into an office for the student bank has brought on many problems of great proportion, which I feel can be quite easily avoided by the requisitioning of another area for this resident student facility.

Moving this concern into the most congested area of the campus can only add inconveniences to the students using this area as a central station for their campus activity. The day women's lounge will be moved into the men's present lounge and extended to take care of the women; the men, I suppose will do without their facility, since no plans have been made to replace it.

The removal of chairs and dish racks in the hallway usually holding the perpetual overflow of the Soda Shoppe, have been moved and are further adding to the confusion and congestion of the area. The Soda Shoppe has long been too small for the 1200 people it serves every day, with its seating capacity of 58, and has only managed to do this momentous business with the extra seating provided in the hallway. This removal of chairs and space will bring total disorder to the long established and necessary eating facility.

While the student bank is a must for many students, its location can certainly be bettered by many other units of space available — say the Trophy Room at the Student Center. If, however, this is now an impossibility, I suppose the best way to save the Soda Shoppe and day students, extended long-range discomfort would be to turn the present reading lounge into an area for eating (which is now prohibited). The added number of students milling around in the waiting lines for the bank and the Soda Shoppe when this Fall arrives will bring on unheard-of congestion and major inconvenience to everybody involved, not just day students.

I hope that those involved in this change will reconsider the effect on the people using the facilities in this coming year, and not just long-range desired ends which will be realized when the new Student Union is finished. The present plan will require day students to give up more than they could possibly attain in the long run anyway.

One last thing: the students were not properly informed of the proceedings until they had already begun -- what wrong with SG's department of communication?

Saturday Morning Classes: Saturday, Aug. 10, 3:00-5:00 p.m.

Tuesday Evening Classes: Saturday, Aug. 10, 3:00-5:00 p.m.

Evening Classes: 8:00-10:00 p.m.

The Volkswagen is the big one.

We know our wagon is five feet shorter than the other model.

But we still say it's bigger because it holds more. 170 cubic feet more.

Regular wagons vary from 97 to 911.

So instead of saying how we got the extra room, you have to appreciate the shape of the Volkswagen station wagon.

It's built like a big box—taller than it is wide.

A good size kid can walk down the aisle standing up.

There is virtually no wasted space on the VW. Even the engine is tucked away in the rear, over the drive wheels.

You can carry 8 big adults with luggage.

Or 1632 lbs. of assorted children.

And if you slide the sunroof back you can lug home a big day at the auction.

Big as our wagon is, it's only 9 inches longer than the Volkswagen Sedan.

So if you're ever in a tight jam, it can seem pretty small.

Financial Aid Office Offers Scholarships, Loans, Work

By SHELIA APPLEBY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Students in need of financial aid may dream every night of going to the tracks and betting on a winner, but never realize that there are scholarships available for needy and deserving scholars, ranging from loans to gift funds to nationally sponsored scholarships ...if students only knew proper procedures for obtaining financial aid.

There are 3 aspects of financial aid -- loans, scholarships, and part-time employment. As scholarships need not be repaid, they are probably the most popular of the 3 and will be dealt with first. (It will be noted, however, that the financial aid office hopes that a student receiving scholarship funds may someday feel the moral obligation to reimburse the office so that another student may be helped.)

A 3.0 overall average is required even to be considered for a scholarship. Besides grades, scholarships depend on the student's need and the resources of the Financial Aid Office located in Longmire. A student must also be full-time, carrying a minimum of 12 hours, in order to qualify for aid.

Other limiting factors include the status of a student. Though freshmen are eligible and there are some funds available, preferably the student should establish himself academically here at college. Likewise, out-of-state students are rarely assisted through scholarships but may be considered for loans and part-time work.

To the remainder who have successfully passed these primary requirements and are still eligible:

If a student lives off campus, he should write for an application blank, otherwise, he may just make an appointment. Next his parents must fill out a Parents' Confidential Statement. The College Scholarship Service in Princeton, N.J. evaluates the statement and recommends to FSU the amount of money they feel is equitable.

As to the sources of the money -- it is donated by various agencies and individuals. But as Mrs. Blair of the Financial Aid Office warns: "We ask that students do not apply for aid from a specific fund because we can give the student so much better service by fitting him into the appropriate fund."

There is no deadline for scholarship filing, but those filed by March 1 will be considered first. The aid office endeavors to let the student know by the middle of the summer whether or not he can expect a scholarship.

Those students who receive scholarships are interviewed the first of the year, usually January, to determine if they will need a renewal.

A second type of financial aid is loans. A student must have at least a 2.5 average. There are 2 types of loans -- those which must be repaid within 12 months and the NDEA (National Defense Education Act) which must be repaid 10 years after graduation and includes a small interest rate.

However, students in the areas of biological and physical science, modern language and education are given priority under NDEA loans.

All interested graduate students should apply for loans or part-time employment as they are ineligible for scholarships.

Job opening for part-time employment can be obtained through the aid office but the student can and should take the initiative in finding work. However, the average number of working hours per week is 15 and a student should not work unless he has a "C".

Though the campus has many job opportunities, downtown merchants at times phone the aid office to inform them of an opening. Students need to be reminded of the responsibility a job entails -- so as not to quit and leave the merchant stranded when he has earned enough to buy that tennis racket and pay next month's food bill.

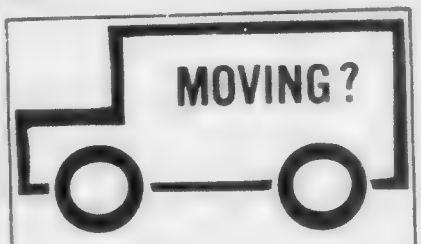
New Directory Sees September Delivery

New FSU student directories will soon be on the press. FSU's advertising fraternity, Alpha Delta Sigma, and the Plains Publications Company are now going over the final steps before printing the directories.



Chuch Wilson, acting secretary for Alpha Delta Sigma, said the directories should be available to the students and faculty early in September.

The directory will provide a complete listing of faculty and students at FSU. The new directories will be similar to ones in the past, with addresses and telephone numbers of students and faculty listed along with the student's division and standing.

New Par 36 Golf Course To Bring FSU Up To Par

By DICK SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University will join over 200 other colleges and universities in the U.S. which have their own golf courses on Aug. 2 with the opening of the FSU Golf Course, located on Lake Bradford Road, roughly 3 miles from campus.

The regulation course, which will have 9 holes (two par 5 holes, two par 3 holes, and five par 4 holes) was designed by R. Albert Anderson, who is rated among the top ten golf course designers by the National Golf Foundation.

Dr. Don Veller, Chairman of the University Golf Committee, said that the addition of the golf course will "make FSU more attractive to students and faculty alike, as well as serving as a needed recreational outlet."

Dr. Veller explained that in the past three years golf has moved up in popularity from tenth to sixth place as a sport among high-schoolers, being exceeded by football, baseball, basketball, track, and wrestling. "Golf is becoming a part of our culture as firmly as baseball is," Dr. Veller stated.

The FSU golf course will be open to students, faculty, staff, and their out-of-town visitors (such as parents, etc.). It is not open to the general public.

The old golf course near Doak Campell Stadium will continue to be open, but will be used more for golf teaching classes than recreation. It will be open to students when there are no classes.

The new course will be open at 8 a.m., seven days a week, and will close at dusk.

Parking facilities are available, and a shuttle-bus can take students who don't have transportation of their own.

One of the Dale Mabry houses has been set up as a "clubhouse." it will have such facilities as restrooms, refreshments, and skeleton golf sets for rent, and will sell such items as golf balls and tees. There will also be golf carts (non-electric) for rent.

Charges for the use of the course are as follows:

For faculty and staff: yearly family membership, $75; yearly individual membership, $50; one trimester family membeship, $30; one trimester individual membership, $25; greens fees Monday-Friday, $1.25; Saturday, Sunday, and holidays, $1.75.

For students: yearly family membership, $50; yearly individual membership, $35; one trimester family membership, $20; one trimester individual membership, $15; greens fees Monday-Friday, 75¢; Saturday, Sunday, and holidays, $1.25.

Dr. Veller expressed the hope that the new golf course will be financially self-sustaining. The primary objective is to offer greater recreational facilities to FSU students and faculty.

More information on the new golf course may be obtained by calling the Physical Education Dept.

What Next In Traffic Problems?

By SUSIE McFARLAND

The campus traffic situation has come a long way from Model A's and FSCW.

Automobiles once considered conveniences on campus are now often called inconveniences when there isn't a parking space in sight. The campus is overflowing with autos - and with complaints. As the number of automobiles increased on campus campus traffic regulations became essential.

According to Lt. James Lewis of the Security Division, the first regulation was established when the number of autos grew faster percentage wise than the university population. This regulation requires car registration. Two main reasons are given for registering automobiles: (1) to assist the police in determing ownership, and (2) to help enforce parking area privileges.

As the number of automobiles multiplied, the university officials had to allocate specific parking areas for faculty and staff. Each year parking spaces dwindled to the point where restrictions had to be made as to who could own and who could drive a car on campus.

Restrictions which became effective in the fall of 1959 prohibited freshmen from bringing automobiles to school and the undergraduates could drive or park their autos on campus between certain hours of the day. In 1960 the sophomores received the same restrictions as freshmen, while juniors and seniors retained driving and parking privileges, as well as ownership.

Juniors and seniors maintained all privileges until 1961 when only seniors had permission to drive and park on campus.

Seniors continued in 1962 as the only class permitted to drive and park on campus.

Seniors continued in 1962 as the only calss permitted to drive and park on campus between 7:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. However, this progressive elimination of undergraduates driving automobiles has not solved the traffic problem

Beginning in the fall 1963, no undergraduates will be permitted to drive or park on campus between 7:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. If the 1963-64 traffic situation does not improve considerably, then graduate student privileges may be removed. This is possible since the graduate school has the fastest growing population.

Many students have asked who is responsible for making and enforcing the traffic rules. Florida Statutes and city ordinances form the framework of all campus traffic regulations.

A traffic committee consisting of faculty, student and staff members meet regularly to discuss traffic situations.

Trimester System Has Good Points-Pomrenke

By JOHN A. WALKER

Professor Norman E. Pomrenke of the Criminology and Corrections Dept., School of Social Welfare, notes that the greatest advantage of the trimester system is that it enables a student to graduate from the university in three years.

He believes that this one factor outweighs many of the disadvantages, though he did express a feeling that something is missing in the trimester system: mainly "time." For example, one of Dr. Pomrenke's courses, "Police Organization and Administration," (difficult to fit into the old semester system) is almost impossible to present in one trimester. Because of the time limitation, students get only the meat of the course with some quality sacrificed.

Although Professor Pomrenke says that, in some ways, "this (the trimester system) may weaken the educational structure at the present time," he is not opposed to the plan. "In time such difficulties can be worked out." Acceleration must come from the faculty he asserted.

"Even though students had more time under the semester system, it was not utilized for academic purposes." Dr. Pomrenke also notes that the trimester system keeps the professors very busy, and counseling time for students becomes extremely critical.

Slack Season Is Publicity Time

By IVAN MONROE

A slack season in FSU sports is one of the busiest times for the University's Sports Publicity Office, as the "mouth-men" responsible for spreading the word in the university sports world prepare for the oncoming season: Football.

According to Director of Sports Publicity, Bill Bunker, there are no inter-collegiate sports active during July and August, although individual efforts such as the summer basketball league are made through the Office of Student Activities for interested students.

An extensive amount of pre-season work is now being done by the Sports Publicity Dept. before FSU's opening game of the season against the Miami Hurricanes, Sept. 20.

Bunker reports that his office is responsible for the "FSU Football Handbook" containing helpful statistics used by sports writers, fans and an occasional coach from some opponent's team.

A similar pamphlet is sent to sports writers after Spring Training and before the final handbook has gone to press. These pamphlets and handbooks aid newsmen in keeping up with squad members and positions played.

Schedules of the 1963 season have already been distributed throughout the state, and special guest columns are written by publicity agents under Bunker for release to newspapers across the nation.

DR. MALCOLM B. PARSONS WILL HEAD THE GOVERNMENT DEPT.

Parsons Appointed Government Head

The appointment of Dr. Malcolm B. Parsons, a member of FSU's faculty since 1951, as chairman of the Government Dept., was announced today by Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Parsons succeds Dr. Marian Irish as chairman of the department, one of the largest departments in the university. Dr. Irish relinquished her administrative duties during the summer in order to devote full time to teaching and research. She headed the department for 30 years.

Parsons, who is 43, is a specialist in American government, public administration and public law. He is the author of the book "The Use of The Licensing Power by The City of Chicago" (1952) and is co-author of "Governmental Services in The Philippines" (1956). Some 15 of his professional articles have appeared in a dozen journals dealing with history, law and political science.

The publication on the Philippines was the outgrowth of a leave of absence for 15 months in 1955 and 1956 during which he served as a technical assistant in public administration at Manila. His service there was under a University of Michigan contract with the State Department to establish an Institute of Public Administration at the University of the Philippines.

Parsons received his A.B. degree from the University of Arizona in 1946, where he received the Senior Scholarship Award for that year and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi and Pi Sigma Alpha, all honor societies. His M.A. degree was received from Arizona in 1947 and his Ph. D. degree from the University of Illinois in 1950.

He served as an assistant professor in government at the University of Oklahoma before he came to FSU 12 years ago. During the summer he has been teaching as a visiting professor at Jacksonville University.

Treigle To Sing Handel In Artist Series Concert

New York City Opera bass-baritone Norman Treigle will appear as the final Artist Series concert for the Summer Aug. 5 at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

FSU's Carlisle Floyd will be pianist for Treigle, who has performed in several of Floyd's operas in New York. Tickets at $2 each will go on sale Thursday.

Treigle will open the program with three Handel selections, "Thanks Be To Thee," "Honor and Arms" (from "Samson") and "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves;" followed by "Quelle Souf-france" by Le Normand and "Don Quinchotte a Dulcinee" by Ravel.

One of the selections on the second part of the program will be an aria from Carlisle Floyd's recent opera "The Passion of Jonathan Wade." The aria is one he sang in the role of Judge Townsend in the premiere of Floyd's opera at New York City Opera.

Included on the program will be "Songs of Travel" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams; selections from "Pilgrimage" by Carlisle Floyd; Non piu andrai from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and Mephistopheles: Serenade (Faust) and Iago's Credo (Otello) by Verdi.

The New York Journal American has said of Treigle as Mephisto in "Faust": "To give the devil his due, I should record that Treigle gave one of the most spontaneous portrayals of his satanic majesty to be witnessed since Pinza capered at the Met. His singing was a pleasure."

In a recent interview by Alan Rich of the New York Times, Treigle said that his favorite role was that of a villain, "because of the dramatic possibilities."

"Contemporary operas appeal to me," he said in the interview, "because of the chance to create a role from the ground up, without having to buck tradition."

When asked about his American training, he said, "I was lucky. Being in New Orleans, a city with strong operatic traditions, I got launched right there. If I'd been somewhere else, I'd probably have gone abroad. But I got the training I needed at home. My only European stint has been with the company 'Susannah' that went to the 1958 Brussels World's Fair."

Dormitory Rates Hiked

By DICK SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

om rent for FSU dorm residents ll be increased this fall, Miss ith McCollum, director of Hous- , has announced.

e rates per trimester will go up for Kellum, Smith, Dorman, thon, Florida, and Landis; those ilchrist, Jennie Murphree, Reyis, Broward, Bryan, DeGraff and nolia will go up to $10.

he increase came about through recommendation of the State Bud- Commission shifting all stu- housing expenses to the income n student rentals.

of Students, Dr. R.R. Ogles- said, "There is no way around the students of FSU are going have to bear a cost which was rily born by the state."

e precipatating factor in the rease is the Dorm Counselors' salaries, which come collectively to about $90,000 per annum. Under the new budget the counselors are paid through the housing funds, whereas until now they had been considered teachers and had been paid by the state as such.

"It is my feeling," Dean Oglesby commented, "that the Legislature failed to recognize the importance of the instruction offered by the dorm counselors. The legislators apparently felt that teaching only takes place in the classroom."

Another factor causing the increase was the size of the Building Reserve Fund. The desired amount for reasonable financial stability for the future erection of dorms is $600,000 to $800,000. FSU's reserves were somewhere around $200,000 - a sum considered far too low for reliable planning.

Other factors responsible for the increase are, the general rise in prices, maintenance costs, and replacement expenses.

The difference in the increase between dorms is due to their relative ages. The older dorms were increased less than the newer ones. With the completion of the new air-conditined dorm (whose tentative rate per trimester will be $140) the spread will be even more noticable.

Dean Oglesby also explained that the increase does not put FSU in the upper rental bracket when compared with other state schools.

In a survey done by the University of Massachusetts in 1962 on room rents for various state and private institutions, the mode or bracket in which most state schools fell was between $251-300 per academic year. The lowest bracket was $100-$150 per year, while the highest was $401-450.

The University of Florida charges $120 per trimester for its old dorms and $125 for its new ones. Included in this cost is an $8 charge for linens per trimester.

In speaking of the increase Dean Oglesby said, "Every effort was made to have the budget director's recommendation reversed," meaning that the administration tried to keep the dorm counselors' salaries on the teacher's budget rather than transferring them to the housing budget.

CBS Director Antonini Tutors 75 Students

Seventy-five high school students began a week's intensive musical training under the direction of Columbia Broadcasting System musical director Alfredo Antonini at FSU yesterday.

A formal concert on Friday will climax the week of rehersals under the baton of the conductor who was recently honored by the National Association for American Composers and Conductors for his "distinguished service to American music."

The young musicians are a select group. All have been chosen by conductors of youth orchestras and of community orchestras as candidates for the workshop. Final selection was made by the workshop staff in order to obtain a balanced instrumentation.

The purpose of the workshop, according to coordinator Jack Swartz, is to give promising high school musicians a chance to further develop their talent. The workshop is conducted by the FSU School of Music through the Florida Institute for Continuing University Studies.

Antonini, during more than 20 years with CBS, has been associated with numerous outstanding programs on the CBS Television Network and CBS Radio Network and has conducted many of the nation's leading symphony orchestras.

No Commencement!

The FSU graduates of August 1963 have been unmercifully shunted to an inglorious background in all the tumult over the trimester system.

After being a vital part of campus life for four years these 850 graduating seniors will leave in two weeks without any ceremonious recognition of their university stay. No notice will be taken of their academic or other accomplishments in this group. More important to most of these students, their parents will not have an opportunity to attend with pride any sort of commencement exercise rewarding and culminating a tremendous financial and emotional investment on their part.

To allow this slight to occur is to permit university experience to degenerate to a mechanical, meaningless process, to which no sentimental attachment is felt, to which no loyalty can be expected.

In the mail, along with bills and circulars, they will receive their diplomas, for which they have worked exhaustively for several long, hard years.. just another piece of paper.

They have an option, of course, of returning next April to participate in the regular commencement exercises, but by then the glory of the moment and the event will be long passed. To suggest that they return, several hundred miles, perhaps, and with the accompanying expenses and loss of work is unreasonable, to say the least.

The results of a questionnaire sent to parents of December graduates were enlightening. By an overwhelming number, the parents wanted to see their sons and daughters receive their diplomas in a ceremony, and they did not think it reasonable that December and August graduates should have to return for an April commencement; they certainly would attend a ceremony in late December.

On the question of receiving the diploma by mail, many were satisfied (but not overjoyed, by any means) with this, but the majority who were dissatisfied strongly resented not receiving it in a ceremony.

A study is being made of the ways other universities have handled the problem of multiple commencements, and another questionnaire will be mailed in August to parents of 1800 graduating seniors. A token ceremony already has been scheduled for December.

One thing is obvious: whatever decision is made about commencements in the future, it will be too late to do anything about students graduating in August.

The main obstacle to having a commencement exercise each trimester (as there should be if the university is to be on year-round operation) is not financial, as one might suppose, although this too is a consideration. Rather the obstacle to be surmounted is the objection of the faculty, that to give seniors final tests and turn in their grades in advance is an added burden and an imposition on the faculty which cannot be borne. If the decision about multiple commencements vs one commencement per year is thrown into Faculty Senate to decide, there can be little doubt which way the decision will be made.

The wishes to the students and their parents in this respect cannot be disregarded. Students who are willing to submit themselves to the added pressures of year-round attendance, and who complete their university education in December or in August, should not be penalized by oblivion.

They have a right to be recognized as they graduate, and we strongly believe the university should comply with this right.

Forum Policy Stifles Free Inquiry

Let's examine the logic of the Public Forum Committee. Dr. Werner A. Baum says the committee "will strengthen and encourage an expression of differing points of view at FSU." Dr. R. R. Oglesby feels that it is "a positive attempt to widen the latitude of opinion available to students through FSU facilities."

On the contrary, I feel that this committee is a direct affront on the institution of Academic Freedom, Administrative Philistinism and logical perversions notwithstanding.

While what the Administration says the committee will do sounds very nice, their actions seem out of harmony with their verbal expressions.

The committee's purpose is to "develop a spirit of free inquiry" --or so its proponents claim. This is a noble purpose indeed. But what does "free inquiry" mean? It means "free inquiry must be consistent with the preservation of our democratic society." While I have no wish to belittle democracy, it is painfully obvious that this definition is not free inquiry at all-- rather a jejune attempt to apologize for the status quo.

The freedom to inquire into social laws and social reality, to mean anything, must be the freedom to hear and to ponder on all sides of a question -- even the anti-democratic side. In the world struggle with communism it is a costly price to have a university perhaps bar speakers because they are "undemocratic." Administrative satire reaches its perigee when it attempts to dictate "democracy."

Dr. Baum says "FSU is a state institution... we cannot ... approve speakers who would advocate the violent overthrow of the very government from which we receive financial support." I ask "why not?" Is FSU only a "state institution" or is it also a university? If we agree with Dr. Baum on this issue [illegible] not say we have "free [illegible]," a let us not say, with [illegible] that the committee "is [illegible] to restrict the freedom of access students to diverse opinion."

If FSU is a "great" university any kind of universi[illegible] the Public Forum Committee is an insult to both students and faculty alike. For I fail to see how the committee, by even the [illegible] of the imagination, can "[illegible] exact opposite effect [illegible] ship."

Flambeau Forum

Asks Option On Laundry

To the Editor:

I suppose there comes a solemn moment in the life of every FSU student when he becomes obliged to pick up pen and write a letter to the Flambeau attesting to some grievance whether large or small.

After attending this hallowed institution for three years my pocketbook is becoming hollowed. True, the expense involved in higher education is in the long run worth while but when a student is taxed for seemingly ridiculous reasons, and when he must tighten his belt in return, then the time has come for an investigation.

Without further beating around the bush, I would like to pose a question concerning the majority of women students at FSU. Pray thee tell me, why must we pay $17 a trimester to the laundry so that they may entertain themselves mutilating sheets towels, etc.? After such an experience occurring rather early in my freshman year, I have refrained from "taking advantage of this wonderful opportunity" to let the FSU laundry keep me next to godliness with its cleanliness.

It does not take a math major to arrive at the sorry fact that under compulsion FSU coeds are forced to give away $136 to the laundry. That $136 would buy more than the bologna I'm forced to eat now because of having to play Santa Claus to the laundry.

No doubt there are some who swear by the laundry and then there are some who just plain swear. Why can't this "service" be put on an optional basis? Why can't the women be permitted to choose whether or not they want to use this "service" use it on a piece basis, or use it not at all?

For the students who are here on a scholarship and a prayer (mostly prayer) this undue expenditure is felt very deeply and it's an abuse that should not be permitted to continue.

In conclusion, all I want to add is, why do the women residents of FSU dormitories have to continue playing the big jolly man and chuckling a ho, ho, ho to the tune of $135, over a four-year period, while the FSU laundry sits back and roars a ha, ha, ha?

Finally, six additional hours of listening at FSU's post brings to a total of about 16 hours nightly the amount of recorded data on Jupiter.

Heard first in 1955, the Jupiter noises have yet to be fully explained, Barrow said. Several investigators have found one significant thing: the bursts follow unusual activity on the sun, such as flares, which in turn cause geomagnetic activity easily recorded on the earth. The Jupiter bursts have been found to lag anywhere from two to 10 days after the geomagnetic activity and Barrow's most recent observations showed a time lag of about five days on many of the bursts.

Since observations on solar activity will also be available for analysis, the mountains of material being obtained by the three tracking stations will be programmed on FSU's IBM 709 computer in an effort to tie down the time lag between solar activity and the noises from Jupiter. It is generally accepted, Barrow said, that the solar activity is related in some manner to Jupiter activity. The time lag may represent the period during which slow protons from a solar flare travel from the sun, past the earth and on to Jupiter. Geomagnetic activity indicates their presence near the Earth.

The three-way watch on Jupiter is important for the research project because it enables obervations to be made through much more than one complete rotation of Jupiter. Jupiter rotates in nine hours and 55 minutes and one station could cover only from five to eight hours of that time. The three stations spread over more than 100 degrees of longitude provide more continuous Jupiter listening than has ever been undertaken before.

Barrow, who is an Englishman, holds a three year grant of $75,000 from National Aeronautics and Space Administration for the current study. NASA provided him a supplemental grant of $20,700 to finance the installation at the Hyde radio observatory on the English coast.

Corner reflector antennas identical with those in use at FSU were installed at this observatory. Barrow was in England during May and June to supervise the installation of the electronic receiving equipment in an old building called a Martello tower. The tower was built at a time when the British were keeping a sharp lookout for the French fleet during Napoleon's time

After Barrow had completed plans with Hyde for installation of the listening post in England Professor Gledhill, who had been making some Jupiter studies on the same frequencies, corresponded with Barrow and joined the project.

All three stations are set to receive signals on a wave length of 18 to 22 megacycles. The observations will continue until Christmas and will be resumed next July.

The students assisting Barrow at FSU are Ed Seykora, Henry Meir, James Merritt, James Bentley, Charles Heisner, and Kenneth Peale.

Barrow has been studying the Jupiter noises since 1956. Since coming to FSU in 1960 he has taught astronomy and physics courses.

Yost Will Review "Franny And Zooey"

"Franny and Zooey" by J.D. Salinger will be the subject of the final book review of the summer season with Dr. George Yost Jr., professor of English, as reviewer, tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Longmire Student Lounge.

Yost will compare "Franny and Zooey", which deals with some of the problems of a troubled young college senior, with Salinger's earlier book "Catcher In The Rye."

Rovetta Changes View, Sees Value To Trimester

By CHARLES WINSTEAD

Dean Charles A. Rovetta, of the School of Business, originally opposed to the trimester system, finds considerable merit in the current plan.

"The trimester system will aid both the bright and average student," Dean Rovetta explained. "The bright student will be able to graduate sooner; study more material in less time than before. The average student can take lighter loads in Spring and Fall trimesters, continue in school in III-A and still graduate in four years. For the student who has to work, the trimester system offers him at least two extra months to earn money."

Dr. Rovetta believes that students will benefit more from the accelerated program than they realize. He said that students will learn to budget their time and weed out necessary activities. The students will take this training into later life, aiding them in selecting activities that will be most beneficial.

"Before complete utilization of facilities at FSU comes about, there are still a few problems to be worked our," the Dean continued, "Air conditioning in the living quarters, for example. This seems like a small problem, but many students will not attend summer trimester just for that reason. Obtaining adequate teachers is still another problem."

"Although the School of Business had twice as many students enrolled this summer as were anticipated, we were able to cope with the problem. What would happen, however, if three or four times that number enrolled?" he asked.

Dean Rovetta cautioned both students and faculty to remember that the trimester system is not the end to complete utilization of facilities at FSU, and to expect more problems and revisions in the future.

"Experience with the trimester system is inadequate at this time for drawing any defensible conclusions as to its impact on scholastic achievement," he asserted.

Jim Sims Named To Coaching Position

Jim Sims, a summer graduate from FSU, has been named to the staff at Shades Valley High School in Birmingham, Ala.

The 23-year-old Sims completed his third year of varsity play as a starter on Coach Bill Peterson's Seminole football team last fall.

A 1963 graduate with a bachelor of science degree, he will coach the line squads at the Birmingham school beginning this fall.

Tonight's Recital Is All-Gershwin

A repeat All-Gershwin recital will be presented tonight at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall, with Tommy Wright at the piano assisted by Charlotte Reinke, soprano; Herman Gunter, baritone; and Paul Svendsen, pianist.

The program will be a repeat performance of one presented earlier this month which played to a standing-room-only audience, and will include "Three Preludes for Piano" and "An American in Paris," solo by Wright; five selections from "Porgy and Bess" in which Wright will be joined by soloists Charlotte Reinke and Herman Gunter; "I Got Rhythm" variations and "Rhapsody in Blue" a two-piano number by Wright and Paul Svendsen.

State Board Of Health Has Work-Learn Plan

Students are working at their chosen professions in various parts of Florida this summer under auspices of the State Board of Health, engaged in a wide variety of public health jobs which range from studying mosquitoes to the problems of premature babies.

Dr. Robert V. Schultz, coordinator of training at the board, said the program "has proved highly effective and tremendously important to the student because it gives them much practical knowledge they would otherwise be unable to obtain."

A prime purpose of the program is to interest qualified students in choosing careers in some phase of the many public health activities in Florida.

Many of the students are working in laboratories in Jackson Tampa, West Palm Beach, Or Tallahassee and Pensacola. laboratories examine many ands of specimens a day -- for rabies, blood for polio cephalitis, food which may have sed food poisoning.

Others are working in the County Child Guidance and Correction Clinic; Mental Unit of the Alachua County Department; Premature Baby onstration Center and county department in Miami; environ health section in Winter Have health departments in Pinellas asota, Leon, Palm Beach, ough, Broward, Escambia, Gadsden counties.

The students come from or junior college and Dr. observed, "apply themselves lously and work hard."

The scholarship program was ted in 1958. Since then the numb students taking advantage of the gram has gradually increased year. Students are selected basis of merit, need and availa of scholarships. They are pa varying categories.

Atlanta Alumni Sponsor Outing

Bank To Open In Longmire, Saved By Student Government

The Student Depository is tentatively scheduled to open Tuesday in Room 2 of Longmire Bldg. with additional features planned to provide more conveniences for the student. . . and more service.

At one time the University Depository, more familiarly known as Student Bank was destined to be eliminated due to insufficient operating funds and a dire need of space in Westcott for expansion of administrative offices.

An informal survey conducted by student government leaders last April discovered that a majority of students favored keeping the Student Depository open for the students.

FSU and the University of Florida are among the few universities in the country which are forced to maintain a student depository, as the majority of colleges have bank branches to provide similar services.

University officials and student government reached a compromise enabling the relocation of the depository in Longmire where the Women Day Student's Lounge used to be, and having the remodeled operation financed by its student customers.

Geared to the fast-paced trimester system, the Student Depository plans to offer new services to students. A $1 service charge opens an account for a student in the new depository, and with the account the student becomes a customer---- not just another student number.

Non-depositors may take advantage of the depository for cashing checks as before, but a service fee of 5¢ will be charged for each check cashed. There will be no charge for students with accounts. A $1 fee will be charged for any returned checks.

All fees become effective in September, but is is hoped that the student customer finds the new professional operating procedure one which will create a friendlier and more efficient atmostphere.

Another aspect of service expansion is the special window which will be used exclusively to cash checks. Plans are in progress to provide a continuous display of student art around the room and to have music in the background as an additional feature.

The Student Depository will still be under the supervision of the University Comptroller, George Fortin, but it is to be operated as a student activity, not as an administrative function. Thus the students should have a more direct voice in the policies of the bank.

Eventually the depository will be run predominantly by student assistants with professional supervision. At present, two student-tellers are needed for the fall trimester. Anyone who plans to be on campus approximately one week before the residence halls open and is interested should contact the depository cashier, Mrs. Maurine Ervin.

Last Artist Series To Feature Treigle

The final Artist Series concert for Trimester III will feature New York City Opera bass-baritone Norman Treigle Monday at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

FSU's Carlisle Floyd will be pianist for Treigle, who has performed in several of Floyd's operas in New York. Tickets at $2 each will go on sale Thursday.

Treigle will open the program with three Handel selections, "Thanks Be To Thee," "Honor and Arms" (from "Samson") and "Hear Me, Ye Winds and Waves;" followed by "Quelle Souf-france" by Le Normand and "Don Quinchotte a Dulcinee" by Ravel.

One of the selections on the second part of the program will be an aria from Carlisle Floyd's recent opera "The Passion of Jonathan Wade." The aria is one he sang in the role of Judge Townsend in the premiere of Floyd's opera at New York City Opera.

Included on the program will be "Songs of Travel" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams; selections from "Pilgrimage" by Carlisle Floyd; Non piu andrai from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and Mephistopheles: Serenade (Faust) and Iago s Credo (Otello) by Verdi.

The New York Journal American has said of Treigle as Mephisto in "Faust": "To give the devil his due, I should record that Treigle gave one of the most spontaneous portrayals of his satanic majesty to be witnessed since Pinza capered at the Met. His singing was a pleasure."

In a recent interview by Alan Rich of the New York Times, Treigle said that his favorite role was that of a villain, "because of the dramatic possibilities."

"Contemporary operas appeal to me," he said in the interview, "because of the chance to create a role from the ground up, without having to buck tradition."

NORMAN TREIGLE, bass-baritone opera star, will perform Monday night at the final Artist Series of the summer. He is pictured here in a role from the opera "Carmen."

Yost Sees 'Catcher', 'Zooey' As Religious

by LINDA RAE SHEPLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

"One cannot fully analyze J.B. Salinger's 'Franny and Zooey' without reading his earlier work of 'Catcher in the Rye' " stated Dr. George Yost.

The final book review of the summer was marked by humor as Dr. Yost delved into the character of Holden Caulfield, chief character in "Catcher."

Yost feels that 17 year-old Holden has a great deal of insight into other people. "Old people like lined blankets --- Ugly girls always listen very carefully to their dates --- If one knows literature he can cover-up his stupidity," and similar quotes exhibit Holden's strong reactions to things in people that he dislikes.

Holden hates phonies. He dislikes the headmaster of the prep school he flunks out of because steaks appear in the dining hall the day before the parents come. Preachers are also phonies because they act affected and display "holy Joe" voices. Holden considers a friend phoney if he backs up when he talks with you.

"Salinger does not reveal Holden's innermost thoughts," remarked Yost. "Salinger is writing good literature here because he leaves a blank page for the reader."

Holden expreiences one state of depression after another as he tries to find somethng lasting from his environment. Yost feels that "Catcher in the Rye" and "Franny and Zooey" are both saying that there is something needed by the individual that environment cannot provide.

In Franny Yost sees a coed torn between what she is and what she should be socially. She comes to see Lane for the Yale football weekend. Lane and most of the other people in her environment appear to be phonies. It is at this point in both books that Salinger pulls his punches and supplies his endings. The phonies are found to be not quite as phoney as thought.

Franny and Holden are both left reaching for something beyond phoney; something permanent and lasting. Because of this Yost would classify these novels as religious.

Remove Penalty

Accustomed as FSU students have become in the past year to the packing of 16 weeks' work into 14 weeks, and 14 weeks' work into seven weeks, their endurance is being severely strained when they are expected to jam a final examination "week" into three days.

Three days was a reasonable time allotment for finals at the end of Trimester III-A. Most students had no more than three tests and many, who had mixed III-A courses with those lasting the entire trimester, had even less-- and the lucky ones who had none at all, or who finished early, had a refreshing vacation as a bonus.

This is not the case at the end of Trimester III-B, however. Students who attended the entire third trimester thinking it would be equal to the fall and spring trimesters now find that they are being penalized indirectly for enrolling this summer. With less time for preparation, and the added pressures of taking as many as six exams in a three-day period, students' grades may suffer.

There may be no way to affirm this supposition statistically, but countless individual students are sure to suspect that, with the extra two days, their grade averages would have been higher. And although two more days of vacation are appreciated, sufficient time should be allowed for the all-important final exams.

In arranging the academic calendar for the 1963-64 year, the same oversight was made. It is to be hoped that the calendar can be revised to make allowances for this type of miscalculation. Otherwise, it will be to the students' advantage to take only half-trimester courses--and in this event, the third trimester would falter.

The third trimester exam penalty must be lifted, if the trimester plan is to succeed.

No Flower Garden

We note with interest the planting of various kinds of plants in the circle around Westcott Fountain.

This attempt to beautify FSU's campus may be futile, for with the fall, the hallowed tradition of pool parties will resume, and the new plants are sure to be trampled. Replanting will be equally hopeless, for each new batch will meet the same fate at the trampling feet of boisterous college students.

If this should happen, we hope that those who planted the flowers will not be too disappointed, and blame the demise on deliberate intent to destroy. We have a beautiful campus; but we need to remember fond traditions, such as that of pool parties, as well.

SC Politics Concern

The Supreme Court is the most controversial and most powerful force that has ever existed insofar as the future of millions of born and unborn Americans are concerned. For many years now this august group has been subjected to some of the most vitrolic verbal attacks ever endured by any public office. Much of the critism may be justified, just as much may not. However, the fact that violent controversy surrounds such a powerful influence in our lives deserves some non-violent comment.

The heart of the controversy lies in the question as to what the Supreme Court can and cannot do. It seems that the function of the Court would be stated somewhere in the fundamental documents of our government. They are stated, but exactly what the words are interpreted to mean is moot.

In examining the past actions of the court many instances of illogical action become immediately apparent. To try and reconcile the past decisions of the Court to any pattern of logical meaning is futile. The Court can change its mind on just about anything

Whether these actions are acceptable depends entirely upon one's concept of the law and its application. The power of the Court is what the Court decides it is since it is their job to interpret the meaning of the Constitution wherein their own source of power is defined. Only Congress can check the Court's power by Constitutional amendment.

Recognizing the potential of such a small group to basically affect our future lives, the citizens of this country must realize the tremendous bond of good faith that has to exist between the American public and the Court. In view of this, it is only right that all the appointments, cases and other peripheral matters with which the Court is concerned should be handled in such a manner so as to keep the Court's attention focused on its one and only interest -- justice.

In the past three decades several attempts have been made by politicians notably F.D. Roosevelt's blatant attempt to pack the bench, to reduce the appointment of the justices to the level of a political plum. President Kennedy's appointment of Authur Goldberg is highly questionable.

The defamation of the Court's character can only result in harm to the US. It is the duty of every citizen to assure that the Supreme Court justices are appointed on the merits of their judicial qualifications, not their political affiliations or friendships. It is time the American public revolted and refused to let the Supreme Court become a mockery of jurisprudence.

Flambeau Forum

To the Editor:

As a newly arrived graduate student, I note a rather lively debate between Mr. Thomas Riggins and virtually everyone else on campus concerning the merits of socialism. It seems the battle so affects the Flambeau staff that the reporting of the debate overflows into other areas of the paper. Thus, in the July 26th issue, the article on Dr. Reaver's review of a recent O'Neill biography reports that O'Neill married a "young Socialite."

I had always thought that "socialite," meaning one who is socially prominent, was not capitalized. Even if the young lady were a socialist socialite, I believe the better if not prescribed practice would be to avoid capitalization. Perhaps Mr. Riggins wrote the review article, and the whole matter may therefore be understood as a form of "Freudain slip."

My main purpose is not to protect the political purity of O'Neill's young lady but rather to take exception to some of Mr. Riggins' remarks in his article, "Speaking of Wooden Nickels," on page 2 of the same issue. I would point to the grievous tortuosity of the fifth paragraph, which must be the result of error for which Mr. Riggins is not responsible; perhaps the proofreader is a capitalist. I would also point out that "civil right" is not capitalized.

The real irritant, however, is not these minor points but the sentence: "As opposed to the meretricious charms of conservatism, socialism stands out in favor of the rights of the individual and is not solely an economic philosophy." First, the use of "meretricious" suggests an unwholesome nasty - mindedness which is entirely unnecessary, adds nothing whatsoever of relevance, and is grossly insulting to an important body of political thought and thinkers. I realize this solecism did not orignate with Mr. Riggins, but he did use it. If the editor herself is not a young "Socialite," why not do some editing on these creeping Riggingisms in the future -- not to reshape political content, but to tidy the language a bit?

Secondly, the statement, "socialism stands out in favor of the rights of the individual," is one of the most outstanding oversimplifications in the entire history of political thinking. Both external and internal critics of socialism have for many years pondered the problem of how to protect individuality within the regimented and collectivized economic framework inherent in socialism. Many brilliant scholars will now rejoice and relax, since Mr. Riggins has solved the problem for them by determining that socialism is really more individualistic than conservatism -- and the conservatism of Adam Smith, at that. (By the way, why stick another pin in the corpse of poor old Adam Smith -- isn't that rather like jousting against windmills?)

Since we are somewhat of a captive audience, can page 2 on every third weekday or so perhaps contain something other than Mr. Riggins' polemics, other than the YPSL, or civil rights, or equality, or Marxism, that is. There are a few other topics we might discuss every once in a while, you know.

David F. Dickson

(Editor's note: Mr. Dickson's suggestions are most welcome, but his contribution fits neatly into two already common categories: "letters attacking Mr. Riggins' polemics" and "letters attacking the Flambeau." Surely he could discuss a fewother topics?)

I am glad to have the opportu of replying to Mr. La'szlo G. on so-called "liberalization" of Hu gary. In my article on Hungar made no attempt to apologize for present regime nor did I expre approval of the suppression of 1956 uprising.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF SERVICE in the alumni office, 11 of them as director, have won for Miss Mildred Parrish a plaque from the Florida State University Alumni Association expressing the appreciation of more than 20,000 alumni. The plaque is presented here by by Edward M. Eissey of West Palm Beach, Alumni Association president. Miss Parrish, who has been editing the Alumni Bulletin, has stepped down from her FSU job and on Aug. 20 will become director of radio services and the division of public relations at North Florida Junior College, Madison.

Michel Hits Oregon Trail

Dr. Donald E. Michel, director of music therapy programs, has been asked to serve as consultant on music therapy at Williamette University in Oregon from Aug. 14-16.

Michel will assist the University with the setting up of a new music therapy program and consult with Oregon state officials on the establishment of music therapy programs in some of the state institutions.

In June, he seved as consultant and director for a workshop on music therapy at the Veterans Hospital in Tuscaloosa, Ala. In addition to the development of the existing program, the hospital is interested in possibly affiliating with FSU for acceptance of its music therapy interns for their six-month required clinical placements.

Parrish Leaves Post After 15 Years

Mildred Parrish has left her post as editor of alumni publications at FSU to become director of radio services and the division of public relations at North Florida Junior College.

Miss Parrish has been with the Alumni Office for 15 years, 11 of them as director of FSU alumni affairs. Since joinging the office in 1948 as director she has become widely known over Florida for her work with alumni in civic work, particularly with the Pilot Club. Her new duties at Madison will begin on Aug. 20.

Prior to joining the FSU staff she served as the Leon County Tuberculosis and Health Association's first executive secretary. From 1938 to 1943 she did secretarial and editorial work for the State Department of Education in Tallahassee.

She received her general education at the Florida State College for Women and earned a bachelor of journalism degree from the University of Missouri in 1949. She holds a master's degree from FSU.

Active in club work, Miss Parrish has held a number of offices in Pilot Club International, classified service club for women, including the presidency of the local club at the time it was recognized as the outstanding one in the state and awarded a citation by Woman's Home Companion and McCall's magazines. She is currently editor of "Pilot Wave," the organization's bi-monthly state publication.

She is a member of the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce's tourist development committee and has served as president of the Leon County Heart Council. In 1960 Miss Parrish was nominated by Gov. LeRoy Collins and invited by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to serve as delegate to the White House Conference on Children and Youth.

A charter member of the Board of Directors of the Education and Welfare Foundation of Pilot Club, she was elected in May at the annual statewide meeting to a five-year term as treasurer. This Foundation will administer the more than $57,000 being given for the purchase of a house at FSU for the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation. The house is to be dedicated this fall.

. .How's That?

enhower said recently that only a "genius and prophet" could have known for sure that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro was a Communist in the 1950's. (On behalf of many conservatives, I would like to thank Mr. Eisenhower for that kind remark. You see, it can be found in the records that many of us identified Fidel Castro as a Communist agent well in advance of his takeover in 1959. It turned out though that no one was listening.)

The truth is out. As reported on the Ed Sullivan Show, "Caroline is a smart girl, but after the Bay of Pigs affair President Kennedy decided not to let her plan any more invasions."

Here's an ode to Khrushchev, who was all fun and games at the A-ban talks: Pat-a-cake, Pat-a-cake, Kremlin man. Make us a pact as fast as you can. Sign it and swear it and mark it with B. For the first to break it will surely be thee. (Fletcher Knebel)

If you care to hear some more absurd and humorous comments, please tune in the next press conference given by President Kennedy.

Camp To Close

The Reservation will be closed after this week end, both the waterfront and the grounds. It will reopen in September when the University begins the First Trimeter.

The jitney bus to the Reservation will make its final run this week, also.

Mr. Ruth M. DeKalb, resident director, will be on vacation while the camp is closed, but Ronald Snows, the resident student assistant, will be on duty.

Antonini To Conduct Concert Tonight

A 75-member Youth Symphony Orchestra conducted by Columbia Broadcasting System musical director Alfredo Antonini will present a concert tonight at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.

The young musicians have been rehearsing five to six hours a day under the baton of the guest conductor, who also serves as the musical director of the Tampa Philharmonic. The program winds up a weeklong workshop at FSU.

Included on the program will be Handel's "Overture in D major;" the first movement of "Symphony in D minor" by Franck; "Chester" (New England Tryptich) by Schuman and "Batuque" by Fernandez.

High school boys and girls from Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and Alabama were selected to attend the workshop from nominations by directors of civic youth orchestras and outstanding high school orchestras.

The Youth Symphony Workshop was initiated in 1961 for the purpose of encouraging the orchestra development of young musicians in the Southeast by providing a week of intensive training under the direction of a professional conductor.

Antonini, as leading conductor for CBS, built and directed programs of great music such as "Invitation to Music" and "Twentieth Century Concert Hall."

He is known also as a composer. His compositions include "The Great City," "Italian Festa," "Mamba Tropical" and "Nursery Rhymes."

FSU staff for the workshop include: Dr. K.O. Kuersteiner, dean of the School of Music; Owen Sellers, assistant dean; Jack Swartz, director of the Tallahassee Youth Symphony Coordinator; and Gene Simons, director of FSU music camps. Consultants include Robert Sedore, strings; Joseph White, brasses; Nancy Fowler, woodwinds, and Ramon Meyer, percussion.

Seminole Cloudhoppers Find Florida Great For Flying Fun

THE FLAMBEAU CAMERA records the view from the back seat of the Piper J-3 as it approaches the runway at Tallahassee Commercial Airport. The club usually keeps the Piper aircraft based at this small grass field while the slightly larger and faster Cessna is kept at Tallahassee Municipal Airport. Both planes, however, can operate very well at either field. (Photo by Wayne Cowart.)

Not many universities in the United States or anywhere else can boast of having a flying club listed among their co-curricular activities. Of those few that can, fewer still can look forward to as nearly year-round flying weather as can FSU's Seminole Flyers.

Recently a Flambeau staffer armed with camera took a trip to the Tallahassee Commercial Airport to report in words and pictures a typical Saturday morning's excursions into the wild blue yonder.

From the beginning the elements were cooperating a good day's flying was anticipated. Soon after Ray Brown and I had arrived at the airport, the sound of an engine was heard and another Seminole Flyer, Ralph Rawls, a graduate student, landed the club's Cessna 140. The morning's staff of pilots was completed when Charles Gilmore of WFSU-TV arrived.

After each plane was carefully checked to see that all systems were solidly in the "go" condition, Ray Brown took command of the Cessna 140 with a cargo of film, light meter, cameras and lenses -- and one photographer.

The noise of the engine was still pounding all around in the cockpit but the ground was falling away fast now and already we were well above the tree-tops in front of us. Almost as a curtain would rise on a stage, the horizon fell further and further back until it seemed all of North Florida lay within our view and within our reach.

We circled the field while pilot Gilmore flew the club's other airplane, a Piper J-3, into the blue and then together we headed for Tallahassee.

The accompanying pictures were taken on this and one succeeding flight when the plane crews switched around to provide the pictures of the Cessna in flight.

Few of all the mechanical inventions of our age have ever enchanted as many people as have airplanes and flying. Flying in a small airplane once is all it takes to demonstrate to any novice why the air holds such enchantment for so many.

Baum Joins Nat'l Panel

Dr. Werner A. Baum, dean of the faculties, has been appointed to the National Science Foundation's Advisory Panel on Atmospheric Sciences, it was announced today.

The panel, which meets twice a year, has general supervision over the approximately $8,000,000 a year program of the Foundation in atmospheric sciences. Baum has served on the FSU faculty for 14 years. On Sept. 1 he will become vice-president for academic affairs, dean of faculties and professor of meteorology at the University of Miami in Coral Gables.

Old Timers, Falcons In Final Basket Duel

The Old Timers and the Falcons clashed last night for the championship of the Summer Basketball League in the league finals.

The Old Timers team defeated the Outlaws 45-31, and the Falcons defeated the Lions from Leon High 41-29 to advance to the finals. There was no report of the outcome at press time.

The Old Timers led by the rebounding and shooting of Dave Joseph and Steve Hozknict, jumped off to a 31-14 margin and hung on to win 45-31. Holzknict scored 14 and Joseph scored 12. Both had ten for the first half. John Broer also scored 11 for the winning Old Timers. Bill Evans dumped in 15 for the losers, out of the Outlaws 31 total points.

The Falcons playing without the services of star Bill Glenn were nevertheless more than a match for the outgunned Lions. After a close first quarter which ended ten up, the Falcons moved away. By halftime they were leading 22-13, and at the end of the third quarter the Falcons were ahead by a 34-19 count.

for publication in Hungary as well as in the west. Dr. Vogt spoke with Professor Lukacs in consultation on an anthology of Scandinavian literature.

The execution of Imre Nagy and others in June of 1958 was without doubt a barbarous and shameful action yet it was no doubt the outcome of Stalinist wing pressure within Russia on Khrushchev, who did not free Russia of Stalinist supremacy until late in 1961.

I have no wish to whitewash the barbarities of Communism, but I do think that we cannot ignore the potential liberalizing and progressive actions of current Communist leaders. (Cf. "Economics," Aug. 25, 1962.)

Goyer Wins Fulbright, But Hasn't Heard Yet

A graduate student now en route to Spain has been awarded a Fulbright scholarship to finance her study there although she hasn't heard about it yet.

Miss Doreen Suzanne Goyer left by freighter several weeks ago from New Orleans on a leisurely trip which was to take her to Copenhagen and then across Europe to Madrid. Dr. Victor R. B. Oelschlager, her faculty adviser, said Miss Goyer had applied for a Fulbright, thought she hadn't received one and decided to finance her own study at Madrid.

Oelschlager, head of the Modern Languages Dept., described her as a brilliant student of Spanish literature. Her research at University of Madrid, National Archives and National Library will be on her doctoral dissertation. This, said Oelschlager, will be a manual on the Saints' Names and Saints' Days in Spanish literature, a handy guide for students reading Spanish literature.

After Dean J. Paul Reynolds of the College of Arts and Sciences was informed by the State Department that Miss Goyer was one its 800 Fulbright grantees, Oelschlager tried to reach her. He reached a sister, Mrs. John Turnbull of Gulf Breeze and found that a letter from the State Department has been forwarded to Miss Goyer care of American Express at Copenhagen where she will arrive on Aug. Oelschlager meanwhile phoned State Department and asked that deadline be waived on acceptance the scholarship.

Miss Goyer spent two years previously in Madrid as a Navy secretary. She also has taught in Jefferson High at Tampa. She's been enrolled in FSU since the summer of 1960 and received her master's degree here in June, 1962. During the past year she worked under a graduate fellowship. Her BA degree in Spanish and French was awarded by Wayne State University in D

Dead Week Descends

By LINDA RUE SHEPLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

A somber smog has settled over campus and the transitions and effects as a result of the seriousness of the dreaded occasion are varied. The doors which lead into the general education section of Strozier Memorial Library, which normally operate at the reduced rate of a sporadic seven openings per minute have reached a crescendo of 17 per minute during periods of DW (Deadweek), according to a graduate student in physics.

Crowded dorms are marked by an air of REPRESSION, as posters displaying threats of judiciary action for "disturbing the peace" leer from doors and hallway walls. A more-than-average amount of make-up is required to hide baggy and study-shot eyes of industrious beds on campus.

For the stronger sex located on the west end of campus, dead week is a time of EXPRESSION, when Kellum and Smith Hall come alive with water fights as one method of relieving the tension. Noise is a suitable outlet for the masculine group as boys grow beards and men cry over the prospects of three final exams on one day.

Meanwhile, professors "leisurely lounge" in their "oak-paneled studies," contemplating the "success" of their final exams by the ever-increasing number of failures to be recorded in grade books and turned in to the Registrar's Office.

WESTCOTT FOUNTAIN WAS NEVER LIKE THIS

Students speculate that the thriving plants will be short-lived once the fall trimester is underway, and the traditional use of Westcott fountain as the site for all pool parties is resumed. Informal Student Survey

Trimester Brings Mixed Reactions

Final exams this week complete a year of operation of the new trimester plan at FSU. 2491 of the originally enrolled 10,391 students have stuck it out for all three of the 14 week trimesters.

In an informal survey of 13 of the 1485 men and 1006 women who have been in school since last September some varied opinions on the system were noted.

John A. Walker, a senior in social welfare, said he wanted to finish sooner. "You can't make any money till you get your degree," he stated.

Allen York, a sophomore majoring in government who plans to go to law school, told interviewers, "The trimester is giving me an opportunity to start my field and accomplish a lot more than by spending another year in college." York expects to get his degree when he's 20.

Five of the 13 students interviewed plan to go another straight three trimesters, even though there are only 3 weeks of vacation before the start of trimester I in September.

Financing three straight trimesters of school was a problem for some students. Gary Barfield a pre-med major said he'll have to work next summer to make some money for the next school year. Several students had student jobs which helped them through.

Do the jobs interfere with studies? Sonnia M. Hall, nursing student, thinks she would probably waste the 10-15 hours a week she spends working at WFSU-FM. Sharon A. Bailey, a child development major, who puts in 15 hours a week as a switchboard operator at Landis Hall, says, "I find it hard to study, but I can catch up on my correspondence."

Louise Carter, a French and Spanish major, found some economic advantage in going during the summer. "It is more expensive to go to school during the regular year when there are sorority dues, much extracurricular activity and other expenses."

Several students objected to the trimester system on one ground or another.

Linda Oglesby, a language major, said, "I was maintaining a good grade average the first two trimesters and then dropped in this one."

Robert E. Marotti, a physical education major says there's too much "psychological pressure" during the summer terms. He thinks there ought to be some relief in the way of extracurricular events for the hard study of this period. "There ought to be at least one big event during each trimester and some kind of social outlets in between."

William M. Adkins, a sophomore transfer from Harvard, said, "I don't think you can get the same mastery of a subject under a trimester as under the semester system. My mind becomes a catalogue," he stated.

John H. Walker, pre-dentistry and biology student, thinks there is not enough time even in basic studies courses. "I had to read the 'Iliad' in two nights," he said. He doesn't feel subject mastery is what it should be and as he puts it: "Career is a gain, education is a loss. If you want to finish school the trimester is best; if you want to get something out of college, no."

Gary Barfield, a pre-med student, comments, "One week in the infirmary will put you out of the trimester."

It was expected by university officials that only the ablest students would be able to stand the pace of three solid trimesters of work and that of these many would not be able to study year round because they would need a vacation job to help pay their way in school.

Most students, it was expected, would drop out for one full trimester or one-half of the split-session third trimester. It was expected that the number going all three trimesters would amount to about 20% of the total student body. Just over this number actually did so.

Final Exam Schedule

The schedule for final exams to be given for Trimester III and III-B are now posted in Westcott Bldg.

Classes will end Wednesday, Aug. 7, at 10 p.m. Examinations will begin at 7:30 a.m. on Thursday, Aug. 8, and end at 5 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 10. Examination periods of two hours duration.

Examinations will be given in the classroom where the sections of courses normally meet. Examinations will be given at the times listed.

Students are not permitted to change sections for examinations. In unavoidable circumstances where a students must be absent from an exam, the student may request permission from his academic dean to take the examination late. No examinations are to be given early in such cases.

Example: If your class normally meets from 8-8:55, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, or, 8-9:05 daily, the final examination will be given (as indicated below) on Thursday, Aug. 8, 7:30 to 9:30 a.m.

Folk Music Ends Summer Activities For Internationals

The International Club concluded its activities for Trimester III last week with a widely acclaimed program featuring "Folk Music" from many different countries.

The program opened in the land of fez as Ali Kaygi of Turkey presented "Songs of Turkey," followed by Verbal Martha from Nicaragua taking the audience to another part of the world through a Nicaragian selection.

Richard and Muri Tolley of the United States took up an American theme with several numbers from the "good old days."

Cuba's Alwarez gave a masterful rendition of the "Cuban Song," then followed wit famous Spanish songs and music from Mexico.

Students from India, led by Madhav Khandekar, C. K. and Kanti Patel, presented the "Bridal Song," depicting marriage customs of villagers in North India.

Talented Barbara Sheen of the US offered music from the 15th century, then switched to 1963 for several selections of a modern variety.

The up-and-coming campus singers, "Bill and Stuart," gave three numbers of wide appeal to natives of any country followed by Charley Cox and several typical Russian folk selections.

Richard and Muri Tolley ended the musical part of the program with "My Own Music" written and played by Richard Tolley.

Concluding the program, the president of the club, Krishna V. Menon, explained the objectives of the International Club and reminded the audience that it is no longer an exclusively "Foreign Students' Club."

There are already some 40 American members and he urged the public to increase membership so as to create a better atmosphere of understanding and friendship between American students and students of other countries.

Menon emphasized the need for cultivating an open-mind on the part of the foreign students for a clearer understanding, and also requested the American counterpart to look on foreign students as something more than "curiosity pieces."

Commenting on the excellent work done by the Student Government tis year, Menon hoped that a still more ambitious program will follow in the coming years.

He regreted the absence of an "International House" at FSU where foreign students and American students could live together, thereby opening the doors to a better "climate of understanding."

Menon also expressed a hope that university authorities will take note of the advantages to be gained by the construction of an "International House," and that they would not postpone investigation of additional ways to increase international understanding and friendship among students at FSU.

Bank To Open

The new Student Depository will be open for business tomorrow in Room 2 of Longmire.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the student body as a whole or the administration of the Florida State University. Editorials represent the opinions of the editorial staff of the Flambeau with the initials of the writer following the editorial. Columns and letters to the Editor reflect only the opinion of the writer.

'Student' Bank

The Student Depository, opening this week in its new location in Longmire basement, has been rescued from annihilation by the efforts of Student Government officials, but its continued life depends heavily upon the extent to which the student body makes use of the service.

The $1 fee to be charged in the future for financing the banking operation as a student activity may elicit complaints, and may even deter some students from using the depository, but it should be recognized that the choice is between a self-sustaining operation or none at all. Every effort is being made to give the student customer more comfort and convenience in exchange for asking him to pay for a service which formerly was free.

Until the Student Depository has its permanent location next year in the University Union, it will make its home in the former Women Day Students Lounge. But a new coat of paint, draperies, rug, and teller counter have given the site a business like atmosphere, while quiet music and art exhibits will add to the customer's enjoyment.

Each student should investigate the services offered by the Student Depository in its new location, for unless the student body makes extensive use of the bank, it will be forced out of existence.

Little reward is generally asked by those who render service to the university, but the role of Frank Milwee in the Student Depository's transfer can hardly be overlooked. Milwee, as executive assistant to the Student Body President, has spent hours in preparation for the big move, especially in selection of the new decor, and recognition should be given for his service and interest in the university.

Why Close Early?

The closing of the Student Center Cafeteria and the Soda Shop in Longmire basement, well in advance of the departure of FSU students, is quite inconvenient to the customers of the two eating places.

During final examination preparation, when time is a precious commodity, students should be able to go to the nearest snack bar to grab a bite to eat. Instead, they will have to run from place to place, finally perhaps to trek across campus to eat at one of the restaurants adjacent to the university.

For some students these places may be just as convenient and near at hand, but for others, the three-times-a-day journeys represent only wasted time. Due to the shutting down of part of the on-campus eating facilities, many a meal will be missed by FSU students in the next week--causing a loss of energy and a run-down condition for those who skip too many meals.

Regular eating habits are very important during times of high tension and mental activity. It is unfortunate that students are forced to choose between the immediate reward of extra study time and their own continued good health.

We suggest that, in the future, all on-campus eating places remain open throughout examination periods, for the convenience and the welfare of their patrons.

Quo Vadis, Tradition?

Who is the tradition-killer in the administration? As it now stands there will be no graduation ceremony for some 850 graduating seniors this August. This is in line with the current administration policy of only one commencement per year. The faculty is one major obstacle in the way of multiple commencemetns because, so they say, the burden in preparing tests early and getting grades in earlier is too great.

The other tradition that may get the boot is the "Westcott pool party." Informed speculation has it that flowers are to be planted in the areas surrounding the pool. This landscaping is only logical if the administration intends to prohibit the pool party.

That this might be intended is evidenced by the fact of an article which appeared in the Flambeau about a year ago. The article was an interview with Dean of Men, Donald Loucks. In the interview he stated that he felt that doing away with the pool party might be a good thing and as a substitute, a totem pole of sorts could be rigged up and a fire hose used ... much like the policemen do in race riots.

Who in the administration is trying to kill tradition? If there is good reason for these actions perhaps the administration should publish them so that the students would know.

Quotable Quotes from around Campus:

Test Service: "We all make mistakes, that's why there are erasers on pencils."

Government Dept: "We need an advisor for Thomas Riggins' new 'Jockey With Rockey' club."

Sociology Dept: "America used to be the melting pot of the world, now it is the pressure cooker."

* * * * *

Julian Procter, President of Student Senate, and the Student Senate will have a big job facing them when they get back in September. Particularly in regard to legislation relating to student government operations on the trimester. Honor Court folded before it hardly started; the business of student senate was handled by a legislative council of two. These two glaring deficiencies need to be corrected as soon as possible.

* * * * *

This column will be in the Flambeau next fall with the same type of format as this summer. To prick the extra sensitive hide of those in power, the hope will always be that the lamp of publicity will serve to make a better student government and a better campus. This column will not only criticize but when possible offer constructive alternatives.

It is inevitable that many things that should be known by students about their government don't always get known, and hence the purpose of this column.

Attacks U.S. Cuban Policy

On October 15, 1960, Candidate John F. Kennedy said in a campaign speech at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, "We must end the harassment, which this government has carried on, of liberty-loving, anti-Castro forces in Cuba and in other lands. While we cannot violate international law, we must recognize that these exiles and rebels represent the real voice of Cuba, and should not be constantly handicapped by our immigration and justice deparment authorities."

But as columnists Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott pointed out in a recent writing, "President Kennedy's harsh crackdown on Cuban exile groups is being broadened to include the activities of the anti-Communist Eastern European refugee groups in the United States."

What is the reason for this change in attitude? Many of us do not understandy why and furthermore are disturbed by it.

We believe that so long as there are Cubans willing to strike back against Castro and so long as there are Americans who will never be reconciled to a Communist state in Cuba, there is always a chance for victory over Cuban communism.

We must never be allowed to forget the hard fact of communist Cuba. Our policy-makers, who alone block the natural action of free men against Cuba, must never be allowed to push this issue under the table. They tell us the Cuba problem is impossible to solve. However, many Americans know how to solve it: by economic pressure and blockade, coupled with full support of Cuban freedom fighters.

The policy of letting Communism rule Cuba in perfect peace and safety, while taking strong measures against the Cubans on our own shores, should not and will not be accepted so long as a spark of patriotism and love for freedom remains within us.

Postscript for freedom: "If that ever happens in this country, Americans will find that some Cubans had one advantage they won't enjoy. Some of us Cubans were able to flee to the United States for sanctuary. Where will the Americans go?" — Mario M. Coll; a former Cuban now living and working in America.

Letters Policy

Letters to the editor and student comment are welcomed by the "Flambeau." We firmly believe that students should have an organ through which their opinions and views can be aired.

At no time will letters containing material which is libelous or in bad taste be printed.

Socialist Hopes Explained

What can socialists hope to achieve in the last half of the 20th century? Mankind finds itself on the brink of a third world war in which the very existence of Western civilization hangs in the balance.

Never before in the history of the world has mankind toiled and suffered more than in the present century. New means must be sought by which humanity can defend itself against the degradation of enforced sevitude to one or the other of the great power blocs that vie for world control.

Democratic Socialists "feel only socialism is the politics of hope, of the defense of man. Socialism can no longer be called a Utopia; it is now a necessity, and the means are at hand to achieve it. If socialists once spoke of the transition to a new social order in less complex terms, if we have made our mistakes and suffered our defeats, that does not alter the fundamental imperative. The most simple humanity obliges us to take the way of socialism."

We feel the need of a massive reorganization of society to enable the working and peasant masses of the world to achieve decent food, shelter and clothing — we feel it is short the obligation of men to help one another in the struggle for a better way of life. We reject crass individualism and feel that the development of the individual personality is a function of the development of his society.

Neither Western neo-capitalism or Eastern Communism seem to be able to bring about the renovation of social life that socialists are seeking. While recognizing the special circumstances of American capitalism, we hope to achieve socialism, full and emocratic, in the ex-colonial world and make significant advances in England and the European community, as well as South America.

For America we advocate extensive welfare legislation, social security, socialized medicine, etc. and limited nationalization — railroads, etc.

The road to socialization is steep and studded with pitfalls -- but with good will and an active concern for the economic and political well being of mankind we can reach the goal we have in mind.

NS OF SEDIMENTS are being taken from the floor by grab-samplers such as those being ed by Dr. H. Grant Goodell (left) of the Dept. and Charles W. Holmes of Royal Mich., a graduate student who has just returned from an assignment aboard the research ship Eltanin in Antarctic waters. The 30 foot-long cores shown on the shelves in the background will be examined for age, mineralogy, texture and other features.

FSU Plays Part In Ocean Research Under National Science Foundation

ll frame storage building on s is filling up these days with sediments from the Antarc- are reaching FSU from the ch ship Eltanin at the rate of month.

result of a year of cruising by Eltanin below Cape Horn, the ents are from samplings of the floor which are being made ry degree of latitude and every degrees of longitude as the ship a zig-zag course over a vast off the Antarctic continent. sediments reach FSU primar- the form of 30-foot-long cores, nder cross sections of the de- s of millions of years on the oc- or. There are 150 of them on ow. All will eventually under- sts in the sedimentology labor- o determine the texture and ral makeup, date of deposit, hemistry and paleontology.

of the most interesting dis- ries so far, accoring to Dr. Grant Goodell of the Geology ., was an oil-filled layer of sedi- s found just northwest of the er Peninsula indicating com- ively recent formation of oil. one centimeter thick layer of filled sand lay 158 centimeters in the core and one calculation ated it may have been formed recently as 160,000 years ago. Eltanin's research, financed e National Science Foundation, nabling geologists, biologists, eorologists and many other scientists to make the most thorough on-the-spot check of the Antartic seas ever made. FSU has just received a grant of $77,100 providing for another year of participation by its scientists.

Under the direction of Drs. Goodell and J. K. Osmond of Geology, work on sediments will provide the facts for a detailed map of the ocean bottom. Soundings are taken with special equipment in waters where the waves are not infrequently 35 feet high.

Two FSU graduate students, Charles W. Holmes and Thomas Mather were aboard the Eltanin on her eighth voyage just completed. Mather and a third student, Bruce Grant, have now set out on the ninth voyage, which is taking the ship down through a part of the Scotia Sea a thousand miles east of the tip of South America.

The eighth voyage enabled the FSU students to collect sediments from some of the South Atlantic's most profound depths, the 4-1/3 mile deep South Sandwich trench.

The 30 scientists, including one Russian physical oceanographer, and the 45 crewmen on the Eltanin visited some of the best known sites of previous Antartic explorations, including South Georgia Island. (An emergency radio call for a surgeon to perform an appendectomy resulted in an unexpected 500-mile trip of the Eltanin to South Georgia).

Named by Capt. James Cook in 1775, South Georgia figured in the famous expedition of Sir Ernest Shackleton in 1914-16 and Holmes visited Shackleton's grave on the island. Shackleton and a party of 27 set out in the ship Endurance, which broke up in the ice floes off the Antarctic continent. The party went by ice floe and boat to Elephant Island and Shackleton and four companions then sailed in a 22-foot boat the 800 miles to South Georgia, finally climbing over its mountain ridges to the whaling harbor on the east side.

Panel Sees Value In Public Relations

The image of government information men is improving, and they make a genuine contribution to public understanding, but they err in building up the state department head, or in exaggerating the importance of some projects they publicize.

These were the two faces of government public relations men which newsmen and information representatives gave this week at a panel discussion before a public relations class at the School of Business.

The class has been studying all phases of public relations, including business, welfare, schools and government information bureaus. Under the direction of Dr. Sidney Kobre, they interviewed heads of Florida state agencies and wrote reports which were presented to the class. The students have been interested in hearing the controversial subject discussed by persons participating in the profession or directly affected by it.

On the panel City Editor Mike Beaudoin, of the "Tallahassee Democrat," gave a positive picture of the government public relations man. The newsman said the image and stature of the information representative is being raised.

"Some of them have achieved top-level administrative posts--where they should be," he asserted. "They should carry weight and be at the policy-making level.

Beaudoin pointed out that most small-sized newspapers would be sorely handicapped without the help of public information personnel. He mentioned the fact that the News Bureau of FSU was an invaluable aid. A newspaper would have to have a full staff to cover the many activities in the multitude of departments and schools at the institution.

Beaudoin objected to some state agencies which produced material with little general public interest, but which were aimed at the members of the Florida legislature. While he considered informational men needed in state agencies, he couldn't "see the value of a public relations man for municipal government, such as we have in Tallahassee." He believed that city department heads should be public relations minded and that they should understand a piece of news when seen in their own division.

Martin Waldron, capital correspondent for the "St. Petersburg Times," said he had to weigh carefully news releases from various departments to discover the real intent. He said that he found releases issued by departments useful for regular routine happenings, but he went directly to the department head for crucial, important facts.

He outlined the steps taken to find the facts about the Florida Turnpike Authority's activities. The newsman admitted readily the need for public relations men to develop the internal communications in departments of the state.

Sex Is Not Caged In Library

By NANCY McMILLAN

Each time I 've passed the cage on the Strozier library's second floor, I've wondered what they kept so well-concealed from us--always under lock and key. . . librarian at the entrance.

Several times I asked a companion what was in there and I always got the same reply. . ."Oh, those are the 'banned books'--you know, the sexy kind!" One friend said he had tried to get a book from there and "they" had said he would have to come back later. Why? He didn't know. And so the mystery deepened and I became more interested.

Well, my curiosity finally got the best of me and I approached the librarian on duty to see if I couldn't get my hands on some of those "sexy" ones.

The truth is, the cage is there for a most practical reason. . . mainly protection. No, not protection of lily-white minds; protection of frayed and fragile books.

Miss Helen Haines, head of the humanities division, explained that in the cage there are some books too small to place on the shelves because they would be lost; some books which are not rare but which are scarce (and they don't want to risk losing them) and some that are just so old they would fall apart in normal library use. The cage also contains a few boxes of Chinese and Japanese artifacts, most of which are currently on display in the humanities room, and a few records of FDR's speeches.

Anyone can check these books out simply by asking the librarian at the service desk outside the cage. There may sometimes be a slight delay since staff members check these out and sometimes only a student assistant is on duty.

So, everyone relax! The mystery is solved about our cage--my only question is. . . where do they keep the "sexy ones"?

Seminoles-To-Be Show Promise

Players signed by FSU for duty in future sports years distinguished themselves in a weekend of all-star football, basketball and baseball.

Bill Glenn and Ken Doyle made a good showing in the annual North-South All-Star Basketball game Saturday afternoon at the Florida High School Gym. Glenn lead the underdog North team to a one-point loss in the closing 22 seconds of play. He made 14 points and was top scorer for the North, while Doyle stood out for defensive action on the South's team.

The 15th annual North-South All-Star-Football game Saturday night saw seven future FSU athletes playing promising football. Greg Baggitt was outstanding on both offense and defense action until forced out of play with an injury. Butch Riser, one of the best defensive backs seen that night, was named Most Valuable Player for the North squad.

Co-captain for the North Del Williams played a hard game on the line, and Lee Narramore scored the only touchdown for the North. Mike Belback recovered what could have been a costly fumble, leaving the North just 22 yeard short of a goal at one stage, and kept up a fine display of defensive action.

Steve Korhn and Alan LeMarche helped push the South stars to victory, although Korhn had a bad night passing. LeMarche looked good in rushing, returning punts and kick-offs, returning one kickoff 41 yards.

Registration Seen Above 11,000

By WALT MARTINDALE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Over 11,000 students are expected to attend classes today, reports the Registrar's office after four days of registration.

Some 1,000 more students will attend the University this fall. Registrar Murray Kenna said that as regular registration ended Saturday 10,622 students had signed up for the fall trimester and that he expects approximately 378 to register during the late registration period, ending Friday.

Last year 10,391 students registered for the fall trimester. It is estimated that over 600 new students have registered so far.

Dr. Kenna remarked that the increase of students was in the graduate and transfer levels since there are about the same number of freshmen as last year.

The increased number of cards delayed registration and attempts will be made in the next two trimesters to reduce the number of cards by combining two or three. This will make the registration process faster and more efficient, Kenna said. Two extra cards, the student directory and selective service card, will not be used the following semester. In spite of the delay, the Registrar's office said that registration was kept on schedule, and that the class alphabetic system was used again in registration as in the past.

Summer registration totaled 4,309, with 3,281 undergraduates and 1,028 graduates enrolled for Trimester III-B climbed by 25 percent, with a high number of graduate students enrolled. Trimester III-B reached 5,063 students, 2,710 who continued from III-A, and 2,353 new registrants for trimester III-B. Kenna said the number of students attending the summer sessions was anticipated by the Registrar's office.

This fall a new minimum grade point average will go into effect. All students attempting 24 to 59 semester hours must maintain a 1.4 average. Students attempting 60 and above must maintain a 2.0 overall.

Chorus Tryouts Are Scheduled

Tryouts for chorus roles in the State Opera Association of Florida's production of Carlisle Floyd's music drama "Susannah" will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, September 17th and 19th, in Opperman Music Hall.

This will be the first presentation of the newly created organization, which was established by the 1963 Florida State Legislature. Carlisle Floyd will direct and Robert Sedore will conduct the Opera Orchestra. Richard Collins, overall director of the Association, will be featured in the role of Olin Blitch.

Subsequent to its gala presentation in Tallahassee, the company will carry the priduction to various parts of the state.

Tryouts will also be held at the same time for all roles in the joint FSU Opera Guild and University Theater production of Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht "Three Penny Opera." This production will be under the direction of Arthur Dorlag, and musical direction will be by Jerry Frank.

Scores and books are available on reserve in the School of Music Library. For further information contact Richard Collins of the School of Music or Arthur Dorlag of the Speech Dept.

Declarations Due Friday In Student Elections

By LYNN BISSLAND
Flambeau News Editor

Students who wish to run for office in the upcoming freshman class officer and precinct senator elections slated for Sept. 24 must file a declaration of candidacy before Friday at 5 p.m.

Candidates should file at the main desk of Longmire Bldg. To qualify as a candidate a freshman must have had a "C" average in high school. Upperclassmen must have a 2.0 overall average.

Freshman class officers include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, social chairman, and two class senators. One senator each will be elected from the following precincts: Jennie Murphree, Bryan-Broward, Reynolds, Gilchrist, Dorman, Florida, Magnolia, East Landis, West Landis, and DeGraff. West Hall and Kellum will elect two senators.

Four day senators will be elected. Students living off campus in private residences are eligible for this post. Two senators will also be elected to represent Dale Mabry Heights, University Trailor Park, and Alumni Village.

Any precinct failing to have senatorial candidates equal to the number of senators provided for that precinct shall forfeit, for that year, the right to have a senator.

A compulsory meeting for all candidates who have filed a declaration of candidacy will be held on Thursday from 6 to 6:30 p.m. in Longmire.

Active campaigning will begin Sept. 17 at 5 p.m. Campaign literature will not be allowed to occupy space previous to this time. Regulations concerning placing of campaign materials and posters are now available in the main office of Longmire.

Total cash expenditures and gifts of candidates shall not exceed $30 for class president and senators and $20 for other officers. Winning candidates will be required to present a final expense statement of all receipts of expenditures.

"New students are encouraged to participate in the campus wide event," emphasized Jon Kaney, Commissioner of Elections. "Due to the short time element, any student desiring to run for office must file immediately," he continued.

For further information contact a member of the elections bureau in 210 Longmire, ext. 2975.

Library Begins 100-Hour Week

There's been talk of a 25-hour week in industry, but FSU Strozier Library is preparing today to go on a 100-hour week.

With the beginning of classes, Library hours are being extended to comply with student requests for longer hours. The Library will for the first time stay open until midnight on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights and will be open for the first time on Saturday nights.

Heretofore the Library has closed at 10 p.m. Sunday and at 11 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. Saturday hours have been from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. New hours announced by the Library beginning today will be: Monday, Tuesday, 8 a.m. to 12 midnight; Wednesday, Thursday, 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday Saturday, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday, 2 p.m. to 12 midnight.

A New Year

As the school year opens on what promises to be a busy and eventful period for FSU, all phases of student activities are prepared to set out again at high speed. Under the capable leadership of Student Body President Johnny Smith, and with the assistance of all the other officers elected last spring, Student Government has tremendous opportunities of accomplishment this year. There is a particular need for the Student Senate to settle down to the business of enacting legislation creating a year-round governmental organization. The failure to do this last year was responsible for a great deal of inactivity in SG affairs during the summer trimester.

The "Flambeau," after a lazy summer of twice-a-week publication, returns with today's issue to daily output. With many new staff members and new ideas, we hope to make this a banner year for the student newspaper, but the interest and contributions of 11,000 students are needed to make this dream a reality.

The other publications, also with new editors and staffs, are planning to rival their predecessors and make their editions the ones that will be remembered for years to come.

Construction will be underway all year on the new University Union, as well as on other buildings which are a part of the expansion program aimed at making FSU one of the nation's top universities. The Union in particular has been a dream for a long time in the minds of students, student leaders and administrators alike, and the first stage of its realization came with groundbreaking ceremonies during the summer.

The noise and obstruction of traffic routes, both pedestrian and vehicular, resulting from this progress will be an inconvenience--but one that it will be a pleasure to bear with.

All phases of University social activities, such as the Artist Series, lecture series, concerts, theatre productions, foreign film club and campus movies, foresee an exceptionally fine selection from which students may choose. Sororities and fraternities as well as FSU's countless interest clubs, will be as busy as ever.

Sports, as always, will be big news among extracurricular activities this fall. Five home football games should provide plenty of thrills, and the Marching Chiefs, with a snappy new style, will offer pleasant listening for the half-times. Homecoming festivities already are being planned, and a mass exodus to Gainesville can be expected, come Thanksgiving weekend.

With so many activities available, it may be hard to find time for studying, but few would deny that all these are an integral part of university life. No student can complain that there is nothing to do; but choosing what to do may be difficult.

What Are States Rights?

Ever since the Constitution of the United States was ratified by the States the issue of "states rights" has existed. It is by no means sectional; the issue has been raised by almost all of the States at one time or another over commerce, slavery, taxes, etc.

Unfortunately, the concept that is taught in the public schools today as to what type of relationship exists between the States and the Federal government is almost hopelessly narrow. Many high school graduates leave school believing that the States exist only because the Federal government has thought is useful for them to do so.

This type of instruction in the public schools is undoubtedly partially responsible for the increasing acceptance of socialistic and paternalistic attitudes toward and in the Federal government.

What the public school children aren't taught is that the States ratified the Constitution "after" the Convention of 1787. The people of the States ratified the Constitution throught their State governments; not through a popular vote.

The States could very well have decided to abolish themselves and submit the Constitution to a popular vote, but they did not. The Constitution is a compact drawn up between the States and exists only because the States ratified it.

What are states rights? A good guideline is the Tenth Amendment--"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to them respectively, or to the people."

To let this stand as the only guide would be a gross oversimplification, but should any doubt remain as to whether the States are subordinate to the Constitution, note the words "... delegated to the United States." Not "delegated by" the United States.

This is only the first in a series of articles. The intent is not to revolutionize or subvert one's thinking, but to stimulate a healthy re-examination of the various relationships that exist between the States and the Federal government.

Many of the so-called "rebellious" acts on the part of the governors of the States are really point-blank arguments over states rights.

Deadlines

The Editorial page will appear each Monday, Wednesday and Friday throughout the trimester.

Student contributions are welcome. Deadlines for letters to the editor and guest columns are at 10 a.m. the day preceding publication.

Comments should be kept brief. The "Flambeau" reserves the right to edit contributions and to withhold questionable material.

FSU Juniors Chosen For Masters Program

Twenty-two FSU students entering their junior year have been selected for a three-year master's program, financed by a Ford Foundation grant to help meet the nation's need for able college teachers.

The students, all ending their sophomore year in either junior colleges or universities with a 3.2 or higher grade average, are the first to be selected for the FSU program which will accommodate a total of 150 prospective college teachers over a five-year period. It is financed by a $250.000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Objective of the FSU program, according to Dr. Thomas Lewis, associate dean of the Graduate School and director, is improved preparation of young teachers entering the profession and the acceleration of their program toward a doctorate.

The students begin in their junior year with a mixed graduate and undergraduate curriculum leading to a master's degree at the end of the third year. They will study in six areas within the fields in which FSU offers a doctorate. Much of their course-work will be in seminar-type classes, with considerable individual study and graduate type research and writing.

Undergraduates will receive recognition scholarships of $100 for the first year as juniors; then as seniors $200. During their graduate year, those unable to secure regular fellowships will receive a teaching fellowship of $1200.

Students selected and the departments in which they will study are:

Raymond Duncan Tindel, History; Roberta A. Welch, History; Gaye E. Elder, English; Joseph Wayne Morris, Government; Daniel P. McConochie Jr., Government; Martha J. Terrell, Modern Languages; Janice Marie Conner, Mathematics; Carol Cleland Clifton, English; Harriett Yeargin Dodson, English; Carolyn Ann Leary, Mathematics; Deborah P. Snow, Government; Andrew W. Zintel Jr., Modern Languages; Nell Ginger Greene, Modern Languages; Judith Ann Loucks, History; Carol Frances McAlpine, History; James E. Tomberlin, Philosophy; Fred Vetter, Philosophy; Janice O. Brandewie, Philosophy; Rodelia Hapke, Philosophy; Diana Frost Todd, History; Carolyn V. Campbell, Mathematics; Linda Savidge, Modern Languages.

Play Tickets Go On Sale

Season tickets for the FSU Theatre will go on sale today at the central ticket office in 102 Westcott at $2.75 for students and $5.50 for non-students, according to Dr. Arthur Dorlag, director of the University Theatre.

These tickets will enable holders to see five plays for the price of three during the 1963-64 season.

Five plays have been scheduled for presentation by the University Theatre: "Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams, Oct. 9-13; "The Threepenny Opera" by Kurt Brecht, featuring the FSU Opera Guild, Nov. 8-9; "Love's Labor's Lost" by William Shakespeare, Feb. 7-9 and 14-16; a premiere of a new play to be announced March 18-22; and "The American Dream" by Edward Albee and "The Bald Soprano" by Eugene Ionesco, May 27-31.

Adams Named Assistant

Florida State University officials have announced the appointment of Dr. Huge Adams as assistant dean of men and of two appointments in the Housing Office.

Adams, formerly assistant director of housing, now has joined the staff of Dean of Men Dr. Donald Loucks. Robert G. Brewer has been promoted from assistant dean to associate dean of men.

Dr. R. R. Oglesby, dean of students, said that Ira Valentine, who has been supervisor of off-campus housing, became assistant director of housing on Sept. 1. Miss Edith McCollum is director.

Francis L. Rivard has been named supervisor of off-campus housing, and is in charge of the off-campus housing office at 113 South Wildwood. Mrs. Millicen Cook will continue as assistant supervisor.

Adams received his bachelor's degree from FSU in 1950, his master's in 1956 and his Ed.D. in 1962. He spent several years as varsity defensive football coach. Since 1958 he had been in the Housing Office.

Coeds Find Moving In Poses Problems

By PAT FREEMAN
Feature Editor

This fall's exhibit of frosh coeds moving into assigned dorms runs the gamut from sophisticated Susie, with 15 steamers of formals, 19 footlockers containing datewear and 21 suitcases of assorted sizes and shapes for school wear, to lil' shy Sally... whose one overnight bag was accidentally shipped to Tuscaloosa instead of Tallahassee.

While harrassed campus police vainly try to keep clogged university traffic routes open, vans of trucks deliver tons of luggage for exhausted Sophomore Council members to help lug into Susie's or Sally's new home for the year.

Tennis rackets and golf clubs, Scuba tanks and elephant guns indicate a healthy interest in athletic pursuits among campus newcomers.

Meanwhile, upperclassmen dorms reveal a different scene--one of studied casualness. Senior Sarah nonchalantly hefts one medium-sized suitcase containing all of her necessities for the year, and saunters into an atmosphere of gentility and serenity. (What the admiring underclassmen can't understand is that Sarah has made secret arrangement with the janitor to smuggle her trunks in the back way.)

With 11,000 students expected, coeds find "home, sweet home" a bit more crowded than was mentioned in pamphlets received upon acceptance to dear old FSU. Coeds in temporary housing find a berth waiting: recreation rooms, halls or what-have-you.

The situation is alarming to a few (who were a little dubious about the college idea in the first place), but as the junior and residence counselors have no doubt explained, "It's only for a little while."

Now that the onrushing deluge of tenants has dwindled down to a steady trickle as older, more experienced students arrive for late registration and few academic hours, things may take on an order of semblance, as fond memories of the chaos that was "my first week at FSU" fade into the depths of the unconscious, leaving only the calm, soothing "hectivity" of FSU under the trimester system.

FSU's Criminology Ph. D. Is First Awarded In Nation

The first doctor of philosophy degrees in criminology and corrections ever awarded by an American university were given by FSU in August.

FSU's Criminology and Corrections Dept. and Sociology Dept. began offering a Ph.D. program in the field in 1958. Two candidates completed their requirements last month for the degree.

Chester L. Chiles, who now is assistant professor of public administration (correctional and social administration) at the University of Arizona, and Albert Kiechung Bhak, who becomes head of the Sociology and Criminology Dept. at Northland College, Ashland, Wis., this month, are being awarded the first two Ph.D. degrees.

Dr. Vernon Fox, head of the Criminology and Corrections Dept. and their major professor, started FSU's corrections and criminology program in 1952. There are now about 130 undergraduate and graduate students majoring in this field at FSU.

Chiles was supervisor of the reception and guidance unit of Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla, Wash., from 1955 to 1958 before beginning his studies at FSU. Earlier he received a BA degree from Williamette University and a master of social work degree from the University of Denver.

Bhak came to this country from Korea in 1955 after getting a law degree from Korea University at Seoul.

FSU Theatre To Audition

Students with acting ability or interest are invited to attend tryouts for the University Theatre's first production of the season, "Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams tonight at 7 or tomorrow at 7 p.m. The play was a recent movie starring Geraldine Page and Lawrence Harvey, and roles are open for 8 men and 6 women, according to Leonard Fallon, who will be director of William's famous play.

Fallon was director of the 1963 Asolo Theater Comedy Festival held last summer in Sarasota.

Hull Accepts Biology Chairmanship

A topnotch biologist at Northwestern University, Dr. Robert W. Hull, assumed the chairmanship of FSU's Department of Biological Sciences on Sept. 1.

Hull's work in protozoology, the study of one-celled animals, and in parasitology has brought him wide recognition in the scientific world. He is soon to become the president of the Society of Protozoologists and is the new editor of the society's Journal of Protozoology.

Biological Sciences is one of FSU's strongest departments, with five principal fields: biology, bacteriology, botany, physiology and zoology. Hull turned down an offer to become chairman of Northwestern's Department of Biological Sciences to join the FSU faculty.

Several scientific publications have publicized his research work. Among them were the Journal of Protozoology, American Zoologist, Journal of Parasitology, American Microscopical Society, American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Poultry Science and others.

Hull has served as vice president of the Chicago Academy of Science, and secretary of the Society of Protozoologists, and has been active with the National Science Foundation. He is on the Governing Board of the American Institute of Biological Sciences.
